Change My View: the "Female Dating Strategy" reddit-verse posters often exhibit behavior as bad or worse than that of the men they criticize (and allow zero discussion, at all).

1 upvotes · 1 September 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Ah, yes, a very cunning and relevant argument "You are not having sex a lot".

I'm actually a labrador retriever who has learned to type with his nose, and since that trip to the vet, I'm not having sex at all. But human mating habits still fascinate me.

Okay, bored. Done responding. Good luck out there.

Change My View: the "Female Dating Strategy" reddit-verse posters often exhibit behavior as bad or worse than that of the men they criticize (and allow zero discussion, at all).

1 upvotes · 1 September 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yeah, I don't think I'm about to be taught critical thinking by a guy that can't even fact check himself.

I don't think you'll be taught critical thinking at all.

Also, your sexism is showing

Good.

assuming I'm some stupid woman that couldn't survive without your guidance. I'm a man, for starters

And this matters because? Is being mistaken for a woman somehow insulting to you? If so, why?

I'm a man that knows when a psuedointellectual is going to wax poetic to make himself feel smart

Ah, "pseudo intellectual". The great battle cry of those who cannot imagine being able to speak eloquently without reaching for a thesaurus.

I don't consider myself an intellectual at all, because I agree with Thomas Sowell's definition of the term: "someone whose work product is ideas"... as opposed to the colloquial use of the term to simply mean someone who is well-read, eloquent, and presumably intelligent.

when a real intellectual has something valuable to say

This is a rare occasion. Most real intellectuals have nothing valuable whatsoever to say, despite consuming many pages of The New Yorker, The Atlantic Monthly, and Vanity Fair, or much oxygen in the halls of Ivy League universities, to do so.

Intellectualism tends to take the form of rational thought divorced from empirical verification, and almost invariably ends up producing stuff which sounds very nice and smart, and is very good for humanities professors to impress each other with at the sorts of dull parties where the music is all jazz, everyone is drinking wine, and no one gets naked or passes out on the floor. It is, however, mostly devoid of practical consequences.

In short, I don't agree with you that being an "intellectual" is necessarily something to aspire to.

Change My View: the "Female Dating Strategy" reddit-verse posters often exhibit behavior as bad or worse than that of the men they criticize (and allow zero discussion, at all).

1 upvotes · 1 September 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Alas, there is no joy in having a contest of wits with someone so far out of her depth that the fish have lights on their noses. I was rooting for you... I really was. But I can't teach you rhetoric, or critical thinking, or anything else that matters, without your permission.

Good luck out there.

Redpillers of PPD - What is your most "Blue Pill" belief? Bluepillers of PPD - What is your most "Red Pill" belief?

1 upvotes · 1 September 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Along with a few other people, my writing has kind of defined what TRP is, so I don't really know if I can "disagree" with it. It isn't really all that possible to "disagree" with yourself.

However, my daily life doesn't look like my writing, because my writing is not a cross section of my daily life. It doesn't consist of "everything a man needs to know", only of "everything a man needs to know which is untaught, or suppressed, elsewhere".

I teach men to neg, play hard to get, show indifference, and other such things. I don't do those with my girlfriends.

That's not because they don't work, but because, in my case, with them, the needed result has already been achieved.

A redpilled relationship does not look exactly like redpill pickup. The game adapts to the terrain.

Change My View: the "Female Dating Strategy" reddit-verse posters often exhibit behavior as bad or worse than that of the men they criticize (and allow zero discussion, at all).

1 upvotes · 1 September 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Without the ability to convince me of that, all you are doing is wasting electricity.

Don't bother trying to tell me you "have no need to convince me", either. Of course you do. If you did not want me to believe differently you wouldn't have played thread necromancer with your unsolicited response to a month-old comment.

The ability to persuade people of things is a basic life skill, and without it, you're in danger of ending up perpetually disappointed by the difference between what you feel you deserve and what life actually gives you. Perhaps even so disappointed that you end up habitually reading FDS.

Change My View: the "Female Dating Strategy" reddit-verse posters often exhibit behavior as bad or worse than that of the men they criticize (and allow zero discussion, at all).

1 upvotes · 1 September 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why exactly would it "suck"?

A stranger disagreed with me on the internet, and felt compelled to tell me so. That's the standard experience of saying things on the internet. You say something, and then some troll says "ur stpd" or "I fuked ur mom", or some such.

The only thing that disappoints me is that it would have been nice to be argued with by someone who knows how to argue. I'd rather be disagreed with by a challenging and interesting person than agreed with by a boring one.

But it doesn't seem like anyone ever taught you rhetoric. I blame your parents, not you.

See, if someone had taught you how persuasion works, you would have known that, to convince me, it's not enough to just present your own alternate theory, unsupported. You have to figure why I believe what I do (the real reasons, not the ostensible ones), and then persuade me that those reasons do not apply.

Since you don't even know why I think what I do, you can't possibly talk me out of it. That article only tells you what I think, not why. To find out why, you would have to ask some questions.

Explains everything...

1 upvotes · 30 August 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

I have indeed read them, although I don't know what you mean to say by bringing them up, other than "I liked something CS Lewis wrote".

National women's soccer team gets crushed by under 15 boy's team, feminists mad

1 upvotes · 27 August 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

This is why the only women's sports that people want to watch are the ones where the women wear skimpy outfits.

Are women capable of empathizing with men that they don't find attractive?

1 upvotes · 25 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's called the "anger phase".

And we came up with just how we wanted to handle and use it very early on. We knew that without anger, men cannot be motivated to transform their worldviews or their lives. We also knew that if men remain angry, they can't master their sex lives... because women adore a happy misogynist, but fear an angry one.

So TRP has a designed-in entry and exit to the anger phase. We deliberately stoke men's anger at women, then give them projects in their personal lives upon which to focus that anger. Even non-participants can spot how we create and use anger, if they are clever enough.

What they cannot spot is the pipeline out of the anger phase, because it happens offline. When men stop simping, take women off the pedestal, and start to respect themselves and their time, they get not only more sex from women, but more respect, and even eventually (as they start to apply the technical material) adoration.

Then the anger goes away.

With the MGTOW groups, the anger doesn't go away, because it's not channeled into something that gets positive results. It just builds and builds with no chance to dissipate.

The moral of this story is that you can have TRP or Elliot Rodger, and the more you have of one, the less you have of the other.

Are women capable of empathizing with men that they don't find attractive?

1 upvotes · 25 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Another thing worth pointing out here is that since this phenomenon is based on perception of risk, not actual risk, it varies widely from woman to woman.

Based on the RedPill philosophy, shouldn't men who desire monogamous long term relationships be considered as "beta males"?

1 upvotes · 25 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What do you mean, "anymore"?

Based on the RedPill philosophy, shouldn't men who desire monogamous long term relationships be considered as "beta males"?

1 upvotes · 25 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No. The alpha/beta metaphor serves one purpose and one purpose only... to point out that two groups are almost entirely the same.

These two groups are "men who other men will naturally defer to", and "men who women desire sexually".

Women's dating/relational motivations are seen by mainstream society as more noble than men's, but they actually aren't

1 upvotes · 25 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Nah, it makes complete sense, because not everyone understands just why eggs are expensive and sperm is cheap.

If more people read my articles, there would be less angry people.

Uh no, no it doesn't. Unless you call working yourself into an early grave yet still somehow being broke your whole life a "benefit"

1 upvotes · 25 August 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

What do you mean by that?

Women have more diverse tastes than men, and it makes little sense to try to appeal to some made-up universal standard

1 upvotes · 25 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It doesn't have to "make sense". It just has to work.

It works.

If you have some alternate explanation for why it works, go for it.

How can there be one standard of attractiveness that applies to all people?

1 upvotes · 25 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's not an argument. It's a question. You can answer it or not, as you choose.

Why do women push for marriage to later initiate 70-80% of divorces?

1 upvotes · 25 August 2021 · /r/MensRights

Why do children want chocolate cake for breakfast, then eat so much they throw up?

The 6 Best Places for Daygame in Chicago

1 upvotes · 24 August 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

A useful guide to how to pick up pennies in front of a steamroller.

CMV: most men are secretly attracted to fat women

1 upvotes · 24 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Depends what ya mean by fat.

I am attracted to)(and).(and)..(

I am not attracted to ()

So, it's a semantic argument whether you consider).(to be "fat" or not.

What are you not willing to change about yourself that would otherwise improve your RMV or SMV?

1 upvotes · 24 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's more a matter of dose and timing than provenance. What Big Ed sells you is overwhelmingly likely to be quite pure. You just have to know what you're doing when you take it.

Lots of people do. Some don't.

How can there be one standard of attractiveness that applies to all people?

1 upvotes · 24 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Do you by any chance have Asperger's Syndrome?

META: Is anyone else feeling extremely stressed being in the "neutral" space that is the purple-pill on the red-pill and blue-pill spectrum?

1 upvotes · 19 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You can certainly be excused for thinking this. It seem logical when you just sit down and think about it.

But in practice, it turns out not to be the case. The women who have the "where is this going?" conversation with you are not better partners than the ones who tell you "you are more important to me than a ring or a princess party".

The quality of a relationship for a man doesn't just consist of how attractive a woman is, and what she has the leverage to "demand". It also consists of how she treats him, and whether she is the sort of woman who makes demands and ultimatums.

What We Saw In Afghanistan Today is Proof That Men Don't Even Protect Submissive Women

1 upvotes · 19 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Your approval was neither requested nor required. But by all means keep typing if it makes you ~~happy~~ less unhappy.

What We Saw In Afghanistan Today is Proof That Men Don't Even Protect Submissive Women

1 upvotes · 19 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Okay, so there are two separate arguments about the "The PatriarchyTM" has failed to protect women".

The first, made by /u/AquaChip, goes like this: "Why are these Afghani men who are trying to get out of the Afghanistan leaving their wives and daughters behind?"

The answer to that is what the actual fuck. We don't know who these men are, we don't know why exactly they are leaving, we don't know that they aren't taking their wives and daughters with them, and we don't even know that they have wives and daughters to begin with.

This scenario is vacuous in the extreme, and it seems to have been invented by a privileged white western woman who has never been outside the first world in her life, and has no idea about the circumstances, or culture in Afghanistan.

The second, made by u/jupitaur9, is that: The Taliban, a bunch of members of "The PatriarchyTM" is killing submissive women instead of protecting them. Surely this suggests that the "The PatriarchyTM" doesn't actually protect submissive women.

This is less stupid, it's just wrong.

There is no Patriarchy. It doesn't exist and has never has. There are only patriachs.

Men have a protective instinct towards women, and they are instinctively more protective the more women are submissive to them.

Your typical Afghan woman would probably seem fairly submissive to a typical white western man, even if she walks around with her head uncovered and sends her daughter to school to learn to read. But to your typical member of the Taliban, she most likely seem to be a rebellious whore who must be publicly punished so other women are not damaged by her example, or even killed so she cannot corrupt other women.

The key thing to understand here is that instinct and culture interact in humans.

People instinctively trust members of their tribe, and distrust members of opposing tribes. That's hardwired in. But how they define "their tribe" is not hardwired in. It can be people who live in the same country. It can be people of the same ethnic origin. It can be fans of the same sports team. That is determined by culture.

Women are instinctively attracted to dominant males. That's hardwired in. But how they define "dominant" is not. It can be the man with the most money, or the biggest muscles, or the most academic papers published. That is determined by culture.

"Submissive" works the same way.

I own two girls who wear locking slave collars that I don't remove unless they need to go in an MRI machine. They have no right to disobey me for any reason, no bodily autonomy, have no property which doesn't actually belong to me, etc, etc.

Pretty submissive by our definition. But they also walk around with their faces uncovered, drive cars, have jobs, are educated (highly educated, in fact), carry guns, and express their opinions freely.

Islamic fundamentalists wouldn't like that very much. So I am going to be protective of them to a great extent, other western men to a lesser but still great extent, and the Taliban not at all.

Study: Authenticity predicts high relationship satisfaction, except for people high in trait (DT) psychopathy.

1 upvotes · 19 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You just don't seem to be able to leave this alone, do you?

Look, you're not understanding what I am trying to tell you, and I've run out of ideas for how to get you to reach that understanding. So I give up.

I've been helping men fix their lives and get what they want for ten years now, not just by writing articles, but by counseling individual men, hearing their stories, listening to their thoughts, and providing new perspectives.

And I've had a lot of success helping them reach happier places in their lives.

And I can tell you that saying things like "be authentic" to them isn't going to work. That idea is based on so many premises that simply turn out not to be true when the rubber hits the road. People in this culture have a great many assumptions about how human beings work, gleaned from pop psychology, vacuous psychological research, religion, whatever. And a lot of those assumptions turn out to be completely useless in producing any real-world result.

I don't have any more use for the concept of an "authentic self" than I do for Christianity's concept of the "soul", or for Ralph Waldo Emerson's "oversoul", or Freud's "id", "ego", and "superego", or the ancient Egyptian "ba", "ka", "akh", and "sekhem", or the Chinese "hun" and "po" souls.

So a piece of survey fiddling, masquerading as research, which asserts that people should "be more authentic" is about as useful to me as the Egyptian Book of the Dead.

You seem to think that without this concept of "authenticity", people will be unable to introspect, or reassess whether their goals (as they understand them) will meet their needs.

The opposite is true. I've observed many times, in practice, that having this idea actually inhibits introspection and positive change.

Female submission. What is it? How is it different from an equal partnership? Can you provide real-world examples of it? Do you want it?

1 upvotes · 19 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What's important about female submission is the form, not the effect. Because of some sexual dimorphism in the human species, femsub BDSM isn't actually a kink.

It's mainstream human sexuality.

So when women act submissive, and men act dominant, it increases attraction and strengthens the relationship.

Female submission. What is it? How is it different from an equal partnership? Can you provide real-world examples of it? Do you want it?

1 upvotes · 19 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Incorrect.

The "appeal to nature" fallacy is to state that something is good or desirable because it is natural.

This is the statement that submissive behaviour is effective because it appeals to human instinct.

There is no categorical imperative here.

Study: Authenticity predicts high relationship satisfaction, except for people high in trait (DT) psychopathy.

1 upvotes · 19 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm sorry. I can see I have expected too much of you.

Good luck out there.

Study: Authenticity predicts high relationship satisfaction, except for people high in trait (DT) psychopathy.

1 upvotes · 19 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Everyone knows deep down what's right for them.

Even that statement is ambiguous. It could mean "each person knows what is in their best interest", or "each person knows what they want", or "each persons knows what their goals are". And every one of those statements is wrong. There are plenty of people who don't know one of these things, and some who don't know any of the three.

You clearly have some sort of mental picture of some essential quality which you have chosen to call "authenticity", but that definition is accessible only to you.

Your assertion that nothing is worthwhile without authenticity has about the same semantic load as a mujahid of the Taliban saying "nothing is righteous without Allah". It's just a vague expression of some feelings you have.

That's not the world I operate in. TRP's audience is young, male, and driven. Their goals differ, but almost every man of them has a concrete notion of what his individual goals are.

I don't serve them platitudes like "be authentic". I tell them specific things, like "here is how to respond, when a woman says things like this or that, in order to make her want to have sex with you", or "here is what you can do and say to defuse your parents' attempts to control your life choices while you are an adult, but still young enough to be in college", or "here's some of the things you need to know about accumulating wealth instead of debt".

If told them things like "be yourself", or "have integrity", or "believe in your dreams", or "be confident", they would ignore me, and be right to do so. Because these vague platitudes leave them no better off than before.

"Just be yourself" is dumb, because it means literally nothing. Try being someone other than yourself for a moment and you'll see what I mean. "Just be the best version of yourself" is equally stupid.

People who actually have something they need to get done don't have the luxury of sitting around swapping vague platitudes whose only real function is to make the speaker sound wiser than he is.

Study: Authenticity predicts high relationship satisfaction, except for people high in trait (DT) psychopathy.

1 upvotes · 19 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Authentic:

- Of undisputed origin, genuine
- Made or done in the traditional or original way, or in a way that faithfully resembles an original
- Based on facts, accurate or reliable.
- Relating to or denoting an emotionally appropriate, significant, purposive, and responsible mode of human life.
- comprising the notes lying between the principal note or final and the note an octave higher.

If told the average person to "be" any of these things, they would look at me like I was nuts, and they would be right to do so.

I'm sure you would know what you meant if you said "be authentic". But no one else would. And if someone else said "be authentic", they would know what they meant, too, and it would be totally different from what you meant.

In fact, telling someone to "be" anything at all is terrible advice. It's vague and ambiguous and imprecise. People don't "be" things, they do things.

The reason TRP advice gets results, and this sort of drivel just sits there in a journal is that TRP is concrete, specific, and testable. I don't just go around telling people to "be attractive", "be cool", "be confident". That would leave them just as confused as before.

How to handle your boyfriend following women on Instagram?

1 upvotes · 19 August 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

But maybe that's one of the differences between men and women

Precisely. Women are generally far less able to sustain attraction to more than one other person. Hypergamy is a natural consequence of monogamous instincts.

If you were eyeing other men, feeling significant sexual desire for them, it would mean you no longer loved your mate. But him eyeing other women just means he is healthy and normal.

Our culture is arraigned in a way that suits women's sexual preferences far more than men. Men are not naturally inclined to be monogamous at all. They constrain their behaviour solely to spare the feelings of the women they love.

This means that you can get a man to agree to monogamy, but if you expect him not to be attracted, you are setting yourself up for disappointment.

If you are able to accept that fact that man can be attracted to a woman they do not care for or about, then this will cease to bother you.

What do you guys think of this video?

1 upvotes · 19 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

US individualism is harmful for relationships.

Rationale?

Red Pill does not work, CMV.

1 upvotes · 19 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Hi, I'm Whisper. I'm one of the founders of TRP.

Perhaps instead of telling me what I think, you could ask me what I meant.

What We Saw In Afghanistan Today is Proof That Men Don't Even Protect Submissive Women

1 upvotes · 19 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

As I was watching all the men flee leaving behind their wives and children to get raped, enslaved and killed by the Taliban

What makes you so sure they have wives and children? One of the reasons that Southwest Asia is so violent is that polygyny and the sequestering of women leaves a lot of young men who can't get laid hanging about.

Red Pill does not work, CMV.

1 upvotes · 18 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP has never been able to demonstrate that any unique Red Pill ideology is responsible for success

There is no unique redpill ideology, therefore it cannot be responsible for anything, and the way that you expect it to is kind of odd.

Did our Paarents tell us lies and then expect us to be succesful in relationships?

1 upvotes · 18 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The word "lie" is a compound proposition. It asserts two things: that a statement is a falsehood, and that the speaker knows the statement is a falsehood.

Only the first is necessary to cause harm to someone who believes a statement and acts on that belief.

Someone being a "strong and independent woman" is a major red flag for most man

1 upvotes · 17 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you're going to tell me what I think, rather than ask me what I think, then you can easily have this conversation by yourself.

Have fun.

CMV: Michael's Story proves all the negative stereotypes people have about TRPers

1 upvotes · 17 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I cannot imagine how strange that must be, to be anonymous and get anonymous messages containing such content, while real people are behind it and are helped by it in their real lives - I can completely understand that this is a powerful motivation for you, as you described

Yeah. It's been a surreal experience overall. The whole thing, start to the present day.

We didn't come into any of this expecting what we found. We were just some guys who made a new subreddit because the seduction one was being interfered with by busybodies who wanted in sanitized.

We didn't set out to be some sort of hardcore misogynist group. We just wanted to get laid, and when we got that, we wanted to understand how women's attraction worked.

We were surprised as anyone to find out that the more misogynistic we got, the more women adored us. We spent those first few years kind of like this, looking back and forth at each other, stunned.

It was like having cheat codes. I could tell you some of the stuff I've pulled off, and "gotten away with", but you wouldn't believe me, and I don't blame you, because if it hadn't unfolded before my eyes, I wouldn't have believed it either, and I would have called anyone else who told me about it a damn liar. It turns out that the human brain is a representational construct, and, like any construct, it can be hacked.

Of course, nowadays, we have explanations for most of the things we observed, and, while you can never really "prove" these kinds of models, we do get the results we expect, over and over again, when we act based on them. I am seldom to never left asking "why did she do that?" anymore. I always have some sort of useful answer.

We have our own website now, and voice comms, and one of us has put together a fraternity-like thing where some people are getting to hang out in person. I've done a few podcasts and plan to do more, and I'm starting to spend the occasional evening just talking to young men all over the country, counseling them not just on how to get laid, but how to survive and thrive as a man in a society that doesn't like men very much at all.

There's a whole bunch of things men of the ancient world used to learn from their fathers, and their fathers' male comrades, but with the breakup of the nuclear family by technology, feminism, socialism, and the military industrial complex, half these guys don't have fathers, and the other half have fathers who didn't have fathers.

TRP is growing and expanding in exciting ways, but at the same time, you can expect to see TRP on reddit start to dwindle, as we progress through the slow process of moving out. We have no interest in trying to carry on our business in a space that is autocratically controlled by people who hate us, and hate everyone we are trying to serve.

In an amusing illustration of this, when we were first quarantined, reddit administration forced a link onto the portal page they put in front of us, linking to what they thought a "positive definition of masculinity" was. Turns out it was written by someone who advocates reducing the male population, via selective abortion, to 10% of humanity. When we pointed this out to them, there was no response. When we pointed it out publicly, the link was silently removed with no retraction or apology.

When your ideological critics advocate genocide against the demographic you are trying to serve, it makes no sense to allow them to control your communications. The woke left is not just hostile... it is a collection of evil sociopaths (reddit) and their willing dupes (TBP).

Someone being a "strong and independent woman" is a major red flag for most man

1 upvotes · 17 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No.

Why would we care what sort of women you like? Knock yourself out.

Someone being a "strong and independent woman" is a major red flag for most man

1 upvotes · 17 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This may flip out some of the RPs here

Why?

Would you rather women be more lenient with LOOKS standards.....or FRAME standards

1 upvotes · 17 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Neither.

The Problem Is The Lack Of Positive Sexual & Relationship Education

1 upvotes · 17 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You entrusted education to the government. What did you expect?

Where do men get motherly love from after their mother dies?

1 upvotes · 16 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

They don't.

I made a unique political orientation test, what is your score? Are you more blue-pilled or red-pilled?

1 upvotes · 16 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The political spectrum does not go from left to right. It goes from authoritarian to libertarian.

How do you become more mature as an adult?

1 upvotes · 16 August 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

I've also noticed that I've been called emotionally immature a few times. I'd like to work towards improving this, but I don't know how.

You're talking about how other people describe you, not what you are experiencing.

What is it that you want to be different about your life? What do you want to be able to do that you currently cannot.

Can't get what you want if you don't know what it is.

One of the most hypocrite things I've ever seen

1 upvotes · 14 August 2021 · /r/MensRights

This is excellent news. All I have to avoid prolonged contact with girls like this is to not pick up the check.

People that think that creepiness is based on being ugly clearly don't have any EQ nor social skills

1 upvotes · 14 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Well, but let's first consider who makes those claims: TRPers

What claims would these be?

Please cite where an EC or other established TRP writer has claimed that being "creepy" consists simply of being unattractive.

We already know you like citations.

What is the highest caliber of partner that would commit to the opposite sex version of yourself?

1 upvotes · 13 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Me.

The Best Advice From Red Pill Isn't Red Pill Specific

1 upvotes · 13 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You don't know which parts of redpill advice do what, and why.

This is just what you think, based on your speculation. You haven't tested anything, and you reject the conclusions of those who have, so you can think what you want to think.

Do you believe your current personality would be enough to be sexually successful if you were transformed into a genetically unattractive male?

1 upvotes · 13 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There is no point in speculating about that which can be resolved by experiment. Any woman who wishes to know the answer to this can make a dating profile as a male, using pictures of a man she finds unattractive, then try to get dates.

The "Red Pill" is just "Women like sleeping with men they find attractive."

1 upvotes · 13 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So the Space Rabbits got to you, too, huh? What did they pay you off with?

Here's a calculator for women to find how many men fit their criteria, and the results are not good

1 upvotes · 12 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The problem with this is that it makes no provision for assortative mating, and for distributive mating, both of which make a woman's odds better.

Assortative mating: Similar phenotypes tend to mate. Finding a rich white man to mate with is easier if you are a rich white woman.

Distributive mating: More desirable mates have more options. A woman with a smoking hot figure, pretty face, and an easy going personality who is outgoing and enthusiastic is going to have many more potential partners to choose from than the average woman.

The sexual marketplace is all about the balance between what you want, and what you have to offer. A woman does not become delusional merely by virtue of having high expectations, unless she also has comparatively less to offer.

Why the idea that women that have casual sex get "pumped and dumped" is mostly just a revenge fantasy.

1 upvotes · 12 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Where do you get your ideas about who TRP's audience is?

Does the advice of "just be confident bro" work for unattractive women?

1 upvotes · 12 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No. Confidence does not make women more attractive at all.

Some women can be unapproachable because they are so shy you can't talk to them, or so overconfident they are unpleasant to be around, but between those two extremes there's no real correlation.

The "Red Pill" is just "Women like sleeping with men they find attractive."

1 upvotes · 12 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Anything can be a red pill if it's both true and widely denied.

Stance on porn addiction and availability to kids

1 upvotes · 11 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You do know that women are a large portion of the demand for this kind of porn, right?

Change My View: the "Female Dating Strategy" reddit-verse posters often exhibit behavior as bad or worse than that of the men they criticize (and allow zero discussion, at all).

1 upvotes · 10 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

FDS is among the few places I came across online that doesn't encourage women to sugar-coat their frustrations about men.

That's precisely because this is what FDS is actually for. It's not dating advice at all. It's a safe space for women to vent their frustrations over not getting what they want from the sexual marketplace, and receive emotional support from other women.

Since criticizing absent third parties who are a source of frustration is a pretty popular emotional support style among women, this leads to a sub whose main mode of interaction is criticize and complain about men.

This isn't particularly damaging to men, most of whom are quite used to being characterized as the source of all the world's problems, based on far-fetched mental gymnastics. It's an inherent side effect of our species' hardwired-in protectiveness towards women.

Who it is damaging to is the participants themselves. The problem with shifting blame for all of your failures onto others is that it prevents you from changing your behaviour... and if you do what you always did, you will get what you always got.

Having other people tell you that your only failure is that you undervalue yourself, and don't demand enough, may feel good, but so does eating candy. And both make you end up fat, sick, unhappy, and unappreciated.

Change My View: the "Female Dating Strategy" reddit-verse posters often exhibit behavior as bad or worse than that of the men they criticize (and allow zero discussion, at all).

1 upvotes · 10 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women can't, they get banned.

Wrong.

Change My View: the "Female Dating Strategy" reddit-verse posters often exhibit behavior as bad or worse than that of the men they criticize (and allow zero discussion, at all).

1 upvotes · 10 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Bad for whom?

Why do i always go through the same cycle?

1 upvotes · 10 August 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Since you've given no details, it is impossible to know what you are doing that leads to breakups.

That's where to start. You are either choosing the wrong men to pursue, or interacting with them in a way that kills the relationship. And you won't know, can't know, how to behave differently until you understand just how what you are doing leads to the results you are getting.

I'm (25f) like this guy (19m), I am unsure if he likes me back, what should I do about it?

1 upvotes · 10 August 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

You sound a emotionally immature.

This is not advice. Regardless of how "emotionally mature" (whatever that might mean) she is or is not, she still needs to play the best she can with the hand of cards she has been dealt.

"Have better interpersonal skills" is not helpful. If you think she needs better skill at reading a man's inclinations, and you believe you possess such skill, start teaching.

I don't know where else to get advice

1 upvotes · 10 August 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

I think it's absolutely ridiculous to avoid fighting altogether. That's how you end up with two people silently suffering because neither one of them want to speak up and cause waves. Trust me, I was in a relationship where we never fought, he was all sunshine and rainbows and when he had a problem he didn't say anything and I didn't want to keep bugging him about little things when he had no complaints so I stopped talking to him about stuff and we had to break up because there was no fighting.

So you're here to school us all, then, with your great expertise in relationships?

About how fights must not be avoided, because the only way you know how to avoid them is by not communicating? About how we all need to fight, because you are only capable of being honest with your partner while you are angry?

Any advice given to you is a waste of breath, because, even while sick, you will spit out the medicine if it tastes icky.

I actually wanna thanks r/FemaleDatingStrategy

1 upvotes · 10 August 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

/r/TheRedPill

Thoughts on a man with a low to potentially no body count?

1 upvotes · 9 August 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

What's important is the a man has the ability to participate in the casual sex market, not that he choose to do so.

The tricky thing, however, is that lack of inclination is often an excuse to cover lack of ability... so it's hard to be sure he can unless he, at one point, has.

TRP men have unicorn fallacy about Muslim girls and I am about to destroy it with reality

1 upvotes · 4 August 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

Everyone has a purpose in life. Some are meant to be an example. Others are meant to be a warning.

Low Sexual Desire Is A Healthy Response To Lacklustre Sex

1 upvotes · 31 July 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Here we see a woman who believes that "writing the weekly grocery list" will make men sexually appealing. She is complaining about her unsatisfying sex life.

It would be a lot more productive if instead of just saying all men suck, women were more actively validating men who do try to improve

1 upvotes · 31 July 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why would you think that women who talk like this want to be productive?

Why are single women happier than married women? If so, why do women even bother with men?

1 upvotes · 31 July 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you have found a way to measure happiness, then please tell me what the unit of happiness is.

Interview with Whisper - WORLD EXCLUSIVE!

1 upvotes · 29 July 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

/u/RealJoeDee ... pick us a date, we'll make it work.

Are Sugar Daddies considered Winners or Losers?

1 upvotes · 26 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Did someone's favorite failed economy theory of the 19th century get disparaged?

Why are uneducated men threatened by educated women?

1 upvotes · 24 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Which means that what I said is on point. The only difference is that we are discussing your daughter, not you personally.

There are plenty of reasons for your daughter to attend college, some good, others not so good. "Attract a man" is not among those reasons.

This fact isn't really a problem for anyone, including your daughter, unless they choose to be upset about it... which is kind of a made-up problem. As I said before, if I become angry that my girlfriends like me for X instead of Y, that's on me.

CMV: It's not fair, but a man that "just gets it" is going to be a far better lover than a guy that has to be told what to do

1 upvotes · 24 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So?

CMV: TRP's "Hypergammy" is women "masc-optimizing" when seeking a male partner in the same way men "femme-optimize" when seeking a female partner.

1 upvotes · 24 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Everyone wants better.

Hypergammy means "only wants best". And, as the article explains, this is an inevitable result of only being able to want one of any available set of choices.

If men were inherently monogamous, we'd be hypergamous, too, and we'd branch swing just as much as women.

Are men attracted to women who are the victims of jealous bullying by other women? If so, why?

1 upvotes · 24 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I've noticed that (at least some) men seem to love the idea of being with a woman who is bullied by other women

So you have noticed your own beliefs, and can correctly perceive how the world seems to you.

Good job, I guess.

Why are uneducated men threatened by educated women?

1 upvotes · 24 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So what, exactly, is your plan, here?

You're going to scold men, and they're going to rearrange their mating priorities to suit you?

You want them to do something, but you offer nothing in return. How do you think that is going to work out for you?

Why are uneducated men threatened by educated women?

1 upvotes · 23 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you say that having a Phd in history has no value as a relationship partner, it's because you yourself don't value education.. an educated man will respect that aspect of her and actually find it attractive that she has ambition..

You don't actually get to tell men what we find attractive. We decide what we find attractive.

Why are uneducated men threatened by educated women?

1 upvotes · 23 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So you agree with me.

But you are affronted that men don't want to do more work for the same reward, so you rephrased what I said with some spin doctoring to call it "laziness" instead of "basic economic sense".

Why are uneducated men threatened by educated women?

1 upvotes · 23 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That's a bad deal is very vague.. what do you mean by that Because education increases a woman's relationship expectations without increasing her relationship value.

If she has a PhD in history, her baseline expectation is that her future husband have a PhD as well. He might make up for not having one by being impressive in some other way, but there would need to be something added to do that.

And her PhD in history doesn't make her one iota more desirable as a relationship partner. It only makes her harder to impress. A woman who is less easy to impress is harder to have a good relationship with.

In other words, you are projecting women's attitudes onto men.

A man does not feel threatened by a more educated woman. Instead, a woman feels threatened by a less educated man.

Why are uneducated men threatened by educated women?

1 upvotes · 23 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Neither are other men.

Why are uneducated men threatened by educated women?

1 upvotes · 23 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why are uneducated men threatened by educated women?

They're not.

CMV: TRP's "Hypergamy" is women "masc-optimizing" when seeking a male partner in the same way men "femme-optimize" when seeking a female partner.

1 upvotes · 23 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

<https://www.trp.red/p/whisper/848>

What is "red pill"?

1 upvotes · 23 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Can't say I overly agree with that.

Doesn't matter.

I'm not here to debate, for reasons we've gone over. I'm here to articulate.

In other words, if readers understand what I am getting at, then my goal is accomplished. Whether you, or anyone else, believes it or not is up to them. Not only does debate settle nothing, it's not even particularly important for things to be settled, especially between people where at least one has no skin in the game, and thus is not materially affected by what they end up deciding to believe.

What is "red pill"?

1 upvotes · 16 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm sensing a distaste for PPD and debate

Not the point.

Debate, feasts, and underage slave sodomy are all fun even if you're not an Athenian noble. The only issue is the delusion that the first arrives at truth. In practice it tends to never arrive anywhere at all.

If you look at trends in non-scientific academia, you tend to see this. Proponents of a school of thought tend to abandon positions through death or retirement, rather than any process of having theses disproven.

What you have here is not an investigative process, but an entertainment process. Name one new concept or discovery, one piece of terminology, one sexual strategy idea, that has emerged from here as opposed to from TRP. There are none. Nothing ever gets discovered, or investigated, or settled here. Just argued about.

This is fine if you enjoy that, and sometimes I do, but this realization can help you understand why TRP is "not a debate sub"... it's because, to sum up what I have been saying, there is simply no point in arguing about that which can be resolved by experiment.

The TRP process involves, at its most basic level, some people suggesting an interpersonal tactic, or an explanation of some aspect of female psychology. Other people then see if this helps them achieve better results. It is impossible for us to do this in a double-blind, controlled fashion, but as far as I know, we are the only large body of people who are studying human mating by experiment, rather than by self-report survey, which is why we have made a lot of progress that academics have not.

However, to touch on your idea of "pair bonding", one of the parts that presents a greater challenge is establishing the causal relationship of a known correlation.

On that particular topic, for example, we know empirically that psychologically healthy young men have a distaste for commitment to women with high partner counts, and that women with high partner counts make poor relationship partners in general.

This is correlation.

Many people then leap to assume that "high partner count inhibits pair bonding"; in other words, women lose the ability to become devoted to an individual man if they have ridden too many penises.

That is a causal hypothesis.

And several of our leading thinkers, including /u/HumanSockPuppet and myself, believe this is wrong, and that the causal relationship is the reverse of this... to wit, "Women who are unable to sustain relationships accumulate higher partner counts".

This explains several observed phenomena that the previous hypothesis does not.

First, it explains why this correlation would only be present in females. Males with high partner counts seem to do just fine if and when they settle down. This is because men acquire those high partner counts not by being unable to sustain a relationship, but because males have a far higher drive towards hookup sex, and thus increase their counts less by failure to sustain relationships, and more by disinclination to enter one.

Second, it explains what the "mechanism" is that causes sex to break "pair bonding", to wit, there is none.

Women in relationships simply aren't on the market to increase their partner count. This is stupid simple. A woman in a relationship acquires new partners at a slower rate than a single woman. And the happier and more stable the relationship, the less she tends to cheat, so the rate approaches zero.

In other words, if you fill a room with randomly selected fifteen year old virgins (which is about how young you have to sample to find virgins nowadays), then some of them are already sluts who are unworthy of commitment. You just don't know which ones, because they haven't acquired "tells" yet. Their sexual history is just as blank a slate as the ones who will make terrific wives and mothers in about five years.

The real difference is that some are sweet tempered and loving, and the first boy they hook up with will be determined to keep them, while others are nasty bitches who will accuse you of cheating when they go through your phone and find a call from your sister, and they will immediately start screaming and throwing plates at your head.

This explains why men would rather have a girl who's been fucked a thousand times by one cock, than one who has been fucked one time by a thousand cocks. You can imagine it as a sort of customer rating system...

One girl has one review saying "Really sweet and nice. A++ would bang again. Did so 999 times. Only reselling because I have been hit by bus and am dead."

The other girl has a thousand reviews saying things like: "Crazy screaming bitch. Threw plates at my head. Has dope habit. Recommend you wrap it up good and hit once only."

Is there a difference between FDS-er and being a RedPill woman? If any, what are said differences?

1 upvotes · 16 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Is there a difference between FDS-er and being a RedPill woman?

There is no point in arguing about that which can be resolved by experiment. Try to guess which group each of the follow post titles came from:

- How to give better blowjobs?
- LOCK THEM ALL AWAY! Time to celebrate this success!
- Apparently single women can't have nice things aka my attempt to buy a house
- Ladies who have overcome daddy issues, how did you heal?
- Moving in with my fiance next week
- "Lorena" - the Lorena Bobbit documentary on Prime
- I'm beginning to think all dating subreddits here are anti-woman to some extent
- Pickmeisha behavior does not pay off...a case study
- What updo hairstyles do men like on women?
- Stop using the excuse that 'boys mature slower than girls' for bad behaviour
- The Case For Not Settling

(These post titles were selected at random.)

If you can tell the difference, there must be a difference.

What is "red pill"?

1 upvotes · 16 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Id humbly offer men have potential value rather than inherent.

... because you are trapped within blue-pill woman-centric slave morality, and thus you instinctively measure value by usefulness to others (probably female others).

Step outside that mental prison, and it becomes obvious that every man is inherently valuable to himself.

What is "red pill"?

1 upvotes · 16 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

AKA if someone didn't fully agree with everything a TRP EC espoused, they weren't immediately banned, which is what typically happened when those individuals attempted that sort of discussion on TRP. Whereas on PPD they could debate it out...

This points to the essential difference between TRP and its satellite spaces. These exist on two axes: Empiricist vs. Rationalist and Skin in the Game vs. No Skin in the Game.

The idea of "debating it out", whatever "it" is, carries the hidden, if not very well hidden, assumption that debate is how one arrives at truth... or, rather that truth is arrived at by pure thought, whether it happens in one mind or a clash between several. This is the Rationalist, or Aristotelian, model of investigation.

By contrast, the Galilean, or Empiricist, model of investigation involves discerning truth through direct observation, with the role of thought being confined to analysis of what known to be true, for the purpose of producing future predictions to test.

An Aristotelian, entering a Galilean space, is almost always surprised when his invitations to debate are met with laughter, or silence, or a gentle but firm escort towards the door. But to Galileans, his favorite hobby is simply that, a method of idle intellectual masturbation at best, and at worst a distraction from, and obfuscation of, the actual business of figuring out what is going on for real.

Thus his presence is about as helpful as that of Gene Ray the Time Cube Guy at a convention of aeronautical engineers.

Which brings us to the notion of "skin in the game". Historically, the Aristotelian searcher for truth has been mainly interested in writing books and engaging in the cut and thrust of philosophical debate, in between feasts with the other Athenian nobles, and sodomizing twelve year old slave boys. The Galilean, however, wants truth because he intends to put it to a purpose. He has artillery to fire, compasses to design, and latitude to measure.

In other words, he has "skin in the game", and he's going to get it painfully scraped up if he is wrong. The Aristotelian does not. At worst he will suffer some slight embarrassment, and more frequently, he can simply debate forever without fear of ever being actually proven wrong, unless a Galilean engineer with grease on his hands should happen to invade the ivory tower without being ejected by the servants.

This is why the Rationalists with no Skin in the Game needed a space where their ancient-world philosophy could debate the number of angels that can dance on the head of a pin without any of those embarrassing empiricists challenging them to "show me one of these so-called angels".

One of the unfair things about all this, of course, is that in the investigation of heterosexual mating instincts, the Empiricist discipline is somewhat exclusionary. The woman, the eunuch, and the homosexual, are unable to directly test techniques for attracting heterosexual women, and thus are confined by necessity to the Rationalist's ivory tower, their sole consolation being the feasts and possibly the sodomy.

Weekly Community Chat Megathread

1 upvotes · 15 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

alreadyredscool (who I think started the sub and was also a mod at TRP)

Nope.

How to start going to the gym?

1 upvotes · 14 June 2021 · /r/askTRP

This might be a dumb question

Ya think?

but I honestly don't even know where to start. I have a membership, but I don't know what to do, how many sets, how many reps.

That's not your problem. You are connected to the fucking internet.

Your problem is you are too chickenshit to just websearch a program and get started. You want someone to hold your hand in order to ease your anxiety.

Overcoming that anxiety is an essential part of the process, numbnuts.

[Q4All] Is Online Dating a Scam?

1 upvotes · 14 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Instead of asking whether it is a scam or not, try asking what the incentive structure is.

How do they make their money? Well, they either monetize page views, or they charge for services.

In either case, they need people to be actively using (or at least paying) the site in order to get paid. So their definition of success is lots of people using the site.

Well, what is the users' definition of success?

For female users, it is being in a relationship, and no longer using the site.

For male users, it is either being in a relationship (and no longer using the site), or continuously using the site to secure fresh hookup sex with new partners.

So the goals of site owners, and of site users, can only coincide for male users.

Which means that any site which is successful and earning money will be disappointing its female user base.

Which in turn means that female users will leave. Which means, in turn, that the site will disappoint its heterosexual male users, because women will become rarer, and competition for them will become fiercer.

So the only online dating sites we would expect to be successful long-term would be those targeted at gay men.

CMV: FDS and TRP's goals are similar in that each of them tries to prevent running into the other

1 upvotes · 14 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

both of their goals are similar in that each of them tries to prevent running into the other.

Incorrect.

TRP's goal is to increase its readers' degree of sexual success. FDS's goal is to increase its readers' degree of psychological comfort.

This is why FD contains no actual S. Don't believe me? Go look right now. Look at whatever are currently the top ten posts. How many of them contain any strategy? How many of them contain any strategy that isn't the 10,000th repetition of "refuse any man who isn't your ideal"?

Beyond a long list of reasons for rejecting hypothetical suitors, FDS contains no significant percentage of actionable advice at all, and certainly almost none for how to make oneself more attractive to men. In fact, suggestions that they should make any effort in that direction would most likely be met with rage and downvotes.

So, FDS can certainly claim it's about getting the best results... but anyone can claim anything. I can claim that I am the King of Sumatra and wear a shiny hat.

When we look at the actual behaviour of FDS and TRP, we can easily understand that they are quite different.

Experiment where women rate men in a lineup, then explain their reasoning.

1 upvotes · 14 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The patriarchy is in your cheeseburgers!

It's better for the man to ask you on a date, asking a man increases the likelihood that he's settling.

1 upvotes · 14 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Better for who?

Debate: Divorced parents are NOT single parents.

1 upvotes · 10 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think arguing semantics is an extremely good use of someone else's time.

Update: all you want from me is sex

1 upvotes · 10 June 2021 · /r/askTRP

"Sure, gimme a call in two weeks."

Hypergamy, female subjugation & male sexlessness.

1 upvotes · 9 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You are responsible for your successes & failures, failing to meet your goals in dating simply means you are failing and that's on YOU.

This is the part of TRP's message that young men, in general, struggle the most with.

They've been raised to think of society as a sort of engine that's designed to take care of people, providing them with a path to a good life. But this isn't true. Society is a word we use to describe a heap of stuff left lying around as a result of others' efforts to care for themselves and prosper.

It isn't an incubator, it's a scrap yard. You can build cool stuff out of the parts you find there, but that's your job.

Now, it's easy to point out that societies of the past took care of people, but that's not really true. What it did was give them limited rewards because it needed their labour. But now, all that labour is outsourced to countries where quasi-slavery is still legal. In addition, the deal was never that great to begin with... otherwise, why would the Boomer men actively cooperated in helping the feminists burn it all down, in exchange for nothing but the largely unfulfilled promise of some unshaved free-love yeti snatch?

It's also easy to point out that society takes care of women, but that's not quite true either. Other individuals take care of women, because they are slaves to the primitive instinct to protect the wombs. The "sympathy gap" is hardwired into the human species, and its less self-aware members will always reflexively waste their time and energy helping parasites with no reciprocal impulses.

Also, the government panders to women, because women are drones whose votes are easily bought with minuscule bribes if not with free deception. Your assertion that women are "liberated" now is both wrong and useless... liberty simply isn't something women are capable of having. If you set them free, they immediately look around for someone to tell them what to do, or, failing that, someone to imitate so that they know what to do.

Western civilization was doomed to fall from its defining values the moment women acquired voting privileges.

Does anyone else feel bad when women say the male body is unattractive?

1 upvotes · 9 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you take what women say at all seriously, you're going to have a rough time of it.

Men don't have to be attractive to get girls

1 upvotes · 9 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Male attractiveness doesn't have all that much to do with looks.

Hypergamy, female subjugation & male sexlessness.

1 upvotes · 9 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So what is your proposed solution?

Solution to what?

What is there to solve? Things are as they always have been. About 1/3 of men are winners, and get laid anywhere from "a decent amount" to "staggeringly a lot", and 2/3 are losers and get laid anywhere from "occasionally" to "never".

This is hardwired into the human species, and nothing short of sophisticated gene-tampering science fiction tech will ever change it.

{ women are FREEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEE now! }

Yes, they are. I don't pay a damn thing for my women.

No hymen, no diamond: The sexual counterrevolution is coming

1 upvotes · 9 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you want to have some idea about what their actual life outcomes might be, consider the following two observations.

- Most of them are very angry at men in general.
- Those who have been subscribed for a long time are not less so than those who have been subscribed for a short time.

No hymen, no diamond: The sexual counterrevolution is coming

1 upvotes · 9 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No hymen, no diamond.

Fixed that for ya.

Men get their nice guy ideas from high school movies and the anime harem genre.

1 upvotes · 9 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

When men here aren't misinterpreting what women say, their ideas of how women and dating "should" work seems to come from entertainment created by men blah blah blah blah

That's because PPD is the shallow end of the pool. And you're in it with them.

Husband sends me pictures of Instagram models daily, need some advice

1 upvotes · 8 June 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Sigh

I have no recollection of you, but your objection is as old as time.

What you jokers cannot seem to realize is that I am not trying to save western civilization. You keep telling me it's doomed, and that my efforts are futile, because you can't conceive of any other reason why I might be doing this.

You don't understand what I mean by "Parables of the Sower", and don't understand what I mean when I say the word "collectivist", and that I am not one.

Collectivists think that problems must be addressed by collective action, so they try to set a policy. Do to that, they have to get everybody to agree. And they can't get everyone to agree. So they go around raging about how the world would be paradise, if only all those stupid people would just get on board with their ideas, instead of having ideas of their own.

Now, you've found a stupid person, and you are pointing and saying "see, look, this is the reason we can't have nice things!".

But what you don't realize is that:

- Stupid people have always been with us. They are a constant of the universe.
- Your failure to realize this means, from my perspective, that you are one of them.
- There is no "we" that cannot have nice things.
- There is only you, who cannot have nice things, because your plan for having nice things relies on everyone wising up and not being stupid.
- And there is only me, who can have nice things, because I have a plan for having nice things even when stupid people exist.

Yes, 90% of RPW is crap. That's because 90% of everything is crap. 90% of whatever utopia you are imaging would be crap, too.

You cannot control the universe. Control your universe.

"If he really wanted me, he would approach me" Do y'all really believe this ?

1 upvotes · 7 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Again, to my regular readers:

Watch how she rationalizes when the inconsistency between her words and her actions is pointed out.

She acknowledges that the behaviour she rewarded was the opposite of what she says she wants, and points out "But it made me feel bad".

Which means that what she was talking about all along was how others could organize their actions to make her feel good, not to make her attracted to them.

You, dear readers, being mostly male, are prone to confusion on this issue, because you are drawn to women who make you feel good, and tend to want to reward them.

Women do not do this. They do NOT reward men for being good to them. They reward men for being desirable or potentially useful to them.

Thus, how you treat a woman is largely dependent on how she has treated you in the past, but her treatment of you will be dependent on how she hopes you will treat her in the future.

This is equivalent to Briffault's Law.

You don't have to make her feel good. Just make her want you.

Women yearn for the return of chaperones

1 upvotes · 6 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Judging by how angry you are about this problem of yours, you've either had it over and over again, in which case your current approach isn't working...

... or you're in a habit of reading about it happening to other people, in which you seek out things to be mad about, and I dunno what you might do about that, apart from stop.

Women yearn for the return of chaperones

1 upvotes · 6 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You're free to interact with others however you like, and then to deal with their reactions.

Personally, I find that when I take some effort to calibrate my message to my audience, receptivity goes way up... but that requires some capacity to react to one's circumstances, rather than solely to one's feelings.

If you would instead like all of mankind to adapt to your preferences, okay, good luck out there.

Women yearn for the return of chaperones

1 upvotes · 6 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think that 30 year old women are probably not the best example of how to handle unwanted attention with the appropriate combination of assertiveness and grace.

Women yearn for the return of chaperones

1 upvotes · 6 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Which is why 16 year old girls have no interest in acting like 30 year old women.

I think we all need to calm down a little

1 upvotes · 6 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm (older) gen z and there's a weird trend of girls going "ew men and the way their balls hang and girls are prettier", etc. etc.

If I had to guess at an explanation for this, I would say that because women are more attracted by behaviour than aesthetics, it's easier for them to pretend disinterest in men's appearance, which they gain social capital from doing.

Men, do you value women based on their popularity?

1 upvotes · 6 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Bold of you to assume I value women.

Women yearn for the return of chaperones

1 upvotes · 6 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Make sure a 20 year old girl can handle herself like a 30 year old.

So, get 15 cats, drink wine out of a box, and complain that her life isn't turning out how she planned?

Why do men react so shrilly to “OnlyFans” but don’t seem to have an issue with porn, strip clubs, sex phone operators, cam girls on porn sites...?

1 upvotes · 6 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I was being cheeky because you were.

It's nice that you're so willing to follow my lead, but that may be the best way to get your question answered.

I am fielding responses and as you can read

Nah.

I'm confused- what makes women's standards unreasonable?

1 upvotes · 30 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm happily married.

So why are you making lists of what you want in a man?

Hypergamy/polygamy is the fantasy, assortative mating is the reality

1 upvotes · 29 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The vast majority of men will never be able to do this

The vast majority of men will never do what it takes to do this, able or not.

which is the falsehood TRP preaches

You're going to need to produce some quotes on this one. From me, or other TRP founders/thought leaders... not from throwaway_2273, three years ago, with 3 upvotes.

Not just because I don't remember preaching anything of the sort, but because I'm actually not even sure what you think I was saying.

Women tend to make bad decisions in regards to their safety. They are too lenient with dangerous men and too cautious with safe men. They have standards which actually rewards pushy guys and pushes away respectful ones.

1 upvotes · 29 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

3) Women are perma-children in the sense that they expect others to take responsibility for their safety, welfare, and happiness even after they have reached the age of majority.

4) All of the above.

What most women want in a man

1 upvotes · 25 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Who decides who's correct when everything is arbitrary and situational?

That is incredibly difficult. Everyone, by definition, thinks they are correct.

And if self-report doesn't prove anything (which it doesn't), then if self-report is all you have, all you can do is argue. Which is diverting, but not conclusive.

But if that were all we had, we'd just be stuck.

But we can find some illumination if we stray into the realm of philosophy and ask "what IS truth?".

Well, it's a word humans invented. So what do we mean by it? Well, we came up with it for a reason. It's a thing we care about, and so what we mean by it is a function of why we care about it.

We care about truth because it empowers us.

If we understand Newtonian physics, we can build machines that work. If we understand Einsteinian physics, we can put satellites in orbit.

How does it empower us? It enables us to anticipate the consequences of our actions, so we can choose an action with the consequences we want.

If I use a G7 drag model to predict the flight path of a 90 grain .224 Valkyrie bullet fired from a 24 inch barrel, with a ballistic coefficient of .200, I know how far the bullet will drop, and how much it will be deflected by the wind at a certain speed, both over a certain distance.

As a consequence, I can eat venison.

Do you see? The word "truth" means "predictive power".

So, if you want to establish that your idea is true, do something using it that you couldn't do without that idea.

Thus, if young men are more successful at getting to sex after reading TRP than before, then something they learned enables them to predict female behaviour more effectively.

Ah, but which bits are true? That's harder to know, because you can't test only one bit at once. That's why I said it's not very clean science. Why I said we stumble towards the light.

But that really is the best we have, because self-report studies do not produce truth. How do we know that? Because they do not empower young dudes to get laid.

Mr. Kaufmann may be an interesting guy, but his recommended course of action ("cultivate kindness and altruism") has not not first been fleshed out into a detailed plan of action, and then been put to the test by thousands of young men who hadn't had much sexual success before, and then helped them get the results they wanted.

You're touting his work because he has a PhD and a shiny hat, and says what you want to hear, but as far as I'm concerned, in this particular question, he's a poseur. I'm the expert, because I have a whole lot of fanmail saying "thank you, I was an incel until I read your stuff", and all he has is a PhD, a self-report study, and a shiny hat.

I'm sorry (and I don't mean that sarcastically) if what I have to say upsets you. But it's not for you. It's for men. It fixes a problem they have.

I haven't seen you, or Kaufmann, offer an alternative solution with a track record of success. All I've seen is a bunch of airy speculation by people with no skin in the game.

It is hard to imagine a more stupid or more dangerous way of making decisions than by putting those decisions in the hands of people who pay no price for being wrong. --Thomas Sowell

And there you have it.

what's causing all this hatred for the opposite gender. I was abused by men and yet I still don't hate them

And that's what this is really about. My advice to men hurts your feelings.

And you would like me to change it so it doesn't. And you don't care if that makes it stop working, because the problem it solves is a problem you don't have.

Well, excuse the fuck out of me if I am messing up the view from your ivory tower. But my priority is the folks on the ground. Maybe they are too male, or too crass, or too blue collar, to matter to you. Maybe they aren't nice clean-cut Jewish boys with PhDs from Yale, and podcasts, and sweet, uplifting things to say about kindness and humanism.

But maybe you don't matter to them, either. And if I had to guess, you need them a hell of a lot more than they need you, unless, against the odds, you happen to be an electrical engineer or something.

I'm on a mission. And I don't have cargo space for your fussing how people somehow "hate" you, despite the fact that they have never even heard of you before today.

No matter how much you roll around in feigned agony, like some European soccer player trying to draw the penalty.

What most women want in a man

1 upvotes · 25 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The general response of someone who doesn't have anything useful to say is to question the motives of those who do.

It doesn't matter how we feel. It only matters if we are correct.

What most women want in a man

1 upvotes · 25 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I find it disturbing that young men are this angry. Why? How did it happen? Was it my generation X that created this? Was it because everyone got a trophy? Lol because I saw much less of this kind of attitude in the 90s when I went highschool. Is it because of social media?

I've chosen to answer these questions separately, because they are very different from the main subject of this conversation.

Every culture has a set of expectations for its members about how they are supposed to live their lives, what they are expected to do, etc these constitute, if you will, a plan for a person's life and these plans generally contain two parts: expectations and incentives

This means what you are supposed to give and what you are supposed to get in return, which will motivate you to give. Modern western culture indeed does present men with a plan for their lives, but it is a plan with all the incentives removed.

Its idea of what a man should do merely consists of how he is expected to benefit others, but everything he could expect to get from that has been rebranded as "male privilege" and subjected to a campaign to stamp it out.

Well, at first this created a problem for men, because they were living up to the same obligations as ever, but without any gratitude, or respect, or reward of any kind.

But it is gradually becoming more of a problem for women instead, because men are starting to realize that if they set down the obligations, nothing else bad will happen to them. The incentives have already been taken away... you can't take them away twice.

The only move that those who seek to exploit men have left in their arsenal is scolding. And once a man realizes he can just ignore that, he is free. Men are not being forcibly oppressed, they are simply being tricked into trusting a society that doesn't have their best interests at heart. And once they awaken to that, they then have to wake up to the fact that IT NEVER DID.

The anger is a phase in this awakening process. It is what happens when you realize that your entire society never cared about your experience of life at all, and only saw you as a means to an end.

Our culture is in the midst of a propaganda war between neomarxists (feminists, progressives, etc) and traditional conservatives (we call them "tradcons" for short). But when you "take the red pill", and realize what reality is actually like then you become aware that BOTH cultural forces seek to exploit men for the benefit of women. They are only arguing about what is the best way of doing this Tradcons think that men should be rewarded for a life of service and care with some lip service and kind words, and neomarxists think that this is giving them far too much, and they should simply be scolded into perpetual obedience. Tradcons focus on protecting women and neomarxists focus on empowering women, but the only argument between them is about which of those is better for women.

What most women want in a man

1 upvotes · 25 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

In psychology and behaviorism, the only way to conduct a study is through reporting on what people say is true. They have no other means to do it

Okay, now you have graduated from complete non-sequiturs to raising points that have already been refuted:

The fact that it is not practical to perform such a study does not magically make self-report data valid.

Let me make this even more clear:

Psychologists and sociologists often perform self-report studies because it is not economical, practical, or convenient to study behaviour in other ways. This does not magically make self-report studies valid.

If all you have is a hammer, that does not magically make all your problems into a nail.

They have no other means to do it unless they use PET scans or brain wave monitors (which doesn't prove efficacy 100%)

I don't consider those valid, either.

That's why their is controversial conflicting evidence in psychology and behavioralism.

That's why psychology and behaviourism are not sciences. They are unable to use the scientific method.

In fact, TRP field reports are more science-like than social psychology. Oh, they are not very good science. We can't do control groups. We can't do random sampling. We can't do large samples, and analyze the results with statistical methods. We can only make the most rudimentary of efforts to control confounding variables.

But what we can do, which professional psychologists cannot, is conduct real experiments.

The unsystematic way in which we have to do those experiments makes it not so easy to interpret the results. We stumble towards the light. In the land of the blind, the one-eyed man is king.

But, of course, that's not the way public opinion works at all. In the land of the blind, the one-eyed man is beaten to death with rocks... for heresy.

So, are psychological studies the most valid studies to conduct? No they aren't.. for that I'd agree.. but that doesn't negate the fact that he still has the credentials to do a study in his area of practice, otherwise he wouldn't have gotten a PHD.

Again, you seem to want to talk about the guy. I don't know if he is your dissertation advisor, or you are his sock puppet account, or what the relationship between the two of you is.

But you are acting confused about what this whole "science" thing is.

Science is an algorithm, not an institution.

I could, for the sake of argument, spend years reading books, taking tests, and writing papers. I could conduct a bunch of self-report studies. I could be widely seen as a great scientist, and have piece of paper that says "Whisper is a scientist" in shiny gold letters, signed by the King of Sumatra, and that could come with a lifetime supply of orange cheese snacks and a shiny hat.

None of this would magically make my opinions into a scientific result.

The people who are running around, lately, screaming "believe the science!" in a number of contexts, do not actually understand what science is. They are instead practicing a religion, with universities and think tanks and the NSF as churches and professional researchers as a priesthood, whose pronouncements they demand be taken on faith as holy writ.

This is, in fact, the opposite of science.

He also reported on other studies within the same article. More importantly, we are moving out of a paradigm that relies on dominance and physical strength as a means to survive.. 50 years ago women were more reliant on their husbands.

This is not, in and of itself, a terrible hypothesis. But what the "church of Science!TM" needs to understand is that, until it is tested, it is only a hypothesis, not a conclusion.

There are two competing views here. One, that women's preferences are largely conscious and practical, and can change very rapidly according to current economic and social conditions. And the other, that female sexual preferences are hardwired in to some degree, and will remain static even when the conditions that caused them to evolve no longer apply.

We can have some confidence that the answer is a mix of the two... but what mix? This can only be resolved by experiment.

It wasn't until the 1960s that women could even get a loan or a credit card (even in America)

The left really needs to get its story straight. A few years ago, they were saying that women couldn't get credit cards in their own name in the 80s (which I know to be a lie because I was there at the time). And of course these are the people who say that women make 77 cents for every dollar a man makes for the same work. Or is it 73? No, wait, it's 71!

Point is, we can't have a discussion based on these factoids, with their truthiness, because people just make this shit up.

Again, it has the sound and flavour of a fact, and it comes from someone wearing the shiny hat that says "expert" in big gold letters... but is it actually true? Where is the evidence?

If you ask to see the evidence, they show you a piece of paper where some other person wearing a shiny hat said it. And if you question that, they call you anti-intellectual or anti-science.

So, no. I don't believe that. I don't believe that until someone proves it to me.

We have become more independent

Not precisely. You still have only the power that men give you, because you are incapable of building or maintaining the essential structure of civilization for yourselves.

I know of nothing systematic that would prevent you from learning to do so, but y'all just aren't interested in actually going and doing learning to do it.

What has happened is that your dependence on men has spread out, generalized and institutionalized. For example, less of you are dependent on one individual man who provides for you, and more of you are dependent on a government that taxes all men to provide handouts for you. Or used quotas and public shaming to twist institutional arms into hiring you for paper-shuffling jobs, so you can LARP as independent career women, despite not really making or maintaining any essential piece of civilization.

I'm not angry about this, and I don't want to go back to the way things were. I like my women like I like my food... paid for by someone else.

And I'm not keen to start paying for sex, either directly or by proxy. Getting it for free is better.

But I'm not convinced that this means women's preferences have changed. If I had to guess (make a hypothesis), I'd say that it has only changed who women have to hold their nose and fuck (from "boring dude with middle class job" to "Harvey Weinstein and Bill Clinton").

At TRP, we really don't care who women hold their noses and fuck. Because being that guy is not the goal of our research.

What most women want in a man

1 upvotes · 25 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This response is such a complete non-sequitur that I don't quite understand what sort of confusion of thought could have produced it.

I did not say "the study's conclusions are invalid because the PI is dumb and icky".

I said "the study's conclusions are invalid because self-report data on human choice does not yield valid data".

What most women want in a man

1 upvotes · 24 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The article above is a study conducted. It's a viable source, I checked credibility.

No, it's not. Just like every other study out there, it relies on self-report data.

Self-report data is worse than no data, because at least when you have no data, you are aware of your ignorance.

To accurately assess people's desires, you have to observe their behaviour, not ask what their desires are. They can't even be honest with themselves, much less you.

In order to find out who a woman is attracted to, you would literally have to follow her around with a hidden camera and observe who she has sexual intercourse with.

The fact that it is not practical to perform such a study does not magically make self-report data valid.

You shouldn't spend any money on a girl before you've slept with her (with minimal exception)

1 upvotes · 24 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So, here is a thing that is generally less desirable, but also harder to get.

Okay. So what?

If women shouldnt feel proud about talking money from simps and losers, then men shouldnt feel proud about fucking Pick Me Girls and female losers.

1 upvotes · 22 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Should" just means "I want", and "shouldn't" just means "I don't want".

So... you don't want men to feel proud. Well, okay, it's fine to want things. What's your plan for making that happen?

How often do you encounter a woman with great sense of humor?

1 upvotes · 20 May 2021 · /r/askTRP

Once. I have met one woman in my life who is actually funny.

Does the manosphere have something against childfree women? If so, why?

1 upvotes · 20 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's my observation that the manosphere has a particular resentment toward childfree women.

Translation: I wanted to think this, so I searched until I found two or three people saying it.

Radical RP men are vehemently ill-mannered toward women over 25.

1 upvotes · 20 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So I've been broadcasting some redpill channels recently because I've always been a curious person by nature.

hehehheheh

Neither the RedPill nor the FDS strategy on first dates work.

1 upvotes · 20 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's as heavy or as light as you make it.

Neither the RedPill nor the FDS strategy on first dates work.

1 upvotes · 20 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Preferences, Hopes, Dreams, Aspirations.

I hate having to ignore.

1 upvotes · 20 May 2021 · /r/askTRP

You don't need to discuss much.

Neither the RedPill nor the FDS strategy on first dates work.

1 upvotes · 20 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Won't give you a list, because you're the one who has to be creative. But here's an example.

Take her to an indoor climbing gym. Find one where you are belaying her at the bottom, rather than one with grigri tie-ins. (That way she's literally had the experience of putting her life in your hands.)

Spend a few hours getting hot, sweaty, and physical next to each other, and working together to solve problems.

Then take her to a local pub (not a raucous bar, but a quiet watering hole you've picked out in advance), and have a few drinks, and maybe a little cheap pub food if one of you is hungry.

If you are a regular and they greet you by name, so much the better.

Talk will naturally flow about the experience you just went through. Mix in a little PHDA talk and some kino (you started that during the climbing, right?). Put a few drinks in her, but NOT too many. You are trying to get her to relax, not get the feeling you're trying to trying to short-circuit her judgement.

Then take her temperature. Warmed up and ready to go? Then get her to your place... you should have been been mentally working up a couple of ready excuses throughout the evening. The goal isn't to FOOL her... she knows sex might be happening if things go well. The goal is something she can PRETEND to be fooled by, so that she can feel like she has an "out" if she's not into it.

The excuse isn't important so long as you tailor it to her and the situation. Do you have a collection of some shared-interest-thing that she might want to see? Does she need some place to hang out a few hours while she sober up enough to drive home? Do you have a pair of Russian Blue kittens you just got, and you need to check up on them before driving her home? (No female of the species is going to decline an opportunity to meet kittens. If she does, you dodged a bullet, she's defective.)

Then, once you get her in the door, you've had an exciting evening, built trust, raised the temperature, shown her a confident, high-energy, in-control-of-his-world dude... then you isolated.

Do your thing.

Discussion: what are your Big 5 Personality Traits?

1 upvotes · 19 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The MMPI has some glaring flaws, even if we assume the five factor model is valid.

What the test measures is how a subject answered a question. But what actually correlates to personality (habitual behaviour) is why they answered that way.

The MMPI (and similar tests) take an answer of, say, "strongly agree", and interpret the answer in such a way as to assume they know why the test-taker strongly agreed.

In addition, it interprets all five axes of the model wrong.

- It interprets Axis I as "social openness", when it is actually sensitivity to environmental stimuli.
- It interprets Axis II as "tendency to worry or be upset", when it is actually emotional responsiveness to events.
- It interprets Axis III as "agreeableness", when it is actually emotional responsiveness to people.
- It interprets Axis IV as "conscientiousness", when it is actually external vs internal validation.
- It interprets Axis V as "adventurousness", when is actually self-efficacy.

This is why tests like this, when I bother to try to play along, instead of making them say whatever I want them to say, tell me that I am extroverted, emotionally stable, disagreeable, irresponsible, and adventurous... when I am actually extremely introverted, not easily impressed, not anxious for external approval, excellent at making life choices, and very curious. And someone else who was totally different from me could end up with the exact same results due to trivial variation in life circumstances.

In other words, this test is total shit at interpreting people's answers.

The measure of what we might call scientific validity, or just simply "truth" is predictive power. In other words, it doesn't matter how much a test result makes us go "wow, he's exactly like that!". Hell, horoscopes make people say that. What matters is if you can predict someone's behaviour using those test results.

If you can't, you're not doing science, you're just collecting data and playing make-believe with it.

Incidentally, this kind of "argue with, and correct, the basic premise of the question" was just as much how I was as a child. Public school "teachers" didn't like me very much.

Does religion appeal to and/or create alpha/beta behavior?

1 upvotes · 19 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Religion is for people who like having rules to follow, and being spanked when they don't obey.

Be Honest: Does A Woman Doing Certain Things in The Bedroom Change Your Feelings For Her?

1 upvotes · 19 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Sometimes it's hard to tell. I had this one plate for a while whose bed was absolutely covered in these small cushions (she liked to "build a nest" to sleep in). At one point, we rolled over during sex and one of those cushions gave a plaintive meow.

Why all the Salty fighting over age gap relationships?

1 upvotes · 19 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because this is the designated area for bitter cat ladies and anger phase dudes to yell at each other.

Woke college educated women should date down men in terms of income and status.

1 upvotes · 19 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Should" just means "I want".

You want women to date down. Historical evidence says they ain't gonna. They prefer to continue whining about where all the good men have gone (answer... far away from her).

You also want people in general to call these women out on their bullshit. But they have no incentive to do so. It's not like these women are going to be grateful, or learn something. They're just going to throw a tantrum.

But here's what you can do, in your life, to prevent any of this shit from affecting you.

Don't give these women any sympathy or any advice. Just eat popcorn and laugh.

'Alpha' and 'beta' in the red pill are merely substitute words for 'jocks' and 'nerds'

1 upvotes · 19 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's all just a metaphor. Choose whichever one you find illustrative.

Not a good look 🤔🤔

1 upvotes · 18 May 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

Demanding compassion while extending none only works on suckers.

women's high standards is mens fault.

1 upvotes · 17 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Precisely.

women's high standards is mens fault.

1 upvotes · 17 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You were the one who said it first.

Most people marry after they "hit the wall" and it's a very bad idea to marry when you're young and "in your prime".

1 upvotes · 17 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So you're using divorce rates as a rubric for marriage contentment?

How very... interesting.

Why are most college graduates women?

1 upvotes · 17 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If failure of certain racial minority groups to thrive is considered ipso facto evidence of systemic racism, then failure of men to thrive is ipso facto evidence of systemic sexism.

Men do care about a woman's occupation. (CMV)

1 upvotes · 17 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Everything that a woman's career might tell me about her mateworthiness, I can assess much better by having a five minute conversation with her.

Q4A: What should Young people do aged 20 or under who want a stable long-term relationship/Marriage in the current relationship landscape of the U.S.

1 upvotes · 17 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Read articles by TRP endorsed contributors. Learn stuff. Put it to use.

For men who complain about AWALT, and the CC, why don't you just date a religious girl?

1 upvotes · 16 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

All women are like that.

CMV: Most debate on manosphere subs is just lonely dudes trying to "out-alpha" each other with their philosophies

1 upvotes · 16 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

People with something to say write articles. Then anyone who wants to disagree can write an article of their own.

Does religion appeal to and/or create alpha/beta behavior?

1 upvotes · 16 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

All religion is bluepill as fuck.

"There's a big invisible wizard who wants you to do as I say and give me money. Then you'll get rewarded after you die. No, you can't talk to the wizard. I'll tell you what the wizard wants. No, you can't talk to anyone who has been rewarded. The wizard won't allow that. Mysterious are the ways of the wizard."

Based

1 upvotes · 9 May 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

If her value is based on something other than sex, why is she posting naked pictures?

Katie is at it again with this time saying that Men being nice and holding the door open for a women is sexiest

1 upvotes · 3 May 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

I'm actually being paid to hate women. I can hate all women for a simple hourly rate, with a minimum of four hours, or I can craft custom hate for individual women on a per-job basis, with free estimates.

No job is too large or small, and your dissatisfaction is guaranteed, or no money back.

Please be aware that due to pandemic conditions, we are experiencing a massive influx of orders, and wait times are currently 4-6 weeks or longer. Your patience is appreciated.

Am i exagerrating if i say that in todays culture, 98% of women are not "wifeable"?

1 upvotes · 3 May 2021 · /r/askTRP

So don't wife them.

Next.

Katie is at it again with this time saying that Men being nice and holding the door open for a women is sexiest

1 upvotes · 3 May 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

Not particularly.

But you do. Problem is, you're chasing dopamine when what you need is serotonin. Are you really happy in this conversation? Wouldn't you rather be doing something else? Instead of being mad about stuff you don't like?

There's always going to be stuff you don't like. Dwelling on it isn't going to make it go away.

Katie is at it again with this time saying that Men being nice and holding the door open for a women is sexiest

1 upvotes · 3 May 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

Okay. Do you know anything about dopamine and serotonin?

Can I save my buddy?

1 upvotes · 2 May 2021 · /r/askTRP

The one person you cannot save people from is themselves.

How can I begin working on myself to feel worthy of a HVM?

1 upvotes · 23 April 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Well, the girls here aren't too ambitious about being plates, but the principle is the same, and lesson is simple: work on yourself, always.

Maybe some girl might accept you as a fat, easygoing, nonthreatening teddy bear, but she's not gonna be enthralled.

And avoid women who have been indoctrinated into having too much "self-esteem". Because not only will they not be happy with you, they won't be happy with anything or anyone, which means they won't be happy, period.

According to RedPill/MGTOW, are healthy long term relationships just not possible?

1 upvotes · 23 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What an excellent question.

To understand that, it becomes necessary to understand what TRP is really about. When you put aside all the handwringing and crying about moral imperatives, TRP is really about the fact that human instincts can be channeled but not suppressed, ignored, or done away with.

That any sexual strategy must take into into account, and work with, the fact that we are a bunch of intellectualized apes, rather than angels clothed in flesh.

A healthy relationship, then, is one that benefits everyone in it, and this is achieved by acknowledging and working with our mating instincts, rather than against them... regardless of how culturally and morally unacceptable any modern ape-tribe might find them to be.

The first step in this is cultivating the ability to distinguish between that which we want to be true, and that which we think to be true. Being able to treat these as two separate and unrelated things is the critical step for which we use the metaphor of "taking the red pill".

[UPDATE] I think my gf is cheating on me

1 upvotes · 19 April 2021 · /r/askTRP

Kinda reads like you invested before the sucking. Was this not the case?

Anti-feminist not anti- woman

1 upvotes · 16 April 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

Why would they?

What can you tell them, true or not, that they haven't heard out of many other women's mouths as a lie? Remember that feminists themselves claim to be "one of the good ones", and that they "don't hate men", and that they are in fact helping men because "the patriarchy hurts men, too".

Misandrists aren't all standing naked on your lawn smeared in their own excrement, holding a kitchen knife and screaming that the voices told them to stab you. Some of them are wearing a pretty dress and a nice smile, and going in for a hug with that knife up their sleeve.

And even when there's no knife, women tend to be a lot more concerned about these men than for them. Because they spend a lot more time being gravely concerned about male anger than they do about the causes of that anger, a lot more effort trying to police men to make sure they don't hate women than they do dealing with the women who hate men.

Of course they are paranoid and suspicious and hostile. To be otherwise would be to display incapacity for inductive reasoning.

While your sentiments may be in the right place, what you have to realize is that you are not necessarily the solution to every problem. Sometimes you have to just sit back and let others who are more appropriately equipped deal with it.

They are not going to stop being angry while they are still being victimized by this shit. They require solutions from those equipped to help them, not merely sympathy from those who are not.

She wants to bring an ugly friend over

1 upvotes · 8 April 2021 · /r/askTRP

You don't even know what any of this is about.

It's not an argument about whether calling a landwhale a landwhale is a good idea or not, or a sign that you are winning at life or not.

It's about you alleging a moral imperative. This is against the "no moralizing" rule, and it's also against Rule Zero (because you gave him advice that was intended to benefit someone other than him).

Those rules exist for reasons, and I have attempted to contextualize those reasons for you, explaining why I wrote them that way in the first place. I have done this in the hope that I could salvage you and turn you into a productive member of the community.

I am doing this for your benefit, because you have been brainwashed in ways that are not good for you. Your society has taught you a slave morality whose primary purpose is to make you exploitable.

The belief that you, or I, or anyone, "owes" it to this girl to speak about her in certain ways and not in others is the belief that a need in others creates an obligation in you. This is slave morality, because it makes you a slave to anyone who expresses a need in moralistic terms.

However, I have failed you. I cannot get you to think, and understand what is going on around you, instead of merely judging it. Your mouth is robbing your ears, and I can't help you, because I can't get you to help me help you.

Therefore, instead of being able to cure your sickness, I must excise you from TRP so that you do not spread it to others.

Good luck out there.

Losing interest in sex, barely maintaining boner

1 upvotes · 8 April 2021 · /r/askTRP

How long has it been since you've been with someone other than her?

Has TRP lost track of itself?

1 upvotes · 8 April 2021 · /r/askTRP

too often I forget who created TRP

That's your problem right there.

If you're going to gossip with the other freshmen in the back of the class, instead of listening to the professors, it's pointless to complain that you aren't learning anything.

CMV: Red pill is just mostly scammers who are trying to take advantage of down on luck men

1 upvotes · 5 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Nah, man, how else will they know we all 'bout dat hu$$le?

Dating women who have advanced degrees

1 upvotes · 4 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Not entirely. Beauty gets you attraction. Behaviour gets you commitment.

Dating women who have advanced degrees

1 upvotes · 3 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Thing is though if I ask people in real life they will sugar coat everything.

Congratulations, you just figured out the point of TRP, and the reason it exists.

Thing is, I have seen many women who do describe themselves as "smart, accomplished and attractive" yet complain over the internet about their inability to find a man. These women are often in their late 20s and above.

Exactly.

This is not because an advanced degree makes a woman less attractive, but because it increases her expectations without increasing her attractiveness.

No one willingly buys a product that costs more but isn't any better.

I am not yet ready to date but I am hoping to once I have graduated in September and within the next few years (I am currently 22 and still will be 22 when I graduate.)

At what point in the future will your desirability as a mate increase? What event are you waiting for that will get you better results on the dating market?

Many red pillers believe I am leaving it too late, but I have strict Asian parents behind my back who believe that I should not start a relationship until I've left Uni (they think most of these would be STRs!), and can start dating straight after, irrespective of my career position.

You're past the age of legal majority. Your parents' opinion is only relevant if you agree to make it so.

I know of many early-mid 20s Chinese girls who did exactly that and they ended up dating young and upcoming lawyers and doctors.

Yes. Women with advanced degrees are generally a worse deal, but they are less of a worse deal to men with advanced degrees.

Bear in mind, however, that, while advanced degrees increase a man's desirability as a mate, not all men with advanced degrees are desirable mates to every woman.

This whole post is a veiled ask for advice. You couldn't ask it in TBP, because they don't do advice, and you couldn't ask it in TRP, because they don't do advice for women, and you weren't willing ask it in RPW, because that would be tantamount to declaring an opinion in something you either don't agree with or hadn't yet decided upon.

So you asked it here.

The answer is that the first step getting what you want is to know what it is? What do you want to find on the dating market?

Only then can you formulate a plan for how to get it.

Do you honestly believe that men want younger women predominantly because he can't get women his own age as opposed to young adult women just being more attractive?

1 upvotes · 2 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I would rather have a few people find my ideas very interesting than have many people find them sort of dull, but unobjectionable.

BluePillers, what makes you still believe the bluepill? Have you gone from red/purple pill to blue pill?

1 upvotes · 2 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Bless your heart.

BluePillers, what makes you still believe the bluepill? Have you gone from red/purple pill to blue pill?

1 upvotes · 2 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The point of an analogy is to illustrate what someone is thinking, not provide evidence for anything. If you are arguing with someone about what their analogy "should" be, you are missing the point.

Do you honestly believe that men want younger women predominantly because he can't get women his own age as opposed to young adult women just being more attractive?

1 upvotes · 2 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Look, you don't seem to have realized that I understand you. Yes, you are literally answering OP's question. I know.

From square one, however, I have been trying to move on to the logical next topic, which is to understand why women's collective disapproval doesn't change male behaviour in this regard.

It's about incentive structure.

Men have no use for a little bit of approval from a lot of women. They benefit much more from a whole lot of approval coming from a few. That's why "stop doing this or I will call you a creep" is not an effective deterrent. Because if that behaviour is considered "creepy" by 19 out of 20 women, and "sexy" by the remaining 1, then it's in men's interest to mash that button as hard as possible.

Now do you understand what I am saying?

Do you honestly believe that men want younger women predominantly because he can't get women his own age as opposed to young adult women just being more attractive?

1 upvotes · 1 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I could play the autistic robot game, too, and ask where I said you said they would.

Instead, I will present you with two options:

A. "There is no reason for men to care about the opinions of uninvolved women, I am just telling you what those women think. Next I will tell you what tree frogs, Mongolian herdsman, and the French think."

B. "I expect the disapproval of uninvolved women to mean something to men, and here's how I plan to incentivize them to care."

Pick Mes are not the female equivalent of Beta Simps

1 upvotes · 1 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Any man who thinks only low quality women display "pickme" behaviour is a man who not attractive enough to ever have been pursued by a high quality woman.

Do you honestly believe that men want younger women predominantly because he can't get women his own age as opposed to young adult women just being more attractive?

1 upvotes · 1 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

women find it insanely creepy

Women other than the ones they are hooking up with. But why would men care what those women think?

I am completely lost financially. Looking for advice.

1 upvotes · 1 April 2021 · /r/askTRP

Solid financial advice.

I would support this argument by pointing out that small false economies can lead to overspending later on, as we are not in total control of our behaviour.

If I had one recommendation to make, I would advise being miserly with frequent expenses, and being more spendy with one-time purchases which you will use or interact with repeatedly... up to the point where additional marginal cost has little marginal value.

In other words, don't dine out so much, buy a really nice computer, and a lightly used luxury car.

Seriously, I'm done holding doors and making space in the walk aisle.

1 upvotes · 31 March 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

This is not me trying to protect you. It's me trying to protect TRP. The "anger phase" is a necessary step in the process, and with newcomers, I deliberately stoke anger and misogyny so as to inspire them to kick women off the pedestal and grow a spine.

If I get a bunch of retards hanging around here chortling "lolllolol why u mad bro?", then they are hindering that process, especially since new guys are more susceptible to being shamed.

Anger is very important to starting the growth process, and the point of the ideas of "shit tests" or "amused mastery" is not to make men into unreactive lumps who tolerate disrespect with a smile.

Might Backfire Horribly

1 upvotes · 30 March 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

Feminist: #killallmen

Normal People: So much for feminism

Other feminist: We're not all like that!

Normal People: Yes, you are, or you would be telling her that, not us. You're not mad at her for stupid bigoted shit, you're mad at her for embarrassing the movement.

Where do you draw the line between girlfriend and wife duties?

1 upvotes · 27 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

That's not necessarily the question. You are describing some of the benefits of a long term stable relationship. I think you were being asked what the benefits of marriage, the legal status, are, for men.

I think that's it's fairly easy to understand the former, but, under current laws in most of western civilization, it's pretty hard to point out any benefits that a man derives from actually signing those papers.

Q4Women: How exactly are men supposed to improve themselves even further?

1 upvotes · 26 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

How about you just don't date unhappy women who complain all the time?

Weekly Community Chat Megathread

1 upvotes · 24 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think you are vastly underestimating just how institutionally incompetent and stupid silicon valley can be.

But I do agree that this smells funny.

If I had to guess, I'd say that EITHER they didn't know, and they didn't bother to look because of tribalism OR they knew, but didn't care because of tribalism, and are now pretending they didn't know because of public outrage.

What else have we being lied to about?

1 upvotes · 23 March 2021 · /r/askTRP

I've been thinking...do you think it's possible to be technically fully aware without the red pill?

There's a lot of different red pills, as many as there are subjects of discourse. What we call "the" red pill is really just "the red pill about human mating instincts", because that's what we happened to be talking about when we selected the metaphor.

For a bluepill could the best they can be an almost fully aware but not knowing sexual dynamics be holding them back from completely understanding?

I think you kinda have that backwards. Acquiring the habit of full sentience was what led us to examine ourselves (and women) as systems of behaviour, and come to that understanding. It all starts with "I am a mechanism, let me investigate how the mechanism works".

What else have we being lied to about?

1 upvotes · 22 March 2021 · /r/askTRP

You took thermodynamics 101? Good for you.

Now take biochemistry 101.

Unattractive nerds should try to hit on intelligent women

1 upvotes · 22 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There aren't enough intelligent women to go around.

Plate got cancer and is going to struggle financially. I want to help but keep having trp inner-voice say bro wtf no way don't do it.

1 upvotes · 21 March 2021 · /r/askTRP

I'm thinking of getting a 5k loan and helping her out for the next 4 months cause she is off work.

.

Female Dating Strategy

1 upvotes · 21 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There's nothing terrible about bleach so long as you don't drink it.

Where is the starting line, and where is the finishing line?

1 upvotes · 20 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Reification_\(fallacy\))

How much would having regular sex solve your problems?

1 upvotes · 20 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Whether sex solves your problems or not depends on what your problems are.

Are women inherently more aware of male nature than men are of women's?

1 upvotes · 19 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Something that really strikes me as a woman is how obvious concepts from trp are to me.

Yeeessss, that's because TRP describes female nature.

I think as a women we are pretty clued in on how men work from an early age.

Wrong.

Women are far more clueless about male nature than vice versa. Most of them are even unaware of the very existence of such a thing as male nature. They not only don't understand, they are unaware that there is anything to understand.

Many women, however, do believe they understand men very well. This is the Dunning Kreuger effect in action.

Let's say sex is indeed a need. What now? What do we do with this information?

1 upvotes · 19 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Premise 1: People are entitled to that which is a need.

Incorrect. An entitlement for one person is an obligation for another. Who exactly, is obligated to provide what is needed, and why?

This is why you have a right to seek out healthcare, or sex, but no one is obliged to provide it for you.

I hate myself and dont think im worthy of any man (long post)

1 upvotes · 16 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Seeing negative things about yourself is better than being unable to see them.

You now have two choices: work to improve them, or wallow in despair.

Which do you think will lead to a more pleasant existence?

How not to be fat.

1 upvotes · 14 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Yes. There's a lot of things we think might be beneficial about fasting, that appear to happen beyond the 24 hour mark (autophagy, boosted HGH and IGF-1, insulin sensitivity increase, etc), but we know somewhat less about how they work, when they work, and how much good they do, than we know about insulin and basic fat metabolism.

We may find out in the future that long fasts are great for X, Y, or Z, but I'm not yet confident enough to say what X, Y, or Z actually are. It's certainly possible, though.

What we do know it is that there is no fat loss without fat acid metabolism, and chronically elevated insulin greatly inhibits fatty acid metabolism, which is why that's the focus of this article.

How attainable is waiting for marriage if you aren't compatible with the men who want that?

1 upvotes · 12 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

If I do decide to save sex for marriage I realize I'm asking a lot of a potential husband and I have to make myself worth it.

Okay, what does that look like to you?

What do you bring to the table now? What do you expect to add?

How not to be fat.

1 upvotes · 12 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

When someone says something to me that doesn't seem to make sense, I like to look at what else they have written, rather than assuming they are some sort of idiot.

I am sorry to hear you had terrible parents who tried to control your eating habits in nasty ways, and left you with an eating disorder and the persistent feeling that others are out to get you. I'm sorry to hear that your family tried to get you to actually starve yourself.

I'm sorry to hear that your feelings of being targeted are so strong that you even struggle not to attribute hostility to your new kitten.

But please understand that there are other people in the world who are not in your situation, and that is who this article is written for. Please understand that there are other people in the world who have suffered psychologically because they are persistently overweight. Those are the people I am trying to help.

I realize saying something is "anti-science" may feel good when you are angry, but calling something that doesn't make it so. If you wish to discuss, in detail, the work of Robert Lustig, exact mechanisms of fructose metabolism in the liver, how five-carbon rings get fed into citrate and the Krebs cycle, we can do that.

But I'm afraid you posted a bunch of FUD, so I'm going to have to have it removed.

This isn't about you and your struggle. The demons you face are different, and you don't have to do any of this, because this isn't the problem you have. Good luck out there.

Best way to let your (F23) male 'friend' (who's attracted to you) make a move?

1 upvotes · 11 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

But, don't you think a girl making the first move (even if conventionally attractive/it flatters him) is likely to fail to trigger his deep 'pursuing' instinct...?

What deep pursuing instinct would this be?

Is this something that you believe men have?

And where did this idea come from?

We have a super deep connection so I can't see that happening, yet I know male psychology is SO capricious.

How exactly do you "know" this?

Being assertive before has cost me dearly and had guys frame me as nothing more than a hot FwB

Did they tell you this? Or did two things happen in sequence, so you concluded that one caused the other?

How to choose a wife according to the Red Pill?

1 upvotes · 10 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

And those women don't breed without papers.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=VmXSfFY0CO0&t=52s>

How to choose a wife according to the Red Pill?

1 upvotes · 10 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Non sequitur. What does being masculine have to do with signing government forms?

Completely not spreading the false stereotype that men can't be good parents

1 upvotes · 8 March 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

I love examples from fiction. They tell you what people want to believe.

"Invisible Women: Data Bias in a World Designed for Men" by Caroline Criado Pérez

1 upvotes · 8 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm not going to read books just because you asked me to.

If your opinion wasn't worth your time to express to me in your own words, why would it be worth mine to go seek it out?

And my opinion isn't important enough to you that you would attempt to persuade me personally instead of by proxy, then why should I bother to consider how you feel about it?

A scientist explains what men don't understand about dead bedrooms. I think she's right.

1 upvotes · 8 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That's a lot of words to say "Eggs are expensive and sperm is cheap". Gee, I wonder if someone said that before? Maybe multiple someones. For years. Sarah Hill "discovers" things about mating the way Columbus "discovered" America. There were already people there who knew exactly where it was.

Maybe if I jumped through enough academic hoops before telling people the truth, I'd be called a "scientist" instead of a "misogynist".

Although, come to think of it, I'd rather not.

Why "rp is just a toolbox" seems to fails to defeat any moralizing argument.

1 upvotes · 8 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I refuse to admit that chivalry is dead, because then I'd have to stop kicking it.

Why "rp is just a toolbox" seems to fails to defeat any moralizing argument.

1 upvotes · 8 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Everybody gangsta until you ask them exactly HOW they plan to get "ought" from "is".

What was that one moment where you felt sympathetic to the opposite sex's dating struggles? A moment that made you go, "I may not fully agree, but damn. I understand that must be rough."

1 upvotes · 8 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Reading FDS.

Made me think, holy shit. These women have been surrounded by a perfect storm of bullshit all their lives. No one will tell them the truth because they either want to fuck them, or just don't want to look like a big meanie picking on the poor defenseless womenz.

If no one will ever tell you the unwelcome truth, you have no opportunity to develop the capacity for introspection. And if you never develop that, then you can never make any connection between the mistakes you made and the problems you have.

Which means that the world just seems like a malignant game show run by a sadistic god, where random bad shit keeps falling out of the sky and landing on you for no apparent reason.

I had always understood the damage men suffer because they are constantly targeted for unearned criticism and hate... but it took me a long time to understand the damage women suffer from being deprived of earned criticism. Without good feedback, it is impossible to learn.

And so many modern women are stuck in a place where they keep getting bad results because they are screwing up, but no one will tell them what they are doing wrong.

[Q4All]How/where do you think women should be getting their dating advice from?

1 upvotes · 8 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Admitting what? That blaming men for every disappointment in your life isn't harmful to men? That's obvious. If you like, I will also "admit" that hydrogen is the most common element in the universe, that communism has failed every time it has been tried, and that high fructose corn syrup is bad for you.

Sitting around blaming other people for your troubles feels good, is super easy, and doesn't hurt them at all, because they aren't even listening. They are off doing whatever it is they do, and aren't even aware you are talking about them.

What effect it has on you is considerably more in doubt, but it depends what your goal is. Blaming others is good for soothing immediate emotional pain. Blaming yourself is good for change, self-improvement, and avoidance of future emotional pain.

It all depends what your current priority is. Some people are focused on building for the future. Others feel so bad right now that all their energy is directed towards adjusting their current emotional state. Most are somewhere in between.

Personally, I think the healthiest thing I can do, when I have a problem, is find the part that's my fault, because that's the part I can change and fix.

[Q4All]How/where do you think women should be getting their dating advice from?

1 upvotes · 8 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Someone who gives good dating advice.

There is no particular demographic that automatically has this ability.

Best martial art to learn?

1 upvotes · 8 March 2021 · /r/askTRP

Not a bad idea.

A Kali/Arnis school should be able to teach you exactly what to carry and how to use it.

Is this a red flag?

1 upvotes · 7 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

We still don't know who or where exactly the blood was coming from and there was a lot. Enough to completely soak a white T-shirt I was wearing.

See a physician, you idiot.

What are you looking to find when you read here? What is PRW? Maybe it's time to reassess what this sub is about.

1 upvotes · 6 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

In a way, you have just identified one of the major challenges with instituting a place like RPW as a self-help instrument for women.

Self-improvement requires acknowledging one's faults, which requires being receptive to criticism. If the first overriding reaction to such criticism is to reject it as "offensive" or "rude", then no self-improvement is possible. Additionally, if one's first reaction to others in trouble is to provide emotional support, rather than useful advice, or criticism that encourages self-reflection, then a valuable opportunity is lost.

'O you of Egypt!' cried the Sheikh, calling to him. 'Come here and sit beside me, for I have heard what you said and desire your company.'

The cripple immediately began to crawl along by the wall, dragging himself upon his hands and body, for he had no legs.

'He is obedient,' thought the blind man, 'though it costs him much labour to move.'

When the man was beside him, the Sheikh took an onion and a date from his wallet and set them down upon the ground.

'Eat,' he said, 'and give thanks.'

The cripple thanked him and taking the food, began to eat the onion.

'You have taken the onion in your right hand and the date in your left,' said the Sheikh. 'And you are eating the onion first.'

'This is true,' answered the Egyptian. 'I see that my lord has indeed eyes in his fingers.'

'I have,' said the Sheikh. 'But that is not all, for this is an allegory. All men like to eat the onion first and the date afterwards, for though the onion be ever so sweet and tender, its taste is bitter when a man has eaten sugar-dates before it. But you have begun by giving us the mellow fruit of flattery, and when you give us the wholesome vegetable of truth it will be too sharp for our palates. Ponder this in your heart, chew it as the camel does her cud, and the well-digested food of wisdom shall nourish your understanding.'

The cripple listened in astonishment at the depth of the Sheikh's thought, and he would have spoken out his admiration, but it is not possible to eat an onion and to be eloquent at the same time. The blind man knew this and continued to give him instruction.

'The onion has saved you,' he said, 'for your mouth being full you could say nothing flattering, and now you will think before you speak. Consider how I have treated you. Have I at once rendered thanks to Allah for sending into our midst a young man whose gifts of eloquence are at least equal to those of the Kadi himself? I have said nothing so foolish. I have called you an ass of Egypt and otherwise rebuked you, for the good of your understanding, though I begin to think that you are indeed a very estimable young man, and it is possible that your wit may ripen in our society. But now I perceive by my hearing that you are eating the date. I pray you now, eat another onion after it.'

'I cannot,' answered the cripple, 'for my lips are puckered at the thought of it.'

'Neither is truth sweet after flattery,' said the Sheikh, who then began to eat the other onion himself.

What happened to this sub? It used to be about improvment

1 upvotes · 3 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

That's kind of you to say.

I tend to think of it more as resignation to the fact that the universe is big, and I am a very small percentage of it. I can't please everyone, and I can't help everyone, and I can't fix everything.

But I can focus on a person in front of me, and try to tell them what I wish someone had told me, long before I learned it the hard way.

What happened to this sub? It used to be about improvment

1 upvotes · 3 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

You don't have a point, you have resentments.

Sure, there are some people who won't play ball unless they can own the field. But there are fields everywhere. If you want to build, go. Fly. Be free. Build something spectacular. Good luck to you.

Should White Boys Still Be Allowed to Talk?

1 upvotes · 2 March 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

Try and stop them.

Funny how feminists constantly condemn the patriarchy but still need it for basic things like car troubles because they can't do most labor intensive things for themselves without a man helping them.

1 upvotes · 2 March 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

Or she could just learn how to fix a car.

What happened to this sub? It used to be about improvment

1 upvotes · 1 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

RPW readers, in general, are much more reluctant than TRP readers to write articles and start articles. This means that the group is much more question-driven than TRP is. You, yourself, /u/luckymonstera, have written only three comments and this post in RPW.

In general, complaining about lack of content is a lot easier than generating that content, or even getting others to do so.

I recall one young lady I worked with personally, through PM, all the way from "I'm so lonely, why don't men pay any attention to me?" to a marriage proposal from a cardiothoracic surgeon, who then procrastinated, dragged her feet, and eventually vanished when I asked her to give back by writing a single "field report" summarizing what she had learned, what worked, what didn't, etc.

I've come to accept that women are generally not as reciprocal as men are... receiving value doesn't really instill most of them with the urge to give value in return. As such, RPW is, and will continue to be, largely a question-and-answer sort of forum, and won't really develop any progression in understanding of the male mind.

That's okay, this is only a side project for me, and individual non-baking eaters can always be removed if they complain too obnoxiously about the lack of enough cookies to go around.

Feminist who say these kinds of things act like there's not grown women with those features

1 upvotes · 27 February 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

If you don't like dating older men, don't date one.

If other women want your advice, they'll ask for it.

is there scientific evidence shittests are real? could they be just normal deterrents for physically "inferior" males?

1 upvotes · 27 February 2021 · /r/askTRP

The science game is played like this:

"Here is all the data we have, what conclusions does it support?"

... not like this:

"Here is the conclusion I want to reach, what evidence can I locate that supports it?"

When you locate an anecdote about someone getting initial contacts off his appearance, and then immediately conclude that only appearance can get you sex and love, there's no point in me tirelessly explaining every single error of reasoning you made.

That's because you didn't make those errors in reasoning because you are stupid, you made them because you wanted to make them.

You are what I refer to as a Help Resistant Complainer. I linked you to an article about exactly how to develop the courage to work towards a goal, and not only did you not read it, you actively tried to talk me out of helping you.

Okay, you succeeded. I'm not going to put more effort into you than you put into yourself. You are now going into read-only mode on TRP, so that you do not get in the way of those who are actively working on self-improvement. You are welcome to read and practice if you change your mind, but I can't and won't force you to do that.

You can lead a whore to culture, but you can't make her think.

is there scientific evidence shittests are real? could they be just normal deterrents for physically "inferior" males?

1 upvotes · 26 February 2021 · /r/askTRP

The Theory of Genetic Determinism (the so-called "black" pill) doesn't stand up to two minutes' worth of objective consideration. Here are some of the more obvious problems:

1. It assumes that evolution has an end-goal, and organisms get generally "better" over time, as opposed to selecting from a set of tradeoffs based on current conditions.
2. It was composed by people who had even heard the word "epigenetics", much less known its meaning.
3. It fails to explain how the ancestors of supposed genetic rejects managed to breed in the first place.
4. It supposes that evolution only occurs in males, and that female tastes are not a subject of natural selection.
5. It supposes that you can't fool a creature whose major interests are selfies, cute shoes, and twitter.

But all that doesn't matter... because there is nothing I can say or do that will save you from yourself. So long as you believe this task to be impossible, then you will focus no effort on it.

I wrote you a whole article on how not to be a coward, but I can't force you to read it. That part is up to you.

Women have more freedom than they've ever had in history, but they still choose to sell their bodies for income

1 upvotes · 26 February 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Transactions occur when there are willing buyers, and willing sellers. Why are you fussing about this?

My husband is wonderful, but I'm having a hard time seeing past my flaws and being the happy wife he deserves

1 upvotes · 24 February 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Because the only thing you need to do to become a doctor is pass medical school, internship, and residency. And therefore, the average doctor can only be expected to know only those things which are taught in those three processes.

Doctors are not engineers... they do not have a systemic, cause-mechanism-and-effect understanding of the body. In fact, your average physician is not smart enough to cut it as an engineer. He doesn't have to think about the body in terms of cause and effect. He only has to recognize the same common things, again and again, and apply the same generally accepted solutions, time and time again.

It is inevitable that most doctors are going to be incompetent, because doctors are not held accountable. If you live, they take credit. If you die, there was "nothing they could possibly have done". If you lose weight, they take credit. If you don't, it's your fault.

That's a sweet deal if you can get it, but totally unaccountable people have no incentive to produce results.

Why should they educate themselves about how your metabolism is damaged, and how to help you? They get paid either way.

Q4All: "We treat women and girls like training wheels to help boys and men grow up, and not as individuals with our own desires" Just how true is that statement?

1 upvotes · 23 February 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Who's "we"?

Should clients of prostitutes be villanized?

1 upvotes · 23 February 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The more you demonize something, the more those who do it will act like demons.

If men want more opportunities for sex, why don't they put the same amount of effort into grooming, self care and "glowing up" as most women do?

1 upvotes · 23 February 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Wrong question.

The correct question is "if men want to be more attractive to women, on what aspects of themselves should they focus their efforts?".

Q4M: Would you date a woman who is taller than you?

1 upvotes · 23 February 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Dunno. Never seen one.

Does this describe you? "I have a job, a house, and a loving group of friends, family and a dog. But I'm willing to throw all of that away if it meant I could be a guy who can get constant endless casual sex on demand."

1 upvotes · 23 February 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This is why I teach men to spin plates. Not because I expect them to do so forever (Hell, I live with my two LTRs and am certainly no longer hanging out in nightclubs flirting with drunk girls), but because without that sense of having control over their sex life, nothing you lay on top of that really works.

Stop Putting Condiments on your Shit Sandwich of a Life

1 upvotes · 19 February 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

Don't worry... I've got this.

How do you feel about many red pill gurus and dating coaches being shown to be not so successful in real life?

1 upvotes · 19 February 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I have never heard of any of these people.

How do you feel about many red pill gurus and dating coaches being shown to be not so successful in real life?

1 upvotes · 19 February 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I have only heard of one of these people.

Has anyone considered that women are just more physically attractive than men objectively, and that's why there appears to be an imbalance in how many can get dates?

1 upvotes · 19 February 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP talks about this "unfair" imbalance around how even "average" looking women can have sex whenever they want, including with men who are considered above average in looks, but that "average" looking men can't even find success with average or below average women.

"Hi, I'm a girl who has never actually read TRP, but I've heard a lot about it!"

This gets blamed on so called "hypergamy"

"I also don't know the definition of hypergamy."

the objective beauty

"And I don't know what the word "objective" means."

The friend zone isn't a bad place to be

1 upvotes · 19 February 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you're an ethical person, trying to build a connection with someone.

I have zero interests in conforming to your standards of ethics. I have my own.

For those of you who are in LTRs and cohabitating, why haven't you married yet?

1 upvotes · 19 February 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because the state isn't part of my relationships, and neither are other people's imaginary friends.

This Article Will Infuriate You

1 upvotes · 16 February 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

Very definitely. Loved it.

Ask Whisper: How to use intermittent fasting to lose weight?

1 upvotes · 14 February 2021 · /r/askTRP

I was afraid i was pre diabetic, but my bloodwork showed the opposite, although overweight, blood sugar, hormones and vitamins are all perfect.

It's possible.

Subcutaneous fat isn't harmful at all unless you have truly huge amounts of it, but small amounts of liver and pancreatic fat will kill you.

Ask Whisper: How to use intermittent fasting to lose weight?

1 upvotes · 13 February 2021 · /r/askTRP

These will send your insulin high, but that's not necessarily counterproductive. Insulin isn't "bad", and it's supposed to go high. It just isn't supposed to stay elevated all the time.

When you fast, your insulin will come down. Slowly, and not so much, at first, because if you're that fat, you probably have muscle insulin resistance, and chronically elevated insulin (which would mean you were on the road to type 2 diabetes), but later it will drop more rapidly.

So, no, you don't need to do keto. It enhances fasting, but isn't necessary.

Ask Whisper: How to use intermittent fasting to lose weight?

1 upvotes · 12 February 2021 · /r/askTRP

i tried keto, but i felt lethargic and had headaches.

Not surprising. You see, eating protein also raises your insulin levels, so if you "graze" while doing keto, you can have low blood sugar which your liver would have difficulty correcting... hence, headaches (because brain needs glucose).

But if your insulin is low, your liver can start making glucose... so no headaches.

Bear in mind that if you have been grazing for years, your liver might take a little time to get its shit together, so a few days of lethargy and headaches might be a thing.

8/16 is definitely the place to start, but if you're comfortable, you can push harder quickly. When fasting, how you feel is a really good rubric for how you really are. If you're comfortable, then you're safe.

What I do (since I am a little more used to this process) is eat one meal a day... a big, satisfying one, just being careful to avoid anything sugary or highly processed. Then I wait about 23-24 hours and do it again. I do sometimes get hungry, a bit, but it isn't hard to bear, because I know it will go away again, and I know that, sometime later the same day, I will get fed, and fed enough so that I'm not going to walk away hungry.

Now, obviously, I'm only using that to strip off an extra 10 pounds or so from the odd bulk cycle, but it does make that fast and easy.

The critical tipping point is actually your comfort level. Don't push this so hard that it's grueling, even if you have the motivation to do so right now. That's like starting a marathon by sprinting.

Instead, you want to find the longest periods of fasting that feeling comfortable for you... so you set a pace you can sustain for however long it takes to reach your goal.

Ask Whisper: How to use intermittent fasting to lose weight?

1 upvotes · 12 February 2021 · /r/askTRP

Okay, well, bear in mind that I have never been 60lbs overweight, so your mileage may vary, but...

Think of it like this; your body can't actually run out of food, until you are no longer fat. That's what that fat is... stored food energy. So, while you can have all the symptoms of low blood glucose (tired, hungry, etc) before your body starts unpacking fat and burning it, you're not going to have that once the process starts.

Once your body enters a ketosis state (burning mostly fat rather than glucose), there is no reason for it to unpack less than it needs or wants. (It is true that your brain can't live off fat alone, it needs glucose. But that's okay, because if you don't eat any, your body will synthesize enough for your brain to be getting on with.)

In general, you will feel fine in this state.

However, the fact that you are fat probably means you haven't been in this state in years, or at least not often. So you may not feel totally normal at first. Hungry. Irritable. Maybe just "odd".

Obviously, if you feel seriously lightheaded, you should stop and see a physician. But so long as we are listing Shit That Will Not Happen To You, you should also see a physician if you get struck by lightning or bitten by a dinosaur.

Ask Whisper: How to use intermittent fasting to lose weight?

1 upvotes · 12 February 2021 · /r/askTRP

Your advice is to stay away from fruit, alcohol and grazing, right ?

Not fruit exactly.

Fructose is a type of sugar that is found in fruit, in table sugar (you know, the white granular stuff), and "high fructose corn syrup".

Most fruit doesn't have much, and is high in soluble fiber, so you absorb it slowly. I wouldn't worry too much about avoiding fruit. (Although I am a bit suspicious of some the modern highly-hybridized sweet varieties of pineapples, apples, etc... they might have more).

Fruit juice, however, is lots more of that with no fiber. Avoid it as you would soda.

So im gonna eat big meals of whole foods in my 8 hour window

That's the basic idea, although the longer you can go between eating, the more you will benefit.

I recommend starting at 8/16, and dialing it up as you get used to it. 8/16 is more to get you acclimatized than to do a real heavy cut.

But you will find that once you are used to it, the hunger goes away and the whole process actually becomes pretty comfortable. The big difference is that it's sustainable... you can keep it up without a great effort of will, because most of the time you won't be hungry.

What turns a girl to feminism/lgbt?

1 upvotes · 12 February 2021 · /r/askTRP

So why exactly are YOU here?

Ask Whisper: How to use intermittent fasting to lose weight?

1 upvotes · 12 February 2021 · /r/askTRP

Not exactly. It's obvious that if fruit made you fat and sick, someone would have noticed by now.

This is what seems to be going on:

According to <https://pubmed.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/29414685/>, the small intestine has some (low) capacity to absorb and process fructose, which is probably safe. The problem is, we (USA), are eating so much of the stuff that this buffer simply can't keep up, and the rest gets dumped on the liver. Fructose + liver is bad.

If you want to know how this works, here's a link to the reddit comment least likely to be responded to ever.

As for just how that ends up fucking you up, watch this: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=jpNU72dny2s>

This Article Will Infuriate You

1 upvotes · 9 February 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

At first when I read this, I thought you had gone beyond ignorant, passed misinformed, hung a left at retarded, and wound up at malicious. But then, reading more carefully, I realized it is also possible that you have simply reified a very high-level summary, and you're just being the "Well, ACKSHOEALLY" guy.

Fructose/sucrose and alcohol. These really fall under the category of "rebuilt food", but they are so bad that I wish to call them out separately. These not only turn directly into fat

Okay, so let's add more detail.

There is a chain of events that starts with you drinking a soda, and ends with up with those same actual carbon atoms that are in the fructose almost entirely residing in new fat cells in your liver, specifically.

The first thing that happens is that sucrase cuts the glucose-fructose bond in a microsecond, leaving you with one glucose and one fructose. This happens in the small intestine before it even hits your blood.

This is why Coke keeps saying that HFCS and "sugar" are the same thing. It's true. They are pretty much equal. Equally bad. Equally deadly. Equally poison.

The next thing that happens is that a very small amount of that fructose is phosphorylated via ketohexokinase in the boundary cells of the small intestine, to yield fructose-1-phosphate.

<https://pubmed.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/29414685/>

(We're going to skip over the rest of the fructolysis pathway here, because we're going to talk about it later, in the liver.)

This is what happens when you eat vegetables and certain fruits... and it's how your body is evolved to deal with natural fructose. Although I suspect (but do not know and cannot prove) that modern strains of some fruits may be so fructose-heavy that they overwhelm this mechanism, and pass a lot of fructose into the bloodstream.

... Which is just what happens when you eat sugar or drink soda, fruit juice, etc.

At which point it gets picked up by the liver, which is the only other organ in the body capable of significant fructolysis. So now we get to look at the whole pathway.

I'm going to copy and paste this directly from the Wikipedia article you should have read:

The first step in the metabolism of fructose is the phosphorylation of fructose to fructose 1-phosphate by fructokinase ($K_m = 0.5 \text{ mM}$, $\approx 9 \text{ mg/100 ml}$), thus trapping fructose for metabolism in the liver.

Hexokinase IV (Glucokinase), also occurs in the liver and would be capable of phosphorylating fructose to fructose 6-phosphate (an intermediate in the gluconeogenic pathway); however, it has a relatively high K_m (12 mM) for fructose and, therefore, essentially all of the fructose is converted to fructose-1-phosphate in the human liver.

Fructose-1-phosphate then undergoes hydrolysis by fructose-1-phosphate aldolase (aldolase B) to form dihydroxyacetone phosphate (DHAP) and glyceraldehyde; DHAP can either be isomerized to glyceraldehyde 3-phosphate by triosephosphate isomerase or undergo reduction to glycerol 3-phosphate by glycerol 3-phosphate dehydrogenase. The glyceraldehyde produced may also be converted to glyceraldehyde 3-phosphate by glyceraldehyde kinase or converted to glycerol 3-phosphate by glyceraldehyde 3-phosphate dehydrogenase. The metabolism of fructose at this point yields intermediates in gluconeogenic pathway leading to glycogen synthesis, or can be oxidized to pyruvate and reduced to lactate, or be decarboxylated to acetyl CoA in the mitochondria and directed toward the synthesis of free fatty acid, resulting finally in TG synthesis.

If all of that looks like gibberish to you, that's okay, all that means is that you didn't suffer through Biochem 110A, B, and C like I did. And even now I have to read it twice, because it's been years.

What important to know is that there are two things your liver can do with fructose. Both of them have the same first step, which is conversion of fructose-1-phosphate to dihydroxyacetone phosphate and glyceraldehyde-3-phosphate, in equilibrium.

https://upload.wikimedia.org/wikipedia/commons/e/eb/Fructose_to_trioses.jpg

From there, the pathway bifurcates. One path is glycogenesis, and this is, in fact, the preferred pathway:

Increased concentrations of DHAP and glyceraldehyde-3-phosphate in the liver drive the gluconeogenic pathway toward glucose-6-phosphate, glucose-1-phosphate and glycogen formation. It appears that fructose is a better substrate for glycogen synthesis than glucose and that glycogen replenishment takes precedence over triglyceride formation.

That's why Gatorade actually did what it was supposed to do. It repletes the glycogen in the liver a lot faster than glucose, which is why sugary drinks are actually good for athletic performance... but, as we will see in a moment, they are still very, very bad for the athletes, who are at significant risk for non-alcoholic fatty liver disease, type 2 diabetes, and/or metabolic syndrome later in life.

Ask me how I know.

The problem pathway is the second one, which is not preferred over glycogenesis, but becomes so when glycogen is repleted. It's made up of two subpaths, one from DHAP, one from GA-3-P, which both wind up in triglycerides and de novo lipogenesis.

GA-3-P is converted to pyruvate (I'm summarizing here because I'm bored of typing, and bored of stopping every thirty seconds to look stuff up because I don't remember how to spell all these names), then into the whole Krebs cycle thing, which I am not going to fucking explain:

https://upload.wikimedia.org/wikipedia/commons/0/0b/Citric_acid_cycle_with_aconitate_2.svg

... at which point a metric fuckton of citrate boards the citrate shuttle. (Now leaving: mitochondria. Next stop: hepatic cytoplasm.) Hence acetyl coenzyme A, hence fatty acid synthesis.

Mercifully, the second subpath is easier to summarize. DHAP to glycerol-3-phosphate by reduction via glycerol-3-phosphate dehydrogenase, and there's your fatty acid right there.

So fatty acids from both these sources are esterized into triglycerides, and we're done. (Thank fuck, because I'm having flashbacks.)

So there you have it. New fat. In your liver. That's bad. It gives you metabolic syndrome. It gives you type 2 diabetes. It kills you.

It gives us all sky-prices on insulin, and commie idiots demanding socialized medicine because they don't understand the meaning of the word "shortage".

And why? Because you stupid fuckers keep drinking HFCS and thinking it's okay because you work out real hard and aren't visibly fat. The fat you can see is subcutaneous fat. It's bad for your sex life, but not for your health. It's fine. Irony of ironies, some people actually are "healthy at any size", while others are totally jacked, but have fatty livers and are gonna get very sick and die.

Stop.

Eating.

Sugar.

Ask Whisper: How to use intermittent fasting to lose weight?

1 upvotes · 8 February 2021 · /r/askTRP

Yeah, pretty much. The three worst mistakes you can make with your diet are fructose, ethanol, and grazing (eating small amounts constantly).

IMF is basically "stop grazing".

If you want good results, you have to lay off the fructose and ethanol as well.

Do masculine men employ sarcasm?

1 upvotes · 8 February 2021 · /r/askTRP

First answer me this question: Is it more alpha to lace your shoes under then over, or over then under?

Girl flaked twice

1 upvotes · 8 February 2021 · /r/askTRP

Lukewarm enthusiasm at best. On to the next one.

Guns equal feminism

1 upvotes · 4 February 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

Just because somebody attacked you, does not mean that you have the right to kill him. If you know that it is life or death situation, you know that you can not handle him, then be it.

This is your off-the-cuff idea of what the criteria are kinda like.

The precise legal criteria are quite a bit more refined than that, both in the sense of being more precise, and in the sense of being more moral. The law may be stupid in many, many, areas, but on the issue of justified use of lethal force, it has been refined for hundreds of years, and it is appropriate and wise.

I can point you to some resources on that if you'd like to learn.

While you are correct that not every attack justifies a lethal response, and OP is correct that feminism has nothing to do with human rights, it is also absolutely true that the natural right to keep and bear arms has even more relevance for women.

This is because, despite Hollywood's endless spinning of kickass-girl fantasies... women simply cannot fight men without high-tech weapons like firearms. Men are physically superior, by orders of magnitude, on every single measurement that matters in a fight... strength, power, speed, resilience, agility, pain threshold, and so on.

Without guns, women simply cannot defend themselves against men who actually are trying to hurt them. Period. Full stop. Stunguns don't work. Pepper spray hurts, but it doesn't stop tough men. Rape whistles don't work. Unarmed martial arts training doesn't produce enough benefit to overcome men's natural advantages.

A woman without a gun is at the mercy of whatever men she is around. She must trust that they will not attack her, or that they will defend her against another man who does.

Despite this reality, most feminists prefer to indulge in fantasies about "tough grrrrrls", which is not surprising because feminism is just marxism applied to the family, and doesn't give two fucks about helping actual individual women with any problem they really have. In other words, feminists are mostly anti-gun because they're really just a bunch of fucking commies.

The quote pictured is attempting to buck that trend by presenting the fact that an armed society is actually safer for weak people (such as women)... but it makes the mistake of tying that to feminism, as if feminism weren't inherently garbage that has nothing to do with human rights at all.

Guns equal feminism

1 upvotes · 3 February 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

Then you're wrong. If someone attacks you, that's precisely when you do have the right to take their life. There are specific legal criteria for this.

The Most Important Thing

1 upvotes · 2 February 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

I miss those times, and I miss you, brother. Get your business stuff sorted out so you can join us down here.

One day future Western boys and young men will ask: "Why didn't you fight for my rights?"

1 upvotes · 1 February 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

Because I'm not your personal army.

You can't save a society if it doesn't want to be saved.

I'm Doing Everything Right, But Why Am I Always Miserable?

1 upvotes · 31 January 2021 · /r/askTRP

I'm in a solid routine and doing it all right, but I'm fucking lonely

...

I have no friends or women

<https://i.imgur.com/B4yLlol.jpg>

(Most) Gay men are on your side

1 upvotes · 26 January 2021 · /r/MensRights

<https://www.trp.red/p/whisper/1408>

Describe your ultimate ideal LTR partner. Who is this person that will truly make you happy? Other commenters, do you find these standards realistic?

1 upvotes · 15 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's not other people who make you happy.

So PPD in a nutshell

1 upvotes · 14 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Equality is very hard to apply to any sort of gender discussion because I feel like equality is hard to define when we are talking about things that are inherently different. I mean are apples and oranges equal?

Ya, I feel ya. The metaphor I like to use is "Are food and water equal?". You can't even talk about which is more important, because both are absolutely important... without either one you're gonna die. And neither is a substitute for the other.

I think the whole "equality" thing comes from "we hold these truths to be self evident, that all men are created equal". But what this was intended to mean was that titles of nobility are granted by human society, not created by god or otherwise inherent in a person.

Then, the same society that came up with that one decided that people should be "equal before the law". But that also has a defined meaning. Means we don't want the law to play favorites. Means we want cases, criminal or civil, judged on their merits and circumstances, not the identity of their participants.

Those both make sense, but, having used that term twice, we created a precedent of it standing in for some general sense of fairness, which is just too vague.

Especially with men and women... because we have different needs. If you were to treat me like you like to be treated, I would most likely find it very demeaning, and if I were to treat you like I like to be treated, you would most likely find it very demanding.

I personally am attracted to men who exhibit masculine traits but I think both men and women aren't 100% masculine or feminine, and their needs will vary. I am cool with being submissive in a relationship and my man taking the lead but I feel like men who are too masculine would suffocate me because I personally am a fairly ambitious woman and I have a lot of things I am interested in learning.

One of main conclusions I've come to over the years of this stuff is that women are inherently submissive (as I say in the article), and don't really mind someone being in charge of them... but it can't be just anyone. Being submissive doesn't mean you simply roll over and take no mind of your own well being.

A woman has to be able to trust both a man's intentions (will he take care of you?) and his competence (can he take care of you?). Otherwise, there's going to be a lot more boundaries until she decides she can trust him, or she'll just eject when she decides she can't.

Worrying that your ambitions, for example, will be stifled, is one form that reserve might take.

On the other hand, I am cool with men and women who do like very traditional roles, or those who don't want them at all, at least I think it's kind of good that people nowadays can choose.

While no one except Cotton Mather and Simone de Beauvoir want to force anyone to do anything in this respect, the fact is that, just like with your young guys turning into angry snake-men because they've been given bad advice, young women can be harmed by bad signals, too. And we don't necessarily have the choice to say nothing, because people talk about these things.

So the way I do things is to talk about what is, and not what "should" be.

It's pretty okay (Or well, it was, before this whole covid shabang :p). It's good for skiing, lotsa mountains, the Alpic region is really pretty.

I've never been. But from the pictures, it seems pretty. Especially if you like castles.

People are mostly chill, although we have our own type of extremists as well. Where you from?

Like most of the people here, I'm an American. Grew up urban, moved rural once my career was advanced enough that I had more choice. Engineering jobs kinda keep you in certain metropolitan areas until you have enough leverage to get remote work. Coronavirus helps push that, though.

I take it the art's not a professional gig for you?

How does "smell dating" data line-up with the 80/20 rule?

1 upvotes · 14 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I wanna see the actual study before I decide that anything discredits anything.

First comes sex, then maybe commitment

1 upvotes · 14 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Should we be teaching young boys to pursue sex with girls they like and to wait on making a decision on commitment until much later?

"Should" just means "I want".

And our culture doesn't particularly want to see men thrive.

Study claims dark triad men have lower standards for women

1 upvotes · 14 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

DT men are easy to find, but not easy to identify.

I wonder if chic-fil-a is hiring?

1 upvotes · 13 January 2021 · /r/PussyPassDenied

Swallowing doesn't seem so bad after all, now, does it?

Women's filtering methods are far more effective at eliminating HVM than LVM

1 upvotes · 13 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Bit of a textwall, but skimming a bit, we can zero in on a important point... there's a huge difference between overtly saying something and effectively signalling it.

Think of it as "content communication" (the literal content of words) vs. "process communication" (that which is not spoken, but can be inferred from how the message is sent, context, etc.).

Often, when you say one thing overtly, the real message can end up being the exact opposite.

How do I show him I'm not a pick me type of woman?

1 upvotes · 13 January 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

There are only two types of women, pickmes, and skipmes.

Guess who gets treated better?

Movies or TV shows that depict male redpill tendencies?

1 upvotes · 13 January 2021 · /r/askTRP

The Red Pill doesn't have a collective goal. It's only here to help you pursue your individual goals.

So the only question for you is whether or not you failed.

So PPD in a nutshell

1 upvotes · 12 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I am curious though. How do you define misogyny and sexism?

I generally don't.

Mostly, these descriptions are leveled at me by people who don't like what I write.

In TRP, I teach men how not to submit to someone else's frame (a word which we use to roughly mean control of the subject, context, and assumptions of the conversation).

If a woman calls a man a "misogynist", she is more likely to subsequently mate with him (or at least respect him and approve of him), if his response is "... And?", instead of "no, because reasons". That's because women generally mental strength and self-confidence a lot more in men than they value politeness and consideration.

It's not so much about me thinking I am or am not... I simply don't care. I don't think about the world in those terms, any more than I worry about whether or not Torquemada would have considered me a "heretic". It simply isn't relevant to me, and I don't care what Torquemada thinks, because his ideas are based upon absurd assumptions like "the universe is run by an invisible wizard", and "you should let a celibate octogenarian tell you what to do with your penis".

Similarly, if someone thinks "men and women are equal", when no one can even explain what the fuck that is supposed to mean, then I don't really care about what they think when I write this, because it isn't intended to please them, and I don't need them to be pleased.

My writing is intended to un-mislead men who have suffered from being misled, not make neoMarxists think I'm nice guy. So, "Happy Misogynist" really means "I don't care if your snarl word applies to me or not".

Slovenia. Probably one of the most "westernized" Slavic countries due to it's geographic position.

Oh.

I know absolutely nothing about Slovenia. What's it like?

Does RPMen and RPWomen have views regarding women supporting their men that are kinda opposed to each other?

1 upvotes · 11 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

And?

I just told you these were two different populations with different goals.

If all men struggling with dating were to turn gay, most would have their dating problems vanish, doesn't that suggest dating is hard cause of women ?

1 upvotes · 11 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If a large segment of the male population suddenly turned gay, it would lead to a shortage of heterosexual men.

Does RPMen and RPWomen have views regarding women supporting their men that are kinda opposed to each other?

1 upvotes · 11 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Is there a question here?

I think you're getting at something, but you've left some of your thinking unexplained. Do you see some sort of logical inconsistency? If so, you're going to have to spell it out a bit more.

"Men are protectors" doesn't mean much to women since men are the ones we need protection from

1 upvotes · 11 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

How is it any of my concern what other men do?

The value of the term misogyny -very confused

1 upvotes · 11 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Misogynist used to mean a man who hates women. Now it means a man that at least one woman hates.

Conservative Values And Gender Roles Will Lead To A Happier Society

1 upvotes · 11 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Society isn't capable of being happy. Only individuals can be happy.

Thoughts on the Old Joke: "If men got pregnant, there'd be an abortion clinic one every corner."

1 upvotes · 11 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Precisely. Everything about the difference between men and women can be inferred from the fact that human infants have giant heads.

Does RPMen and RPWomen have views regarding women supporting their men that are kinda opposed to each other?

1 upvotes · 11 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You're confused.

TRP and RPW are not necessarily each other's dating pool. They don't share goals or ideologies, because the redpill is not a goal or ideology. It's a set of observations which can be used to pursue individual goals.

So PPD in a nutshell

1 upvotes · 10 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It certainly makes some sense that someone would say of PPD "if you don't like it don't look"... but the same thing can be said to PPD about TRP, which was kind of the point.

The annoyance I've personally experienced with the handwringing brigade is that they don't confine themselves to their own groups... they leak. My "wall of death threats" is more of a source of amusement than anything else, but the difficulties it adds to modding are considerable... I keep having to pick new mods because they burn out.

Imagine your sub gets quarantined one day, 'cause other folks can't mind their own damn business, and suddenly you have twenty thousand messages in the queue from mobile phone users who can't get in, because the quarantine prompt only doesn't display properly on the phone version.

All because people can't stand to have men being angry in a private and isolated space I made for them to be angry in. (That anger is critical to their progress.)

So, while you seem like a nice enough girl, you haven't been overly hostile, and you draw pretty, I simply can't help but experience your rather knee-jerk criticism in the context of the endless stream of busybodies we deal with every day.

Problems that are beyond the scope of RPW.

1 upvotes · 10 January 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

A list of resources would be helpful if you want to put one together. I'd focus on web-based contacts rather than phone numbers, which are more location-dependent.

Sign of decadency: Inversion of sexual value and fracturing of the family

1 upvotes · 10 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm one of the founders of TRP.

Tradcons love to criticize "degeneracy" or "decadence", but they often have trouble defining it beyond "C'mon, just look at it! That ain't right!". Which isn't an argument.

I don't care what lesbians do. And I don't care if dudes jerk off in a bottle for them.

Personally, if some woman wanted a tall, good-looking, and hyperintelligent kid and was okay with him needing laser eye surgery and being kind of an asshole, I would have nothing in principle against selling her some, but there's two reasons I wouldn't do it in practice.

First, there's a slight but nonzero risk of ending up in family court, a place where you never, never, never want to find yourself if you are a man.

Second, she'd have to pay enough to make it worth my while, and I'm part of the 1%, so it takes a certain amount of money to do that.

But that doesn't address your question of whether TRP "supports" this, exactly. TRP doesn't "support" things. It isn't the "save society" crusade. We concern ourselves with what is, and don't talk about what "should be", because "should" just means "I want", and what a man wants is up to him as an individual.

Personally, I advise men not to join causes, but to make their own health, safety, welfare and prosperity their cause, and not to take responsibility for protecting or saving anyone who isn't paying in advance.

Whether lesbos buying sperm and having babies is "good" or "bad" is a battlefield in the war between Tradconism and Neomarxism, both of which are enemies to the male sex. And if you have two enemies which are fighting each other, the smart thing to do is make sure they both get hurt as much as possible.

Sign of decadency: Inversion of sexual value and fracturing of the family

1 upvotes · 10 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm Whisper, and I wrote a sizeable portion of the sidebar, and a lot of the core material.

And I don't understand what the "this" is that I would be "supporting".

The reason PPD men don't believe women who say they're attracted to "personality" isn't because we're wired differently, it's because they actually misunderstand which personality traits said women are referring to.

1 upvotes · 9 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No one is sexually aroused by personality. Personality is a construct.

Women are sexually aroused by behaviour.

Do men in these modern times want to be breadwinners?

1 upvotes · 9 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You were the one who started this conversation with me. And you are the only one who is unhappy with how it is going. And you are free to exit it at any time.

So, if you want nothing from me, feel free to not respond.

If you do want something from me, such as that I use a tone you find less "hostile" while I am having conversations that didn't involve you in the first place and have nothing to do with you, then you could offer me some inducement.

I have no problem getting along with women. I just have no incentive to get along with you.

Do men in these modern times want to be breadwinners?

1 upvotes · 9 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

'picking up the tab' for someone implies long term partnership

It does not. It means that women who choose their own path in life are responsible for dealing with the consequences of their choices.

In other words, it means "don't come crying to me". I'm not going to be responsive to Tradcon screeds about how I should "man up" and support some girl and a passel of brats, nor to Neomarxist blitherings about the "life of Julia" and how men need to care for all women, everywhere.

In fact, when I say "I'm not going to bankroll you", and you get all mad instead of saying "Okay, cool", then clearly something else is going on here.

I offer you nothing, and I accept nothing from you. Other women, such as my two current girlfriends, might want a different deal, but then that was (and will be) an individual negotiation. I disclaim any responsibility for supporting or defending women as a group.

I'm not going to be an "ally". I'm not going to "believe women". I'm not going to make sure women are "represented". I have no interest in "closing the wage gap". I'm not going to "support" any of the things that Neomarxism tries to recruit me for with no payment apart from moral harangues.

If you truly don't need me, and are a "strong and independent womyn who don't need no man", none of this will upset you. Go do your own thing. Have fun storming the castle.

Do men in these modern times want to be breadwinners?

1 upvotes · 9 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The problem with statements like "You won't get laid with that attitude" is that they only work on people who don't already know whether their attitude will get them laid or not.

People who already know they won't, and still have that attitude, must not care. And people who already know they will, are obviously aware that you are lying or mistaken.

Either way, it's not very effective. Especially since you haven't the faintest idea what other women will or will not do. You only know what you want them to do.

Do men in these modern times want to be breadwinners?

1 upvotes · 9 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You're just reiterating the Neomarxist position in the war it is waging on Tradconism.

That's the one where Tradconism argues that the old order must be preserved because it cares for, provides for, and protects women, while Neomarxism argues that the old order must be abolished because it fails to liberate and empower women.

But you're making a mistake in voicing that argument to me, because I don't care.

Both Tradconism and Neomarxism share the same goal... to fine-tune society for the purpose of benefiting women. They just disagree on the methods.

I don't share that goal. I'm not interested in Slave Masculinity or Slave Morality. I'm not interested in any moral arguments predicated on a system that views me, or other men, as a means rather than an end.

A plague over both your houses.

Woman can go do whatever the fuck they're gonna do with their lives. But I am not going to pick up the tab, or the pieces.

Study: "Confidence is sexy and it can be trained." This is a huge part of what PUAs / TRP mean by "alpha".

1 upvotes · 8 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Cool.

Sometimes people have to get angry in order to articulate their views, and nothing makes a boomer angry like telling him his feelings don't matter.

I now understand why your notion of "arguing your views" was "repeating the same opinion four times using different words".

"Mental health is confidence and confidence is mental health" is a very typical unexamined boomer assumption. And the thing about unexamined assumptions is that, by their very definition, people confuse them with "obvious facts".

So, when I asked "why should I reject women who aren't confident?", you were only capable of hearing "why would I want a mate with good mental health?".

Of course, the boomer assumption that mental health and "self esteem" are the same thing has harmed their children a great deal, but they don't know this because it never blew back on them personally.

Nevertheless, the point stands that I can't advise men how to navigate the mess that boomers left in their wake, by using a bunch of bad pop-psychology tropes from the 1970s. I have to roll with what produces demonstrable results, and concepts like "self-esteem", where and when they are not actively harmful, are still far too vague to be useful.

The Bitch Management Hierarchy (which you have never heard of before this moment, and never read, because you have no idea what TRP actually is, says, and does), like most other seminal works of TRP, uses a behaviour-based assessment model, rather than one predicated on inventing and measuring theoretical "health-bar" type character traits.

In other words, what makes a good mate is not an assessment test score, but their observable behaviour.

What do you think of Coach Red Pill? Do you believe him or is he full of BS?

1 upvotes · 8 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Who?

Ex-Red pillers, what made you stop considering yourself red pill?

1 upvotes · 8 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Those of us who created TRP specifically intended it to not discuss ethics. Ethics is a personal decision.

If you think having sex with virgins is unethical, don't have sex with virgins. There's certainly enough sluts to go around, and they're great fun.

You just don't get to come in there and tell other guys not to. Because just like you get to pick your ethics, they get to pick theirs.

Study: "Confidence is sexy and it can be trained." This is a huge part of what PUAs / TRP mean by "alpha".

1 upvotes · 8 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Do you feel better having said that?

Ultimately, men do not have the luxury of believing what soothes your feelings, if they wish to get results. To get results, they have to focus on things that actually work.

I'm sorry (and I don't mean this sarcastically), but I can't take care your feelings, either. It was hard enough to come up with TRP and make it actually work and help men. I didn't have enough energy or cleverness or time to come up with something that would do all that while being palatable to your emotional needs or sociopolitical leanings.

It's difficult enough to help dudes who already want my help and have asked for it. The additional burden of bystanders not throwing a tantrum about how this or that is "trash"... well, I don't have the cargo space for that, and I don't care.

Showing vulnerability or need as a self sufficient woman

1 upvotes · 8 January 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Given that they probably didn't say to you "I cannot handle being lesser", what this implies is that you interpreted it this way.

So is it possible that you think of them as "lesser"?

Is it possible that they are able to detect this attitude?

How accurate do you think of the statement that there is a crisis in 'masculinity'?

1 upvotes · 8 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

huge and growing economic inequality problem

<https://www.urbandictionary.com/define.php?term=fractal%20wrongness>

Do men in these modern times want to be breadwinners?

1 upvotes · 8 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Those that aren't, aren't. Those that are, are.

Personally, I'm only interested in:

1. Getting the best deal possible.
2. Telling other dudes who listen to me how to get the best deal possible.

And since #1 is no longer difficult, the only reason that I would even talk about this is #2.

Personally, I don't recommend bankrolling women. I don't think marriage in its current form is a good deal for men, nor is having children unless you have the rare male version of baby rabies.

Nor I recommend women who wish to exit the workforce as ideal mates. The short answer as to why would be "entitlement". Very few of them understand that being a SAHM mother is a privilege, not a burden. And when people receiving a privilege at the expense of others do not understand that it is one, this tends to preclude gratitude.

Study: "Confidence is sexy and it can be trained." This is a huge part of what PUAs / TRP mean by "alpha".

1 upvotes · 8 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Well, Mr. Jackalope, convincing as the fourth unsupported assertion of your opinion is, I think I'm still gonna continue to live based on the lessons I've learned from my experience, and pass those lessons on to those interested in listening.

(Those of whom are reading might want to reflect on this example of the hazards of basing your mental model of mating on a collection of unexamined pop-psychology tropes.)

You are, of course, free to start your own alternative to TRP and see if you can make a go of it. Good luck out there.

Study: "Confidence is sexy and it can be trained." This is a huge part of what PUAs / TRP mean by "alpha".

1 upvotes · 8 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So, so far, we have heard the opinions that people who lack confidence are:

1. "Weak"
2. "A quivering pile of neuroses"
3. "A millstone around the neck" of anyone near them.

... which is a bit redundant. I understand that you think poorly of women who have less confidence than others.

I, however, do not.

Simply repeating your opinion, with slightly different phrasing, is not going to alter my opinion unless you can actually give a reason.

I would suggest that you perhaps have a long hard think about why you have beliefs that you are unable to articulate the reasons for.

So PPD in a nutshell

1 upvotes · 8 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

But I do agree with your point that two wrongs don't make a right and that just because you find something threatening it isn't okay to gaslight it, especially when you are dealing with people who have been hurt.

That is indeed the conversation I was trying to work towards.

However, I'm not a big "right and wrong" guy, so I would put it this way, instead... Reactions like this tend to feed off each other and create self-reinforcing patterns where two sets of people reinforce each their mutual hostility with mirroring behaviour.

It's more useful if you don't get caught in this loop. And certainly I could say this to men as well, but in this conversation, they are an abstraction... I can't say anything to a cartoon character, only to a cartoonist.

Which kinda brings me to my next point... it may be puzzling to you to see a statement made in PPD as unwarranted interference in men working out their own problems.

It's not statements made here that constitute this kind of interference, it's PPD itself. Someone has taken a private self-help and mutual assistance group for males only, and pulled up a bunch of chairs, sat down on them with binoculars and notebooks in hand, and proceeded to "study" the process, while commenting loudly on its perceived ethics and effectiveness.

TRP is only public so that more men can find it and participate if they wish.

Study: "Confidence is sexy and it can be trained." This is a huge part of what PUAs / TRP mean by "alpha".

1 upvotes · 8 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm not sure what that statement would even mean in this context.

You appear to want me to reject more women, for something that I do not find specially unattractive, in order to satisfy some obscure principle which is personal to you.

What's in it for me?

Study: "Confidence is sexy and it can be trained." This is a huge part of what PUAs / TRP mean by "alpha".

1 upvotes · 8 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So you see everyone who lacks confidence as a "quivering pile of neuroses"?

You must be fun at parties.

Study: "Confidence is sexy and it can be trained." This is a huge part of what PUAs / TRP mean by "alpha".

1 upvotes · 8 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yes, women see men who lack confidence as weak.

That doesn't mean that I have to do the same to them. How exactly would that help me?

An unconfident woman can still be pretty, nice to me, feminine, and a pleasure to be around. I don't give a crap if a woman is confident or not.

Study: "Confidence is sexy and it can be trained." This is a huge part of what PUAs / TRP mean by "alpha".

1 upvotes · 8 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So everyone who lacks confidence is weak?

You have some pretty harsh expectations of other people, don't you?

Study: "Confidence is sexy and it can be trained." This is a huge part of what PUAs / TRP mean by "alpha".

1 upvotes · 8 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

How?

Study: "Confidence is sexy and it can be trained." This is a huge part of what PUAs / TRP mean by "alpha".

1 upvotes · 8 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TBP has a Reification Fallacy problem.

Study: "Confidence is sexy and it can be trained." This is a huge part of what PUAs / TRP mean by "alpha".

1 upvotes · 8 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women don't need confidence to be sexy.

So PPD in a nutshell

1 upvotes · 8 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Pretty hard to express extremely nuanced views in a short comic, perhaps it was my technical flaw as an author, however, I think you are still choosing to read into this too much.

That's kind of the point.

It's not fun to have an off-the-cuff remark interpreted as being indicative of the whole of your psyche, which, as we have now established, is both something you are indignant at, and something you just did to others.

It's also not fun to have your remarks on what you are observing attributed wholly to personal motives for being angry, which is both something you are indignant at, and something you just did to others.

Now, it's not like you're unusually unreasonable about this... you are only usually unreasonable, because many others are doing this, too. Male anger, regardless of its cause or effect, has become so socially unacceptable that people think they are being perfectly reasonable, when they intrude into male spaces, created solely for the purpose of addressing male anger through both expression and solutions, and object to male anger being expressed there.

Followed by the standard practice of diving onto the ground and writhing in feigned agony like a FIFA soccer player trying to draw the penalty.

Look, I get it. Male anger is scary, because we are so much better equipped for direct violence. An angry dude might look a lot like an angry leopard from your perspective.

But leopards also get angry if provoked. And if you go into the jungle and meet an angry leopard, don't act like it suddenly showed up in your laundry room being all scary. The jungle is where leopards do leopard things. No one invited you there, and no one is going to criticize you for not going.

Is testosterone in a man always a good thing for his SMV?

1 upvotes · 5 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

He says that autism is most likely caused by excessive testosterone in the development of a foetus

I'd like to see the data on that.

"Baggage" has nothing to do with men wanting younger women. Younger women's mental health is worst than their peers.

1 upvotes · 5 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Mental illness and entitled attitudes are not the same thing.

Every person seeking a mate (whether for life or the next several hours) wants one who offers the most possible value for them, while demanding the least possible burden from them.

It doesn't matter what your partners' mental health status is, just what burden that places upon you. Men are seeking to avoid entitled attitudes in their partners, not mental illness per se.

So PPD in a nutshell

1 upvotes · 5 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I see that you're not enjoying the experience of having your motives interpreted reductively. And thus are, with some degree of sarcasm, requesting the courtesy of the assumption that your views are more nuanced than your actual cartoon.

The easiest way to make this request would have been by example, while you were drawing and captioning.

Asking for the Principle of Humanity to be applied on your behalf when you are literally depicting others as a mixture of human and reptile is a bit of a tough sell, no?

You're not used to being interpreted in a reductive and dehumanizing fashion, of course. This is not something that typically happens to women. And while it is something that typically happens to men, they don't actually like it, either, and it's not going to make them any nicer or more sympathetic to your concerns.

The "are you a feminist?" Shit test

1 upvotes · 5 January 2021 · /r/askTRP

you can never win an argument from women

Sure I can. But if I want to sex them, I don't want to. Debates about abstract ideas do not turn women on.

What do y'all think of polyamory?

1 upvotes · 5 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm pretty sure you think I'm mentally 13 and I've never seen a book.

If I had to guess, I'd say you were between 18 and 20. It's just that when you're over 40, 13 and 18 look a lot alike.

Both old enough to realize that adults lied to them about the world being perfect, both too young to realize that the world is not perfectable. And both vastly overestimating their own understanding of how life works.

Good luck out there.

Seeing FDS girls spend thousands of dollars on a meaningless ring does not make me angry, it makes me laugh

1 upvotes · 5 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Oh, that's what you mean. We call them "field reports".

And of course FDS doesn't do this. TRP is for technical solutions; getting sexual unsuccessful men the knowledge and understanding they need for better results. FDS is for emotional support; getting romantically unsuccessful women to feel better about themselves and what happens to them.

Seeing FDS girls spend thousands of dollars on a meaningless ring does not make me angry, it makes me laugh

1 upvotes · 5 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What's a field test?

Seeing FDS girls spend thousands of dollars on a meaningless ring does not make me angry, it makes me laugh

1 upvotes · 5 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It makes me hope this trend takes off.

A world full of dumb whores with pussy but no money left is going to further drop the bottom out of the pussy market.

What do y'all think of polyamory?

1 upvotes · 4 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

i dont really need or want you to pretend to understand me and try to solve my issues because (as i said) these are my own battles.

Ah-hah! Finally a little pride and self-respect. I hoped that if I dug deep enough, it would be there.

Now you just need to understand how your weakness to causes is about projecting your inner life on the world around you.

See, when you say things like:

My loved ones are going to die because of climate change. Perhaps even I will.

... you don't realize what complete rubbish that is, because you have been suckered. Your dissatisfaction, and lack of feeling in control of your own life, make you susceptible to stories about how you are being oppressed by vast forces, to being made fearful, and angry.

Fearful, angry people are easy to control:

People are dumb, People are dumb, Promise 'em peace and kingdom come. / People are dopes, People are dopes, Play on their peeves, play on their hopes. / Make 'em feel mad, Make 'em feel mad, Everything's lousy, everything's bad. / Make 'em afraid, Make 'em afraid, Show 'em they're dupes, tricked and betrayed. / Then if they bite, Then if they bite, You will have fools to fight your fight.

You've been told that "climate change" is a new thing that is an existential threat to humanity. You've been told that "settled science" supports this, over and over. You've been told that you and everyone around you must do specific things to counter this threat. You've been told that anyone who disagrees with any part of the plan is a "science denier" (a term specifically to mirror "holocaust denier").

And you're too young to place this in historical context... because you weren't alive when that historical text happened.

You don't even know what the real original name of "climate change, which used be "global warming" a few years ago. (Notice how the names get more and more vague?)

I'm going to call it by its real name: The greenhouse effect... we've known about it since 1824. I learned about this in primary school science in the early 80s. It was complete non-controversial. We knew exactly how it works

(carbon dioxide in the lower atmosphere allows visible sunlight through, but traps reflected and re-radiated infrared). We knew that it was happening (duh). We knew that life on earth was dependent on some amount of it or we would freeze. We knew that human activity was increasing it and had been doing so since humans started burning things. We knew that the earth had less of it in some eras, and America was full of glaciers, and more of it in others, and there were hippopotami in the river Thames.

So if all this is non-controversial, why aren't I panicking? Why don't I listen to Al Gore and his bestselling book and movie and private jet? If everyone already believed it, why did it have to be re-branded as "global warming", and then re-branded again as "climate change"?

Because of the ideas that paragraph doesn't contain. To wit, "this is an existential threat to humanity", and "white capitalist countries need to stop producing power right now".

Both of these ideas are ridiculous if you think about them in isolation, but if you take the indisputable facts of the Greenhouse Effect, and package them with this tomfoolery under a new name of "global warming", then you can accuse anyone who disagrees with any part of it, of disagreeing with all of it, and therefore being a scientifically illiterate buffoon.

Of course, humanity survived an actual ice age, with nothing but fire, animal skins, and chipped stone, so the first assertion is somewhat doubtful.

And, as for the second, the planet is getting warmer now because China, India, and the third world are going through various stages of their industrial revolution right now.

An industrial revolution puts out a lot of carbon dioxide, along with more noxious things. Read some 19th century English and American literature... notice all the people dying of "consumption", and wealthy people going to the seaside "to take the air". The white capitalist nations were polluting their air in the same way that China is right now.

So, if this were an existential threat, and the people pushing it were complete earnest and above board, two things would be happening:

1. The streets of wealthy developed white capitalist nations would be full of angry sign-waving hippies demanding nuclear plants right now.
2. We would be on the brink of war with China, with us accusing them of destroying the planet, and them accusing us of racist hypocrisy because our industrial revolution was fine, but we were trying to stop theirs.

I'll leave what the real agenda is as an exercise for anyone who is reading and following along.

The contradiction was that you said anyone can get ahead in a capitalist democracy when the video clearly explained how it doesn't distribute resources fairly at all.

That's just sloppy thinking.

I said that anyone well-equipped and talented enough to be an effective revolutionary can get ahead without starting a revolution.

If you are waiting for a "fair" civilization before you try to prosper in it, good luck with that. There is no "fair". There is only "more opportunity" (free market, or capitalist/semi-free market), and "less opportunity" (communist or other dictatorial, socialist, theocracy, etc). The more control the state imposes over economic activity, the less opportunities to prosper there are.

Revolutions happen in the former when opportunity drops low enough that people who can rebel can't get ahead without doing so. Revolutions happen in the latter when opportunity rises high enough that people who wanted to rebel all along gain the wherewithall to do so.

The video explained all this.

Also, dictatorship and democracy are far from being the only ways to govern

Sigh.

Do you really need this spelled out for you?

Democracy and dictatorship are not discreet states. They are our way of describing how widely power is distributed.

A "democracy" is a state where power is widely distributed, and a ruler requires the support of lots of people to maintain his position.

A "dictatorship" is a state where power is narrowly distributed, and a ruler requires the support of very few people to maintain his position.

Every nation is somewhere on this spectrum.

TRP encourages the "men are wonderful" narrative

1 upvotes · 4 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You're not wrong, but that's mostly because you haven't said anything.

You've created another video game in your head with three "health bars", except instead of being labeled "health", "magic", and "stamina", you've labeled them cynicism, intelligence and resourcefulness.

You could as easily have labeled them "suchness", "sobriety", and "existentialism" for all it matters. What this answer boils down is that they don't have enough the thing that makes you like someone who has enough of it.

Labeling it doesn't explain it, in the same way that calling something "gravity" doesn't mean you have explained why masses attract each other. It wasn't until Einstein came along and told us that they actually don't, that we really understood anything.

Do I have a better answer? Of course I do. Answering a hard question is actually very easy. The hard part is figuring out the right question to ask, and thus formulating the language the answer will be expressed in. (Thank you, Edsger Dijkstra.)

The key to asking the right question here is the insight that the brain is an information storage device. Therefore anything we are takes the form of something we believe.

For the rest, wait for the article.

I'm genuinely worried for some of you, some of y'all need help

1 upvotes · 4 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Feminism had a purpose.

There's your mistake.

Feminism is not a cause... it's an algorithm. A tool for women to use to get stuff. That's why there have been different "waves" of feminism. It was simply different generations of women using the same tool to get different stuff.

Woman makes guy wait 2 months for sex and then dumps him for having a small dick despite being perfect in every other way

1 upvotes · 4 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yeah, pretty much.

Most women don't look at a man and think "I like him because XYZ", they just like him or don't.

Then when they are asked, or when they are later trying to figure out what the hell went wrong, it's all guesswork. They're simply not as practiced at introspection.

Woman makes guy wait 2 months for sex and then dumps him for having a small dick despite being perfect in every other way

1 upvotes · 4 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Never make the mistake of assuming women are telling you the truth. They don't... not simply because they are motivated to lie, but also because they very often don't know what the truth is, and so could not possibly tell it.

Unlike previous boyfriends, I took my time getting physically intimate with Michael because I wanted it to feel special.

This is absolutely not what was really going on. It is a post-hoc rationalization that she came up with, not out of duplicity, but because she simply does not know why she took two months to get to sex with him.

It's because she was way less attracted to him.

He was the type of boyfriend many girls dream about. He had a great personality and a kind, caring heart, was serious about his career and earned good money, plus, he knew how to spoil his partner.

This is what she has been told that she is supposed to be attracted to. And in her conscious awareness, she doesn't know any better. She doesn't know why some men excite her and others don't. She only knows when she is excited.

This guy didn't excite her. The small dick was just the final straw.

TRUMP: "There's nothing wrong with saying, you know, you recalculated" "I just want to find 11,780 votes, which is one more than we have"

1 upvotes · 4 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

/r/lostredditors

TRP encourages the "men are wonderful" narrative

1 upvotes · 4 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This is dumb and unproductive lol

Tell ya what... you come up with an alternative TRP without all the misogyny, and let us know how it goes.

Women Have A Creep Threshold That Changes According To Who They're Dealing With

1 upvotes · 4 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Don't be ridiculous. Why would we treat any woman, no matter how unattractive, as if she were a human?

Prince charming = Manic pixie girl

1 upvotes · 4 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The Manic Pixie Dreamgirl trope doesn't anger women because it caters to male desires. Women love catering to male desires.

It angers women because it inverts their sexual fantasies. They don't want to take men on exciting adventures, they want men to do that for them.

Incels be like..

1 upvotes · 4 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Amusingly enough, Chads be like that, too.

What do y'all think of polyamory?

1 upvotes · 3 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you think that video contradicts anything I said, then you haven't been understanding me.

Too much too fast, maybe. Let's try to focus:

my personal issue was my inability to get a stable romantic relationship even though i desired one. I struggled and ended up in bad relationships for a long time. I went around it by using kink-specific internet dating and now I'm in a 2.5 year long relationship and I'm more than content with my sex life.

Exactly. You worked on your problem, tried a bunch of stuff, and eventually, something worked.

When you focused on the parts of the problem you, personally, could control, instead of the parts you couldn't, you found something you could do to help.

An example of something is currently struggle with that i could try to solve on an individual level: debilitating anxiety from academic failure which ironically makes studying hard.

Okay, so let's try that "what can I control?" idea again.

You can't just make yourself stop feeling anxiety, like turning off a light switch. That's out of your control, because if it wasn't, you would have already stopped.

But you can control any number of factors related to how you study, because you have physical control of your body. So look for a solution there, instead of simply struggling to be less anxious.

Try stuff like this: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=IIU-zDU6aQ0>. I'm sure you can find more stuff like that to try. There's a whole internet full of smart people putting up stuff like this.

That's my central idea here, writ narrow: Look for solutions in the things you can control, instead of making yourself sad and angry focusing on the things you can't.

I'm sorry I tried to explain that on a societal level right off the bat. Too much too fast. I fall in love with big ideas and I love explaining stuff. I'll try to be less excited and more patient.

What do y'all think of polyamory?

1 upvotes · 3 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Neuroticism" isn't a specific issue... it's just a symptom of any number of things. But this phenomenon is common.

Basically, people who are so sensitive they can't tolerate life's ordinary disappointments and challenges will sometimes start specifying a set of highly rarefied conditions they can tolerate, then blame others for not meeting those conditions.

Pretty soon, they are blind to the original problem (that they are hypersensitive) and blame others instead (for not making things just right for them).

The universe isn't "just right" for anyone, because we're here by accident, and it wasn't designed to have us in it, or make us comfortable. Any moment that we are comfortable, healthy, secure, and happy isn't "natural", it's the spoils of victory in our struggle against the basic perversity of the universe.

The only lasting way to improve your own life is to get good at that struggle.

Why are men here whining about CC riders and hyper-sexual women with high n counts? It's not like any of you want a church-going virgin.

1 upvotes · 3 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Church goin' virgins are fun little high-pressure bottles of barely suppressed libido.

Alarming stat on high n-count women

1 upvotes · 3 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I shed my penis and grow a new one each mating season, like antlers.

Men aren't intimidated by you, you're just an insufferable c@nt

1 upvotes · 2 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That's not exactly the display of social or leadership skills you boast of. Don't tell me about how much people respect you, when you are unable to demonstrate qualities that would command that respect.

I would like to think well of you, but thus far you have not given me any excuse to. And please do not bother trying to tell me you do not crave my respect, when your last comment was telling me what a capable leader you are.

Don't tell me.

Show me.

Men aren't intimidated by you, you're just an insufferable c@nt

1 upvotes · 2 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Relax, I'm not going to form an indelible opinion based on what is most likely not your proudest moment, but you rose to the bait. You chose to be that person, for that moment. Someone spoke of insufferable cunts, and you felt... attacked. Made it personal. Made it about you.

And it just may be possible, when you choose to call yourself "lady of blades", that this is a bit of a sore spot.

I understand. It's tempting to want to be feared, or to want to feel like you are feared. To be feared is to be respected.

But if you want to be seen as a leader, avoid that temptation. Be better. Because, if you cannot dredge up a better reason based on common decency, then at least consider this. Fear is good for getting people to do what you demand of them... but only what you demand of them.

With that, you can never achieve anything that requires the initiative, creativity, and intelligence of more than one person. To do and build the best things we are capable of requires more than compliance... it requires active participation in shared goals. It requires mutual trust and fellowship. It requires people doing whatever they can to further a goal, not because they have been told to, but because they share that goal, voluntarily and enthusiastically.

People go all /iamverybadass because they are afraid. Perhaps afraid of others harming them, but also perhaps of people not respecting them, not giving them the approval they want or need. Unfortunately, they often create the very reality they fear.

If what you say about yourself is even remotely true, you are capable of better than getting in ego-fueled fights on social media.

Men aren't intimidated by you, you're just an insufferable c@nt

1 upvotes · 2 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you like being a leader, intimidate less. Inspire more.

Minimum height difference required to have success in OLD

1 upvotes · 2 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think it's actually a McDodo. Which is pretty good considering I thought they were extinct.

It's a shitpost. Chill. I don't hate women. It's a joke.

1 upvotes · 2 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What is his SexThing doing in the kitchen?

Men aren't intimidated by you, you're just an insufferable c@nt

1 upvotes · 2 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Readers: the last sentence may SEEM like a strong, confident play, but it's actually a misstep.

He's qualifying himself to her by making her compliance the measure of his Chadliness. Thus he is placing her in the position of a judge of him. This one is not so well played.

So if we look at this in combination with the last one, I'd place this guy at a journeyman level. He's most likely getting some good results, but is still measuring himself by his success, which leads to him wasting some time trying to gain the approval of women he wouldn't actually touch with someone else's dick.

If you meet a woman who tries to intimidate you, or to tell you how intimidating she is, she's telling you that she needs you to be intimidated to prop up her self-esteem. Obviously, this is not the sort of woman to hang out with, but also, try to suppress the impulse to use this insight to "win" arguments or humiliate her. After all, picking on the mentally ill isn't exactly an achievement, and any resulting humiliation will just get taken out on the betas she is pegging.

CMV: Ladies, the only reason you are single is: A - You're delusional about your mate value or B - You're insufferable

1 upvotes · 2 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There are only three elements to female attractiveness:

1. Look nice.
2. Act nice.
3. Be approachable.

Any woman who can do these three things can have a relationship, and the number and quality of men she will have to choose from is in direct proportion to how well she does those three things.

So, if you are female, not in a relationship, and want to be, then you either have no choices, or don't like any of your choices.

Which means you either:

1. Don't look nice enough.

2. Don't act nice enough.
3. Have inadvertently created some sort of barrier to approaching you.

The Real World Doesn't Care About Your Feelings About Birth Control

1 upvotes · 30 December 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

But I don't understand the absolute anger some users have over the fact that condoms are handed out on college campuses

Plate thats obsessed w/ me stalks me on IG and sent me this shit lol. Unreal. Thoughts?

1 upvotes · 30 December 2020 · /r/askTRP

at the end of the day he can do what he pleases

So.... you're still talking about this why?

Sure?

1 upvotes · 21 December 2020 · /r/AntiFeminists

You have leveled up!

You have acquired Box Wine!

Your Cat Limit has increased to 7!

but if i said that to her i would be a sexist and supposed to die

1 upvotes · 21 December 2020 · /r/AntiFeminists

She has a funny way of spelling the word "cat".

Imagine if the roles where reversed

1 upvotes · 18 December 2020 · /r/AntiFeminists

Well, analyzing his mistakes on the level of electoral appeal is good fun, but we need to understand that the opinions of peasants do not matter unless they are near-unanimous. The 2016 election was an anomaly... the people who normally decide the fate of the nation were caught with their pants down.

They usually control elections by determining who is on the ballot, and what the peasants hear about those people, rather than straight-up lying about the numbers of votes. In 2016, Trump cut these systems out of the loop by communicating directly with voters, and they couldn't get organized in time to rig the actual count.

So they tried various tricks like impeachment, etc, but the main plan was to be better prepared in 2020. 2018 midterms were a practice run, rigging several senate and house races to see how it could be done. Then they rolled it out in 2020.

It's pretty obvious if you look at the numbers, but they don't actually care, because anyone who points this out is going against the desire people have to believe they live in a society that works the way it says it works. (No society ever has.)

That's why it is so easy to dismiss people like me with the thought-terminating cliché, "conspiracy theorist". The reason I can be lumped together in people's mind with idiots who think the earth is flat and the moon landings were fake, is that people don't want to believe me. They find what I am telling them horrible and start casting about for reasons to dismiss it.

It doesn't matter if people know the election was rigged. It only matters what we can convince others of.

Anyway, Trump was the first democratically elected president in a long time, and will be the last for a long time, probably until after the next civil war.

So why is the United States such a free country, and overall nice place to live, if it's entirely controlled by corrupt interests?

The key here is the peasants. Peasants are powerless when they disagree, but unstoppable when they are unanimous. And nowhere is this more true than America, where the peasants loathe and resent high-handed treatment, feel entitled to respect, and are armed to the teeth. A peasant revolt would crush the National Guard and anyone else foolish enough to have a go.

And for lots of things, the peasants don't even have to revolt. They can simply ignore the law in such great numbers that no effective force can be brought against them. Marijuana legalization, for example, is inevitable.

So the power players can have what they want... but only within the Overton Window. If they want to do something new, they first have to convince a large segment of the population to think they want it. However, they control the press, so this can sometimes be done.

This is why you sometimes see muppets marching around with signs demanding the removal of their own civil rights.

Imagine if the roles where reversed

1 upvotes · 18 December 2020 · /r/AntiFeminists

Didn't write it for you. Wrote it for the people who follow my comments.

You may now return to your regularly scheduled program of cherishing your ignorance.

Imagine if the roles where reversed

1 upvotes · 18 December 2020 · /r/AntiFeminists

Trump didn't get a second term because he's a businessman, not a politician, and so he ran his administration like a business instead of a political office.

When you are a businessman, you make profit by appealing to your customers. It doesn't matter if your vendors like you, it doesn't matter if your suppliers like you, it doesn't matter if your strategic partners like you... if the people who have money to buy want what you are selling, you have what you need.

When you are a politician, you do NOT serve your voters, you serve your key supporters. These are the people with influence who keep you in power, and often they are the people who got you there. In office, you must do favours for them, not the people who voted for you. You couldn't help them even if you wanted to, because if your key supporters don't get what they want, they will remove you from power and replace you with someone who will.

So, Trump ran for office because he thought like a businessman. He said to himself, "Hey, the GOP doesn't understand who their customers are or what they want... I do, so I can steal their customer base right out from under them."

And so he did. The primary election of Donald Trump was not a simple Republican primary. It was a coup. And Donald Trump is not a Republican. Instead, he is an opportunist who has skinned the Republican Party and is wearing it as a hat.

He won because he caught the power brokers, the class that those "key supporters" are drawn from, completely by surprise. They couldn't mobilize in time to stop him.

And so their pet politicians were left in an interesting dilemma. They hated Trump, because he wasn't one of them, and he was interfering with them serving their real interests. But they couldn't openly defy him because their voters loved him. Those who continued to do so (Romney, Ryan, etc) are now exiled and out of the game. So what did they do? They pretended to serve him, sharpened their knives, and waited.

Meanwhile, the press was in full attack mode, because Trump had NO power broker support. Ordinarily, the press is divided because the power brokers are divided. If you are a Democrat president, the Washington Post and CNN support you, and if you are a Republican, Fox News and the New York Post support you.

It's not about political opinions at all, it's about who is part of what power bloc.

Well, Trump wasn't a Republican, and he wasn't a Democrat, and he was bypassing the power brokers by appealing directly to the voters. And that is why ALL the media, with the sole exception of grassroots stuff founded by Trump fans, was universal in telling you that Trump was bad, bad, bad.

Middlemen hate being cut out, you see.

So this time around, they were prepared. They wouldn't stand for four more years of a president they didn't own. It's not that the election was rigged, although of course it was. Ordinarily one side rigs the election and the other side rigs right back. It's just part of the game. Precincts report numbers that everybody pretends have some relationship to votes cast, and everyone gets on with their day, with Republicans and Democrats pretending they are fundamentally different, while really getting on with the business of dividing up that giant Internal Revenue cake into slices for their respective supporters.

Nah, what was special about this election was that the Republican-supporting power brokers sat on their hands while their counterparts on the other side of the aisle neatly edited Trump out of the picture.

And what could he do? He had no deep state, power broker support. He only had regular people, and their opinions don't matter. He could contest election results, but the courts are part of this game, too. He may have put a lot of judges on the bench, but they didn't need him in order to stay there.

So arguing about whether he "really" won the election is missing the point. Nobody "really" wins elections. Elections are theatre. Asking who "really" won an election is like asking who "really" won WrestleMania. The only way Trump could have won is if his supporters took to the streets with flags, signs, and rifles.

And they weren't going to do that, because he wasn't able to do enough for them to justify the personal risk. Sure, he gave them a tax cut, nullified some exploitative trade deals, cracked down on human trafficking, put some judges on the bench. But he wasn't able to fundamentally change the game.

If had been able to cut taxes to 15%, bring back American heavy industry, and balance the budget, they might have fought for him. Hell, they might have made him king in all but name. It's come close to happening before (FDR).

None of this of course, speaks to whether he was a "good" president. But in politics, there is no "good". There is only "good for whom?"

What exactly is pair bonding?

1 upvotes · 12 December 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Is there actually a science behind this or it is just RP propaganda?

Quack.

Opinions on deadbeat dads?

1 upvotes · 11 December 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Responsibility and power go together. No power, no responsibility.

Opinions on deadbeat dads?

1 upvotes · 11 December 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why are they the ones who escape criticism when they are the ones who created the situation?

You don't really understand what TRP is about. It concerns itself solely with what is, not what ought to be. Thus, its criticisms concern themselves not with moral turpitude that violates ideals, but with bad strategy that harms the person who practices it.

Fathers who are not raising their biological children (myself included), might or might not be morally reprehensible depending on the situation and your preferred moral code. But they are not making a strategic mistake that will harm them.

Fathers who raise someone else's kids arguably are, by entering into a relationship where they are not the woman's first choice, and by doing parenting work without having enjoyed whatever payoff there is.

I can't really speak to that last one, since I don't see any payoff in having or raising kids.

Discussion: "androgen loss, porn, and weebdom has made people worship excessive neoteny to almost pedophilic levels"

1 upvotes · 11 December 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Pedophilia" is a go-to accusation for a lot of women who don't like to compete with younger, hotter women.

Incel, Feminism and FDS megathread

1 upvotes · 10 December 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Sure.

However, since the only way out of his anger is through it, the best outcome not only for him but for you is if TRP gets to him as young as possible.

Hey guys share your thoughts about this perspective - Do you consider sex as merely a form of action or is it more than that? Can it be equated to activities like Dancing or Singing?

1 upvotes · 10 December 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women don't lose value as sexual partners by having sex with different dudes. They lose value as relationship partners.

How true is the RedPill about female nature?

1 upvotes · 10 December 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

See? Fussing. Right on cue.

It's not your fault. People can generally only process information that is close to their existing beliefs. Hence the Overton Window. Opinions only change gradually.

It's only when you have an experience that you can't explain any other way, or indeed a series of them, that you have to change your worldview to accommodate what you saw.

There are plenty of people who just read my stuff and don't try things based on it. They don't actually get it.

There's a difference between believing something because you want to believe it, and believing something you know to be true.

Ultimately, only weak-minded people have a choice about what to believe is true.

How true is the RedPill about female nature?

1 upvotes · 10 December 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

reductive

The whole point of a metaphor or analogy is to reduce complexity to a manageable level by eliding non-useful details.

ideologically driven

Lots of people think TRP is a crusade to change something about society. In fact, some people who read TRP quite a bit still get stuck in that trap.

Sometimes, in a classic r/dontyouknowwhoiam moment, they even try to argue this with me.

Truth is, that's not the way we wrote it. It's descriptive rather than prescriptive.

I think many people assume the opposite because they think we came to the table with all these theories. We didn't. We were out there trying stuff and seeing what worked.

And we discovered that the more misogynistic we became, the more women rewarded that attitude, not just with sex, but with adoration. And not just the broken ones with daddy issues and ankle tattoos, either.

The experience was bizarre at first, but we eventually forced to draw some conclusions about the human condition that were pretty far outside the Overton Window, and things started to make sense again.

That's when the screaming really started.

How true is the RedPill about female nature?

1 upvotes · 10 December 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Already did that 2 years ago.

How true is the RedPill about female nature?

1 upvotes · 10 December 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's wrong about wolves. Wolf packs are families. There is no alpha, there is only dad.

But as a metaphor for human sexual behaviour, it has proven surprisingly useful, which is why some people are desperate to prove it wrong.

But how does one prove a metaphor "wrong"?

How true is the RedPill about female nature?

1 upvotes · 10 December 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

We didn't write it to be accurate. Oh, it is, but we didn't write it for that. We wrote it to work.

People often confront me, demanding I explain this or that behaviour, often of this or that individual person, in terms of Grand Unified Red Pill Theory.

Or they get mad about me "generalizing".

Both are silly. The whole point of the red pill is "act on these generalizations, and with enough practice, you will be successful in attracting women". It's not for explaining all of human behaviour. It's for controlling some of human behaviour.

And at this point, no one, not even people who hate what we built, and hate me for building it, is seriously trying to claim that it doesn't work. That ship sailed in 2016 or so.

Oh, they try to quibble about which are the important parts. Yawn.

The only things left to argue about are:

1. "Yes, it works, but you are big old meanie-head misogynists!" (Yeah. So?)
2. "Yes, it works, but why does it work? Is it 'true' or just 'true enough'?" (Semantics.)

Why do vanilla apps(Tinder/Bumble) heavily favor women while Sugar apps are the opposite, what is going on?(Should there be a middle ground?)

1 upvotes · 10 December 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There is more male demand for casual sex than female demand for casual sex. And women are lazy and don't like to work. A simple understanding of basic economics dictates that prostitution will be the result.

What the actual price will be is more complicated. There are a lot of non-equivalent, but competing, goods.

CMV : High body count partners aren't good for Long Term Relationships.

1 upvotes · 10 December 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You won't get anywhere by reasoning about human behaviour. You have to observe it first, then reason about it.

porn has totally fucked me

1 upvotes · 6 December 2020 · /r/askTRP

I suspect it's not the porn. Men often blame porn for low libido/ ED when it's the other way around.

High blood pressure and heart disease are big time risk factors for sexual problems. Generally, if you have crappy libido, suspect hormones or neurotransmitters, and if you have crappy erections, suspect the hydraulics.

How to advertise that I want the man to sleep with other women while I remember monogamous to him?

1 upvotes · 30 November 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

This is a silly comment, but it provides an opportunity to correct this attitude. OP is not a "cuckold", she has a cuckold fetish.

The difference between "cuckold" and "cuckold fetish" is more or less the same as the difference between "I am in an abusive relationship and my husband beats me", and "I have been a very naughty girl and my husband needs to get his big paddle right now and punish me".

Is it okay to leave a man because you feel no passion for him?

1 upvotes · 30 November 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

"Okay" in what sense?

Morally okay? I can't comment on that, as neither I or this group has the qualification or the right to be your Jiminy Cricket.

A good idea? Yes, absolutely.

If you do not have real feelings for him, the relationship WILL reach a crisis point eventually.

Would you rather be single and looking for someone else when you are 25 years old, or when you are 38?

Why not be a whore in this day and age?

1 upvotes · 27 November 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

You just answered your own question:

I am not saying that I would become a sex worker, I think it would be harmful to me psychologically.

That's the whole of it. There is nothing morally wrong with being a whore and there never has been.

But it's connected to psychological harm in both directions... you do it because you are already psychologically harmed, and it psychologically harms you.

That's the real reason why men don't want relationships with sluts and whores... because psychologically damaged people don't make good relationship partners. It's not a moral judgement at all. Most horny young men like sluts and whores just fine, they only get shirty if someone expects them to commit to one.

So who's doing all the moral judging? Because there certainly are some people who morally judge whores. Authoritarians, that's who. People who believe in a magic entity called "society" that is somehow supposed to control people's lives for their own betterment... to prevent people from making self-destructive choices. But society isn't a machine with a job to do. It isn't there to take care of you. It's just a heap of stuff that's lying around as the result of other people taking care of themselves.

No one can actually prevent you from harming yourself. If you were to decide to be a whore, no one could stop you. We could only harm you further to try to dissuade you (such as by throwing you in jail), and that would make zero sense, because harm to you is what we would be ostensibly trying to prevent.

There will always be whores, because the male demand for casual sex exceeds the female willingness to supply it, and there will always be psychologically damaged women who are willing to fill the gap for money. There's no point in berating them for that, because psychologically damaged people also have to live, and are also going to want to live with as little pain and as much happiness as they can manage. Hell, it's better than being a coal miner.

But there's also no point in joining their ranks unless you are truly in dire circumstances.

Feminism used to be a move for justice, but now...

1 upvotes · 25 November 2020 · /r/AntiFeminists

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=6BVvfG1Pq7c>

Feminism used to be a move for justice, but now...

1 upvotes · 25 November 2020 · /r/AntiFeminists

Unpopular fact: The federal budget has never been balanced since women got the vote.

Found this in the comments section of FDS. How the heck can they be so toxic!?

1 upvotes · 25 November 2020 · /r/AntiFeminists

<https://www.trp.red/p/whisper/848>

Whores really just see men as a cash cow. Imagine getting paid $400-$800 to hang out and have sex and still bitching about needing more money

1 upvotes · 25 November 2020 · /r/AntiFeminists

This is how the free market works... differently depending on what you are selling.

If you are selling sex, then name your price and see who takes you up on it.

If you are selling a simulated experience of you being attracted to someone, then you had better find as many ways as you can to decouple the payment from the act.

If you are kinda dumb, and don't know what you are selling, then this happens.

Girlfriend made fun of me to another guy at work on the phone for the second time and told me about it... shit test?

1 upvotes · 20 November 2020 · /r/askTRP

<https://www.trp.red/p/whisper/848>

Mother hates the fact I'm joining the Army

1 upvotes · 9 November 2020 · /r/askTRP

It's not just about the risk of dying, it's also about what happens to you if you live.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=LdJjM3Trg0>

Your mother doesn't know what's best for you, but she isn't the only one trying to control you. Make sure you know what you are signing up for, and what is really is best for you.

This job might not be quite as cool as you think it is.

(Endgame) The Lost Boys

1 upvotes · 3 November 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

Not too much. I could conceivably go for three. I think four would be a stretch, though.

Great weekend away with a girl, but I'm sick to my stomach

1 upvotes · 3 November 2020 · /r/askTRP

I thought I could always separate the good ones from the wild ones that can't be trusted.

AWALT.

It's all about what environment they are in, and what they learned from the ones they were in. Even Funsie could've wound up a slut if I hadn't gotten to her early. Girl is kin-ky.

So the question isn't "is she a nice girl, or a hoe?", it's "how damaged is she? Where has she been, and what has it done to her?".

TRP has an End Game

1 upvotes · 1 November 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

Your entire point was a typo. You accidentally typed without reading military history first. I was giving you an "out".

TRP has an End Game

1 upvotes · 31 October 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

I would like to learn more about these knife bears of which you speak.

How to get past boyfriend's sexual history

1 upvotes · 26 October 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

https://old.reddit.com/r/RedPillWomen/comments/jigd9o/how_to_get_past_boyfriends_sexual_history/ga71wkq/

Weekly Community Chat Megathread (11 October 2020)

1 upvotes · 15 October 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Ok, then don't have any.

Any other problems I can help you with?

Weekly Community Chat Megathread (11 October 2020)

1 upvotes · 14 October 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What tells us is that the speaker finds sex to be degrading.

[Q4All] What are your thoughts on couples who sleep in separate beds?

1 upvotes · 14 October 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why on earth would I want to sleep in the same bed as someone else?

As an Engineer and a Doctor, how can I put myself out there to successful women not in my field?

1 upvotes · 7 October 2020 · /r/askTRP

Why do you care if women are "successful"?

Why do expect women to care if you are "successful"?

What makes a man who is looking for marriage have a long term relationship with a woman he doesn't plan on marrying?

1 upvotes · 30 September 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

After she pressured marriage on him they broke up within a few months. He started dating someone new(from his church) after 6 months of ending it with her and within 2 years they were engaged and got married within the 10 months.

The second woman is the same story except its worse because it happened to her twice 8 years with the first guy and 5 years with the second . Everything was fine until she was serious about marriage . Both of the guys married another woman after being them less than 3 years.

If only there were some sort of conclusion we could draw from this...?

Nah, it's just a total mystery.

Anyways, I'm off to badger my boyfriend for the great big shiny diamond I totally deserve for putting up with him. Toodles!

Later I'll drop by and we can have a big long chat about what's wrong with men.

Here we are again folks. The debate of, if you are wearing a low cut top, are you asking for it?

1 upvotes · 22 September 2020 · /r/AntiFeminists

Asking for what?

Worried I love my boyfriend more than he loves me

1 upvotes · 20 September 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

I'm working on an article called "Vetting is an active process". Stay tuned.

Worried I love my boyfriend more than he loves me

1 upvotes · 18 September 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

You're welcome.

Something to keep in mind going forward is that vetting is an active process. Don't wait around for him to prove himself. Give him opportunities to do so.

Worried I love my boyfriend more than he loves me

1 upvotes · 18 September 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

Glad to hear it.

Feeling vulnerable may be scary, but remember that most healthy men have a strong protective instinct towards women, and so the appearance of vulnerability can actually be a position of strength.

If I may suggest... try deliberately making yourself vulnerable in little ways, and watch how he responds. Then move on to bigger, scarier ones if and only if his response to the first inspires your trust.

How to answer "do you have your own place?"

1 upvotes · 14 September 2020 · /r/askTRP

"Yes."

If this said 'fragile femininity' reddit would remove it

1 upvotes · 12 September 2020 · /r/MensRights

Artist: Guy who just got off the phone with his child's oncologist.

Women Are As Entitled As Men

1 upvotes · 2 September 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You are incorrect. Women are a great deal more entitled than men. It's hardwired in.

What do you do when you realize that you are a Femcel?

1 upvotes · 31 August 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

You have no idea what you are, because you are still becoming it. "Femcel" my ass.

If you don't like how your face looks, learn some stuff about skin care and makeup, not so much because you will necessarily need improvement in the long run (because who the fuck knows what a few more years will do), but because being able to take action about it will make you feel less helpless, and improve your attitude tremendously.

Problem during sex... Need your advice!

1 upvotes · 30 August 2020 · /r/askTRP

Can't know what's happening from that short description.

Under what circumstances CAN you get it up and function normally?

Did not open car door, women got upset

1 upvotes · 30 August 2020 · /r/askTRP

She asked, you silly man.

Did not open car door, women got upset

1 upvotes · 30 August 2020 · /r/askTRP

Was that the right move?

Yes. You are playing the long game, and the numbers game. Your goal isn't to bang every woman in the world, it's to bang a selection of the best you can get your mitts on.

A girl with basic respect wouldn't have given you an order.

A girl with some understanding of men would have understood that when you give a man an order, you are challenging him.

A girl with some actual girl game would have smiled, blushed a little bit, and asked you for a favor... it's kind of old fashioned and weird, but having door opened for her just kinda makes the evening feel special, and, yes, she knows it's a little odd, but would you mind (lays her hand on your forearm) just humoring her?

Oh, thank you (smile-eyelashflutter-morekino).

How do I get my successful uncle to mentor me?

1 upvotes · 26 August 2020 · /r/askTRP

Oh, there are a lot of people stoned in the town square around here.

I'm getting sick of watching women humiliating and abusing men on movies and tv shows like its a normal thing

1 upvotes · 26 August 2020 · /r/MensRights

Remember that people who write fiction about their victories do so because they need fiction about their victories. They are revealing to you their fear and weakness.

Am I jaded?

1 upvotes · 26 August 2020 · /r/askTRP

Getting a relationship from you is their job, not yours.

Is it a right of passage to move on from expecting anything from your own father?

1 upvotes · 26 August 2020 · /r/askTRP

At the end of the day does there come a point where you have to just let it all go and forget any idea of a potential relationship with your father?

You don't need him. You need someone, but you don't need him in particular.

When a child is beaten, he has two choices. Either mommy is crazy, or he is a bad kid who deserves it, and all he has to do is be better. Believe it or not, the second choice is less threatening. Because the first means that this is beyond his control, and there is nothing he can do.

But when he becomes a man, he must reverse that choice. And if that means writing off a crazy person who beats little kids, so be it.

Dad just passed away two days ago. How to pick myself up?

1 upvotes · 26 August 2020 · /r/askTRP

There's no shortcut around grief. Nor should there be.

It's good that you are reminding yourself of your progress, but give yourself time to be sad, and to miss the man who gave you life and was good to you.

Eventually you will be able to remember to be glad that you had a father worth grieving.

Did he lie about being serious with me? Is this casual sex?

1 upvotes · 26 August 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

There's no way anyone can judge his intentions from a text description.

I suggest that instead of trying to figure out what he wants, you work on making him want what you want.

"Men are disposable"

1 upvotes · 26 August 2020 · /r/AntiFeminists

Any woman who wants to refrain from interacting with me is welcome to.

I found Women who was Match maker. She quit because she could not handle female clients.

1 upvotes · 22 August 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

FunSize sounds like a smart lady! Sometimes it's mind-boggling how such a simple strategy reaps very strong results. When the man you're interested in is the object of many other women's desires, it always felt like your girl game would have to be out of this world, like something equivalent to Angelina Jolie's mysterious steal-yo-man powers and beauty. It's very nice to know that's not the case and that you can get a coveted man by simply being fun and sweet.

Fun fact: I have, twice in my life, had the surreal experience of listening a Miss Universe contestant cry because I wouldn't leave FunSize for her.

The secret of holding onto a man is not "be Angelina Jolie", because she is probably a fucking nightmare to be in a relationship with. Imagine the sheer level of entitlement and self-regard. Imagine the temper. Imagine the screaming matches. Imagine what inner demons are motivating her to use African children as fashion accessories. Imagine there's a reason for all the divorces.

Sure, being attractive helps you catch a dick. But any girl can catch a dick. The hard part is getting to the end zone without fumbling it. And no matter how sexy you are, if you are not pleasant to be around, men will get sick of your bullshit.

If I could only get idea through the stubborn head of every woman who hangs out here and still just doesn't get it, it would be:

Women want to be treated good enough by someone awesome. But men just want to be treated awesome by someone good enough.

So when you say:

I'm still surprised I bagged him for an LTR with my small RPW toolbag.

You are perhaps not realizing that, here and now, in this day and age, your small RPW toolbag contains awesome power. Because it has in it the few and very simple tools that almost no other women have.

There is nothing physically or mentally hard about these few simple principles. It's not difficult to be nice to someone. What women find difficult is being willing to do it. They have been taught that they are supposed to "stand up for themselves" and "be independent", and "know their worth".

They are afraid that if they act like decent human beings to their partners, they will be "taken advantage of". Even around here you can't heave a brick without hitting six retards who are busily chanting "don't give him the privileges of a husband if you're only a girlfriend".

They don't understand how men work.

According to Briffault's Law, women give in the hopes of receiving back. And thus they do not give if they see no future benefit in it.

But men aren't like that. They give because, and only because, they HAVE received. If you want the status of a wife, perform the role of one.

Does Love Only Exist for Alphas?

1 upvotes · 19 August 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

Yo this thread is to discuss some things ive noticed on the sub and air my thoughts out. If i sound like a fag, dont hesitate to roast me. Ive been talking some shit lately because I see a lot of purple trash i dont like on this sub, so take a shot at me if you want. But make it good or i will light your ass up.

Don't preface yourself with a book full of caveats.

I recently found myself in a dangerous situation and am now agonizing about carrying a gun. Do any of you ladies conceal carry?

1 upvotes · 18 August 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

Here's something you can try. It's a modified version of something the Appleseed Project calls a "ball and dummy drill".

Have your husband load the pistol and hand it to you before each shot, but choose randomly whether to actually chamber a round, or leave it empty... so that you don't know if it's going to go "click" or "bang".

Then he should watch you and the pistol as you fire. If you have a flinch, he'll catch it, because when there's no "bang", there won't be any recoil to cover it up.

I recently found myself in a dangerous situation and am now agonizing about carrying a gun. Do any of you ladies conceal carry?

1 upvotes · 18 August 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

Well, I can't teach you over text, but you have spoken repeatedly of being bothered by the recoil.

Recoil is a paper tiger. Because it's sudden, and there's a loud noise, new shooters sometimes expect a hard kick, and flinch in anticipation of that. However, the actual force on your hand is quite gentle. It just tricks you into thinking it's not.

I recently found myself in a dangerous situation and am now agonizing about carrying a gun. Do any of you ladies conceal carry?

1 upvotes · 17 August 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

The problem I had was with the recoil. Try as I might to keep the gun steady and slowly squeeze the trigger, it would always jerk on me and I would end up going over the target.

I suspect this is not actually the recoil. The recoil happens as you fire, and, with the extremely brief exception of the bullet's "dwell time", anything that effects your aim pretty much has to happen before.

Instead, I suspect you have developed a "recoil flinch".

I recently found myself in a dangerous situation and am now agonizing about carrying a gun. Do any of you ladies conceal carry?

1 upvotes · 17 August 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

Yeah, one of my girlfriends carries that one. If an easy-pull slide is important to you, another one to take a look at is the Springfield XDE.

I found Women who was Match maker. She quit because she could not handle female clients.

1 upvotes · 16 August 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

I'm looking at things from a very different angle here. We're talking about female goals, but I'm trying to promote an idea of how to achieve them by understanding the male mindset. Specifically, you're asking about how to get "a" commitment, or "the" commitment, when I'm talking about how to get commitment.

So what's the difference between "a commitment" and "commitment", apart from the indefinite article? The first is some visible milestone that a woman can easily quantify, and presumably brag about to her friends. The second is the actual male state of mind that makes these things happen.

This can be hard to understand for those who don't inhabit a male mind on a daily basis, but there are certain types of decisions we don't make all at once. Oh, sure, we have no trouble deciding what we want off the sandwich menu, and once we reach a certain tax bracket, we might stop by the Porsche dealership to admire and find ourselves driving off in something bright crimson and frisky. But other types of decisions, not so much. Specifically (and tattoo this inside your eyelids if it's the only way you'll remember), mentally stable men do not impulse-buy women. We don't sit down one day with a blank piece of paper, write "pros" and "cons" at the top of it, and emerge with a decision to start picking out curtains and baby names.

Instead, we try to get laid, and then, when that mission is accomplished, we try to find a graceful way to reach the door, because her personality is something obnoxious that we had to put up with in order to scratch a nagging biological itch. Then one day we have sex with a woman whose personality is a plus instead of a minus, and give or take a few false starts here and there, we start choosing to spend next weekend with her instead getting back on tinder, and some years later you're buying a house and she's having her IUD taken out in anticipation of having sex on regimented schedule in the hopes of creating an expensive parasite whose sole function is to turn sugar into noise.

My point here isn't to tell you that you need to navigate this gauntlet (although you might), it's to point out that, for men, commitment is a state of mind, and regardless of just what circus tricks you would like him to perform in order to stabilize your self-esteem needs, you're going to have inspire that state of mind.

If, in modern society, with marriage meaning what it currently means, some man is willing to marry you within a year of meeting you, then I highly recommend walking swiftly and purposefully in the other direction.

Why get into an LTR?

1 upvotes · 11 August 2020 · /r/askTRP

Go through my backlog of articles. Then go through /u/humansockpuppet's. If you still have questions after that, ask.

Why the fuck isn't a clean diet one of the core principles of TRP?

1 upvotes · 9 August 2020 · /r/askTRP

I have zero doubt I am the "cult leader" this sub needs.

You want to be a cult leader? You actually want minions?

Whatever happened to you to give you such small and contemptible dreams? Aim higher, little one.

Why the fuck isn't a clean diet one of the core principles of TRP?

1 upvotes · 9 August 2020 · /r/askTRP

I understand precisely what your point is; those who say don't know, those who know don't say.

No.

It's a somewhat, slightly, related concept, but that's not it.

The point is that we designed TRP in a certain way. Specifically, it's not a set of instructions. No "do this, don't do that". There's a reason for that.

"Taking the red pill" means "ceasing to be a minion, and using your eyes and brain instead".

So, we don't address people like minions here. There would defeat the whole purpose. The process of the message would contradict the content.

And what? Speaking of wasting time? Why typing me a god dam novel?

Because I still have hope that the light bulb will turn on and you'll get it. So I'm saying the same thing in different ways in the hopes that one might stick.

If I start writing you short replies, then that will mean I have given up on you.

Why the fuck isn't a clean diet one of the core principles of TRP?

1 upvotes · 9 August 2020 · /r/askTRP

Of course I do. I'm old. It gives you perspective.

There's no point in getting angry at people for not being smarter. It's like getting angry at people for not being taller. You can't just go out make yourself smarter with practice, self-discipline, or sheer effort of will.

What you look for is a teachable attitude. What a smart person can learn fast, a not-smart person can often learn slowly... but a person without a teachable attitude can't learn at all, smart or dumb.

So that's important, and, unlike intelligence, it's under our control. We can make ourselves more teachable, mostly by realizing that we can learn even from people dumber than us. Why? Because intelligence is way less important than relevant knowledge, and the world is full of people, some of them quite a bit dumber, who know useful things that we don't.

I know that being misunderstood can be frustrating, and when we are frustrated, we want to lash out at the source of that frustration, to punish it for making us uncomfortable. But that's just the interpersonal version of being that guy who curses the chair because he stubbed his toe in the dark.

Instead, when someone doesn't understand me, I look to see if they have a teachable attitude. If so, I try to find an understandable way to explain things. If not, I just let them go. If they persist in hanging about, waving their lack of perspicacity about like a rainbow flag in a pride parade, then I might, with some regret, have to make them uncomfortable enough to want to leave.

Why the fuck isn't a clean diet one of the core principles of TRP?

1 upvotes · 9 August 2020 · /r/askTRP

It's okay to say you don't understand something. I'm not here to mock you. I'm here to help you.

Synthetic Masculinity

1 upvotes · 4 August 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

So what exactly is natural masculinity? It is a state of mind, it's being stable, level headed, relaxed, smiling in the rubble. I see none of that from the new people in this sub, constantly anxious, stressed, paranoid and neurotic.

"What should I say to this girl? What books should I read? What do these texts mean? What should I wear?"

To understand this, try imagining the difference between managing money if you're one of those guys who reads /r/wallstreetbets vs someone whose family has been running diversified business empire for six generations.

It's not that men don't need to be taught what appropriate behaviour is... it's that in cultures where masculinity is the dominant paradigm, you don't have to seek that information. You grew up saturated in it.

However, the biggest struggle was those new to TRP isn't to learn, it's to unlearn.

And overseeking and overanalyzing guidance is often symptom of lack of confidence, even lack of hope. They're afraid of failure, and so they prepare and prepare and prepare.

Just read a little bit, then try stuff.

"Sacrificing" her career

1 upvotes · 3 August 2020 · /r/askTRP

Our financial systems, legal codes, governmental powers etc... have all been designed.

Yes. That's you imagining these things as machines. When you design a machine, and build it, it does what you designed it to do. Because you have absolute control over its components and how they interact, and they don't change unless you change them.

But institutions aren't like that, because people aren't cogs.

Over time, institutions experience shifts in how they function and what goals they pursue, because they are an emergent property of the behaviour of the people who constitute them.

When you expect "society" to save you from some problem you have, what that means is that you expect the behaviour of an emergent property to align with your personal goals. That is not necessarily the case, even when the ostensible purpose of the selfsame institutions do.

I recommend looking at societies and institutions as resources, which you may or may not be in position to leverage for your goals. That's very different than simply expecting them to be your ally. It's up to you to figure out how to weaponize social institutions and patterns for your goals, and how to prevent them from being weaponized against you.

To think otherwise is to deal with what is with a whole bunch of expectations about what should be.

"Sacrificing" her career

1 upvotes · 3 August 2020 · /r/askTRP

Programmed by who or what? (I smell metaphysics)

The adjective, not the past tense verb.

Humans are "programmed" in the sense that they contain hard-coded instructions to safeguard the valuable eggs.

Could the reason that different societies are slave to this instinct in different degrees be because of their different beliefs or ideology?

The primary dispute here is between the common belief that history is shaped by ideology, and my contention that ideology is shaped by capabilities (mostly technological and economic).

Let's call the first hypothesis "IIH", for "ideology is history", and my hypothesis "TIH", for "technology is history".

IIH says that cultures do things because of what they believe, and they believe things because of what they were persuaded of. Therefore, one can steer one's culture by engaging in a sort of activism whereby one attempts to use social skills to manipulate what popular beliefs are.

TIH says that cultures believe things because they have created rationalizations for the effects of technology and economics on their culture. Therefore, it is largely futile to attempt to persuade one's society of anything that runs counter to these underlying forces.

An IIH theorist would attempt to explain TRP in terms of feminism making "society" untenable of young men, so that they sought a way to "fix" things. And he would advocate that we "fight back" against feminism and attempt to "take back our society". But what he wouldn't do is make any effort to explain how we got feminism in the first place... as if women had suddenly, in one particular generation, decided they wanted to stick it to men, and men had suddenly, in one particular generation, become too weak and cowardly to stop them.

A TIH theorist would ask why we got feminism in the first place. And would try to answer this based on the assumption that human instincts are pretty much the same as previously, but the discovery of new knowledge leads to new capabilities, and thus to lasting change. He would ask "what did society learn to do that made men and women act differently as a result of that thing being done?".

To view TRP through an IIH lens is to cry out: "We are losing the war for society's soul! We must restore the values of our strong, masculine ancestors!", and attempt to recruit casual readers to a crusade, often at great expense to themselves.

To see it through a TIH lens is to think: "We exist at a period in history when our technology and economics happens to have the effect of empowering crazy socialist clowns. How do we escape their influence so as to thrive, both for our immediate benefit, and so we can seize the moment when the tide of circumstances favours something else again?"

"Sacrificing" her career

1 upvotes · 3 August 2020 · /r/askTRP

Wait a second... you mean to say that even if someone lifts with great diligence, their progress will eventually stall because they lack specific and relevant domain knowledge?

That lack of pertinent information can constitute a complete roadblock to accomplishment?

Wow. If only someone around here had thought to say that before!

Is there a new wave of RP guys on here who are taking things a bit differently?

1 upvotes · 31 July 2020 · /r/askTRP

And it looks so good from an outsiders perspective they often try to skip the sex part and get straight to the self actualization.

I wouldn't quite phrase it that way.

I think that a lot of people feign self-actualization as a way of treating what they don't know how to get as "sour grapes"... "Oh, I'm just going my own way, because women aren't worth it, etc, etc, etc."

But unfortunately, it cannot work that way. Because the basic needs are less noble-appearing, less glamorous, but ultimately they are more important.

A starving man has no personality. Everything he is, anything that would make him unique, is consumed by his need to feed himself. And if he starves for long enough, when he has abundance, he will at first become fat (Ask anyone who's ever taken in a stray. Or been to Ranger School.)

It is only when he comes to trust that abundance and accept it as normal that he can eat appropriately, and focus his attention on other things.

So, when I see a man who describes his life as being about "popping bottles and banging models", I see either a starving man who is fantasizing about food, or a recently starving man getting fat.

And when I see a man who describes himself as being "past all that", I ask myself if he really is, or if he's just a starving man trying to pretend he's not hungry.

How the hell do some of you lift so hard?

1 upvotes · 22 July 2020 · /r/askTRP

Good for you. But do not be a bucket crab.

Do women need to have game?

1 upvotes · 22 July 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I am admittedly put off by the cynicism of it. Is there much confirmation that it works?

Depends what you are trying to achieve. Cynicism works for men because tough men are attractive to women. It doesn't work very well for women because tough women aren't attractive to men.

Sure, cynical women can catch a dick, but any woman can catch a dick. The trick is to reach the end zone without fumbling it.

Why doesn't RP talk about gammas? Why is it all alpha and beta?

1 upvotes · 22 July 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I just invented the word "fleem". Now I'm going to complain about how the dockworkers' union has failed to discuss "fleem".

Do you think more Christians are RP or BP?

1 upvotes · 22 July 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The red pill is a metaphor for seeing things as the evidence of your senses dictate, rather than as others instruct you to see them.

Some people believe the universe was created by a wizard who doesn't want you to masturbate. Because other people told them so.

Q4RP Unde What Conditions Would You Date a feminist?

1 upvotes · 22 July 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Not all feminists hate men.

Why exactly are you telling us this?

CMV: MGTOW has surpassed the TRP for utility for beta males

1 upvotes · 22 July 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you want to believe that you are destined to be a loser, go ahead. I will not try to talk you out of it.

There are more people out there who want to learn to play the game and win than I have time and energy for.

Why would I need to persuade you of anything?

What is "wrong" with "hardcore" blue-pill men?

1 upvotes · 21 July 2020 · /r/askTRP

Psychologists (research psychologists, not MFCC weenies) have come up with a pair of useful metaphors:

Assimilation and accommodation.

Assimilation is the act of integrating newly received information into your existing models of how the universe works. Accommodation is the act of altering those mental models or creating new ones.

Their key observation here is simple: Accommodation hurts. And it hurts some people more than others. The smarter you are, the less it hurts. But the more you have emotionally invested in your existing beliefs, the more it will hurt to alter or abolish them.

So when you say:

I discovered TRP after getting burned hard by a cluster-B woman and searching for answers on the internet. TRP content made sense and was repeatedly validated by my experiences and observations

What you are really saying is:

My old worldview didn't agree with my observations... and I had the objectivity and mental fortitude to prefer the pain of rearranging my mental furniture to the pain of continuing to be wrong.

Is it the same group of men who simultaneously look down on women for having casual sex yet also expect sex within the first three dates?

1 upvotes · 21 July 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Objection! Asked and answered.

Sustained.

Do women ever "date down"?

1 upvotes · 21 July 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Sometimes, but it tends not to end well.

Given everything that was discussed here in PPD or TRP subs, would you switch your gender if there was a magic button?

1 upvotes · 21 July 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

“But it was pointless, it was stupid; he thought about thoughtless things. If I were a seabird . . . but how could you be a seabird? If you were a seabird your brain would be tiny and stupid and you would love half-rotted fish guts and tweaking the eyes out of little grazing animals; you would know no poetry and you could never appreciate flying as fully as the human on the ground yearning to be you.

If you wanted to be a seabird you deserved to be one.”

— Iain M. Banks, Use of Weapons

What is the ideal body fat % for health?

1 upvotes · 17 July 2020 · /r/askTRP

Understand the difference between subcutaneous fat, which is healthy, and visceral fat, which is unhealthy.

If your bf% is too high, you get visceral fat and clogged arteries.

If your bf% is too low, you get poor recovery and are generally weak.

The optimum point varies from person to person, but for most men, it tends to hover around the point where you just barely have visible abs to where you just barely don't.

If looking jacked is a priority, you can go somewhat lower without hurting your health, or getting too much weaker. But there are limits.

"What even is Red Pill Women lolol?? pLaTe sChOoL???1?"

1 upvotes · 15 July 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

I think I owe this place more than to sit by and let it be maligned.

Mmmm, okay. The thought is appreciated, no doubt by others as well.

And I'm sure you don't enjoy being characterized as a helpless brainwashed victim any more than I enjoy being characterized as Svengali.

But consider the source. What they do is talk about us all day. Do we talk about them all day? No. We are concerned with our own projects. Not with how others live their lives.

Anything noteworthy is going to offend someone or other. If no one hates you, you are probably the human equivalent of that music they play when you're on hold on the telephone... offending no one because you make no choices, have no opinions, and stand for nothing.

I get death threats sent to me on the regular. I'm been called everything from a pathetic manchild to a powerful, manipulative demon, and sometimes both at once. I simply chose to regard it as a shit test, and didn't try to argue, because arguing with their poor opinion of me would be emotionally investing in their good opinion of me... which is actually worth nothing, and does me no good at all.

Insult me? Sure, go ahead. While you're at it, pour some water on a duck.

So while DGAF is certainly easier for men than women, and it's nice to get along with people, try considering how some people will use their opinion of you like a dog biscuit, withholding it until you do the tricks they want. And while "obedience" is not a dirty word around here, reserve it for those who have shown that their leadership takes your needs into account as well as theirs.

If someone hasn't shown you that they are looking out for your welfare, don't work to please them.

Addressing an elephant in the room.

1 upvotes · 11 July 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

Not really, no. It's the precise thing I try to coach against. Sexual desire can't be negotiated.

Instead, I try to teach them that what they really want from women isn't just sex, but sexual desire... so learn how to inspire that, quickly take your shot with each woman you desire, and if you fail, quickly move on, taking whatever lessons you learned with you.

Unfortunately, some men are slow learners and persist in regarding women as unique, special, valuable "opportunities" that shouldn't be "wasted". So they try to salvage a bad interaction instead of focusing their energy on the next girl.

Addressing an elephant in the room.

1 upvotes · 11 July 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

I don't write for everyone. Somewhere around 90% of women simply aren't going to get it. I write for those who do.

You're starting to get it.

The fact is that men are all raging sluts. I'm not being sarcastic here. Even the ones you think of as perfect gentlemen are drawn to every third or fourth woman they see, and they don't need to like or even know a girl to want her. The only way to prevent a man from having these sorts of promiscuous urges is to psychologically scar him so badly that he's no good to anyone, even himself.

So the question for women becomes "How do I deal with this? How I interact with this embodiment of raging sexual desire in a way that allows me to actually contact the personality hidden behind that, and have a real bond?".

Having A+ girl game, simply letting guys go if they demand sex earlier than you're comfortable with (which is EXPLICITLY described in his post), and calibrating your 'picker' to exclude players is another, more universal strategy.

In a nutshell, yes.

Although I would suggest considering a slightly different view of the same strategy. When you say:

letting guys go if they demand sex earlier than you're comfortable with

... it implies that his mistake is "demanding sex too early". Try considering that his mistake might be "inability to inspire sexual desire in you".

Just as it is women's responsibility to inspire commitment in men (rather than demanding it or negotiating for it), it is men's responsibility to inspire sexual desire in women (rather than demanding it or negotiating for it).

Demanding commitment as the price for sex is just as autistic as demanding sex for the price of commitment.

My advice for women is don't sleep with any man you can say "no" to. Instead, focus on inspiring emotional investment in the one that made you wake up the next morning thinking "holy shit, why did I do that?".

"women are strong and men suck"

1 upvotes · 29 June 2020 · /r/AntiFeminists

It's a good thing these women keep reminding themselves how strong they are. Otherwise they might forget.

Lets statistically ruin a life

1 upvotes · 28 June 2020 · /r/MensRights

If I fire a 7.62x51mm semi auto rifle out my window in a random direction with my eyes closed, I run a statistically very small risk of hitting someone.

You okay with that?

Give him the opportunity to ghost you

1 upvotes · 26 June 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

This is probably the single worst piece of dating advice for women that I have ever heard, and that includes stuff quoted from Cosmo for laughs.

Have you ever wondered why men who know nothing about women always try too hard, chase too much, and act too forthcoming? Why they fall over themselves to agree with what she said, tell her how wonderful she is, and court her by showing emotional investment?

They are doing what they themselves would like, because they don't understand that men and women are different.

If a man shows enthusiasm, women assume he is low value and has few options. They are repelled. If a man plays hard to get, their passions are inflamed.

The reverse is true of men. Men reciprocate passion, and are turned off by indifference.

According to someone who was active here, You all are extremists👁️ Oh My Gawd

1 upvotes · 26 June 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

https://youtu.be/LIOSdRMSG_k?t=40

Why has my gf (20F) not had sex with me (20M) after a year of being together?

1 upvotes · 23 June 2020 · /r/askTRP

Who cares why?

The effect is that she won't have sex with you. Go find someone who will.

What are some red pill truths that even most trp'ers won't swallow

1 upvotes · 11 June 2020 · /r/askTRP

Try to avoid false dichotomies in your thinking. Humanity isn't separated into people whose purpose in life is to raise crotch spawn, and people whose purpose in life is have a high net worth.

I don't know where you get this assumption that I "slave away" to earn a high income. I have a high income because I have rare skills with a high market value, and because I have two slave girls with professional careers and incomes, and we all live together and have no kids.

I can't remember the last time I worked a full 40 hour week.

And, yes, I could indeed hustle more, and make more, but I don't want to. There's a lot of definitions of success that I have achieved happiness by avoiding... and money isn't the most dangerous one.

If I could advise young men on how to live happy lives, and since they tend to listen to me, I think I can, I would say "Maximize your options. Maximize your freedom. Maximize your ability to change direction and choose a new course. Don't mortgage your soul to a career, a woman, or an ideology."

A lot of people waste a whole lot of time on dusty philosophy books, and a whole lot of anguish on existential angst, before they discover that life's purpose isn't something you discover, it's something you decide.

What works for you?

Having kids doesn't make you immortal or let you win the evolution game (because in that game, you are a move, not a player). Does that mean it's not meaningful? It is for some... but that's because they like kids. The meaning of having kids is if you enjoy the process of raising them, and get satisfaction later from having done so.

Yes, happiness is temporary. That's because life is temporary. Everything is temporary. The universe is temporary. It's going to wind down into an entropic state and then there will be nothing forever.

So what?

People who are upset by that are really upset by their own psychological issues. They have some deep-seated, irrational, and self-destructive need for something to be eternal, instead of just good while it lasts.

An intelligent, but callow, young man once described me as Sisyphus, pushing the same rock up the same hill over and over again, thinking there must be some overarching goal I am trying and failing to achieve. I smiled, but didn't bother to correct him, because the secret of happiness is something he's going to have to discover for himself. I can't explain it to him. It's too big to spoon feed to him... he has to go out and chase it down and sink his teeth in its throat.

When he, and you, know why Sisyphus smiles as he pushes the rock, when you understand how his sentence long ago ceased to be a punishment at all, then you will be a different person than the one I'm talking to.

I've already told you the answer, if you read carefully between the lines. But it's not important to know the answer, it's important to understand and believe it. That takes longer.

I just learned about Hypergamy

1 upvotes · 11 June 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

<https://www.trp.red/p/whisper/848>

My husband is not a reddit user and I'm grateful

1 upvotes · 24 May 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

+1

/u/pearlsandstiletos

Mental Illness and RPW

1 upvotes · 22 May 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

I was diagnosed with BPD this week. I'm devastated. I knew I had the tendencies, and I feared I'd be diagnosed when I started therapy. I'm a social worker and have worked with many clients with BPD. But I was shocked when my therapist confirmed it. I'm 26 years old. And I suddenly feel like a monster.

There are a wide variety of mental health problems about which people tend to be equipped and taught to be compassionate. Where if you have X, you can google X, and find a whole bunch of helpful pages about how to cope with your X.

Then there are others where you are simply dismissed as a monster. Google Y, and you will find a whole bunch of guidance on how to spot people with Y, how to avoid people with Y, and that you should get the fuck away from people with Y.

Which does you no good if you are, in fact, the one with Y.

X is your basic depression/anxiety/phobia/whatnot, and Y is your basic NPDs and high-functioning psychopaths. BPD is somewhere in the middle.

I guess I've always seen myself as "not like them" I think it's because as a social worker, I see the stigma around mental illness. You'd be shocked to know that mental and medical health professionals can be some of the harshest critics of those with mental illness.

Mental health professionals and the psychologists who publish the material they work from, are no wiser than anyone else, and no less prone to all the fallacies and errors of thought and judgement that humans are prone to. Which ends up meaning that psychology is not so much the process of understanding the human condition as it is the process of rationalizing what the given culture already believes.

And one of the biggest delusions of the modern west is the idea that the universe either is just, or can be made just.

In order to preserve this delusion, people try to convince themselves that those whose company they find obnoxious are therefore bad people, and deserve whatever disapprobation they attract.

But the truth is that no one deserves anything. "Deserve" isn't a thing. People don't get what they deserve. They get what they get.

So let's lay out the real deal.

If you have full-blown BPD, you are intensely unpleasant to be close to. That's not something you do deliberately, however. It's something that happens. It happens as a result of your needs and how you are driven to deal with them.

You have an intense desire for connection with others, and are also worried about them disappointing or betraying you. And when you meet someone new, you idealize them... maybe this is the one. Maybe this is the person who will never disappoint you, betray you, let you down. Except they always do. Because people disappoint each other. They're not perfect. They're not angels. They're people.

They never asked to be placed on that pedestal in the first place. They never told you they were perfect. You just projected that expectation on them because you wanted them to be, needed them to be. It's a contract they never signed.

The point of all that is that the way to not be experienced as a monster is to constantly remind yourself of this.

What the PPD is about

1 upvotes · 20 May 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP is for dudes who wanna get laid.

TBP is for bucket crabs.

PPD is for people who like pointless arguments.

Plate sucks a mean D, and generally buys shit for me and treats me well when I visit. But some things have come to light recently and I am wondering if I should drop her?

1 upvotes · 9 May 2020 · /r/askTRP

She's a plate, not a girlfriend. What you do with plates is enjoy the ride, accept that it's for a limited duration, and don't get butthurt when it's over.

Some plates work their way up to girlfriend, but that's up to them. Don't put them there by default.

It's over with a plate if she develops baby rabies, pressures for commitment instead of inspiring it, or misbehaves.

What is your take/opinion on the idea that men are not actually attracted to women, but to the idea of action or harm?

1 upvotes · 4 May 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That's what I'm saying. Data and studies done on this subject are largely based on women's porn searches. Women's porn searches absolutely do not reflect the majority of women.

Again, that's not quite how the science game is played. If you think someone's sample pool is skewed, you get to say "I disagree with your conclusion". But you don't get to say "I assert the opposite of your conclusion with no evidence."

There is a very large plethora of issues that comes with any kind of study done revolving around sexuality.

Yep.

Sex studies are plagued by problems like free response, zero identity/demographic checks, very small sample sizes, etc.

Yep.

One women will say "oh you know sometimes I have sex doggy style, that's rough I guess" and mark "yes" while another women says "hm well I liked to be tied up and whipped and facefucked until I'm crying but that's not really that rough so I'm gonna answer 'no'"

Yes. Self-report data is worthless. That's that reason behind the TRP principle of "Ignore what women say, watch what they do."

But your original question was an attempt to gather self-report data as well, which is why I went down this road in the first place.

In my experience, men try to be honest on self-reports about their sexuality, but their self-understanding, while better than women's as well, isn't good enough to make this kind of data valid.

Men, do you date women with the goal of settling down, or with the intention of having a good time for as long as it lasts?

1 upvotes · 4 May 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Men, do you date women with the goal of settling down, or with the intention of having a good time for as long as it lasts?

No.

What is your take/opinion on the idea that men are not actually attracted to women, but to the idea of action or harm?

1 upvotes · 4 May 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Again, it's actually a minority of women overall.

I'd like to see your data. Link?

Boxing or BJJ? Also how has it changed you mentally?

1 upvotes · 4 May 2020 · /r/askTRP

Relax, nobody's gonna let you get in the ring with Joe Frazier.

What is your take/opinion on the idea that men are not actually attracted to women, but to the idea of action or harm?

1 upvotes · 3 May 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think a lot of the issue with the position of the OP that I copied from pinkpill

Is that a feminist thing?

I tend not to keep very careful track of the latest developments in dumpster fires.

This would be just a matter of controlling/dominating women.

Male dominance and female submission is how human sexuality is programmed to work. The more culture tries to suppress that, the more people will crave it, and the stronger and kinkier expressions of it they will crave.

The modern woman can't really explain why she finds it so hot to be overpowered, restrained, degraded or abused. She's just flocking to it in greater and greater numbers because it turns her on.

What's going on is that women are attracted to men they see as their superiors. And so when you try to force them to be equal to men (or even put them in a superior social position), and tell them they must be at least as worthy as men, they will compartmentalize their sexuality and seek out that inferior position in that context, because women don't and can't get off on equality. And the same is true for men.

The more culturally dominant you make women, the more sexually submissive they will become.

What is your take/opinion on the idea that men are not actually attracted to women, but to the idea of action or harm?

1 upvotes · 3 May 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Okay, I understand your motivations, but what you're doing doesn't really match the "science" game.

A questionnaire isn't a test. If you ask me a question about what my motivations are, you are not only relying on me to be truthful, you are also relying on me to have enough self-understanding to know the answer.

If you perform a test by observing my behaviour, you don't need me to be truthful, and you don't need me to know why I do what I do, or want what I want.

So, can we make this hypothesis testable? Well, let's think about what we would expect to see if:

- Men were repulsed by the female body
- Men were aroused by the idea of dominating, controlling, or harming someone else.

Well, if this were true, wouldn't men be sexually aroused by pretty much anything they could dominate, control, or harm?

So, here's my proposed test:

1. Get a bunch of male volunteers.

2. Hook them up to one of these.
3. Show them some images, some depicting violence or domination against vulnerable entities (mice, bunnies, small children)(A), some depicting women in a sexualized manner (nudity, pole dancing, sexual acts)(B), and some depicting sexualized violence or domination against women (femsub BDSM, basically)(C).
4. See which category (A,B,C) men are most sexually aroused by. For curiosity's sake, also perform the same experiment on female subjects.

Now, I don't have the logistics lined up to perform such an experiment, but if I had to guess (based on my experience from the whole TRP project), I would predict the following:

(A) would arouse very few men or women to any significant degree.

(B) would arouse most men, and a lot of women, even strictly heterosexual ones.

(C) would arouse many men, and many women, with the women aroused by (C) outnumbering the men.

So, you might ask how this gels with your anecdotal experience of men being repulsed by photos of the female vagina, with no surrounding context?

If you would like to understand why this is so, then PM me your email address, and I will, free of charge, go around the internet posting it in various places with an accompanying message describing how much you really like to look at penises, and would men reading this please send you as many dick pics as possible?

Then, if you don't like the contents of your inbox, you can explain to me why that isn't, after all, evidence that "women are actually repulsed by men, and just like money and attention".

Now, I don't think you actually need to do that, because I think you already know what your reaction would be ("I don't like all these dick pics").

I think you also have some inkling why... because context matters.

What is your take/opinion on the idea that men are not actually attracted to women, but to the idea of action or harm?

1 upvotes · 3 May 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Okay, okay, okay. Here:

"Hear ye, hear ye, hear ye: Let it be recorded and known, on this third of day of May, in the year of our god-on-a-stick two thousand and twenty, and let be remembered for all time: that /u/Mimoxs is neither fat nor ugly! Seneschal, send my best messengers on my swiftest horses to publish it in all corners of my kingdom!"

... that satisfy you?

There is no way to test it other than asking people what they think, which is all I did.

Not quite what I mean by "test".

See, I'm big fan of science. Not science the institution, that sucks. I mean science the algorithm. Works like this:

1. Look at something you want to understand.
2. Come up with a story that explains everything you see.
3. Predict what something you haven't seen yet would be, if your story was correct.
4. Go and look at that thing you haven't seen yet.
5. If your prediction was wrong, decide your story is wrong.
6. If your prediction was right, keep repeating steps 3 and 4 until it looks really obvious to you that your story is right.

Your story, in step 2, is called a "hypothesis". Your test, in step 4, is called an "experiment".

And in step 3, your story has to predict something, so that it can be tested.

This story your fat friends came up with... what does it predict? How would a world where it was true look different than a world where it was false?

If they can't answer that question, then their story isn't true or false. It's something worse than false. It's unfalsifiable. The phrase we use to describe things like that is "not even wrong".

What is your take/opinion on the idea that men are not actually attracted to women, but to the idea of action or harm?

1 upvotes · 3 May 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Oh, was it your idea? Thought you were repeating someone else's idea.

In that case, what led you to this conclusion? And did you find a way to test it?

Do you think most women are fully aware of men's nature?

1 upvotes · 3 May 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Men understand women a hell of a lot better than women understand men.

What is your take/opinion on the idea that men are not actually attracted to women, but to the idea of action or harm?

1 upvotes · 3 May 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This is a common idea in the circles I'm in that I have seen discussed. The idea is that men are repulsed by/unattracted to women themselves,

No, Ms. Heavy At Any Size, men aren't repulsed by women. They're repulsed by you.

Why are TRP users essentially misogynistic but FDS users aren't vice versa?

1 upvotes · 3 May 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Kid gets in some kind of trouble, gets sent to a psychiatrist, who decides to start by administering a Rorschach test. He shows the kid the first inkblot, asks the kid what it makes him think of.

"Sex", says the kid.

"And how about this one?"

"Sex", says the kid again.

"And this third one here?"

"Sex."

... and the response is much the same for the whole series of cards.

"Son," says the psychiatrist, shaking his head, "you need help".

"But doc," protests the boy, all injured innocence, "you're the one who's drawing all the dirty pictures!"

Crafting the perfect marriage

1 upvotes · 2 May 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

What about having the marriage ceremony and giving your girl a ring but not sign the official papers?

This may be less risky in some jurisdictions, but it does provide an additional possible excuse for a court to hose you, and I don't see much upside.

So I guess you're known as the guy who has two girlfriends to your friends and family?

My sisters know, my parents are dead, and my girls ARE my family.

FunSize's brothers know, her parents don't. FanGirl's parents DO know, because she doesn't always know when to shut up. (As anyone who reads her comments here can tell.)

How did you even get two women to share you and be fine with living together?

Well, read everything I ever wrote. More articles on relationship game are coming, too. I've had a lot of requests by PM. Trying to chew this all into a short and understandable article takes some time, however.

That's some good leadership. All 3 of you go out on dates?

Yes. They each get some one on one time with me, but most of our together time is all three of us.

Remember that women are inherently submissive. Whatever they consider to be "normal and expected" is going to be perfectly okay with them. If a woman loves and trusts you enough that she looks to you to define what is "normal and expected", then she'll not only tolerate what you want, she'll be utterly fine with it and not bothered at all.

If you consider the hypothetical situation of a man watching his girlfriend suck another man's dick, he might have to accept it if he's in some fucked-up culture that considers that normal and healthy, but he's never going to be okay with it unless he has a cuckold fetish (in which case the sexual turn-on overrides any distaste he would otherwise experience).

By contrast, if a girl is watching another girl suck her boyfriend off, the only reason she's upset by that is that she's in a culture that teaches her she should be. Dispelling those expectations doesn't just produce acquiescence... it actually removes any discomfort at all, and she's absolutely fine.

She doesn't have to have a cuck fetish to not be bothered, all she has to have is the belief that the other woman is not a threat to her. And sex isn't inherently a threat in and of itself.

In other words, women are not instinctively jealous, because sperm is cheap. Men are instinctively jealous, because eggs are expensive.

I made a realization about my relationships. It's got me sucked into a deep depression

1 upvotes · 2 May 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

what is it about me that makes men want to take advantage of me?

Nothing.

Men don't want to take advantage of you.

Just as you would rather meet a man who makes you so wet you could sail toy boats in your underpants, men would rather meet a woman who makes them fall madly in love. You don't hate sex, you hate the expectation of sex in the absence of desire. And men don't hate emotional investment, they hate the expectation of emotional investment in the absence of desire.

So most men are actually rooting for you, and the rest aren't actively rooting against you.

But just as you have no control over how sexually desirable the men you meet are, men have no control over how much of a "keeper" you are.

What is the line between being a girlfriend and being a wife?

1 upvotes · 2 May 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

You've tasted him? That's disturbing.

Narcissistic Personality Disorder Tells

1 upvotes · 1 May 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

Here, let me back up my claim with some evidence.

Is this a redpill mindset?

1 upvotes · 28 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

Just because someone is frequently wrong doesn't mean they don't start interesting discussions. I've been spending a fair amount of time lately debating a curious variety of TRP communists, not because anyone will change their minds, but because articulating my ideas helps me have new ones.

So, having read this article, I can now identify the point where Graham makes a mistake. What he identifies as "religious" arguments are indeed pointless. But he doesn't really delve into why certain ideas become "part of an identity", or into why this would create conflict.

If he had asked those questions, it would have been obvious that not every identity leads to conflict. Being male is definitely part of both our self-definitions, but that doesn't automatically put us in conflict with females. In fact, the same is true of many, many concepts we use to define ourselves.

By failing to notice this, Graham comes up with the fatuous "solution" of "don't define yourself", as if the fundamental question "who am I?" is one that people would simply choose to not answer.

Try examining this phenomenon, not as identity, but as a tribal instinct. Examine the possibility that people are hardwired to develop a notion of what tribe they belong to, and to display increased trust towards members of that tribe, and decreased trust towards members of other tribes.

Why do you think masculinity is under attack by the mainstream?

1 upvotes · 26 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

Let's skip the quibbling and cut to the heart of the matter.

Everything you have ever said to me, and your whole worldview, has a process/content contradiction problem.

"What's a process/content contradiction problem?" you ask, in an exactly appropriate question, almost as if I were writing it myself.

Good question. Every communication any human being ever engaged in has two channels... the content channel, and the process channel.

The content channel is very simple. It's the literal meaning of the words spoken or written. It's only ambiguous insofar as people don't always agree on the definitions of words.

The process channel is the message conveyed by how, when, and where those words are spoken or written.

Frequently, when people haven't thought their messages through, or aren't very introspective, the messages on the process channel can contradict the messages on the content channel.

What would an example of this look like?

- It would look like someone setting up an anarcho-primitivist website, with a forum for anarcho-primitivists to discuss their beliefs.
- Or a man going to a therapist for advice on how to be more assertive and less easily influenced by others.
- Or a feminist who majored in "gender studies" complaining in a gender studies journal about the lack of women in engineering.

The term "hypocrisy" is closely related, but it's not exactly the same, because the character of the messenger is irrelevant, and is not the content or the process of the message.

So, it's all very interesting when commies advocate for enforcement of ideological unity by a central authority... but what you have done, is come into TRP (both here and on the website), and argue for this, in opposition to the closest thing TRP has to an authority figure (despite my numerous attempts to refuse the title). It couldn't be any more humorous if you were standing out the street with a big sign saying "Silence all protestors!".

Your words decry freedom of thought, and speech, and association, and enterprise, but the way you deliver those words endorses all of those things.

You enjoy living in a semi-free society, and you would enjoy living in a free society even more. Bloviating about how we need to give slavery another chance is just the way you happen to use that freedom.

And I live in hope that you will use that freedom of thought to someday come up with a good idea. But if you don't, someone else will.

Why do you think masculinity is under attack by the mainstream?

1 upvotes · 25 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

I just don't agree with (or understand, perhaps) the premise that people will gravitate towards areas where they will be most productive like scarce resources do.

Work is just another resource. So pricing helps.

But with people, there's another layer, and that's best described as passion or inspiration. Because humans are mostly valuable as information processors, and information processors are most valuable as innovators, a whole civilization can be transformed by just a few people.

Not people with power, you understand. People whose ideas are powerful. People whose ideas draw others to voluntarily follow.

Not everyone is going to fall into that category. Not even close. But you never know who will. That's why we dare not interfere with anyone's freedom to innovate. Because the one guy you silence might not just be Oscar Wilde... he might be James Watt.

And you might say "oh, stupid people can't be either one, we know that much, at least". Well, so what? Because you can't artificially make an intellectual elite... it doesn't work. It doesn't work because brilliance isn't something you can objectively measure. Fine minds will do well on tests, but the best minds might not, because they might instead start correcting the test, or questioning the whole premise of the test, or of testing in general.

It also doesn't work because, as Dick Feynmann once noted, "The universe doesn't care who's smart, it only cares who's right." Elite-level intellects, even when they are correctly identified, cannot guarantee correctness, especially not if they have mentally mutilated themselves by detaching from the principle of empiricism. Often, intelligence only provides you with new and interesting ways of being wrong.

Yes, there are followers and leaders. Yes, not everyone finds an intersection of their perfect state of fulfillment and their perfect state of usefulness to those around them. But liberty is how we get closest to that.

And what are the alternatives?

Authoritarianism is rubbish because none of us is as smart as all of us.

Democracy is rubbish because none of us is as dumb as all of us.

And when you can reconcile those two statements, and understand how they are both simultaneously true, then you will understand the case for liberty.

Why do you think masculinity is under attack by the mainstream?

1 upvotes · 24 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

I disagree. I would liken it more to the former, a single threaded gradient descent.

The free market works because each individual seeking his local maximum collectively forms an efficient market.

That's the metaphor. Each individual is a thread. This parallelizes over a society.

It shares some of the features of simulated annealing, some that are like A*, and some that are like tournament predictors, but the most important feature is the amount of ITC/IPC, which dwarfs anything you would achieve in AI search. Winners get imitated.

The thesis of this post, and where I disagree with you, is that unlike steel, men feel pain and have a natural tendency to avoid it, even if seeking out the local maximum leads to inefficient results.

And there you've made my point for me... an army of ideological clones, marching to the beat of a single drum, is effectively a single thread, and are going to get stuck in a local maximum, even if they are (or, rather, Dear Leader is) pragmatic enough to relentlessly maximize.

None of us is as smart as all of us.

Most men, without leadership, do not thrive and society as a whole is less productive when men are free.

Correct.

Wrong. What you're not getting is that lack of freedom means lack of leadership.

I am thankful for this community that you've built because it set me free.

Leaders lead by example. If I were not free to speak, how could you ever have heard what I had to say? In an authoritarian society or subculture, only elites can speak freely, despite not having a monopoly on good ideas. In addition, their rubbish ideas are lent weight, and no one is free of rubbish ideas, either.

Like this one:

A society of free men is not a productive society when compared to a society of enslaved men under the leadership of a few, select elite, regardless of how we gauge "productivity".

Total rubbish. By this standard, North Korea would outproduce South Korea because they have more slaves.

I'm not against slavery on moral grounds (especially not here where we don't talk morals), I'm against wastefully using human beings for their pitiful muscles instead of for their gigantic brains. Even people you and I would consider dumb as a sack of rocks are capable of learning and being skilled, especially when you free them to find shit they CARE about to work on.

A man would have to be very low-functioning indeed if his greatest economic utility was a state of unenthusiastic slave labour.

Add to that the simple realization that authoritarian systems are absolute shit at identifying those who are valuable as innovators, instead of only valuable as ditch-diggers. In fact, add the realization that they are actually not just terrible, but inversely good, because innovators want freedom more than anyone else, and authoritarians therefore fight them the hardest.

Humanity's strength has never lain in its ability to do physical tasks... even those of us who lift weights to become very strong indeed are nothing special compared to other species. What makes us powerful is the giant brain that evolution has optimized us for, even at the expense of literally everything else. Anything that diminishes the use we get out of our collective brain power is a terrible idea.

How Stripping Sparked my Conversion From BluePill to Redpill

1 upvotes · 21 April 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

I'm not here to win friends, nor am I here to proselytize.

RPW is a resource for those who are ready to hear it, not a religious mission that tries to reach and persuade anyone and everyone.

If someone is put on the defensive, and becomes unable to listen, not because what they heard was hostile, but simply because it wasn't sugar-coated enough, there could be no good outcome for the conversation anyway.

I'm not here to beg people not to shoot the messenger. Nor do I expect of the ECs to go to that kind of length. I would rather have them focus their limited time and energy on those who are able to hear.

In this case, someone messaged me with the highly relevant information that this particular person is not merely a former stripper, but an active prostitute. Obviously not really ready to make a change yet.

You can't help someone without their permission.

How Stripping Sparked my Conversion From BluePill to Redpill

1 upvotes · 21 April 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

There are several factors.

https://old.reddit.com/r/RedPillWomen/comments/g4lp7k/how_stripping_sparked_my_conversion_from_bluepill/fo018li/

The Unbearable Femininity of Nazism

1 upvotes · 16 April 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

He's taking a little break.

Do people actually see the red pill as an ideology?

1 upvotes · 13 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

If you wish to fuss about misrepresentation of Lacan, don't misrepresent Lacan.

What I'm going to respond to is the argument you present to me. If you wish to draw it from somewhere else, fine. But don't fuss if you get it wrong.

Philosophy is not a bucket. Peterson is a bucket.

You didn't understand the metaphor of the bucket. Lacan is a bucket. Philosophy is a bucket. TRP is a bucket. Everything that requires an investment of time to investigate is a bucket. You decide whether it's worth sticking your head in the bucket by watching what happens to people to do.

The stance that TRP is baked is a goofy one - TRP was created to address evolution in the sexual marketplace. Do we assume that the SMP suddenly stopped evolving?

You think TRP hasn't evolved?

Puzzling. Perhaps if you assume that "evolution" means what happens when you feed something enough red and white balls and it turns into a different cartoon monster.

But evolution is the emergent process of adaptation by non-random removal. This means that evolution is directionless, unplanned, and has no final goal state. It simply follows a path in optimization space towards a local maximum. Saying that something is not evolving because it refuses to let you steer it is a profound misunderstanding of the basic concept.

TRP isn't here for you to steer, or even for me to steer. We made that determination very early on, and you don't remember that because you weren't here. We established it with the explicit goal that we would follow wherever our observations led us, regardless of how it offended anyone's political or social sensibilities.

Now, this determination was intended to foil interference by the factual relativists of the modern American left, but it serves us equally well against incursions by those who wish to hitch their cart to TRP's horse.

Horses pull more than they weigh. Carts weigh more than they pull.

Do people actually see the red pill as an ideology?

1 upvotes · 12 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

"Liberalism is a political and moral philosophy based on liberty, consent of the governed and equality before the law." What's the issue with this statement? All of these core tenets are undefinable equivalencies.

"Liberty" can just as easily be my right to openly hate transgender people as it is transgender people's right to use a bathroom.

So, having now read at least this much Lacan, at least one fallacy is already clear: binary thinking.

In this case, we speak of the notion that because a term cannot be rigidly defined, it has no meaning at all. This is ludicrous if you spend so much as thirty seconds thinking about it.

How so? Well, scientists have had semantic arguments about whether Pluto is a planet or not, yes? But in the binary thinking mode that Lacan uses to analyze the word "liberty", the word "planet" would therefore have no meaning, because it is not rigidly defined.

Therefore, I could call my cat a "planet", and this would be perfectly valid. Except it isn't. It doesn't pass the laugh test. We may disagree on whether or not Pluto is a planet, but we all know that this is not a planet.

So Lacan has been defeated decades ago by Asimov. He is wronger than wrong.

The notion of "liberty" as a value leads to endless debate. So what? That's a feature, not a bug. It is toddlers and autists who cannot stand to live with ambiguity.

Do people actually see the red pill as an ideology?

1 upvotes · 12 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

I think that truth is objective, but not binary.

What does that mean?

Well, objective means that it doesn't depend on the observer (we shall set aside discussions of Einstein's general relativity for the moment). There is no "true for you" or "true for me". There is only "true".

Binary means "having two possible values". If truth were binary, it would mean that any allegation of fact was either absolutely true, or absolutely false, with nothing in between.

But truth isn't like that. A simple example shows us how: To say that the earth is a flat plate balanced on the backs of four elephants standing on the back of a giant turtle is to be very wrong indeed. To say that it is a sphere is a lot more accurate, but not as accurate as to say that it is a slightly flattened spheroid.

Everyone understands that things can be very wrong, slightly wrong, pretty much right, right down to the pedantic details, etc.

But why? How do we measure rightness? What, when we get right down to it, is truth?

Truth is predictive power.

Think about it this way... why do we care about truth? We care because it empowers us. Knowing the truth enables us to predict the outcomes of our actions, so we can choose actions with outcomes we prefer. It enables us to predict the outcomes of what we see around us, so we can prepare for what we now know will happen. Predictive power empowers us, and improves our lives.

The best algorithm for finding truth that we have been able to come up (the scientific method) involves making predictions and testing them. Ergo, we test truth by testing predictive power. The conclusion is obvious.

I haven't said anything revolutionary here. People with double-digit IQs understand this, although they may not be able to articulate it in clear language. Even people who disagree with it on paper, because they read too much postmodernist bullshit, still behave in their everyday lives according to this model, because no person who didn't think like this could function at all.

Do people actually see the red pill as an ideology?

1 upvotes · 8 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

Yeah, I'm done playing with my food.

Do people actually see the red pill as an ideology?

1 upvotes · 8 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

Oh, fuss fuss fuss. Must I hold your hand and walk you through every step? What was it I said about being stuck in binary thinking?

If I say that words are defined by consensus, does that immediately mean to you that language is pointless, because nothing means anything?

Let me give you a little rundown on how language works. Words are symbols used in an attempt to replicate the thoughts of one person in the head of another. But this process is imperfect, because no two brains are wired up the same way, so there are greater and lesser degrees of overlap between what's going on in one brain when it speaks a word, and what is going on in another brain when it hears that word.

The more abstract the concept, the less the degree of overlap.

That is why abstract discussions require unpacking of definitions to be fruitful. And that is where arguing semantics becomes pointless. You can argue all day about what the word "ideology" means, if you lose sight of the fact that no one discovered the word "ideology". Instead, they invented it. Words are engineering technology, not scientific discovery.

If someone's IQ is less about two standard deviations above the mean, they are going to have trouble with a trap called symbol-object confusion. They occasionally forget that the map is not the territory. Then they have arguments about whether Pluto "is" or "isn't" a "planet".

But out in the litoral of light, where the sun burns dim and cold, Pluto is not actually cycling back and forth between states, growing and shrinking, as this argument goes on. Nothing is happening to Pluto. The state of reality is not changing. Whether Pluto is or isn't a "planet" depends entirely on what you mean by "planet". If you argue about whether Pluto is or isn't a planet, you're not arguing about facts at all. You're arguing about how to use the symbol "planet", and what it ~~should~~ you want it to represent.

This is of course, silly, and wastes a lot of time, until you get someone in the discussion who IS tall enough to ride the symbol/object roller coaster, and he says "What do you mean by planet?"

Then you can immediately enter into a fruitful discussion of whether or not Pluto has cleared its orbit, which is a matter of fact with one right answer, because everyone agrees on what "Pluto", "orbit", and "clear" mean.

So if someone can't "define degeneracy", that means they can't describe what they mean by that word so that others can understand it, let alone produce a consensus, let alone describe it in such a way that it can be seen to be permutations of single phenomenon.

You can make a rule that says "no murdering people", because everyone agrees on what people are, and what murder is. (Barring a few nutcases, perhaps.)

But if you make a rule that says "no degeneracy", "no hate speech", no one knows what is and isn't those things. There's no consensus.

So if someone wants me to say that a massive collection of my scribbles is an "ideology", they first have to tell me what they mean by "ideology". If they want me to join the fight against "degeneracy", they first have to tell me what the ever-loving fuck they mean by "degeneracy"... before we can even talk about whether it would improve anything for anyone, much less for me personally.

Otherwise you are George Bush, declaring a global war on a tactic. Good luck knowing when you've won that fight.

You know, if I were a cynical person (I am), I would almost suspect that people who want everyone to follow them to war against a broad, vaguely defined thing don't really want to rigidly define that that thing... because then they would have a harder time directing that mob against whoever the fuck they happen to not like this week.

The authoritarian left plays this trick with the words "hate speech" and "racism". The authoritarian right plays this trick with the word "degeneracy". All of these are symbols which are intended to change their objects according to dictates of the speaker, serving as a perpetual Emmanuel Goldstein in a perpetual Fifteen Minutes of Hate.

I don't know whether you are trying to dispense this particular blue pill, or are actually just getting high on your own supply, but this is the place for men to learn to weaponize language to their own advantage... not the place for them to attempt to do that to each other.

No fighting in the War Room.

Do people actually see the red pill as an ideology?

1 upvotes · 7 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

If you guys want to keep pretending this shit isn't political

To a certain extent we are, because regardless of whether we take an interest in politics, politics takes an interest in us. This does not, however, mean that we have to go on a great crusade, or be someone's personal army.

then TRP is going to be left behind, as it already is starting to be.

Left behind what? It works precisely as well as it ever did for what it was always for. TRP is no longer controversial or cutting edge in same sense that it was, precisely because it moved the Overton window by being obviously correct and getting shit done.

Ok I've banged 50 women, but I'm not supposed to exclusively date any or get married. That means I really can't have kids (and please spare me the "alternate" route... no upper middle class white women are going to agree to make babies with you without getting married).

Setting aside the fact that a non-trivial number of upper middle class white and asian women have begged me to make babies with them without getting married, so what?

If you have a drive to have children, then you're gonna do whatever you decide to do to scratch that itch. But make no mistake, it's an itch. You're not motivated by some vast altruistic drive to perpetuate the species, or creating personal immortality by assuring the eventual existence of a being that doesn't know your name and shares 1/1024th of your genes.

Some people just want kids.

You wanted to put your dick in women, you put your dick in about 50 of them, now you know how to scratch that itch and you're focused on another one. If you want advice on that, try MRP. If you don't need advice, and you feel like you know enough to forge ahead, okay. It's your show, Jack. Do what you want.

But don't expect help from me, because I can't give it. I don't want bacon golems, and I can't, on some level, understand why you do. So I can no more give you meaningful guidance on the subject than I could write a seduction manual for gay men, or tips for trannies on how to pass as a woman.

Having kids isn't the meaning of life, because there is no meaning of life. Just things that add value to your life. You pick.

Started simping for this girl, quickly realized I was being a beta cuck but i feel like its too late, how should I respond to this message?

1 upvotes · 31 March 2020 · /r/askTRP

Oneitis-like typing detected.

Anthony Cumia — Red Pill rant about "love"

1 upvotes · 29 March 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

"I've given up on the concept of love"

I haven't.

Anyone else miss having a girlfriend? (srs)

1 upvotes · 29 March 2020 · /r/askTRP

I don't miss having a girlfriend. I have two.

So who told you that TRP was about not having a girlfriend?

What the UN is distributing in Africa.

1 upvotes · 26 March 2020 · /r/MensRights

Yeah, pretty much.

There aren't two forces in American politics, there are three:

- "Give bureaucrats all the money and power NOW!"
- "Praise Jesus OR ELSE!"
- "Leave me the fuck alone."

The leave-me-aloneists are the smallest group because understanding how society can work without a central government controlling everything, or how life can be here unless an invisible wizard created it... these both require clear thinking and a triple digit IQ.

So they have no chance of winning any political context by themselves. They have to ally with whichever faction is currently more focused on stopping the other side's authoritarian bullshit, and less focused on inflicting its own.

Currently, the Jesus freaks are less of a threat than the communists.

What the UN is distributing in Africa.

1 upvotes · 26 March 2020 · /r/MensRights

US Christian conservative / Republican

Why do people say these two things together like they're the same thing?

Anger phase not ending with ex

1 upvotes · 25 March 2020 · /r/askTRP

<https://www.nimh.nih.gov/health/topics/borderline-personality-disorder/index.shtml>

Men are hoes, too.

1 upvotes · 22 March 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Nah, it's okay when we do it.

Q4A: If a man and woman switched genders, what is something they would both be most surprised by? What "advantage" that they were expecting would turn out to not be so great after all?

1 upvotes · 22 March 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

A man would be shocked at how unattractive and not sexually stimulating women find the overwhelming majority of men.

Male attractiveness is mostly behavioural. That's why women generally rate photographs of most men using the lower part of the 1-10 scale. Photographs just sit there. They don't do anything.

Doesn't most of the stuff from both sides just seem full of generalities, hypocrisy, and narcissism?

1 upvotes · 22 March 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I have no control over the way things seem to you.

Men: do you really believe that sexual frustration is worth deeply empathizing with?

1 upvotes · 22 March 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why would any man ask women for empathy?

Women have empathy for children. If you don't want a woman to regard you as a manchild, don't ask for empathy. Be strong enough not to need it.

CMV: Most men do subconsciously care about women's status and the amount of money she makes

1 upvotes · 22 March 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Men don't notice women in low tier jobs. And I mean physically. You're like a chair or some other inanimate object.

Logistics, dear. You're on the clock, not meeting them in a social setting. They know they're not getting laid.

Do men who claim that "being a 'pickme' is a good way to get a man" even have any thought for anyone but themselves?

1 upvotes · 22 March 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I never have any thought for anyone but myself under any circumstances.

But of course you have it backwards.

Men get sick more by the coronavirus, wamen most affected

1 upvotes · 15 March 2020 · /r/MensRights

You're surprised that the party that brought us slavery, Jim Crow, and "separate but equal" wants to racially profile dudes?

Ooookaaay.

Should I message him?

1 upvotes · 11 March 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

You are welcome.

I believe the reason you feel good is that you were anxious and afraid, and you faced your fear, and it wasn't so bad.

It's really okay for you to see something (or someone) you want, and to try and get it. That doesn't mean you always will, but it is both okay for you to want things, and okay for you to reach for them.

You are allowed to go start a conversation with any man you fancy. And while not all of them will be into you, I think you will find that men in general are pretty protective of women's feelings, and most of the rejections you experience will be as gentle as they are able to make them.

Should I message him?

1 upvotes · 11 March 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

Okay, now I have a moment.

You asked a philosophical question, you get a philosophical answer.

participate believing not that it's a democracy but rather that it's a forum for the exchange of ideas and advice based on individual experience, application and interpretation of what's been written by those generally recognized as leaders in the Red Pill movement.

That's precisely what it is up until you said the word "movement". TRP is not a movement. We don't seek to change society, overthrow the social order, not even to return it to that of an earlier time that the tradcons idealize in a sort of Norman Rockwell fashion. Instead, we are here to inform people of things we have observed and figured out, for the sole purpose of helping them navigate and improve their own lives.

And my concern is not around whether the "approved lecture" format you're describing is good, bad or otherwise but simply that it's very different than what might be expected here on Reddit

Indeed. TRP and its associated forums were never designed or intended to be congruent with the overall culture of reddit. In fact, they were intended to be exactly the opposite, in that we created first TRP, and then the other forums, precisely because the kind of discussion we wanted to be able to have was prevented by reddit's overarching culture of "everyone's voice matters, feelings are more important than truth, all communities must have open borders, people should be excluded from a community only if they offend others".

So we created communities where

- A person's voice only matters if they have something useful to say.
- Truth (in the sense of actionable advice that works) is more important than feelings.
- Participation is a privilege, not a right.
- People can be excluded from the community for being net negative contributors.

You might say this sounds like a dictatorship, oligarchy, or autocracy, and you would be right... IF TRP was metaphorically a nation. It's not. No one "lives" here. It's an internet forum, made by some people who control it so that it can stick to its original purpose.

Not only is no one obliged to participate, they are also free to create alternative forums where they can have discourse that is more to their liking. This has actually been tried several times, always with failure as a result.

Why? Because we do what works, and we give people what improves their lives. While it's not impossible that something else would also do that, none of the alternatives suggested thus far have.

Is that an accident? I would say that it is not. The secret sauce in our success is willingness to offend people, say that which is unpopular, and be accused of having ulterior or reprehensible motives. One can either be beholden to empiricism, or to how one's audience reacts, but not both.

Should I message him?

1 upvotes · 10 March 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

If that's what you want. Not messaging him would be an equally valid choice. Whether messaging him or not is a good idea is not the point.

The point I would like you to understand, and I may sound slightly repetitive here, is that whatever you want, you have to take action to make it happen. This attitude of "if it's meant to be, he'll make it happen" is not only incorrect, and not only based on a total failure to understand the first thing about the male mindset, it's not even a strategy.

Because a strategy is something you do to get something you want. Inaction is not a strategy, it's the complete lack of one. So you can actively talk to him, or you can actively decide to pursue other men instead, but being a piece of flotsam on life's currents is not on the table.

Should I message him?

1 upvotes · 10 March 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

This is the reason most women lie to themselves and say "men love the chase" or "men don't like being approached by women". It's their excuse for not risking rejection. Everyone, man, woman, or small furry creature from Alpha Centuari, hates risking rejection, because rejection feels really bad.

These kinds of self-lies were at the core of all those comments I had nuked.

Anyway, a small number of men in this world have trained themselves, through deliberately and repeatedly suffering that pain, to be a lot more immune to it. For those men, the world is their playground, because whatever they want, they can ask a whole bunch of different people for, rapid-fire, until someone says "yes". They don't need to curl into a ball and wait for the pain to go away before trying again.

Am I telling you to become the female version of a player? No. That's a long road, and a hard one, and it doesn't benefit women nearly as much, because women's goal is a good relationship, not a whole smorgasboard of sexual variety.

But what I am telling you is that even if you are the normal sort of person, for whom rejection hurts a lot, it is often worth taking that risk, because if you don't, you never get what you chose for yourself, but only what chance gives you.

So the question is not whether you "should" approach him or not, but whether you really want him or not.

Should I message him?

1 upvotes · 10 March 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Cec8va-bZiU>

What do you do when a girl is withholding sex to secure commitment?

1 upvotes · 9 March 2020 · /r/askTRP

Withhold commitment.

Isn't it extremely sexist and paranoid to consider all men to be violent towards women and compare them to guns?

1 upvotes · 8 March 2020 · /r/MensRights

Somebody doesn't understand the whole concept of statistics.

Statistics tell you what can be expected to happen to 10% of a population... not what is 10% likely to happen to you. These are two totally different things.

Also, defensive gun uses happen at a rate many, many times greater than murders with guns, so he got that wrong, too.

Red Pillers: What argument would you make if you needed to convert a blue piller?

1 upvotes · 19 February 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You can lead a whore to culture, but you can't make her think.

What makes girls like dangerous man?

1 upvotes · 19 February 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

And the good news is that when the jerk turns the violence on the girl which nearly always happens after he has driven everyone else out of his sphere

Regardless of whether I agree or not, what evidence do you have that this "nearly always happens"?

Properly collected statistics?

Some sort of statistics?

Multiple personal experience anecdotes?

One personal experience anecdote?

Hearsay?

It happens a lot in fiction?

A gut feeling?

If a man has an ugly face, can building a muscular body make that much of a difference in improving attraction?

1 upvotes · 12 February 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Between building a muscular body, and not building a muscular body, which do you think works better?

Why do you think feminists enjoy submissive fantasies?

1 upvotes · 12 February 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because they are women.

CMV: Saying that RP explains human nature isn't a good reason to subscribe to TRP.

1 upvotes · 29 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP doesn't attempt to explain human behaviour.

Are TheRedPill and similar movements going to make any difference, or is the rate of people happily married still going to drop and drop every year?

1 upvotes · 29 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP is not a movement.

[Q4ALL] Let's talk about something that TRP and FDS never talk about. Shall we? What do you think about LOVE? Do you believe in it? Are you looking for it? Why is it that FDS never mention it?

1 upvotes · 28 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Not sure if serious...

Q for RP men: What are you getting out of gaming chicks?

1 upvotes · 28 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Do you actually enjoy going out of your way and talking to all these women? Especially since RP men don't think much of the women they're with.

I like cats. But I don't ask them for advice.

Do you dislike having to put on a mask and "game" chicks rather than be your true self, even if it's boring. Is being what other people want you to be something you enjoy?

I don't put on a mask to run game. That would be weird. And, yes, I enjoy being liked by others.

Is there any real reason why you need to have sex with these women?

You don't understand what needs are. Needs are intermediate goals. Needs serve wants. I want to live, therefore I need to eat. I want to be strong, therefore I need to lift weights. I want to spend money, therefore I need to make money.

I don't need to fuck girls. I want to, which is far more important.

Why haven't women evolved to be ok with men's polygyny (sharing an alpha)?

1 upvotes · 28 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No, you won't.

Why haven't women evolved to be ok with men's polygyny (sharing an alpha)?

1 upvotes · 28 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

They have.

What up with fangirls?

1 upvotes · 27 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Girls want a winner.

Men want to win.

Delusions of Grandeur and "Fake it till you Make it."

1 upvotes · 27 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The TRP idea is summed up nicely by Kurt Vonnegut:

"We are what we pretend to be, so we must be careful about what we pretend to be."

CMV: Current divorce laws in the US are generally fair.

1 upvotes · 25 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You know the answer

So you're comfortable with having your gender assumed? Very well.

so grow a pair

There's no need to come at me hissing and spitting. If I had decided to hurt you, you would already know.

and make your point

Thought I already had. But let me make it more obvious.

You're not a man. So you have no idea how men experience their instincts.

If you don't like how men express those instincts, if you feel belittled, then own it. Tell me how you feel. You are, after, the expert on that. But on how men feel, you're not.

So, just tell me you feel patronized, or you're worried about being patronized, or whatever's going on with you, instead of telling me men feel patronizing.

You do not need to convince me that something you don't like is cosmic injustice. Just tell me you don't like it.

CMV: Current divorce laws in the US are generally fair.

1 upvotes · 25 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Men are not and have never been "sympathetic" to women.

Are you a man?

What do you think of the Jesus of Red Pill, Roosh V, disavowing all of his past work and unpublishing his red pill pick up books? Is he forgivable?

1 upvotes · 24 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP doesn't have a Jesus. And I have no idea what Roosh is doing these days.

Q4M: Why do guys care if a woman views them as the safe option?

1 upvotes · 24 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

<https://www.trp.red/p/whisper/914>

So you want all the rewards without any of the effort or risk?

1 upvotes · 24 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So what I did was develop "A", and then teach other men how to develop "A".

What the problem here?

[Q4M] how many of you can honestly say that you would date yourself if you were a woman?

1 upvotes · 24 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Lesbians don't date themselves. They date other women.

The main problems with reddit style TRP philosophy

1 upvotes · 24 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This is a whole bunch of paragraphs to say "it seems to me" over and over again.

Things are not always as they seem.

[Q4M] how many of you can honestly say that you would date yourself if you were a woman?

1 upvotes · 24 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women can date themselves? How does that work?

Laura Doyle's advice vs my therapist's

1 upvotes · 22 January 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

When you bring your man your solution, you are telling him what to do, and cutting off the possibility of any other course of action.

When you bring your man your problem, you are treating him with respect, and opening up the possibility of solutions you might not have even thought of.

Should I drop my education for him?

1 upvotes · 19 January 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

What, they don't have universities in Belgium?

Why do guys not want relationships as much as women?

1 upvotes · 14 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Cec8va-bZiU>

Shaming and ostracization were important tools in curbing our worst sexual impulses and need to be brought back into the mainstream

1 upvotes · 14 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think we can all agree that purely following our natural instincts is not good for this thing called civilization that we have created.

Nope, wrong right out of the gate. Go back to square one.

Boyfriend doesn't understand why I want marriage?

1 upvotes · 5 January 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

You conduct your relationships by ultimatum?

A woman is taken from me again - suicide... how to deal with harsh reality?

1 upvotes · 5 January 2020 · /r/askTRP

So, be gay, then?

Younger than I'm used to.

1 upvotes · 3 January 2020 · /r/askTRP

Are you really going to allow yourself to driven away by fear of what might happen?

Thoughts on weightlifting and maintaining femininity

1 upvotes · 16 December 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Oh, goodness, don't lift weights! You wouldn't want to turn into this ugly troll! Or this hideous man-beast! Or whatever this is.

Top toxic Female Dating Strategist inadvertently explains how they lose their pair bonding ability after riding the carousel.

1 upvotes · 27 November 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

I don't care about those individual comments.

I'm talking about the group as a whole. I looked at it once, out of curiosity. It's transparently an attempt to make "TRP for girls", as if such a thing didn't already exist.

Sort of a "Look, we'll be ruthless and hard-edged and cynical and say mean things about men, just like you do about women! Mwahahahahah! We shall bathe in your tears!"

To which the only response can be "Okay, have fun getting pumped and dumped by men you are schooling yourselves to resent."

Don't fall for "natural".

1 upvotes · 26 November 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Ah, the old shibboleth of the weak and lazy...

"Ah-hah! You're doing something to improve yourself! You must be insecure. I, on the other hand, am so secure in my current condition that I don't need to validate myself by being in shape, having a job, taking care of my appearance, learning new skills, accomplishing anything noteworthy, attracting desirable sexual partners, having close and loving relationships, or anything else that requires effort!"

"I am free! Free to sit on the couch watching daytime television, eating salty snacks, and making snarky reddit comments on my phone. Don't you envy me?"

Well, frankly, no.

If the modern notion of security is a state of lotophagic contentment where the drive to self-improvement is not only considered worthless, but actually a character flaw, then I will treasure the insecurity that drives me to better things.

And I recommend you try it. Stop looking at stuff that makes you upset. Exchange the bitter validation of self-righteous outrage and go outside. Get some sunlight on your face. Run into another human being and have a conversation that doesn't involve how unjust and horrible the world is, how evil men are, or how badly you are oppressed. You just might have a good day for once.

Who is the better woman in this scenario?

1 upvotes · 21 November 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Better at what?

The redpill is NOT about women

1 upvotes · 15 November 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Glad to be of help.

Something that dawned on me a while back is that someone doesn't have to be smarter than me, or know something I don't, in order to teach me something valuable. I can learn from the wise by emulating their wisdom, but I can also learn from the foolish by avoiding their mistakes.

The sort of verbal fencing that this young fool attempted to engage me in is precisely the sort of thing that I teach to young men to engage in for the purpose of attracting women... shit test comebacks, that sort of thing. But he has, by his mistakes, effectively taught the lesson that there is a hazard to engaging in this process too automatically, too mindlessly.

We would do well to beware of becoming "shit test automatons", engaging in this sort of fencing match when some other response would be appropriate. Examples would be, say, in an online situation like this one, when we have nothing to gain, or when what a woman has given us is not a simple shit test to check our poise, but the sort of gross disrespect that tells us we would be better off rejecting her.

Just because we can think of a really snappy comeback doesn't mean that it should be our next response.

You Guys Don't Really Want Divorce To Be Illegal Do You?

1 upvotes · 13 November 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't know how common the sentiment is

It isn't.

So... is this an actual common belief from the reddit manosphere, or just a few vocal outliers?

We don't care about divorce at all, because we don't get married.

TRP boys are delusional collectivists arguably worse than SJWs

1 upvotes · 13 November 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

For most TRPers this never pans out. Some fake enough confidence to pull the occasional tinder girl, but it doesn't lead to anything substantial.

Hehehheheheehhheh.

The redpill is NOT about women

1 upvotes · 13 November 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Here's your sign.

TRP Men after break-up go back to spinning plates, what should I, as a woman, do?

1 upvotes · 8 November 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

That's because it's the general practice of our culture. TRP is, of course, an attempt to get at "what are basic human mating instincts?", so if we are thinking correctly, then our observations should apply to all cultures, but when those observations turn into advice, then we calibrate that advice for where we are.

And yes, I diverge from those norms in my own life. Why? Because I can.

My advice isn't "how to be like me" or "how to be like my girlfriends". It's "how to leverage what I know to get what you want".

EX is telling my friends I like butt plugs shoved up my ass

1 upvotes · 6 November 2019 · /r/askTRP

Gonna have to learn how to convincingly laugh stuff off.

In the future, don't date trashy women.

Who in this sub would really like to go back to the time when women couldn't support themselves and were second class citizens?

1 upvotes · 6 November 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Western women are not, were not, and have never been second-class citizens.

'An Essay for Women,' by Rollo Tomassi

1 upvotes · 4 November 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Oh, absolutely.

Although the way I said it didn't make that totally clear. In fact, now that you raise the question, here's how I'd put it:

There are two kinds of trust. There's trust in intentions (is what you say chosen with my needs in mind?) and trust in competence (is what you say going to be good for me?).

Men will listen to you and decide whether to extend either kind or both.

Women must have the first kind before they will even listen to you, and both before they will obey.

What do you consider a female equivalent to beta buxx?

1 upvotes · 4 November 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Look, I realize that marriage is important to you personally, and signing that paper is a symbol of commitment that's meaningful to you.

But don't confuse the map with the territory.

If you interpret the word "commitment" to mean, not "degree of motivation to stick to one's choice", but to mean "the act of binding oneself so that one no longer has a choice", then there is no such thing in our society. We pride ourselves, as a culture, on giving people freedom. Divorce, while it can have a financial cost for men, has no social stigma whatsoever attached to it, and is axiomatically no more emotionally traumatic than a breakup without a piece of paper would be.

So, yes, it's meaningless to argue about what the definition of a word "is". Words are noises we make with our ape-mouths. We can mean whatever we decide to by them.

But it is meaningful to argue about which definition of a word is most useful. That is why, when I say "commitment", I mean the internal state of emotional investment in a relationship. Because is it that, and not any sort of legal paperwork or potential monetary loss, which keeps relationships going.

A man being willing to marry may to be a symptom of that feeling. (Or of desperation. Or of stupidity.)

But that makes the symbol, not the thing itself. Beware of symbol/object confusion. The map, as I said, is not the territory.

Women being hypergamous ensures sexual attraction and loyalty, so why are so many men against it?

1 upvotes · 4 November 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I guess you are indirectly saying women should be punished.

You don't have to guess at what I am saying. If you don't understand, you are welcome to ask.

Women being hypergamous ensures sexual attraction and loyalty, so why are so many men against it?

1 upvotes · 4 November 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

When did I ever say it was a bad thing?

CMV: Tradcons don't care about "society", and any societal changes they advocate for are only to serve their self-interest

1 upvotes · 4 November 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No.

Tradcons have no idea what their self-interest is. They're just closet submissives who loooooove the idea of a big supernatural Master who takes care of them, with a lot of rules so they know what to do, and a big paddle to spank them if they are naughty.

Is that a group for unicorns?

1 upvotes · 27 October 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

RPW is not a dating app. GTFO.

LTR lied about fucking a guy in the past. Broke up with her. Did I do the right thing?

1 upvotes · 26 October 2019 · /r/askTRP

Interesting bit to be provoked by. After all the stuff about women, what bothered you was criticizing previous generations of men?

LTR lied about fucking a guy in the past. Broke up with her. Did I do the right thing?

1 upvotes · 25 October 2019 · /r/askTRP

Yeah, clearly it's impossible.

LTR of 3.5 Years that "loved" me to death cheated this weekend. Why and how to pursue?

1 upvotes · 22 October 2019 · /r/askTRP

User name does not check out.

Rules for dating my daughter

1 upvotes · 20 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I believe the term you are looking for is "Noodle Incident".

TRP talk about fertility when they aren't interested in being parents

1 upvotes · 20 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why the obsession with fertile women

What obsession? Who have you been talking to?

All of the positive effects of TRP are just riding on the coattails of improving physical looks. This supports both the Black and Blue pills.

1 upvotes · 20 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The issue here is that there is no way to tell if the claimed success came from the better looks or from the implementation of behavioral practices.

Yes, there is.

Actually try it, instead of talking about it on the internet.

Question for red pillers, do you hate "degeneracy"

1 upvotes · 20 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Who's "we"? Do you have a mouse in your pocket?

Question for red pillers, do you hate "degeneracy"

1 upvotes · 20 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Define "degeneracy".

What's the best way for society to solve sex gap?

1 upvotes · 20 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why would it want to do that?

If a tall woman can't get into a relationship, it's not because of her height it's because of her insecurity

1 upvotes · 20 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Insecurity is only unattractive in men.

How do you guys feel about the isreal / palastine issue ?

1 upvotes · 20 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

One of the worst things a global power can do is choose sides in a regional conflict for sentimental reasons.

If you're a dude into Femdom you're fucked.

1 upvotes · 20 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

i'm a (mostly) straight woman but i would def go gay for money/power.

"Mostly"?

White dudes have white privilege when it comes to dating

1 upvotes · 20 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If this were true, so what?

Are you going to spend all your life fussing about what other people have, or are you going to improve your game and get some for yourself?

RAGE THREAD

1 upvotes · 20 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Use a pot, you heretic.

RAGE THREAD

1 upvotes · 20 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Sometimes when I try to open a drawer, something gets pushed up on the inside and wedges it shut.

I hate that.

Is this female entitlement? Why does this 30+ woman thinks men should pursue her?

1 upvotes · 20 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Should just means "I want".

And of course women over 30 want men to pursue them. So do women under 30.

Women and Incels Agree: Game Doesn't Work

1 upvotes · 20 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Heterosexual women and incels think that game doesn't work.

Heterosexual women and incels are two groups that have no experience seducing women.

What do you want?

1 upvotes · 19 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Every dog owner wishes their dog could talk.

After about five minutes, they would wish their dog could shut up.

What do you want?

1 upvotes · 18 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=NTOAGuNtgwg>

What do you want?

1 upvotes · 18 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

A sandwich.

About to leave my husband for the new man

1 upvotes · 17 October 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

<https://i.imgur.com/B4yLl0l.jpg>

At what age should women stop having sex?

1 upvotes · 17 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Should". The word. It just means "I want".

So your title means "At what age do you want women to stop having sex?"

At what age should women stop having sex?

1 upvotes · 17 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Should" means "I want".

LTR lied about fucking a guy in the past. Broke up with her. Did I do the right thing?

1 upvotes · 15 October 2019 · /r/askTRP

Perhaps one problem with the founders of Reddit TRP is that you haven't separated women's behaviour outside the bedroom from that inside the bedroom

We also haven't separated their behaviour in Kentucky from their behaviour in Arizona. What's your point?

Also, empowered women are a blessing to attractive men.

If you mean that an abundance of sluts is good for players, then yes. But what on earth does voting have to do with empowerment?

Men's life being fucked is more the fault of other men than women.

Did you not get done reading a whole comment where I repeatedly emphasized the point that nothing is women's fault?

Nothing can be women's fault because they have no agency. They are whatever men make of them.

women are as capable of

I don't care what women could theoretically do. I care what they will actually do.

How to politely tell him I'd like to drive myself?

1 upvotes · 14 October 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Correcting some misinformation here:

Playing hard to get does not give you bonus anything. It is not even faintly attractive to men. It is attractive to women.

Women often think that because it is attractive to them, it is generally attractive, so it will be attractive to men as well. Nope.

This is not to say it is always a bad idea. It is great for getting rid of men you don't want attracted to, testing if a man is attracted enough to let you get away with it, or managing orbiters.

But it will not increase a man's attraction to you.

We really do live in a damn circus

1 upvotes · 14 October 2019 · /r/MensRights

This is the inevitable result of a shell game the left likes to play.

The way it works is that they try to set our attitude about an act with the severest possible examples, then define that act with the broadest possible definition.

LTR and trip to vegas. First red flag in 1.5 years

1 upvotes · 11 October 2019 · /r/askTRP

A lot of things must confuse you. Why would the OP not go where he chooses?

Why would a woman like this not lie about her past?

1 upvotes · 10 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I get what you're going for here, but we can only debate the truth-value of things that HAVE a truth-value.

"Slut" is a word people made up, and it's a characterization rather than a measurable quality. This doesn't mean it's not a useful construct, but it does mean that it's fruitless to argue about whether someone is or is not a slut... because this does not have a truth-value in the classical sense of the word.

But here's where we get into philosophy... and feel free to tap out if you're bored... what does the word "truth" mean?

When asked that question, people tend to fumble around with words like "is", and "actual", and "underlying", and other stuff that just kinda means "true", and so that doesn't really tell us anything.

But try this definition on for size: a statement is "true" to the extent that it has predictive power. In other words, a idea is "true" if it helps predict the future, and the more it helps us predict, the truer it is.

This not only gives us a more concrete definition, but it explains why we care what the truth is... because it lets us what will happen if we do this thing or that thing, which in turn empowers us, by allowing us to select outcomes when we select actions.

Under this model of thinking about things, every characterization is a prediction. And the description "slut" means "compared to an average of randomly selected women who aren't described by the term 'slut', the time before she will switch sexual partners again is significantly shorter".

This allows us to consider more than just raw partner count, but also to weigh circumstances under which she switched partners, weigh recent behaviour more heavily than behaviour in the distant past, etc. It's kind of like a credit history, which gives more detail than a credit score.

But "slut" doesn't simply indicate whether a woman can reform, it also tells us something about the odds of whether she will.

All of this feeds into TRP's advice about sluts, which is "don't invest in them". (Sex, for men, is not an investment.) And this all makes some kind of sense from that perspective.

But arguing about whether someone is "truly" a slut is like arguing about whether horsies are pretty.

Why would a woman like this not lie about her past?

1 upvotes · 10 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The question is not whether she can. She can do a great many things, including eat cockroaches, learn to juggle, make someone a sandwich, paint herself green, etc, etc, etc.

The question is whether she will.

Most won't. My explanation for this is that a sexual history full of rapid partners switches (this is what a high N count really means) is not so much a cause of low relationship value as a trailing indicator of it. In other words, women don't become unsuitable because they had 10 partners by the time they hit age 21... they hit those numbers because they were unsuitable.

A woman with a high N count didn't get there because she got to sex quickly. She got there because she moved on quickly, either because she was dumped or rejected, or because she declined to form a relationship in the first place.

A slut isn't a slut because she's easy to get, but because she's easy to forget.

This explains how and why sluts are unsuitable for relationships... or, rather, it unasks the question. A slut is by definition unsuitable for relationships because that's what makes her a slut in the first place... none of the men she sexed up kept her around, so odds are you won't, either.

And that's true whether it's because she wouldn't stay, or whether the men in question wouldn't let her stay. Either way, it's not a good idea to invest resource, tangible or intangible, in her, because she didn't last long before, and past behaviour is the best predictor of future behaviour.

Of course it's theoretically possible for people to have an awakening, undergo a sea change, and behave completely differently than they did in the past. But that's long odds, and therefore not a smart investment. There are plenty of women out there, why select one that comes with extra risk?

Wouldn't you just end up with dead-beadrooms, if you force women into relationships with unattractive men

1 upvotes · 9 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Well, we have collectively decided that it's very important to let women play career. One in about twenty of them can actually do math, and that's enough for the others to hide behind.

Point is, if women are strong independent superbeings who can do no wrong, then abolishing welfare would not "force" them to do anything except to keep being awesome.

But everyone knows that's bullshit. And OP admits as much when he concedes that abolishing welfare would make women marry betas, instead of learning to do math and getting a real job.

Of course, OP is right. Women who marry betas still don't respect them or treat them nice. That why tradcon rules suck, and why the boomer men, in their youth, were willing to dismantle the whole system for the largely unfulfilled promise of a bit of hairy free-love snatch.

The system sucked. That's why I'm all for economic independence for women, if they can get their shit together and manage it. Because I don't wanna bankroll women. I wanna keep getting my dick sucked for free. I don't give a shit if this leaves betas out in the cold.

Especially since their sexual woes come from basic human instinct, not economics.

Do you believe that people should "fix themselves" for a relationship or otherwise just keep finding people who simply matches and/or tolerates them?

1 upvotes · 9 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

People who believe in self-improvement end up with people who believe in self-improvement. People who want to be accepted as they are end up with people who want to be accepted as they are.

Who do you want to end up with?

Is choosing a ___pill ideology a good thing? Or is it better not to?

1 upvotes · 9 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

<https://yourlogicalfallacyis.com/middle-ground>

Q4 RP Men: What does a gorgeous perfect virginal young woman get out of dating and fucking only you if you're against marriage and will leave her for someone younger when she hits her "wall"?

1 upvotes · 9 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I guess you could ask to see the "pros and cons" spreadsheet that they made. This is what girls typically do before dating someone.

Let's "Steel-Man" Both Positions

1 upvotes · 8 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Child prodigies are deficient in patience.

It's not that you're lazy. You don't hate hard work... but you don't understand the application of hard work and time to a learning task, because you are used to being instantly good at everything via mere application of brain power.

Well, there are no literary prodigies. Analysis of graceful and expressive language can be done with sheer talent, but synthesis of it requires practice.

Write more. Read more. Be patient with yourself. Your unique style and voice will emerge.

CMV: There Is Possibly No Greater Red Flag For A Woman In This Age Than A Man Obsessed With N-Count, Or Her Being A Virgin

1 upvotes · 8 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Okay, so when you say "red flag for women", you don't actually mean "I am saying this leads to bad relationship outcomes, and I know it".

You mean "the way this is explained doesn't agree with my perception of how the people explaining seem to feel... and that makes me uncomfortable about their motives".

Now, this doesn't mean these guys are bad relationship prospects, or that it would matter if they were. BUT, if you like, we can certainly talk about the second paraphrasing instead.

The thing to understand is that finding wilder sexual histories unappealing for commitment is instinctive. And instincts always exist for reasons, but do not come prepackaged with explanations. So people try to reverse-engineer their own instincts... and sometimes they come up with spurious stuff, and other times they are correct. But even when they are correct, their explanations are much more cold and calculating than their behaviour. Because the reason for the behaviour is the instinct; the explanation is the reason for the instinct, not the reason for the behaviour.

Example: I don't eat to survive, I eat because I am hungry. But I am evolved to get hungry so that I will eat enough to survive.

So, why do men care about sexual history? They have an instinct. That's the true (and really unsatisfying) answer.

If we want a satisfying answer, we have to ask the next question: why do they have this instinct?

Well, a giant clue is that men ONLY exhibit this behaviour when they consider committing resources or time to continued contact with a woman. In other words, investment. No man gets jealous over the town bicycle. He only gets jealous if he finds out his girlfriend WAS the town bicycle... after he already promoted her to girlfriend.

Can you take a guess as to what that might tell us?

CMV: There Is Possibly No Greater Red Flag For A Woman In This Age Than A Man Obsessed With N-Count, Or Her Being A Virgin

1 upvotes · 7 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It doesn't matter how they appear to you.

What matters is whether you are correct or incorrect in your prediction that pursuing a man who cares about sexual history will lead to a less fulfilling relationship than pursuing one who doesn't.

I am unconvinced not merely because the links you make from A to B are sketchy, but because they don't even really lead from A to B.

You merely say "I think that they think of all women, in this way" and "I think that would kinda lead to bad outcomes, ah... somehow". You haven't told me anything about the mechanism whereby this is supposed to happen, or even given me any concrete indication that you've thought about it.

I'm not even trying to disagree with you, because your argument hasn't advanced to the state where it can be disputed. You are, in the words of Wolfgang Pauli, "not even wrong".

So what I'm trying to do here is develop your critical thinking skills. But you keep responding with comments about some other dude somewhere sounds like a sociopath. I don't care. That's not part of this conversation. Please try to keep your eye on the ball.

CMV: There Is Possibly No Greater Red Flag For A Woman In This Age Than A Man Obsessed With N-Count, Or Her Being A Virgin

1 upvotes · 7 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

All I see in this response is:

- I've proven this. Won't tell you any details. Just take my word for it.
- I want you believe something, but please take the burden of proof off my shoulders and prove a negative.
- A lot of irrelevant characterizations of comments not in this chain, and of the people who wrote them.

If you can't focus on the subject at hand, I don't think you're going to successfully convince me of anything.

CMV: There Is Possibly No Greater Red Flag For A Woman In This Age Than A Man Obsessed With N-Count, Or Her Being A Virgin

1 upvotes · 7 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I've said that my point is that the guys who are the most adamant proponents of that argument usually/typically don't really view women as people first and foremost.

That is your reasoning about their thought process. You are trying to logic out how they will act from what you think they think.

Logic is a fine thing, but it's also dangerous. Its conclusions are only as good as its premises. It is inferior to empiricism, because empiricism discovers truth, while logic only preserves it.

This is why TRP gets to make intuitive leaps, while PPD doesn't... because TRP is empirical. Its participants go out and test the conclusions they have reached by trying to use them in their own sexual strategies. If one of those intuitive leaps was wrong, they'll know. But if you just sit and reason, like PPD does, and you have no way of testing, then intuitive leaps are too dangerous to make.

You jump several times here, to conclusions you don't intend to test, and indeed have no way of testing. No one need take the effort to argue to you that your conclusions are bullshit, because it is sufficient to point out that your argument isn't rigorous.

Now, as I said, TRP is full of stuff that isn't rigorous either... the key difference, however, is that none of those are arguments. They are hypotheses. For testing. Anyone who isn't trying to use the material isn't getting the full tutorial experience, and isn't going to learn, and isn't going to be convinced.

This, incidentally, is why red pillers in PPD appear so stubborn. You can't reason someone out of a belief they have personally tested and experienced the effectiveness of.

Q4ALL- What do you think is your biggest red flag to prospective partners?

1 upvotes · 7 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The cat ladies thing isn't necessarily diagnostic. I am quite fond of them myself, but that doesn't prevent me from noticing that mentally ill women tend to break out in chronic cats, or that there is such a thing as "too many".

Q4ALL- What do you think is your biggest red flag to prospective partners?

1 upvotes · 7 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Maybe they just don't like dogs.

CMV: There Is Possibly No Greater Red Flag For A Woman In This Age Than A Man Obsessed With N-Count, Or Her Being A Virgin

1 upvotes · 7 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Your point cannot be refuted, because you don't have one.

You've just characterized his reaction.

You haven't pointed out what the consequences to her will be of dating a man who tolerates sluttiness vs. one who doesn't.

A red flag is a metaphor for an indication that dating someone will have negative consequences for you. Unless you can say what those consequences will be, and demonstrate that they will happen, you haven't really said anything.

Thoughts on r/theredpill closing?

1 upvotes · 7 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Thank you.

The point I was making there was not "I am done with reddit, goodbye" (although I would be and will be the moment I am no longer able to effectively say what I want to say).

The point was "I'm not doing this to reach an audience with maximum effectiveness and *change the world*TM. I'm doing this because the process itself is satisfying."

I like to think about stuff, test it, write it down, see how it resonates with others. And I can do that anywhere that I can write a thing down and others can read it. Reddit isn't a necessary part of that process, it's just the most convenient option until it isn't. When you look at it that way, reddit administration really doesn't have a lot of power over any of us. Because the only thing reddit has to offer is a bunch of other people to talk to, and that's hardly an exclusive product.

It's just a matter of when does the convenience offered by the reddit platform get outweighed by the interference offered by the reddit admin team.

The quarantine didn't annoy me at all, because I still had people to talk to. The only ones it weeded out were those too stupid to figure out how to opt-in, or too disinterested to bother. An outright ban would simply mean changing venues. I already have column space on <http://trp.red>, and there are other internet forums out there.

6 years trying to change and be submissive and nothing turns out. I need help.....

1 upvotes · 5 October 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Quack!

What should men's strategy be with women, once they are fully red pillled and aware of female sexual strategy?

1 upvotes · 5 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

More help resistant complaining.

Why do you care what he gets, and why? This is about what you get. Are you satisfied with what you get? If not, step up your game.

Are PUA's really that Red-Pilled?

1 upvotes · 4 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

But TRP didn't originally start as having anything to do with PUA. It was anti-feminism.

I just love it when someone who wasn't there tells me what I did when I was. In other words, quit spewing bullshit.

TRP was an offshoot of /r/seduction, founded because "seddit" had been shamed into watering down the message. We started out as PUA group... same tactics, same theories, same models, same ideas. But we evolved over time while they stagnated.

The biggest difference between PUA material and TRP now is that PUA material is about what to say and do in the moment, while TRP has a much greater (although not exclusive) focus on how to evolve into the sort of man women want to have sex with.

(CMV) You can't judge a woman by how she has acted with other men

1 upvotes · 2 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So you mean "shouldn't" as a hypothetical imperative.

That depends on what my goal is, doesn't it?

Thoughts on r/theredpill closing?

1 upvotes · 2 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm guessing you're not in a laughing mood right now. You were just so childishly gleeful when you thought you were going to get your way.

I prefer, and recommend, a more stoic approach. TRP was fun to build, but when the waves knock down your sandcastle, you build a different one. That's part of the fun. Sand castles are for building, not just for having. <http://trp.red> might end up being the next project even though we're not banned here (yet). Right now it's very much a work in progress.

What you learned always stays with you (barring death or Alzheimer's), so if you prize that instead of the things you build or acquire along the way, it's really difficult for anyone to take your joy away.

I wonder if you have learned anything that you prize, from your time here... or if you simply sat around being bitter that someone had built something you didn't like.

Ultimately, arguments are won by building things. Those who don't like TRP have always been more than welcome to build a better alternative, which would draw people down a different path. So far, no takers.

And this was the point I was making about reddit. Ultimately, reddit doesn't build anything. It simply provided hosting services to those who did. And while facilitation is a useful contribution, it ceases to be so if it ceases to facilitate. It occurs to me that reddit could reinvent itself as a paid hosting service for those who wished to run something like reddit or a subreddit... and monetizing those, in turn, would become their customers' problem, not theirs.

Ultimately, most of TRP's writers do what we do not in the desire to change the world, or even help other men, so much as for the sheer pleasure of speculating about an interesting thing, and of seeing our speculation shown to be correct by concrete results.

Should /r/TheRedPill be banned? Looks like Reddit admin think so...

1 upvotes · 1 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Reddit has no idea what's good for their brand. They aren't on the black and never have been.

Women are not less empathetic and more solipsistic than men. Research shows that women are generally more empathetic, nicer and more generous than men

1 upvotes · 30 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Please provide a clear, objective, and unambiguous set of criteria for deciding if an observed act is altruistic or not.

Women are not less empathetic and more solipsistic than men. Research shows that women are generally more empathetic, nicer and more generous than men

1 upvotes · 30 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Research of this type is useless, because looking for altruism first requires the researcher to define altruism, and to construct a specific example of it which can be tested.

I can do this in such a way that women are more likely to show it, or in such a way that men are more likely to show it.

So can researchers.

Video games are low-status because of their amazing cost effectiveness.

1 upvotes · 30 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Tabletop roleplaying games are only ever as good as the people playing them. And the unfortunate thing about nerds is that 5% of them are the best people humanity has to offer... and the other 95% are socially obnoxious clods.

So most tabletop RPGs end up being the sort of story that socially obnoxious clods want to tell.

How come the more successful men don't seem to care about women's n count that much?

1 upvotes · 30 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Define successful.

Do you mean financially successful? Or successful with women?

Because these are two very different things.

Traditionalist societies were not more red pill, they were less.

1 upvotes · 30 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The great game has always been with us. Anyone who says otherwise is either blind to it, or simply making a move.

Video games are low-status because of their amazing cost effectiveness.

1 upvotes · 30 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I disagree. Video games are low-status for the same reason role-playing games are.

For most players, they are power fantasies. And who do power fantasies appeal to? Those who lack power in their own actual lives. This is why low-status losers like video games.

However, as computers increase in power, video games begin to have the option to appeal to other urges as well, such as the human urge to explore (which became available once environments could look different and be new and exciting), or the human love of stories (which became available once a game could contain enough data to tell a compelling story).

Other examples might include the satisfaction of mastering a skill, or the satisfaction of interacting with (or competing with) others.

So once a sufficient number of players, who aren't losers in life, come to video games seeking something other than a temporary escape from a failed existence... then video games will gradually shed this stigma. It's already starting to happen.

Organising / Scheduling

1 upvotes · 26 September 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Is that why you are filling up my calendar with stuff?

I keep getting phone reminders for things I've never heard of.

What is wrong with you?

1 upvotes · 18 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I crack my eggs on the small end.

Why are some manosphere men so bitter that women have sex with men they are attracted to?

1 upvotes · 17 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Incels are by definition men who blame women for their lack of a sex life... because those who blame themselves instead don't stay incels for long.

Why is it bad for a woman to "find herself"?

1 upvotes · 17 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why is that women who need to find themselves always look in strangers' beds?

Why is it bad for a woman to "find herself"?

1 upvotes · 17 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

as if becoming a married mother at the age of 20 is a good idea.

Gonna need to back that up with something other than ipse dixit.

Agreeing to a polygamous marriage with a high value man is a viable strategy for certain exceptionally submissive/agreeable women

1 upvotes · 17 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Calling women "losers" isn't going to gain your argument the sort of traction you appear to think it will.

That's because women don't want to win... they want a winner. And at every level of the game, polygyny allows women access to a better grade of man than they could otherwise have.

Those who lose the most from polygyny are the low-tier men. Because if humans were a monogamous species, they would wind up with low tier women.

Since humans are not, they tend to wind up alone.

Q2Women: would you agree with legalizing and culturally normalizing prostitution?

1 upvotes · 17 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Male pantsfeels always come first I suppose.

Yeah, pretty much.

Turns out that species where they didn't weren't all that successful.

Straight women are the group LEAST likely to get an orgasm. Straight men are the group MOST likely to get an orgasm. Implications?

1 upvotes · 17 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Male orgasm is required for the survival of the human species. Female orgasm is not.

Aww don't get butthurt

1 upvotes · 6 September 2019 · /r/askTRP

And it matters how he looks to girls he's not going to see again because...?

I can't respect women. Am I a misogynist?

1 upvotes · 5 September 2019 · /r/askTRP

Who cares?

Marcie Bianco: NBC News Columnist Marcie Bianco Suggests 'Heterosexuality' Isn't Working And Men Are Evil

1 upvotes · 26 August 2019 · /r/MensRights

Do keep in mind that the words "conspiracy theory" are a thought-terminating cliché.

Conspiracies do happen. And furthermore, collective and concerted action often takes place without the need for a conspiracy. To argue otherwise would be to admit total unfamiliarity with the concept of an "emergent property".

Furthermore, while you may argue all you like against whatever implications you may read into his words, it is inarguable that universities in the US absolutely are under the thumb of the state:

<https://www.ed.gov/accreditation>

<https://www.nsf.gov/>

Whether they brainwash and deceive the public is a bit harder to pin down, because "deceive" implies falsehood, and there is no final authority on what is true.

But indoctrination is certainly taking place, because many more things than "non-controversial universally accepted facts" are being taught. In fact, the latter scarcely exist at university outside of physics, chemistry, and engineering classes and the like.

Marcie Bianco: NBC News Columnist Marcie Bianco Suggests 'Heterosexuality' Isn't Working And Men Are Evil

1 upvotes · 26 August 2019 · /r/MensRights

The press has gone full communist.

Marcie Bianco: NBC News Columnist Marcie Bianco Suggests 'Heterosexuality' Isn't Working And Men Are Evil

1 upvotes · 26 August 2019 · /r/MensRights

Beware of anyone who attempts to deflect criticism of academia with accusations of being against science, intellectualism, or thought in general.

Very few people are against having an academic caste at all.

But many people have noticed that the one we currently have is total shit at their jobs.

Dear men of Reddit, what did you think of Emily Ratajkowski hairy armpits?

1 upvotes · 19 August 2019 · /r/MensRights

Who?

How to make everything about you and play the victim card for no reason.

1 upvotes · 12 August 2019 · /r/MensRights

So when it hurts women, it's sexist against women because it's hurting them. And when it helps women, it's sexist against women because it's overprotective of them.

And when it helps men, it's sexist against women because it's helping men instead of them. And when it hurts men, it's just the result of their own masculinity and they totally deserve it.

Nothing to see here, move along.

Men are better off getting married with women in their 30s rather than their 20s.

1 upvotes · 7 August 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What exactly is it that you think men want?

I think women should offer a paternity test to the father of their child without being asked.

1 upvotes · 7 August 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No, you silly person. Of course you can do it yourself. I meant you lack any method to motivate other women to do this. You did, after all, say "I think women should...".

It's very easy to say "X group should do this thing that benefits Y group", but if there's no incentive for X group, it's pointless to talk about, because they aren't going to do it.

The only way for this to happen would for men to demand it in solidarity. To demand proof that a child is theirs before shouldering parental responsibility. And getting males to act in solidarity has always been... well, difficult.

Why do Red Pillers fetishize traditional masculinity?

1 upvotes · 7 August 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The concept you are looking for here is called "the tragedy of the commons".

You can look it up, of course, but the key thing to understand is that the "commons" are any good thing, tangible or intangible, which requires effort to produce or preserve, but, having been produced or reserved, the benefit of them cannot be restricted to only those who invested effort.

For anyone who clearly understands this, it's pretty easy to see why the phrase uses the word "tragedy".

Cultures have dealt with this problem with varying degrees of success, and the general approach taken by the most successful ones has been to establish a cultural tradition of rewarding those who contribute to the commons, in other ways. I wrote an article a while back on what it looks like when this process fails.

The tradcons of modern society have zero interest in doling out rewards, tangible or otherwise, to contributory men, and even if they did, they are a spent force, and have no significant social capital to enable access to much of anything to dole out.

Why do Red Pillers fetishize traditional masculinity?

1 upvotes · 7 August 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Blaming? I like my preferences. That's what the word "preference" means, you know.

I think women should offer a paternity test to the father of their child without being asked.

1 upvotes · 7 August 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Should" is just a one word synonym for "I want". It speaks well of you that you want things that benefit only others, but wanting something without a means to make it happen is just so much hot air.

Which, if any, parts of TRP do you consider to be morally wrong or using the wrong tone, yet factually correct or efficient?

1 upvotes · 5 August 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Don't think I ever used the words "smashing through". Some people might have.

This is a lesson I've had to repeat a lot, which is probably where the misinformation comes from. While I recommend a macho presentation and lifestyle, the approach and seduction itself is best done playfully, indifferently, in a much more adaptive fashion.

It's not football, it's jiu-jitsu; when pushed, pull, when pulled, push. Then when she's really into you, it becomes a dance.

Which, if any, parts of TRP do you consider to be morally wrong or using the wrong tone, yet factually correct or efficient?

1 upvotes · 4 August 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Oh, please. Of course it's pretentious. You've read my stuff. You knew what you were in for. And I'm especially prone to arrogance here, of all places.

No discourse, no advice to TRPs, no response other than "if you'd reference [this link] on my blog you can find some answers.

https://old.reddit.com/r/PurplePillDebate/comments/2q51i9/why_ppd_while_sometimes_diverting_is_ultimately/

<https://www.trp.red/p/whisper/878>

Oops, I did it again.

Can women be cuckolds?

1 upvotes · 4 August 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

How do they differ from male cuckolds?

One of the things they frequently enjoy (which male cuckolds don't have) is that the ability to secure other women increases the apparent/perceived value of their man.

A cheating woman is less attractive, a cheating man is more attractive (even if other stuff, like the loss of trust, can still destroy the relationship).

Q4A - when I stopped reading trp I started doing better with women, why is that?

1 upvotes · 4 August 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

https://old.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/8pz9m3/go_out_and_test_it/

Wife Privileges

1 upvotes · 4 August 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

By not dating him.

23 year old r/sex poster no longer wants to engage in casual sex. She now wants to wait "weeks or months" before sleeping with a partner. Would you wait for her knowing the foregoing? Why or why not?

1 upvotes · 3 August 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

One doesn't raise the quality of a product by raising the price.

What a Red Pill Woman is not

1 upvotes · 1 August 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Since you can't be bothered to read the sidebar, try this:

https://www.reddit.com/r/RedPillWomen/comments/80ryqx/submissive_behaviour_as_strategy/

No, I will not read it out loud to you.

So if a plate does some fucked up.. but not fucked up enough for a demotion what should I do?

1 upvotes · 31 July 2019 · /r/askTRP

I said cancer and she jokingly said that's a pussies way out.

<https://i.imgur.com/B4yLlol.jpg>

How does a girlfriend behave differently than a wife in a relationship with a man, and how can a girlfriend be of value to him without giving away too much too soon?

1 upvotes · 30 July 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Exactly. TRP-trained men tend to dump women who deal with them transactionally, not because they alone resent it, but because all men resent it, and they in particular feel that they have the choice not to put up with it.

Some men will comply with women who treat them transactionally, but they will always resent it.

The RPW core strategy is about inspiring reciprocity from men, rather than merely compliance. This often is difficult for women to understand... "I leveraged him, and he complied! It worked!" ... well, no, it didn't. You burned a non-trivial amount of his patience and goodwill to get what you wanted, and you weakened your relationship. The goal was to strengthen it, and you did the opposite in exchange for whatever stack of cookies you wanted right then.

Here's how women can get what they want while strengthening the relationship: \

https://old.reddit.com/r/RedPillWomen/comments/29hx63/fr_i_want_to_go/

https://old.reddit.com/r/RedPillWomen/comments/83rg32/the_art_of_getting_things_without_demanding_them/

The Wrong Girl

1 upvotes · 29 July 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

Both that and the occasional light-bulb moment on the part of one or two of them.

75% percent of comment responses to my articles are some form of whimpering about how I said X or Y. If it's much less than that, I tend to worry that I'm dispensing too much sugar coating and not enough truth, because about 9 in 10 women are allergic to truth or good advice, and can't distinguish between the bearers of bad news, and the authors of it.

There's nothing you can do or say to a woman to make her realize that "good" and "makes me feel good to hear" are not the same thing, and neither are "bad" and "makes me feel bad". Women who don't already know that can only learn it in the school of hard knocks and bad trouble, because if a woman doesn't know that, you can't tell her anything at all.

Giving advice to women is a low-yield process. One has to accept it as such.

Chad, Dylan, and the Myth of "the Bad Man"

1 upvotes · 27 July 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

A lot of this is based on a false premise.

Chad is a born Alpha

No, he isn't. No one is genetically destined to be a winner, because it takes a lot more than good genetics to win. It takes knowing what to do.

The sort of man we describe as "Chad" appears to be a "natural" because his schooling was informal. In order to function in human society, every human being needs to learn a lot of things as a child which are simply not encoded in our DNA in any way, shape, or form. We are a cultural species. "Chad" is a man who appears to be have natural social dominance because he learned it early on from the adults in his life, without ever really have to introspect or think about it.

If Chad is not genetically destined to win, then we cannot assume that losers are genetically destined to lose. And thus, your model of "Dylan" as a genetic loser who has found an alternative strategy fails to convince. We are better off modelling the "Dylans" of this world as socially facile individuals who have found a way to use the weapons of the enemy (feminism) against her.

Both Chad and Dylan, however, have critical weaknesses in their game.

Chad has only Indifference Game, and no Control Game at all.

Dylan has no defense against being called out as an exploiter if it is done loudly and persistently. Since his entire game is based upon the appearance of "goodness", he is vulnerable in the same way that all virtue-signalers are vulnerable; when he is called out, he must defend and plead his case, rather than laugh off the attack or agree and amplify. This places him in a position where his judge and his accuser are the same person.

I love the red pill, mostly the theory. I seriously have my doubts about the guys who represent the manosphere.

1 upvotes · 24 July 2019 · /r/askTRP

That's a bad habit. You might want to look to that.

Does CBD help with relieving anxiety and thus help with game?

1 upvotes · 22 July 2019 · /r/askTRP

What have you already tried?

Is it weird/unladylike to read a book at a bar?

1 upvotes · 11 July 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Weird yes, unladylike no.

This probably a good idea because it offers a conversation starter for people you wish to talk to, and an excuse not to talk to people you don't.

[23/F] I think my boyfriend (19/m) might be cheating, but am i just jumping to conclusions?

1 upvotes · 9 July 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

"Bizarre" is not a kink. It's an opinion about kinks.

I think in order to judge this, we'd need to know exactly what OP is dealing with, here.

Should I insist? Is chasing unattractive?

1 upvotes · 4 July 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

The problem with tradconism as a school of thought for advice is that tradcon isn't a personal strategy at all... it's a system for running an entire society. It requires active cooperation from a massive amount of others, which is to be obtained by rigorous enforcement of certain social rules.

TRP has always been about what a man can do, personally, to save his own butt, not how he can sacrifice himself for the good of society. RPW strategies, while vastly different in nature, must also consist of things a woman can do, unilaterally, to get better results, because the social rules that once looked out for the welfare and safety of women in the sexual marketplace, largely at the expense of men, are now utterly gone.

If you are a single 20 year old girl today, no one is going to slut shame your competitors for putting out... AND no one is going to talk men out of not wanting the town bicycle, either. And complaints that this is not fair are a whine, not a strategy.

What this means is that you can't really play the tradcon game by yourself and expect the results grandma got. The old gal certainly needed some girl game, but largely the rules prevented grandpa from having a "soft harem" of five different rotating "plates", or expecting sex on the second date, no matter how much of a raging testosterone-laden stud he was.

The sexual revolution has unequivocally made things worse in every way for women... which is kind of hilarious dark humor, because the sexual revolution is precisely what not only they, but their mothers and grandmothers, demanded. Be careful what you wish for.

In order to secure the same sort of man that grandpa was, a girl can no longer play the tradcon game, because men who are even moderately attractive don't have to, anymore. Instead, she needs to jump through the fire really quickly, and try to minimize her risk of being burned. I try to focus on how best to do that.

And most of that involves how to keep a man. Because sooner or later, you're gonna have to have sex with someone. And without a tradcon society enforcing tradcon rules, it's going to be before he's made any sort of enforceable promise to you. So the game is now all about how to get a man as emotionally invested as possible beforehand (without him losing interest because you won't put out like the other girls will), and how to get him as emotionally invested as possible after (without him losing interest because sex was the only bait you had).

Sex used to be a weapon in a girl's arsenal, to be used carefully, but to great effect. Now it's a weapon against her, because failing to provide it can get her dumped, but providing it earns her nothing by itself. The modern man cannot be held onto with sex alone. This is the world we live in, and it's why girl game is more critical than ever.

The only good news for women in all of this is that very few of their rivals have any.

Modern Women "I've Had Sex With Well Over 100 Men, but That Does Not Define me as a Slut"

1 upvotes · 26 June 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

What it defines a girl as is semantics. Argue it all day if you like.

But it does mean is that the only men who will be willing to have a relationship with her are the ones with no (or equally bad) other options.

"Slut" is just our convenient word for "girl is not relationship-worthy due to sexual history".

Australian Army cuts fitness test/requirement because women were failing. If men failed, it meant you weren't in the Army anymore. Now women are failing, remove the test.

1 upvotes · 23 June 2019 · /r/MensRights

When exactly did Australia become a bunch of sissies?

Abstinence - Telling Him

1 upvotes · 15 June 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

I am sexually abstinent (waiting till I am married)

Next any man you are able to keep this commitment with.

Marry the man who makes you lose control of yourself and break it.

Long standing friend turns out to be a uber slave mangina

1 upvotes · 9 June 2019 · /r/askTRP

Are you a woman?

Stop trying to be his mother.

One Way Open-Relationship: LTR's Idea

1 upvotes · 7 June 2019 · /r/askTRP

I'm not implying anything, son, I'm saying it.

If your girl cheats then it's your fault

1 upvotes · 5 June 2019 · /r/askTRP

I'm talking about both. Control your women. Reject women who are not amenable to male leadership.

How to tell GF her pussy stinks

1 upvotes · 2 June 2019 · /r/askTRP

"The best way to describe the smell is a fried fish from Burger King"

Seems like you don't have any problem knowing how to tell her... you just have a problem being a man enough to someone something she doesn't want to hear.

I failed! LTR asks for permission to "have a coffee" with a fuckbuddy she used to date before. I didn't react well, how can I save this?

1 upvotes · 29 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

https://old.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/83ah8u/ltr_the_bare_minimum_you_need_to_know/

I failed! LTR asks for permission to "have a coffee" with a fuckbuddy she used to date before. I didn't react well, how can I save this?

1 upvotes · 27 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

Ah, the young idealist who thinks there are women with morals.

Water takes the shape of the container you pour it in, son.

Cohabitation

1 upvotes · 24 May 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Women think things through by talking them through. A great deal of RPW's advice threads will look like waffle to you for that reason. You're never going to get such direct/pragmatic speech/logic on a woman's sub.

Oh my, how interesting.

Do tell me more about how RPW works, please.

Cohabitation

1 upvotes · 24 May 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

As I suspected, you, in short, are looking for a set of instructions or rules.

If so, you have misinterpreted what RPW does. Read the sidebar. It's not a lifestyle, or a set of values, it's a set of techniques and approaches to dealing with men.

So the question you should have asked is not "is this fair" or "what should I do", it's "how do I talk to him about this, and arrive a solution that works for both of us, without starting a fight?"

Cohabitation

1 upvotes · 24 May 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Then why are you still in the relationship?

Are you asking for my permission to dump him? You don't need it. Are you asking me to justify your choice? Not my profession.

What exactly do you want, here?

Do women find it attractive when you are more assertive/bossy?

1 upvotes · 24 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

Yes.

However, they might not find it attractive when you are more assertive or bossy. That depends on you.

Dominance is not the desire to be obeyed or the tendency to demand it. It is the ability to inspire obedience.

Is it true that you can only be happy in a relationship if you're happy while being single?

1 upvotes · 24 May 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

You hear it all the time.

Pretty much anything you hear all the time is going to be nonsense.

"Learn to love yourself before you can love others"; "you'll find love when you're happy being single".

What does this even mean?

If so, how do I, as a 15 year old girl, stop always wanting a boyfriend or husband to spend my life with?

You don't. What you do is choose wisely.

The Worst Thing a Man Can Have is Mental Illness

1 upvotes · 24 May 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Is psychopathy a mental illness? Girls adore psychopaths.

CMV: There isn't any TRP "cool" advice because it's not needed and is actually detrimental

1 upvotes · 24 May 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You are what you are doing. No one can experience who you are "inside". It is your actions that define you.

You, however, appear to be talking about how people dress.

When it comes to kinks, it seems that there are more submissive men than dominant women.

1 upvotes · 24 May 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Self-report data is good for a laugh, I suppose.

Aging isn't as terrible as people make it out to be- there is more to life than looks

1 upvotes · 24 May 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Fl0ahDKR0QU>

How do I respond when people say "girls are just people like everyone else. Just talk to them like you would friends".

1 upvotes · 24 May 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Not because I have nothing to go off of but a way that make the person who said it understand why it's a false way of thinking.

Don't argue with the fractally wrong.

Amusedly Agree And Absurdly Amplify vs Self Deprecation

1 upvotes · 22 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

Sometimes. They socialize a fair amount.

I keep my plates away from both of them, because one doesn't have as much control over plates, and so there can be jealousy stuff.

Amusedly Agree And Absurdly Amplify vs Self Deprecation

1 upvotes · 22 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

When I wrote that article, not really.

Nowdays, yes.

Amusedly Agree And Absurdly Amplify vs Self Deprecation

1 upvotes · 21 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

<https://www.trp.red/p/whisper/772>

Women not being able to take rejection without turning extremely malicious?

1 upvotes · 21 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

When I want to get rid of a girl with minimal fuss, I usually find that convincing her I don't want her doesn't work as well as convincing her that she doesn't want me.

Depending on the situation, I accomplish this by either going beta-like, or coming on waaaay too strong sexually.

CMV: Trying to justify, excuse, explain, or otherwise provide a reason for cheating is worse than cheating itself. The only acceptable explanation, because it is the only truthful one, is "I was weak".

1 upvotes · 19 May 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

My only explanation is "I told you I would".

If there are so many good men, why can't there be good women?

1 upvotes · 15 May 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Russian blues are wonderfully expressive little psychopaths, aren't they?

For that one, it's the face he makes when he realizes someone is fractally wrong.

If there are so many good men, why can't there be good women?

1 upvotes · 14 May 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

<https://i.imgur.com/B4yLlol.jpg>

If there are so many good men, why can't there be good women?

1 upvotes · 14 May 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

RP/Mgtow are so anti marriage supposedly because there are no good women left

Wrong.

There is no such thing as becoming “Alpha”

1 upvotes · 14 May 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Alpha is a metaphor, not a concrete thing.

And rambling about genetics is just an excuse for not lifting.

What happens when you give your girlfriend a second chance after she breaks certain boundaries?

1 upvotes · 14 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

Indeed. All boundaries must have defined consequences, and they must always be imposed, whether it's you not returning phone calls for a day or three, five strokes of the cane, or a hard next.

If she doesn't like the consequences, no one is forcing her to be with you.

why would any man marry any woman he already knows wont do sex things he wants?

1 upvotes · 13 May 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

why would any man marry any woman

Stupidity.

CMV: It's not possible to have a "just for me" slut. Either a woman is into sex or she's not

1 upvotes · 13 May 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You can't make an LL woman into a porn star.

Sure can.

I mean you can but it's a lot of work.

Didn't feel like work.

It's not worth it IMO.

You do you.

Isn't it funner to fuck women who genuinely want to fuck?

It's even funner to fuck women who genuinely want to be fucked by me.

Are men on the autistic spectrum usually seen as undesirable mates by women?

1 upvotes · 13 May 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yes.

I dream about romance and woman tears equal to the ones showed in anime and I think ill never find it in real life. I feel like TRP killed my hope, do you agree?

1 upvotes · 12 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

Item one, your English sucks dog balls. Work on it. Can't seduce bitches with baby talk.

Item two, this material is about influence, not about what you do with that influence. Read this.

"Oooo dominant, I love it" Good thing?

1 upvotes · 12 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

No.

Mother was toxic. Feel I need women to redeem themselves to me, to make me whole.

1 upvotes · 12 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

Your mother isn't your woman, and she isn't supposed to be loyal to you, she is supposed to be protective of you.

And of fucking course she didn't teach you how to be a man. How the fuck could she? Can fish teach birds how to fly?

Your women aren't supposed to love you like your mother loved you. Read this.

Mother was toxic. Feel I need women to redeem themselves to me, to make me whole.

1 upvotes · 12 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

So my mother failed me because I failed her as a man? That actually make sense. She is old school and didn't know what to do with a man who was dependent on her (my 4 year old self)

<https://i.imgur.com/B4yLlol.jpg>

Really. How fun to make young naive girl entering the work force thinking all men are shitty

1 upvotes · 7 May 2019 · /r/MensRights

Aggressive == you write cartoons like this.

Doing it right? Possessiveness?

1 upvotes · 6 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

Yes.

Not getting Iron John

1 upvotes · 6 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

So, I've read Iron John and I have to be honest. I don't get the big deal? I know it's so highly recommended in the TRP community

Quack

Doing it right? Possessiveness?

1 upvotes · 5 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

This is LTR stuff. Quite a bit different from mate guarding plates, which is silly.

Weird feeling inside. I want to dump my GF after she said this to me...

1 upvotes · 4 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

I want to leave him alone now. I want to focus on what I have ahead. I want to leave behind everything that can't help me progress. I want you to help me in everything that can make me better in the future. You are my present and my future right now.

You saw this as a declaration that you are a means to an end. Depending on who she is and how she said it, this could either be just that, or the opposite... a declaration of fealty and submission.

You, however, are very insecure indeed... you're creeping on his social media accounts. Why the fuck do you care if he is a decent person or not?

And why the fuck do you care if she is loyal or a branch swinger? Keep her while she is good to you, discard her if she proves otherwise. Your sexuality does not have a "sell by" date. Enjoy things while they last.

How do I consolidate all of the information on TRP and actually apply it to my life?

1 upvotes · 4 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

Interleave reading with practice.

Can you be too stoic and unreactive?

1 upvotes · 4 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

Sure you can. But your problem isn't "stoic", it's "boring".

Do I wait until I've got my sh*t together?

1 upvotes · 2 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

There are always more women.

Hitting on women is practice, even if your force multipliers are shit.

What is the secret of ugly or broke men that get laid?

1 upvotes · 1 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

Poking you with a sharp stick is intended to get you to straighten your spine, not start poking yourself.

You are not held back by thinking you're ugly. You are held back by fear. These other thoughts are just the excuses the fear makes.

And proving ugly doesn't matter would do nothing for you. The fear would just find another excuse.

Nothing I or anyone else could ever do would ever make this comfortable to start with. Every man starts out afraid.

I was afraid, too, once. Hell, there was no TRP back then. I had to do this myself, and what I learned BECAME TRP.

So be afraid, and do it anyway.

What is the secret of ugly or broke men that get laid?

1 upvotes · 30 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

I'm curled up in bed with one right now.

How Do I Use This Thing?

1 upvotes · 24 April 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

I'm still waiting to hear the story of how you measured.

How Do I Use This Thing?

1 upvotes · 24 April 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

You measured?

Fat obese fuck in my class gets more attention from the females than me. What is going on?

1 upvotes · 23 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

Sperg-like typing detected.

Should I leave my girlfriend?

1 upvotes · 23 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

So what mistake has she made? How has she disrespected you?

How to know which side is telling the truth in an argument?

1 upvotes · 17 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

https://old.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/97f0kh/distrust_that_particular_flavour/

Update: I fucked up.

1 upvotes · 16 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

You don't only next girls when they fucked up. Sometimes you have to next them because you fucked up.

Fix your shit, drink less bacteria piss, and try another girl.

Angry Men

1 upvotes · 15 April 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Women are more likely to be victims of domestic violence.

You're going to have to provide some proof of this if you want to claim it.

Opinions on NoFap?

1 upvotes · 13 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

Would you be surprised to learn that it's the brainchild of a feminist couple?

The Intellectual Yet Idiot

1 upvotes · 13 April 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

Did you really expect to read TRP and not eventually smell the mouthwatering aroma of your particular sacred cow being barbequed?

The lesson here is don't have sacred cows.

Wise men can be my teachers, because I can see their wisdom and emulate it. And fools can be my teachers as well, because I can see their foolishness and avoid it. And then I can realize that every man has elements of both the wise man and the fool, and every man can be my teacher, if only by example rather than design.

If I wanted to sound erudite, I might listen to Barrack Obama for an example of what to do. If I wanted to make wise decisions about leadership with long-term good outcomes, I might look at him as an example of what not to do.

Don't form sentimental attachments to people you don't know. We are all prone to both halo effect and its reverse, but we need not embrace it.

The RP way of dealing with hotheads

1 upvotes · 13 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

https://old.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/3q2yd8/startin_shit/

Question About TRP and RPW!

1 upvotes · 12 April 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

It is a constant source of amazement to me how some women claim to be very threatened and frightened by male anger, but will seek it out in order to complain about it, even in a private and isolated place that men made for other men to be angry in.

In short, neither I nor any of the other owners of TRP is going to scurry off to fetch your fainting couch.

Anger is a necessary stage in shaping the refugees of an anti-male society into men who can survive and prosper in such a place. If you are curious about how this works, voice less complaints and ask more questions.

Can you guys cure my program hopping? Specific books to read instead of wasting time?

1 upvotes · 11 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

Also, I can't fucking stand simple answers. If you're going to say "just stfu and do starting strength cuz I said so cuz I'm claiming I know more than you" That's not going to work for me. I will not listen to that. I need an argument, I need a debate, I need information to be compared and contrasted I just can't help it.

<https://youtu.be/VmXSfFY0CO0?t=280>

Alpha Isn't What People Think it Is

1 upvotes · 6 April 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Alpha" is just a metaphor. Don't fuss over it.

Made my girlfriend sleep at her place

1 upvotes · 6 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

Then she started dancing to the music and twerked to our friend

...

I'm not gonna break up with this girl.

Idiot.

Social media is what destroyed the dating market

1 upvotes · 6 April 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Well I wouldn't call more than 30% male sexlessness as a sign of a healthy market

As compared to what? What was the percentage of male sexlessness in previous generations? You don't know, do you?

It takes two points to determine a line.

When do you guys recommend giving a second chance

1 upvotes · 6 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

If she wants to talk to you, but doesn't want to date you, then what she wants from you is something she can get by just talking to you without having to date you.

I think you can assemble a short list of what sorts of things those might be.

Am I Just Hypergamous?

1 upvotes · 6 April 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

First, let's be sure we know exactly what we are talking about here.

The Power of the Pussy by Kara King

1 upvotes · 6 April 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

I found that line particularly risible, because I drive a Porsche myself, and it doesn't make me one iota more desirable as a mate. In fact, if I thought it did, that would make me a whole lot less desirable.

The word "value" in the phrase "high-value man" means "whatever it is that makes a woman happy to be in a relationship with him".

We can talk about men who are "high-value" in general, because it turns out there's a lot of overlap in women's tastes, but we shouldn't think that a man's value will be exactly the same to all women, because it won't.

OP is biased towards thinking that a man who drives a Porsche is a "high-value" man, because what she has used men in her life for is as a source of income. But she's wrong about that, even in reference to herself, because these men are not a source of happiness for her. Having them around does not make her content and satisfied with her life.

We know that because she kept ending relationships, Porsche notwithstanding.

The goal of RPW tactics isn't "how to control men" or "how to have power over men" or "how to get money from men". It's "how to get happiness from men".

This is why I recommend against "power" strategies in RPW, and for them in TRP. Because having too much power over her mate decreases female happiness.

Is Love Real?

1 upvotes · 6 April 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Define love.

Men are afraid of women: An experiment.

1 upvotes · 6 April 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's not terrible as a thought experiment, but the problem is... you asked.

Self-report data is worthless.

Q4M: Are any of the users here 8/10 or higher (very attractive) ? If so, what is your sex life like?

1 upvotes · 6 April 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Not that I recall. And not from you.

Luckily, in order to give young men advice, you don't actually need my permission. All you need to do is start. And if you give better guidance, they'll gravitate to that.

If you don't want to do that much work, and would rather have me do thing the way you would do them, you need my active participation in this plan. So far you haven't offered me anything for that.

I mean, sure, it's okay if you wanna sit on the sidelines and make peeping noises. You're in the right place for it. But I'm only gonna end up leaving the conversation the moment I get bored.

Q4M: Are any of the users here 8/10 or higher (very attractive) ? If so, what is your sex life like?

1 upvotes · 6 April 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You are welcome to start an alternative discussion group that gives better advice.

Making Marriage a Purely Religious Institution

1 upvotes · 4 April 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Well, they're not going to do anything to fix it besides fuss. And it's not a problem for us.

So is a proposed solution even relevant?

Making Marriage a Purely Religious Institution

1 upvotes · 4 April 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

How is the marriage strike a problem?

Women control 60% of all wealth, but still only earn 88 cents on the dollar -- is this proof of the red pill beta bucks theory?

1 upvotes · 4 April 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Men earn more. Women spend more. And women have a higher average net worth.

A net wealth transfer must be occurring.

Making Marriage a Purely Religious Institution

1 upvotes · 4 April 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Every solution to a perceived problem consists of two parts: "What needs to be done to solve this?", and "How are you going to get people to do it?"

If you only have the first, you have half a solution. The easy half.

So I didn't read the rest.

What to tell girls that know you're in a LTR

1 upvotes · 4 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

Who said he doesn't want a relationship?

Woman who cried rape nine times loses her appeal

1 upvotes · 29 March 2019 · /r/MensRights

Yep.

Obese people are unattractive.

Also, gravity is proportional to mass, the earth is roughly spherical and orbits the sun, eating paint is not good for you, and most cats have four legs.

Is there anything else I can clear up for you?

Big and strong or lean and low body fat?

1 upvotes · 29 March 2019 · /r/askTRP

What are your lift numbers?

Why do girls throw themselves at you when you are cocky?

1 upvotes · 29 March 2019 · /r/askTRP

just not to try to act like some badass about it to strangers on the internet

"OMG, he said something that wasn't humble and self-effacing! Get him!"

Make a greater effort to deprogram yourself.

Age Gap Red Flags

1 upvotes · 28 March 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

"high value men want a younger partner, high value men this and that" it can be confusing.

Because it's not quite accurate. Every man who doesn't have a specific fetish wants a younger partner. It's just that high value men are able to turn this desire into reality.

Since TRP/RPW are about tactical advantage, not moral imperatives, it makes sense to understand everything men want, become that in the areas where you can change (such as fitness and behaviour), and try to compensate for advantages you can't develop because they are not under your control (such as age, race, facial bone structure, etc).

RP only “works” because it says to lift and exercise to get hotter

1 upvotes · 26 March 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

“Women like the opposite sex to be hot and fun”

https://youtu.be/J_ryjjeNc5k?t=7

Breaking up with GF who I still love

1 upvotes · 26 March 2019 · /r/askTRP

An LTR who takes out her stress on you instead of asking for help dealing with it is not a good long-term investment.

How to make a appealing dating profile as a loner?

1 upvotes · 24 March 2019 · /r/askTRP

Someone in a thread I posted earlier said I was misusing “introvert” so to clarify I meant that I spend a lot of time hanging out at home alone or with my roommate and generally avoid going out because of a lack of self confidence.

You're not an introvert, you're a loser.

Introverts don't like noisy environments, prefer one-on-one interactions to large groups, and like having lots of time by themselves.

You are just afraid of the embarrassment you feel when you talk to strangers.

You will never unfuck yourself until you stop looking for the easy way out and do what you need to do.

Is there a female equivalent of wife goggles?

1 upvotes · 23 March 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Women can never just look at a man and judge his looks alone. Context always influences her opinion.

In the same way, men can never judge a woman's personality without being influenced by her appearance.

Why are people mean here?

1 upvotes · 17 March 2019 · /r/askTRP

Because it works.

Becoming okay with caring

1 upvotes · 15 March 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Ah yes, now that you mention it I think I do remember seeing your username somewhere before.

Don't make the mistake of thinking that all the stuff you hear in TRP comments is TRP material. It's a mix of professors lecturing, professors talking to students, and students talking to each other.

The way we run the group (EC tags, heavy-handed moderation, stickying stuff, etc) is essentially our way of working, within the limitations imposed by reddit's software, to make sure some voices are louder than others. TRP isn't, and was never intended to be, a democratic discussion group. It's intended to be meritocratic teaching environment.

So don't take the new guys with all their "never invest in a girl, girls are trash" posturing too seriously if you personally are beyond that stage. This is, of course, the attitude we intend them to have when they are learning to spin plates, because it's the attitude they need to have to counter their old bad habits. So we deliberately instill it.

But the question you have asked is the question students ask when they move beyond using a solid Indifference Game to get laid, and start asking "Is this all there is?"

No, it's not all there is. We have a whole set of tools for moving beyond that, ready for when you are ready to ask.

But don't ask that question here. This is spectator's area. Most of the people here are not applying the material, and don't know shit. They are listening to the lectures, sometimes, but they are not learning because they don't do the homework that goes with it, and they never take the tests. They have nothing to teach you.

[Nsfw] having a serious talk about sex without criticizing?

1 upvotes · 15 March 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Yeah, not nice.

No one requires 45+ minutes to get off unless something is wrong elsewhere. I do know one girl who can get off for 45+ minutes (yeah, you read that right), but I have to use a vibrator, because no part of my body can keep going for that long. Needless to say, this is not an "every time" thing.

Taking 45+ minutes to get there is entirely another matter.

Misogyny Alert: Men's Brains Are Significantly Larger Than Women's Brains

1 upvotes · 15 March 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

Smart only makes good decisions when the smarts and not the feels are in charge of decision making.

Becoming okay with caring

1 upvotes · 14 March 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you haven't read my writing, I can't give you a meaningful response to your criticism of it.

Who is more insecure between men and women? Or is it fairly equal in the grand scheme?

1 upvotes · 14 March 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The male self-image tends to be more robust, but is attacked a lot more and can suffer cumulative damage.

The female ego is a good deal more fragile, but receives a great deal of reinforcement from the environment, which may or may not have the intended effect.

Things I find doubtful in RP

1 upvotes · 14 March 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The same can be said about men.

Possibly. I have no interest in teaching men how to seduce other men, though... so I haven't bothered to find out.

incels do not pursue what they want

I would contend that they do.

Here's what I mean: All this ranting they do about how looks and genetics are everything... why do you suppose they chose that in particular? Why don't they focus on status or money? And why do they focus on facial appearance and not, say, muscularity?

(Hold your nose and read an incel board if you need examples of what I am talking about. I am confident you'll see this right away.)

They focus on facial appearance because it is the one thing they cannot be expected to control.

So what incels are actually working at is convincing themselves it's not their fault. They are spending their greatest effort on managing their own current emotional state. That suggests to me that this is the problem they actually are most urgently concerned about. Not lack of sex, but feeling ashamed of it.

Having a baby is a bigger commitment than marriage

1 upvotes · 14 March 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Duuuh.

Things I find doubtful in RP

1 upvotes · 14 March 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Don't listen what women say, watch what they do.

You can't tell what a woman wants until you see what it is she spends her efforts pursuing. You cannot tell what most women want until you see what it is they spend their efforts pursuing.

If you want to understand women, shut your ears and open your eyes.

Q4RP: Do you enjoy being Red Pill?

1 upvotes · 14 March 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

At the end of the day I'm just exhausted, wondering if all of this is worth it, just to bust in some thots pussy.

It doesn't even feel good, it's just empty. Soulless, boring, empty connections. It does not feel real or worth it.

Phase #4, "Depression".

I can do the RP act just fine, but eventually I get bored and want something authentic, as soon as that happens it's over with. She'll instantly lose interest. What's the point if we're both going to behave like we're incapable of love?

Who said you had to?

Read my articles on control game and how to sustain an LTR.

Q4W: What is the difference between having sex & being used for sex?

1 upvotes · 14 March 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Advice is one way in which you might use this. There are others.

If you chose you use me for advice, that serves as an indicator of what I have made myself useful for.

We generally start living happier and more stress-free lives when we regard other people's reactions to us as an indicator of our actions appear to them, rather than something we are entitled to specify merely by demanding.

On why TRP subreddit often gives a fallacious sense of truth

1 upvotes · 14 March 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

An irrefutable theory has no use and isn't relevant, I'm not saying every redpillers would say what is said in the example, but it is really easy to end up falling in this trap because of the abundance of comments/posts that appear to confirm the theory in all cases.

If you're not testing this stuff in your own life, you haven't even learned the material, much understood it.

PSA: Using personal anecdotes to support your argument is bad

1 upvotes · 14 March 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Bad for who?

What IS the moral problem with 'sluts' and 'thots'?

1 upvotes · 14 March 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Who said there was one?

What is a good man and a good woman?

1 upvotes · 14 March 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

According to red pill principles.

Red pill principles do not include moral imperatives.

Therefore, if a red pill "principle" were to say that a man is "good", it would mean only that he was good for something... like building walls, scoring touchdowns, seducing women, or solving mathematical problems. Whatever.

So, the question cannot be answered until you tell me "good for what?"

Budweiser Women's Day Woke Campaign - Gender Roles for Thee, but Not for Me.

1 upvotes · 13 March 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

Are they going to sap and impurify your precious bodily fluids?

captain marvel actor attacks men

1 upvotes · 10 March 2019 · /r/MensRights

It wont be for women the same way black panther was for the black community though.

A mediocre film with a forgettable villain and non-stop cliché plot that they like anyway because they are dumb enough to fall for pandering?

Addicted to prostitutes. Help please.

1 upvotes · 9 March 2019 · /r/askTRP

I don't understand what the problem is.

We the people demand more quadriplegic firefighters

1 upvotes · 7 March 2019 · /r/MensRights

There's no such thing as a shortage of workers. There are only jobs that have unrealistic ideas about the market price of what they want.

There's also no such thing as a shortage of jobs. There are only workers who are deluded about their market value.

Those who are willing to pay the real price of something, can always buy it, and those willing to sell for the real price of something, can always sell it.

In other words: How much are they offering?

So here's the thing about captain marvel

1 upvotes · 7 March 2019 · /r/MensRights

Stop trying to justify yourself to these idiots. Just laugh at them.

You like what you like, you don't like what you don't. No need to apologize or even explain.

I like my socks fresh out of the dryer, and I hate mint. Got a problem with that? Don't care.

Is this actually a thing? Males having to pay more than females? Is this even legal?

1 upvotes · 7 March 2019 · /r/MensRights

Makes perfect sense. Female customers draw in male customers.

How Women Experience Sex: What Do You Wish Men (As A Whole) Knew?

1 upvotes · 6 March 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Hell, I wish some of you could not squirt on demand. So many towels...

Is there a female equivalent of TRP?

1 upvotes · 4 March 2019 · /r/askTRP

/r/RedPillWomen

I find it so difficult to make a man fall in love with me.....because I can not control my sexual urges.

1 upvotes · 2 March 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Absolutely not.

Men want to believe it's about them. They will do everything they can to interpret it that way. Only when you behave in such a way that they absolutely can't will they grasp that idea and hold it against you.

So, you like sex. You're supposed to like sex, you ninny.

But what you are supposed to do as well is hold a man's interest once you've had sex with him. THAT will stop your n-count from increasing again.

https://old.reddit.com/r/RedPillWomen/comments/1j0n7t/the_slut_and_how_not_to_be_one/

https://old.reddit.com/r/RedPillWomen/comments/1n2nl4/your_partner_count_doesnt_indicate_how_easy_you/

Why do we feel jealousy if it's not evolutionarily beneficial according to TRP?

1 upvotes · 1 March 2019 · /r/askTRP

Hi, welcome to TRP. Read the sidebar.

The Dark Triad-Psychopathy Variable

1 upvotes · 26 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

You're not a psychopath. You're schizophrenic.

Bateman is not a psychopath. He is a fictional character.

Can you realistically mitigate oneitis?

1 upvotes · 25 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

https://old.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/3ip7vv/beating_infatuation_the_most_common_form_of/

Before TRP I could feel myself falling in love and be attracted. Now I'm just not interested

1 upvotes · 25 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

Wait till you've got a freckled cutie swallowing your nut and making you pancakes in her thong.

Correct. You cannot love a woman at first sight.

Don't fantasize about women you aren't banging.

Love is what happens when she earns the privilege of you caring about her happiness.

[CMV] Women like roided/unnatural men. More men are taking steroids because of this.

1 upvotes · 25 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The Mr. Olympia type guys look like freaks after a third world nuclear disaster

Do you mean how they look on stage, or how they look walking around on the street?

Being a slut is advantageous to women in 2019

1 upvotes · 25 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Dating is all about compatibility

Nope.

Am I wrong for not having sex with my GF?

1 upvotes · 25 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

She got fat, didn't she?

One thing posters agreed on in the "sympathy for men" thread is that genetically or socially disadvantaged people are resented by others. Do you think sympathy is largely a myth?

1 upvotes · 23 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Resentment works very simply.

If someone is unpleasant to be around, we find being around them unpleasant. We form a Pavlovian association between their presence and our discomfort, and our frontal cortex seeks for ways to rationalize this...

... and especially to reconcile it with the ridiculous idea that we are rational and fair beings.

Therefore we are almost compelled to conclude that they deserve our disapprobation, and anything annoying about them is their fault.

One of the most difficult cognitive tasks of taking the red pill is abandoning the delusion that one is a wholly rational being, and realizing that we are creatures of instinct which happen to have giant information processors bolted on more or less as an evolutionary afterthought.

Does being rejected by an alpha lead some women to hatred towards men even in a rationalized/ideological way?

1 upvotes · 23 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You seem to be implying that feminism is nothing more than an attempt to flip the table by those who have been dealt a bad hand of cards.

This is really only true of the ones who write books, give lectures, and make careers out suing people.

For most of the others, it's "all the other girls are doing it" or "the cool girls are doing it", or "the smart girls are doing it", or "I would be embarrassed to have people think I'm not empowered".

For some feminism is cause. For others, it is fashion.

Has anything ever made you really question the validity of your viewpoint?

1 upvotes · 23 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No.

The red pill has evolved quite a bit, and continues to do so. It always represents the current ideas of a certain select few people about what's true and effective.

So, have individual ideas proved wrong or ineffective? Yes, all the time. But then we didn't discard the whole business. We refined it.

What is "commitment"?

1 upvotes · 23 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

When I teach women about how to inspire "commitment", an important first step is deprogramming false beliefs about what commitment is.

Commitment is not any of these promises. Because commitment is not a promise at all. Commitment is a desire (this case, on the part of the man) for the relationship to continue, and a willingness to reciprocate the effort she puts into inspiring this desire.

A promise is worthless because anyone can say anything. A contract or agreement is worthless because society no longer enforces them in this context. Only inspiration of desire will influence future behaviour.

The misogyny of the red pill leads men into a hopeless dead end of despair

1 upvotes · 23 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

They are taught that the only value in a woman is her vagina, cause you can't fuck her personality. And the only goal worthwhile is to "spin plates" and never ever commit like a beta male.

Hehehheheheheheheh.

There you go again.

New 40 year old boyfriend is "hearting" quotes about love on a 29 yr olds Facebook

1 upvotes · 23 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm not dumb.

You just asked a debate subreddit for advice.

If a woman writes "I'm tired of fuck boys" or "I want to date men, not boys" on the dating profile it shows their Relationship value.

1 upvotes · 22 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

In general, if someone makes a point of saying that they really really really don't want X, then it's pretty clear they've had a fair amount of X in their lives.

Think about it... technically, I don't want midgets to throw rotten fish at me. But I'm unlikely to bring that up in most cases, because it's never happened and I don't think it will.

So if a girl says she "hates drama", expect her to generate a lot.

Let's talk about actually finding someone right for you.

1 upvotes · 22 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't think testing for the existence and influence of gravity by dropping object from a high place has any value beyond being educational.

All testing is educational, you silly person.

How the red pill's rampant misogyny causes them to completely miss the obvious good advice and stunt their own users growth

1 upvotes · 22 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It works for some men. But I think that those men it works for would have been fine anyway because they try. The misogyny and absolutism leads a lot of other men into stunted growth and despair.

Interesting hypothesis. How do you plan to test it?

Nothing this is just a debate sub to discuss and debate and generally just entertain ourselves.

Fair enough. I tend to confine myself to saying what I think, rather than staying to argue about it, because I'm beginning to think that we live in a post-debate world, and the outcome of an argument no longer matters.

It doesn't find out who is correct. Empirical testing does that.

And it doesn't determine whose ideas will dominate. Other factors determine that as well.

So, for me, the only use to debates is to entertain me, or help me find more pithy, easily understandable ways to express my thoughts to third parties who aren't debating, in the sense that they are seeking not to refute, but to understand (and probably to make more women desire them).

Unfortunately, and I say this without rancour, that's a bar you do have not cleared. Every objection you have to my methods, I've heard before. Many years before, in fact, and many times since. They weren't interesting or convincing then, and they're even less interesting and convincing now.

So, carry on with people who want to argue, I guess.

How the red pill's rampant misogyny causes them to completely miss the obvious good advice and stunt their own users growth

1 upvotes · 22 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think I should be flattered, but I'm also kinda checking my windows for nose-prints.

Seriously, though, what do you think arguing about this will accomplish? I teach men to do this, and it works, in the sense that their lives get happier, and they write me thank you messages.

Which was kinda my goal.

So what exactly is that you want from me? And how exactly do you plan to incentivize that?

If Grievance Studies goes away from the Academy, will TRP start losing more followers?

1 upvotes · 22 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why do I need a lot of followers? I have more people trying to learn from me than I have time to teach.

TRP is not a movement. TRP is not trying to transform society. TRP has no need of numbers. Its effects are individual, and they works as well for one man as for a million.

If Grievance Studies goes away from the Academy, will TRP start losing more followers?

1 upvotes · 22 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Well yeah. But it doesn't change the fact that families are unstable arrangements in which no above table solution exists. The real question is whether or not men will continue to work as they have once the nuclear family dies.

It's not the nuclear family, exactly. It's Respect, Pussy, and the Future of Their Children. Those are the three things men will labour and fight for. A society that doesn't find a way to give them these will find them on the couch, smoking weed, eating pizza, and playing video games.

You could argue that such a thing was never necessary, but most of those times predate the industrial revolution.

You could argue that we may replace it with conspicuous consumption.

I don't argue any of those things. What you're failing to understand here is that saving western civilization is not my mission. Why not?

- Because it hasn't realized it needs saving.
- It hasn't asked to be saved.
- It hasn't asked me to do the saving.
- And it hasn't offered me a decent reward for doing so.

All those things would have to happen, in order, for me to begin giving fucks again.

You don't try to save someone who doesn't think they need saving. They just get mad, and hate you for it. Thankless job. I'll stick to saving my own ass, and teaching others, who already want to listen, how to do the same.

As for what is going to happen... all civilizations eventually collapse, because they lose sight of what made them prosperous and strong in the first place. Ours is no different.

Let's talk about actually finding someone right for you.

1 upvotes · 22 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't need to test it.

Heh.

Let's talk about actually finding someone right for you.

1 upvotes · 22 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Well, yeah, kinda.

Except that Chad is a just a metaphor.

What do you think of gender essentialism?

1 upvotes · 22 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Gender essentialism is a concept used to examine the attribution of fixed, intrinsic, innate qualities to women and men

Bulverism.

If Grievance Studies goes away from the Academy, will TRP start losing more followers?

1 upvotes · 22 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Well you could at least say there's an undercurrent of discontent.

Sure. And engineering schools have an undercurrent of not being able to do math... if you talk to the freshmen instead of the professors.

Of course, we do stoke that anger deliberately. Why? Because anger evolved for a purpose. Anger motivates action to change your circumstances.

The trick is redirecting that anger so that young bros are attacking the right target... their own shortcomings and weaknesses instead of the universal nature of women.

If Grievance Studies goes away from the Academy, will TRP start losing more followers?

1 upvotes · 22 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's complaining about the effects of open hypergamy.

TRP isn't complaining about anything. TRP is navigating the terrain as it exists.

Is neoteny caused by domestication the reason why men's testosterone, bones, bodies and behavior have changed so drastically in the past few generations?

1 upvotes · 22 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Evolution doesn't make drastic changes in the number of generations you are talking about unless a lot of organisms are dyin'.

Consider the known fact that testosterone levels are highly responsive to psychological state.

Then ask yourself how this might be related to lowered populations testosterone levels.

Virgin women are massively overrated by Red's. Lets debate.

1 upvotes · 22 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

They want them because (either on a rational or instinctive basis) they see them as less likely to be promiscuous... and more likely to be a faithful long term partner.

Swing and a miss.

What they are doing is looking for low N girls for long-term deals.

Got that bit right.

Guys with the genes for finding promiscuous LTR partners "icky" in the past left more direct descendants genetically related to them than the guys who didn't care about promiscuity (who raised some kids of their own, but ended up raising some kids sired by other guys).

Probably.

They then go on to try and justify their instinctive "icky feeling"

Aaaaand back to missing.

when is physically too late to build muscle? I read online that by 25 your body stops producing testosterone Also, could any of you critique my workout plan?

1 upvotes · 21 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

And you came into the forum that I built to ask for advice.

Therefore it doesn't matter how much of douchebag I am (ginormous), or how many bar sluts I have nailed (probably too many).

You need something, I don't. I know things, you don't. That is what determines the interaction between us.

That burning sensation you feel is your ego. It's getting in your way. And if you can't listen to new information that makes you feel bad, that is a far bigger problem for you than not knowing how to lift.

Because every learning experience hurts. They all come with the realization that we are not as awesome as we thought we were, and there is something we need to work on that we either thought we were fine on, or didn't even know it was a thing.

If you can't pay attention to the world around you, and learn from it, rather than first acting to defend your ego, you will not be able to learn, grow into someone you can be proud to be, and have an ego that doesn't need defending.

when is physically too late to build muscle? I read online that by 25 your body stops producing testosterone Also, could any of you critique my workout plan?

1 upvotes · 21 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

You have no idea what sucks and what doesn't. You're not experienced enough.

If you don't like it, there are other beginner programs. Starting Strength is also good. Find one you like.

when is physically too late to build muscle? I read online that by 25 your body stops producing testosterone Also, could any of you critique my workout plan?

1 upvotes · 21 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

I'm not going to read and analyze your program, for the same reason I'm not going to read medical protocols written by a lawyer and two accountants.

You are a novice asking dumb novice questions. Stop trying to roll your own custom shit, and follow the standard instructions for novices.

They were custom-designed for people exactly like you.

TRP Debate - Debrief Thread

1 upvotes · 19 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you wanted a whole week, why didn't you ask for it?

Q4Men: If women are the ones who are cruel and unsympathetic to men, why is the internet so chock full of men mocking women, but not the other way around?

1 upvotes · 19 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The opposite of love isn't hate. It's indifference.

Q4RP: Would you give up The Red Pill for your dream girl?

1 upvotes · 19 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That's the answer I was expecting, and hoping for.

Because it allows me to point out the difference between how the mainstream blue pill consensus views relationships, and how TRP views them.

The former focuses on personality, and what they call "compatibility". They wish to find the "perfect person for them", whose natural inclinations will make her act in just the way they want, so they can fit together like two puzzle pieces and be loved unconditionally forever.

The latter focuses on skills and actions. They wish to be able to act in ways that inspire love from a girl who can be inspired or trained to act in ways that please them. The notion is that people in relationships experience each other through their actions, and those actions can maintain and improve the relationship, or sabotage it.

Are Red Pilled men the only men who truly understand and respect Women?

1 upvotes · 19 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women are rational adults. Which is why we are justified in holding them responsible for their actions.

Hold your "justified" in one hand, and a helium balloon in the other, and see which one weighs more.

It does not matter what "should" happen. It matters what will happen. Believing that women "should" act a certain way will not make them any more likely to do so. If you want to make a behaviour more likely, you must incentivize it.

You can learn to navigate the universe as it is, or complain vociferously that you don't live in some different universe that would be more to your liking.

Q4ALL: What is a good alternative to the manosphere for sexually and romantically unsuccessful young men?

1 upvotes · 18 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm not some evil monster.

Stop saying this.

They will call you an evil monster for as long as you need them not to. Because it gives them power over you.

As long as you try to convince them you are not an evil monster, they will call you one, because it works on you.

The moment you learn to embrace being seen as an evil monster, and can laugh about it, they will stop, because it doesn't work on you.

People who know of me don't call me that anymore, because they know the answer will be "Yep." or "And?" or "What are you going to do about that?" ... and the ensuing discussion will not further any of their goals.

Realize that because you are a man, nobody gives a shit about you unless they have a personal relationship with you as an individual. This is not some great injustice of our culture, it is simply the way human beings are wired up. This is the terrain you live on. Stop wasting time judging it, and learn how to navigate it.

Q4RP: Would you give up The Red Pill for your dream girl?

1 upvotes · 18 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Then how would you make anything out of the block?

Q4RP: Would you give up The Red Pill for your dream girl?

1 upvotes · 18 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Would you give up all your sculpting tools for the perfect block of marble?

Q4RP: Would you give up The Red Pill for your dream girl?

1 upvotes · 18 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's easy to get that impression because we talk about it less.

A student needs to learn to spin plates before he is ready for relationship game.

Anytime I get confidence or high self-esteem all the sudden I begin to get shit-tested

1 upvotes · 15 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

Shit tests are an IOI.

Disgusted by Tinder sluts?

1 upvotes · 15 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

If you want easy sex with hoes, go to Hoes-R-Us.

If you want harder-to-get sex from someone who's not a hoe, don't go to Hoes-R-Us.

LTR pulled the “man up on valentine’s day” card on me this morning because I refused to take her daughter to school when she drives right by it every morning.

1 upvotes · 15 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

LTRed a single mother. Strike one.

LTRed a bitch who holds you responsible for her moods. Strike two.

LTRed a bitch who tries to rule you instead of obeying. Strike three.

You are not ready for an LTR. You are LTRing low quality girls to ensure a steady supply of sex, instead of living by the hunt to sharpen your skills, wits, and guile. You should go hungry when your game sucks. It'll make you a lean, mean predator over time, instead of the herbivorous cuck you are now.

Go and spin plates until you can call your girls over by snapping your fingers... like you would to a dog.

Then you will be ready to be the man in an LTR.

Is there anything I can do to help out a case of vaginismus?

1 upvotes · 15 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

Vaginismus is fear-based.

It's not intended as disrespect, and might not necessarily indicate a lack of attraction. However, you don't owe her your continued attention if this is a deal-breaker for you.

How much do you like blowjobs is the real question, here. If you find them fully satisfying, then why the hell not try to cure her? You can always fuck other girls in the meantime.

If they're not as good for you as PIV, then you might wanna invest your time elsewhere.

The Burning Strawman Debate is Open!

1 upvotes · 14 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Ya know, whenever someone complains about something, especially if they do it a lot, I tend to gather that they want one of two things:

- Sympathy, attention, validation, comfort, self-soothing by talking a lot.
- To fix their problem.

The way I like to tell the difference between the two is to ask "and what do you plan to do about this?"

So you don't like the advice I give. And you're upset that other people do. (That's what you're really talking about. Not all this fussbudgeting about what this or that sentence meant.)

So ... what do you plan to do about this?

THE LIONS DEN - OFFICIAL NO-BAN FREE-FOR-ALL MODS-ASLEEP AMA-TRP DAY

1 upvotes · 14 February 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

I still stand behind my belief that seeing uggos pull ass would help. Being insecure about looks is where the issues all stem from.

I understand why you would believe this, but it really wouldn't. You see, as best I can discern, your story-telling brain is engaged in a piece of circular reasoning:

"I am not successful with women, so I must be ugly. Since my ugliness makes me unsuccessful with women, looks must be what attracts them."

Now, in the course of this conversation, we've thrown some light on what's going on with your behaviour. You've had little tiny bits of success when you had a confidence booster that you didn't have to take the initiative to create (an unexpected IOI, drugging yourself up with psychotropics, etc).

But when you must initiate, when you must create an opportunity, then you are paralyzed with fear.

I think you may be starting to understand that this has nothing to do with looks, because no matter how you look, you cannot seduce girls without first talking to them. If you have a psychological state that prevents you from doing that, then your looks don't enter into it.

I understand your explanation of where you got this from. But understanding the origins of a mental illness is not how you make it go away. How you make it go away is to understand and change the thought and behaviour patterns that sustain it, and then systematically change them.

The moment you could talk to a girl while appearing (not necessarily feeling) relaxed and confident, and apply some basic conversational techniques we teach here, it would probably only take you several weeks of trying to get yourself laid for the first time. After that it would get easier as you gained skill.

I could probably achieve this in a couple of months of coaching you if you cooperated fully and worked hard.

But the hilarious thing is, once that happened, then you would NOT be able to "salvage other incels and become Jesus of Incelreth". Because all the incels would look at your story, look at your photograph, and say..

"Of course he got laid. He's good-looking. That wouldn't work for me. PROVE ME WRONG BEFORE I CONSENT TO MOVE FROM MY PUDDLE OF DESPAIR AND TRY!"

... just like you started out this conversation doing.

For every single incel, realizing that his obstacles are emotional and not physical, is an individual struggle.

THE LIONS DEN - OFFICIAL NO-BAN FREE-FOR-ALL MODS-ASLEEP AMA-TRP DAY

1 upvotes · 14 February 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

There's a interesting problem with getting RP advice, from a woman's perspective. And that problem is: who exactly can be regarded as an expert?

For men trying to seduce women, this is easy. An expert, to whom you should listen, is a man who has seduced many, many women. He has a track record of success. He knows how to do. So long as he also knows how to teach, you're good to go.

But female mating success is creating a good, lasting relationship.

So who's the expert?

A man who has seduced many women? He might know a lot, but he's a fish in this context.

A woman who has been in one very successful relationship for all of her adult life? Well, she succeeded, but she has only one data point.

A woman who has been in lots of relationships? She's a failure.

The best answer, although it's still not as good, is "multiple examples of all of the above". The men are a source of understanding of sexual dynamics. The successful women are a source for examples of what has worked. The women who failed are a source of examples of what not to do.

There is no one "expert" for women, unless it is someone who has listened to a great many of all of the above, and aggregated some good advice.

THE LIONS DEN - OFFICIAL NO-BAN FREE-FOR-ALL MODS-ASLEEP AMA-TRP DAY

1 upvotes · 14 February 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

There is also the fact that they have copied and used all of the RP terminology and concepts.

So, has PPD. So has TBP. The fact that our terminology is dominant is simply a reflection of the fact that we are dominant... we own the majority of the mindshare, and all these other groups are just a response to us, using our terms, thinking our thoughts, and spreading our ideas.

It's going to be a real problem for RP and TRP in the future if they keep growing, because most people are going to come across the terms via incels first.... and when they hear an RP person using them to describe OP, immediately discount listening to that line of thought because "Ah, it's just another incel whining".

And?

They used to call us "misogynists" until it became clear that we gave zero fucks and that would stop us not at all.

Now it's "incel". We don't give a fuck about that, either.

Frankly, I'm glad the incels are hosting our memetic vectors. We might cure some of them. That's what we are for. If 100% of TRP is pussy slayers, then we would be a failure. Because we're not supposed to be a social group for dudes who are already pussy slayers. We're supposed to turn losers into pussy slayers. That means if there are no total losers here, right now, then we are failing our mission.

THE LIONS DEN - OFFICIAL NO-BAN FREE-FOR-ALL MODS-ASLEEP AMA-TRP DAY

1 upvotes · 14 February 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

Wait, we're not supposed to roast them and eat them afterwards?

Have I been doing this wrong?

THE LIONS DEN - OFFICIAL NO-BAN FREE-FOR-ALL MODS-ASLEEP AMA-TRP DAY

1 upvotes · 14 February 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

At what point does promiscuous sex become degenerate?

Define "degenerate".

In less moralistic terms, when does it become unhealthy to have sex with many women?

When you're skipping workouts or sleep.

At what point does pursuing sex become harmful to yourself?

When it crowds out other shit you need to do.

THE LIONS DEN - OFFICIAL NO-BAN FREE-FOR-ALL MODS-ASLEEP AMA-TRP DAY

1 upvotes · 14 February 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

It is true that I've been pussy whipped when it comes to meeting women, despite reading TRP for years. I have never cold approached, unwilling to initiate without getting IOI first. Indeed there are things I should work on. It would be better to break my back trying than to not try, I know. I lack the mental fortitude.

Yeah, I get that.

What we're doing here is not really debating at all. We're discussing ways to break this mental block.

You believe that seeing someone as ugly as you claim to be (I have no idea what you look like) absolutely slay it would help.

I'm not so sure. A delusion is defined as a persistent false belief that is resistant to contradictory evidence. Incels are united by the delusion that they are inherently unfuckable (despite the fact that all their genes came from people who didn't have that problem), not due to any common cause, but because people who have this delusion aren't incels.

The only thing I'm sure would actually help this in you would be seeing women start throwing obvious IOIs in response to your changed behaviour and demeanor. I think if I were to show you an ugly guy who slays (like I just did), your treacherous brain would come up with some excuse as to why his situation wasn't analogous to yours (like it just did).

But, this being said, we have a chicken and egg problem. If you won't test the material, you won't see the evidence... because the proof that TRP provides is always personal experience of the student (that being the best proof there is).

Your problem isn't ugliness, it's paralysis. That's why you almost seem unable to hear the idea of relative results... the notion that your results will always be better with study and practice than without, regardless of your natural gifts or lack thereof. That would be a sufficient reason to ignore ugliness and push forward, but it does nothing for paralysis.

So where does paralysis come from. Well, in the case of incels, my answer would be fear. Fear of rejection. More specifically, I'd call it a phobia... "an excessive and irrational fear of a specific object, activity, or situation".

With a phobia, the fear of the object or situation is so intense that it becomes its own reality. For example, if you have a phobia of spiders, and you see one, you don't actually get hurt... but the fear you feel is so intense that it becomes a form of hurt. And thus the brain comes to regard that fear as justified, because the negative experience of being afraid was so real and intense. Phobias tend to be self-reinforcing.

That's where you seem to be.

If I go out and cold approach, I might, for example, get rejected twice before getting a phone # on the third girl. But those first two rejections would mean nothing to me. I suspect the first one would be so upsetting for you that you would have to stop. And thus your beliefs would find another way to become self-fulfilling prophecies.

In your case, I think I would conceptualize this as a phobia, and treat it in the same way: desensitization using multiple angles of attack.

- Gradual exposure therapy
- Adrenal loading desensitization (stress-response)
- Cognitive reframing

Starting out with cold approaches right away wouldn't work, because paralysis would set in.

THE LIONS DEN - OFFICIAL NO-BAN FREE-FOR-ALL MODS-ASLEEP AMA-TRP DAY

1 upvotes · 13 February 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

Not one self-proclaimed ugly guy has responded to my original comment yet. Is that not strange? This is not the first time I have asked this question on TRP and it always goes the same. All kinds of platitudes, but not one ugly lad who slays.

You're asking someone to step forward and say "I'm ugly". Then doxx himself to prove it. Of course, this guy ain't exactly model material, but you've probably seen him already.

I have no clue how can you extrapolate that ugly guys with game can get laid from that. Give it a serious, honest thought. It is not logical.

I'm trained in formal logic, and I understand the difference between necessity and sufficiency. But do you understand that I have demonstrated that looks are not sufficient, and that this does prove that male attractiveness has other elements?

I'm not asking just for myself {long explanation}

Yes, I know.

But what puzzles me about you folks is how you seem not to understand the options that are laid in front of you. They are:

- Do nothing.
- Try something else.

I'm certain you've read TRP material. But that's the only step of the cyclic process that you have experienced. All of this is intended for readers to go out and try, seeing for themselves what works. If you're only reading, you're not really getting the full delivery of the material.

This is why most of our readers don't march up and demand "proof". Because when they go out and try, that proof is right there for them to see. But there is a certain percentage of people who feel so hopeless that they are unwilling to try something without "proof", not just that it works, but that it will work for you specifically. And you want this before you are willing to participate in any experiment.

Do you see the nonsense here? "Prove it before you test it!" Testing things is how you prove them. You want proof? Run the test. What they fuck have you got to lose?

The reason that all incels are united by their unwillingness to try TRP, is that anyone who is willing to try TRP doesn't stay an incel.

THE LIONS DEN - OFFICIAL NO-BAN FREE-FOR-ALL MODS-ASLEEP AMA-TRP DAY

1 upvotes · 13 February 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

"So?"

Announcing: OFFICIAL NO-BAN FREE-FOR-ALL MODS-ASLEEP AMA-TRP DAY* WED 2/13 : "The biggest brawl of ill-conceived multi-colored pill metaphors baked into the biggest smackdown medicine cocktail since John Belushi discovered heroin."

1 upvotes · 13 February 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

You're thinking in terms of absolute results. The red pill is about relative results.

In other words, all the things in life that are always and forever beyond your control have dealt you a hand of cards. This is your one hand of cards in life, you will not get another.

If you play that hand well, will your results be relatively better than if you had given up and folded?

We could argue all day, were I so inclined to waste my time, about how much of a prize you will get if you try your hardest, informed by the proper knowledge.

But there is absolutely no prize for giving up.

And those are your only two options. Play the hand you are dealt, or give up and do nothing.

Can someone with experience explain why eventually you have to quit drugs/alcohol

1 upvotes · 13 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

Thought so.

Pyscho ex-plate sent a letter to my house. Help.

1 upvotes · 12 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

I would tend to agree that its a good idea. But do remember that the law doesn't protect anyone from anything. What it does is sort out the mess afterwards.

You don't arm yourself with the law, you arm yourself with a CZ. And you arm yourself with evidence and documentation so the law cannot be used against you.

It's worth remembering that the law favours the person who gets to the record first.

Always be the person who got a restraining order before she accuses you of rape. Always be the person who calls the police about the man you had to pull a gun on in self defense before he calls them about the crazy guy who drew on him.

Police, lawyers, and the criminal justice system are only capable of imagining three people: themselves, the stereotypical villain, and the stereotypical victim. Whoever gets to the record second gets cast in the role of villain.

Thoughts on the "second shift" mentality?

1 upvotes · 12 February 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

If it's chambered in 308, it's an AR10.

Gods, how can you be so ignorant about very important stuff?

Best age to get married?

1 upvotes · 12 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

Never.

Why is there still such a huge gender imbalance when it comes to Valentine's Day spending?

1 upvotes · 7 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Dudes are the bigger sucker.

This is the correct answer.

Men have a built in protective instinct towards women. Left to make their own choices, they will prioritize women first, themselves second, and other men not at all.

Women have a built in protective instinct towards children, but not towards men. Left to make their own choices, they will prioritize themselves first, children second, and men not at all.

CMV: Too many manospherians conflate femininity with cultural decadence

1 upvotes · 7 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Too many for what purpose?

Is "abundance mentality" the same as "be extroverted with low neuroticism"?

1 upvotes · 6 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No. It's "be low in neuroticism, high in psychoticism, and as introverted or extroverted as you feel like".

CMV: Lots of posters are trying to find the cheat codes for life when there aren't any cheat codes.

1 upvotes · 4 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

All useful knowledge is a cheat code from the perspective of someone who doesn't have it.

If this was a woman she'd be praised, but since it's a man, he is made fun of for his appearance

1 upvotes · 1 February 2019 · /r/MensRights

Especially since she's no great prize herself.

Is there a reason why men in the manosphere are obsessed with masculinity/being masculine?

1 upvotes · 30 January 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because men who want to be masculine gravitate to social circles that accept and encourage that.

Do you think that there is someone for everybody? Or are there some people who are destined to be alone?

1 upvotes · 30 January 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No one is destined for anything. There is no fate. The universe does not have a plan for us.

The Unknowability of Beta Turd

1 upvotes · 29 January 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

Stopped reading after it became clear that you do not understand the difference between a categorical and a hypothetical imperative.

So let's cut to the chase. Why are you here?

The Unknowability of Beta Turd

1 upvotes · 29 January 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

Your argument, essentially, is that people shouldn't express opinions for consideration if they Nope. Wrong right out of the gate.

You might be very used to thinking in terms of "should". So perhaps when someone else talks to you, you look for his "should", because it's inconceivable that he might not have one.

"Should" just means "I want", which means when you look for my "should", you're just taking guesses at how I want you to behave. But I don't care how you behave.

You want men to behave in a certain way by selecting mates according to your priorities, which you are trying to talk TRP, collectively, into. You're not succeeding, because you want something and have nothing to offer in return, but that's okay. It's equally interesting whether you succeed or not.

I'm really not even sure why you disagree with aspiring toward having intelligent offspring.

Hey, whatever you personally want to do with your life is cool with me. Find the most intelligent sperm you can manage to get your hands on. Have kids. Go nuts.

I don't recall ever telling this man he feels any emotion.

Sure you did. You told him he felt shame, and then apologized for "making him feel" it, when all he told you was "stop trying to make me feel shame". This informed me that you want him to feel shame, you need him to feel shame, and you somehow think if you assume the sale it will help. Egyptians. Monuments. Magic.

The unanswered question is why you care how he selects women, and why you care whether he has kids or not. Trust me, he wouldn't make a suitable husband. Look elsewhere.

Would you rather be alone forever, or have to marry a man who has 3 other wives?

1 upvotes · 28 January 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Don't ask women what they would do.

Watch what they do.

Why do some men believe that women in the service industry are flirting with them for real?

1 upvotes · 28 January 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm very inexperienced, yet even I wouldn't mistake a waitress flirting with me for tips for flirting with me for real.

That... is why you fail.

Always assume the sale. If she was just trying to butter you up, she can always let you know that later. It's her job to put the brakes on if she's not interested, not yours.

CMV: Men chase, women choose, men are chosen, men are the prize

1 upvotes · 25 January 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You can tell how far a man has come on his personal journey by talking about the metaphorical "Chad" to him.

If he shows fear of competition from Chad, or resentment, he still lacks confidence and inner strength, and has more work to do. If he smiles and sees himself in Chad, or Chad in himself, then he has truly begun to grow.

Another version of this test: have him listen to this.

Does it make him mad? If so, he identifies with the father. If it makes him smile, he identifies with the singer.

Why are blowjobs indicative of higher interest?

1 upvotes · 25 January 2019 · /r/askTRP

/r/asktrp is designed to serve the needs for a specific group of people. Not quite so much like most of the rest of reddit.

You kinda wandered in here by accident, yes?

So love is fake?

1 upvotes · 21 January 2019 · /r/askTRP

Are you OP?

No?

Then when did I advise you to do anything? No one told you that you have to do jack shit. OP asked a question. I answered it.

If you want to do hookups, eventually get cheated on, and replace as necessary, then who's stopping you?

Got some pretty bad stretch marks from lifting/bulking... Kind of hurting my self-esteem. Anyone else experience the same?

1 upvotes · 20 January 2019 · /r/askTRP

Stretch marks on muscle are a badge of honour.

Why doesn't TRP see negative media as the ultimate 'shit test'?

1 upvotes · 16 January 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Well, that's what I thought I meant, all those times that I said "Feminism is a giant collective shit test".

Apparently, I didn't. Not yet.

Can you drop me a line and let me know when I figure it out?

I feel like unless I got a vasectomy, there's no way I could ever trust anybody in a relationship if it comes down to contraception. What to do?

1 upvotes · 13 January 2019 · /r/askTRP

So get a vasectomy.

Next.

LTR threatened to kill herself if I didn't apologise

1 upvotes · 13 January 2019 · /r/askTRP

What the actual fuck?

Why are you even sparing a thought for this alleged person?

Weird question but... dog breeds.

1 upvotes · 9 January 2019 · /r/askTRP

The answer is "As soon as I am not on a phone, you are permabanned."

How do you talk to someone you have little in common with?

1 upvotes · 26 December 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Strong relationships are based on attraction, shared values, and shared goals... not shared interests.

You don't find them boring because you have no shared interests. You find them boring because they are unattractive to you.

Need a diagnosis: Is this Oneitis or am I falling for this woman?

1 upvotes · 24 December 2018 · /r/askTRP

https://old.reddit.com/r/asktrp/comments/a966z5/need_a_diagnosis_is_this_oneitis_or_am_i_falling/ecgv2yt/

Blackpill

1 upvotes · 17 December 2018 · /r/askTRP

Redpill: People are upgraded chimpanzees, our breeding instincts are fairly simple, learn what they are and how they work for greater success.

Bunch of incels: Genetics is destiny, we are doomed not to breed, because our parents were doomed not to breed. Our situation is hopeless, because we've tried nothing and it hasn't worked.

What went wrong?

1 upvotes · 13 December 2018 · /r/askTRP

Sperg-like typing detected.

This is about becoming more attractive, not a concise series of buttons you push to mind-control every chick.

Q4RP: What makes someone a jerk?

1 upvotes · 10 December 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP doesn't define "jerk" at all.

It simply observes that the men who women call "jerks", and the men who women are most sexually enthusiastic for, are the same set of men.

CMV: I don't understand how anyone can take relationship advice from /r/TheRedPill seriously

1 upvotes · 10 December 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't understand

Correct.

The Truth About Single Moms Who Bring Young Children To The Dating Market

1 upvotes · 8 December 2018 · /r/WhereAreAllTheGoodMen

It is interesting and perhaps strange that you would feel taunted, or that when you are targeted with some genuine taunts, you would take them so deeply to heart.

I can assure you that I lose no sleep over being called a "pussy worshiper". I'll file it away with all the times I've been called a misogynist.

I am somewhat puzzled that you read that article and came away with the impression that it was telling men not to do what it is in fact telling them how to do. Perhaps a better understanding will come to you in time. Or not. There are plenty of teachable men out there, and only so much time.

Perhaps unwillingly or unwittingly, however, you have satisfied my curiosity. The answer is that while a certain percentage, perhaps a majority, of MGTOW celibates are unable to get laid, there are most likely others who simply cannot get women to cease their bullshit drama and submit to male rule. Or, indeed, who do not believe such a thing is possible... that the influence of a clownish and debased society must always trump their own.

Although I am still uncertain as to whether the services of prostitutes are against the MGTOW code of chastity and honour.

Commodity Fetishism

1 upvotes · 8 December 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

The fool can say almost anything whereas everyone else has a defined role with limited creative prospects.

Precisely... the fool's motley is a license to say what he likes... both in the sense of official permission from the king, and in the sense that not having to take him seriously means that others are free to consider what he says without being hampered by their own emotional reactions.

Taking the fool too seriously harms not only the listener, but the fool as well.

How long will TRP sub be kept in quarantine ?

1 upvotes · 5 December 2018 · /r/askTRP

Way ahead of you.

Do women actually hit on you guys?

1 upvotes · 5 December 2018 · /r/askTRP

Eventually, the sun will expand into a nova larger than earth's orbit and cook the planet with superheated plasma. We can sit around and worry about that or we can make the best of what we have while we're here.

Do women actually hit on you guys?

1 upvotes · 3 December 2018 · /r/askTRP

Couple of times a week.

Latest was a barmaid earlier tonight. Right in front of FunSize, too... but the joke's on her, because FunSize just thinks that's hot.

Come to think of it, FunSize herself chased me for months before I told her I'd give her a chance, but she'd have to lose about twenty pounds if she expected it to last. She did. It did.

Unaware of the privilege of being attractive

1 upvotes · 3 December 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Before you get offended by my name it has to do with BDSM and all females are someone's daughter (plus shock value)

Never DEER. (Defend Excuse Explain Rationalize)

Always DARE. (Deflect. Agree and Amplify. Repeat. Exit.)

Back to TRP with you.

GQ announced its 2018 Man of the Year...

1 upvotes · 17 November 2018 · /r/MensRights

What's "GQ"?

Can I win her back?

1 upvotes · 10 November 2018 · /r/askTRP

I can't tell if this is satire or if you are actually this clueless.

What to do if you can't lift

1 upvotes · 10 November 2018 · /r/askTRP

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=mdwj5ORPmX0>

The other side of 'toxic masculinity' in California shooting

1 upvotes · 9 November 2018 · /r/MensRights

Generally no.

Some states won't even allow you in bars with it (usually unless you work there), others you're just not allowed to drink while carrying, except on your own property.

Still other states are constitutional carry states, where the law is often considerably less clear.

Since I don't drink alcohol at all, I don't really follow the particulars on which states do what in that respect.

The other side of 'toxic masculinity' in California shooting

1 upvotes · 9 November 2018 · /r/MensRights

The deputy was armed. If everybody carried a gun when they go out drinking wouldn't that just make far more shootings? Imagine a drunken bar brawl except with guns. Plus road rage on the drive in and home, and arguments in the car.

Well, you'd think so. It's often the first thing people think if they're not "gun people".

You see how people behave, and think, "Well, what if they behaved like that with guns?".

But they don't. The guns change the equation. You'd have to come learn to shoot with us to understand fully, but just as some food for thought...

Did you know what identifiable demographic commits the lowest per capita rate of violent crime? Lower than police officers? Lower than judges? Lower than old women? Lower than physicians, lawyers, engineers? Lower than elected officials? Than Mormons? Than Buddhists?

Holders of concealed carry permits.

Yep. I haven't left my home in years without a Sphinx SDP Alpha Wolf, or a CZ 75 PCR, or a Walther PPS, riding my hip under my shirt. And you'd never know unless disaster struck. You probably have passed by plenty of people like me and never known.

We don't get in drunken brawls. We don't throw hands. We don't road rage. Because every single fight we might hypothetically get in would be deadly serious by its very nature.

Why do most people find the Red Pill misogynistic or "morally reprehensible" ?

1 upvotes · 6 November 2018 · /r/askTRP

Because we, the founders, planned it that way.

How realistic is this 9 year age gap. Logically, biologically, and emotionally?

1 upvotes · 4 November 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Your surroundings are just like your Instagram feed: easily curated.

Aaaaand +1 again.

/u/LuckyLittleStar

Blue piller wants to have a talk with me about how I treat women

1 upvotes · 31 October 2018 · /r/askTRP

You don't owe anyone your time unless they have paid you for it.

Plucked from AskTRP

1 upvotes · 28 October 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Noticed this belatedly.

+1.

Paging /u/LuckyLittleStar

Do women want to do shit tests?

1 upvotes · 22 October 2018 · /r/askTRP

<https://www.trp.red/p/whisper/772>

CMV: Men do not like insecure women. They just wish their oneitis was liked them enough to be clingy.

1 upvotes · 20 October 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yeeeeess ... because if the women were emotionally available to them, they wouldn't have to stalk.

LTR gives me out of the blue random shit test barrage, why?

1 upvotes · 19 October 2018 · /r/askTRP

Elevated attraction anxiety.

Now it's up to you to figure out why.

Status of the Appeal 10/11

1 upvotes · 14 October 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

<https://youtu.be/Vl4ufIrMtXg?t=25>

She's a legitimate 9/9.5, do I spend $100 to maybe see her at a concert?

1 upvotes · 12 October 2018 · /r/askTRP

In this case, yes.

One needs to spell it out, however, because the novices tend to develop sperg-like rules: "Never drop $100 on spending time with a woman you haven't fucked yet!"

By all means, take a woman you haven't fucked yet someplace nice... if you want to go anyway. Then make her pay for herself. Or make her pay for both of you, and say you'll pay next time. Or something.

There's a big difference between spending money on a woman, and spending on yourself where she can see.

Appearing like you need to buy attention is bad, but so is seeming unduly concerned over small amounts of cash.

What were your lessons learned from LTR?

1 upvotes · 12 October 2018 · /r/askTRP

https://old.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/83ah8u/ltr_the_bare_minimum_you_need_to_know/

"See that guy over there? He's obsessed with me."

1 upvotes · 12 October 2018 · /r/askTRP

She could be trying to qualify herself to you.

Many girls don't understand that preselection and social proof just works on them, not on men.

Can mods ban you for being subbed to The Red Pill?

1 upvotes · 12 October 2018 · /r/askTRP

No, dread works for men.

It doesn't work for women at all.

Can mods ban you for being subbed to The Red Pill?

1 upvotes · 11 October 2018 · /r/askTRP

I'm not so sure. One of the basic principles of TRP is that men and women are totally different, and want different things, and react different ways.

So not only is what a man should do to attract a woman totally different from what a woman should to attract a man, but also what a woman should do to attract a man is totally different from what a man should do to attract a man.

The first two, I have some expertise on, and can give advice which I know is sound because of all the grateful fanmail. The last one... I got nuthin'. I haven't a clue.

So, obviously, no one can prevent you from reading (nor would we want to), but keep in mind, you are prescribing off-label, so I take no responsibility for your results.

And don't give advice, of course. Because you're really not going to have a clue what you are talking about. Gay bros make the worst wingmen.

Girl asking for money after realizing I am fucking other girls.

1 upvotes · 11 October 2018 · /r/askTRP

Try looking at it this way:

Obviously, the "payment" she wanted was something more than what she stated out loud. That's why the fact that OP is sexing up some other girl caused her to back out... it was a breach of the secret deal she had made inside her own head.

We call these "covert contracts".

This is what I mean by "she has already set her price". Her price was lunch + ... something. The question is, what is that something? I suspect orbiting, but there's not enough data to be conclusive.

Can mods ban you for being subbed to The Red Pill?

1 upvotes · 11 October 2018 · /r/askTRP

Over here we say "your kind doesn't need us".

Seriously, TRP has nothing to offer you. Why are you here?

FAQ: Should we move in together

1 upvotes · 9 October 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Much of TRP rhetoric advises men to avoid marriage entirely.

Yep. I wrote it.

And it advises women to try to get men to ignore that advice.

The counselling pill is the best pill

1 upvotes · 6 October 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Who do you wish to be counseled by?

Dead Bedroom Marriage

1 upvotes · 5 October 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Duties? Men have no duties to you. They don't owe you shit.

You get what you motivate.

Three academics just proved the nonsense of Gender Studies that led to our quarantine

1 upvotes · 4 October 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

True... except I am not addressing academics. I am addressing their audience.

There is no point in attempting to persuade academics not to engage in deception, both of themselves and others... they have been incentivized to do so.

However, others have no incentive to listen once the lack of useful truth has been revealed.

Why is it a woman's fault if she's alpha widowed?

1 upvotes · 2 October 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

The alpha widow is a woman who is unable to become indifferent to a high-value ex-lover whom she is no longer able to have. She is typically stuck because she is unable to have the same level of feelings for a less attractive man, and unable to secure a more attractive one.

Why is it a woman's fault if she's alpha widowed?

1 upvotes · 2 October 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Thank you very much for the detailed and honest response! This makes total sense, especially the line about "healthy girls want a playmate, not a therapist" I am, in fact, a therapist

It's okay, I won't hold it against you. I have a friend who does tarot readings, and another that believes in astrology.

I do definitely want a playmate but this way of phrasing it is a strong reminder to make sure my behavior comes off that way.

Yes, that's important.

Also, since you seem to have a different view than most of the other responders as to whether I personally am an alpha widow, I'd love your thoughts on the other part of my question, which is whether that's my fault or if it's just a normal part of life

Is that a productive thing to dwell on? If you drive your car off the road into a ditch, it doesn't matter if you were texting and drinking scotch, or if you just swerved to avoid a deer... you still have the same problem, and you fix it the same way.

The subtext in a lot of how you talk about this is "please, tell me I'm not a bad person". But since no one has said otherwise to you, your desire to hear it means you are saying something else to yourself. Now, I may be Mr. Authority Figure™ around here, but I doubt I carry so much weight with you, personally, as to dispel this nagging self-doubt with one deific pronouncement.

Reassurance would be anesthesia, not a cure.

what should I do about it? I know there's no systematic cure but do you have any tips? A few others have recommended some good things.

The first most important thing in solving any problem is knowing what your definition of "solved" is. In the case of the alpha widow, the definition of "cured" is indifferent. You don't love him, you don't hate him, you don't want him back, you don't have six different habits and seven different special needs because of his influence in your life... you just don't give a crap, and don't think about him much.

Then you will be ready to be obsessed with someone else... which is what you're supposed to be doing.

One thing I am happy to report is that I am NOT unable to shut up about him. I rarely discuss him outside of anonymous Internet forums. Occasionally I talk about him with my family, though usually they bring it up. Even more rarely, I talk about him with my closest girlfriends, again, only if they bring it up by asking if I'm over him. With guys outside of my family? Not a chance. I actually have a very strict rule about talking to men about my love life.

You are aware that you are doing that right now, right?

In my experience, men hate hearing about who you're interested in, who broke your heart, etc, and I have no need for it because I have very close relationships with my dad and multiple adult brothers. If I need a male perspective, I get it there. If I need one from someone who doesn't know me, I get it here. So that's a start at least.

Yes. The next step is not to think about him.

Why is it a woman's fault if she's alpha widowed?

1 upvotes · 2 October 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Far greater.

But it wasn't just his presence. It was an unusual case where she interacted with him, caught feelings, and then was separated from him for a period of several months with no communication. This replaced her habit of obsessing over the original ex with obsessing over the new guy. Then, when she reconnected with him, the ex had been purged from her brain.

You see, the habit of obsessing over the "one that got away" didn't change. The target of that habit did. And being able to reconnect with him removed her symptoms.

She didn't stop being a junkie. She replaced her drug of choice with another addiction which was more available and less poisonous. Almost the human equivalent of methadone.

So maybe I don't so much know how alpha widows can be cured as how they can be functional again.

The key mechanic seems to be the lingering obsession, which takes on a life of its own independent of its target. The alpha widow is not merely bereft of the actual presence of the high-tier dude, but tormented by her own mental image of him, which is constantly renewed by her habit of ruminating over it.

It's so hard to cure because it's self perpetuating.

Why is it a woman's fault if she's alpha widowed?

1 upvotes · 2 October 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Another dude.

How to deal with negative emotions.

1 upvotes · 1 October 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

The point of STFU is to insert period of time between feeling something and saying something.

When you start to practice this, you will notice that how you feel when you first wanted to say something, and how you feel later when you do, are different.

Which means that what you say will be different as well.

Conflicting opinions on TRP (Same post got me banned from RPW)

1 upvotes · 1 October 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

my goal is to publish a first name paper in QFT before I get out of school

That's the problem with publicly-funded science, and career scientists, right there. Perverse incentives.

I made a couple of interesting discoveries, quite by accident, in various computer science subfields, as an undergraduate. I managed to run experiments (by developing my own distributed algorithm that ran huge simulations over the course of weeks on all the machines in the undergrad computer labs, and restarted instances if the students rebooted machines) and prove a hypothesis or two, but I never published.

Because when I got to the point of sitting down and doing the "scientific" writing, I was unable to force myself to adapt the obfuscated, bloated, unnecessarily complicated and formal language that CS and EE researchers use to sound sophisticated and important and impressive.

It's academia's dirty little secret. Everyone does it, and everyone will haughtily deny doing it, and be outraged, yes outraged, that a mere layman would dare to accuse them of such a thing, and imply that he is simply being anti-intellectual because their brilliance intimidates him, or he doesn't understand the full nuance of their wonderful thinking.

The truth is that they know they do it a little bit, but they don't realize to what extent, because this kind of bullshit infects someone gradually. They aren't willfully obfuscating the truth... it's simply that their goals, and the goals of science, are divergent.

The goal of an Enlightenment-era amateur scientist was to understand the universe, and make its workings clear to others. The goal of an NSF-funded, tenure-track professional academic is to impress others of his kind with his acumen and body of work.

It's the difference between Candide and Finnegan's Wake.

So why isn't this happening today? Where are all the researchers and the curious people who used to fund this? The whole point of academia is to play this role, yet I'm still a kid and I can see how fucked up academia is. Why doesn't anyone who matters seem capable of pulling their head out of their own ass for thirty goddamn seconds, long enough to notice that the emperor has no clothes?

You've seen it, too, then.

I gathered you would. There's being smart enough to play the game... and then there's being smart enough to ask why the game is being played.

Institutions like bright, happy people who are just smart enough to answer the questions on the test, but not quite smart or independently-minded enough to ask why those questions are on the test instead of some other kind of question, and to suggest alternative questions, or alternatives to the test format, or alternatives to testing at all.

One of the world's great secrets is that almost no one really wants you to think outside the box. If you want to do so, or feel compelled to do so, you're going to have to forge your own path, support yourself both literally and metaphorically, and work on your own or in the company of fellow iconoclasts, until you manage to build something whose value is undeniable. At which point, people will pop out of the woodwork saying that they believed in you all along.

Conflicting opinions on TRP (Same post got me banned from RPW)

1 upvotes · 1 October 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yeah, a lot of that article I wrote about the difference between "Science!ism" and "science" was me trying to channel Feynman.

And you would be right. I've witnessed academic research psychology, and how that research is actually done, far to closely to hold it in anything like the same esteem that I would the theories generated by research into physics, or computer science, or population biology, or genetics, etc, etc.

Remember all those freshman physics tests, where the problems would end with a sentence like "assume the chicken is a sphere to make the math easier"? Yeah, well, that's how modern psychological research is done.

And that's not to get into how the vast majority of those studies are relying on self-report data rather than field observation, the flaws in the five-factor personality model, and so on, and so on.

This is not to say that Martin Seligman didn't find anything interesting, or that Maslow's needs hierarchy isn't frequently useful for illustrating some things about motivation. But, by and large, psychology is divided into two types.

- Vague, experientially generated models of broad human social function, which are often wise and useful, but not really any more scientific in origin than "Whisper: Collected writings on how to get women to want your cock".
- Very specific, focused observations in a specific situation, collected with crappy methods, and not really useful for anything other than generating further experiments and justifying NSF grants.

This is why a bunch of politically incorrect douchebags, speaking in broad generalizations and generally acting cocky and irreverent, are far more effective at explaining how attraction works in an actionable, effective way than all the professors at all the universities in all the world.

It's not that we're so special. It's just that they really, really, really suck at their jobs. We, at least, are results-oriented.

Think about it. What breakthroughs can you list, off the top of your head, coming from the field of psychology, that have actually changed life in Western civilization for the better?

A physicist can tell you how to launch a rocket and put a coms satellite in orbit. A computer scientist can enable you to read this message in Vermont seconds after I typed it in Nevada. A geneticist can produce a strain of apple that can grow in Thailand, where it never dips below freezing, ever (something apples generally require).

What can a psychologist do?

Explain things? Shit, anyone can explain things. A priest can explain things. Charge two hundreds dollars an hour to listen to people bitch, after which they either feel better, or don't? Give somebody a personality test that only matters because people believe the result?

Name one thing a psychologist can do that still works if we stop believing in it.

This is Science!ism in a nutshell... take something one step above an urban legend, put it in the mouths of a bunch of people with fancy certificates from admired institutions, collect money for making a lot of pronouncements, and all of a sudden you've got something that is admired and respected, not for any actual capability, but simply for being admired and respected.

Conflicting opinions on TRP (Same post got me banned from RPW)

1 upvotes · 30 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

{Instrumentalism}

I would consider this distinction to be moot, since my definition of "truth" is "predictive power".

Conflicting opinions on TRP (Same post got me banned from RPW)

1 upvotes · 30 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I believe the term you are looking for is "post-hoc hypothesis".

This is often used to refer to the practice of looking at a set of observations, coming up with an idea that explains every one of them, and regarding that as proof of correctness.

The problem with this practice is that any data set can support a multitude of such hypotheses, possibly an infinite number.

But the term "post hoc" just means "after this other thing". And every hypothesis comes after an observation, because otherwise you'd just be making up shit at random, which no one does.

The real point is that once you have your post-hoc hypothesis, you're not done. Before it can be a theory, it has to be tested a priori against some other independent data. The basic idea here is that if you generated a hypothesis from observing data set A, and it can be used to predict data set B, you just might be onto something.

And once it performs well with C, D, E, and so on, your confidence that the story you have told matches reality starts to increase.

what's the advice when the man doesn't want to have sex (ever)

1 upvotes · 30 September 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Hmmmm, yes, I'd say that's probably not the issue then.

Now, you said that this has been an issue for a long time... has it gotten worse, or about the same?

I have no idea how to get in a healthy relationship- help!

1 upvotes · 25 September 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

I really don't know what to tell you. It's not BS, this is just what has happened to me. Why I'm trying anything such as writing on the internet to a bunch of strangers (who supposedly are focusing on this subject) about my problem. I guess I should know better. This post really felt a little hurtful, but I am trying to take things with a grain of salt and get what I can out of this because I want to find anything to change the situation.

Your reaction tells me several critical pieces of information:

1. You appear to sincerely not know what the problem might be.

2. You appear somewhat aware that this is indeed serious... although I hope my vehemence has made that more clear to you. If you've NEVER gotten to sex in 37 years, then it's not just a series of coincidences. You are sending up a MAJOR red flag somewhere, and you'll need to figure that out.
3. The problem probably isn't your temper. I deliberately used a tone that would wind you up to see if you would throw a tantrum. A bad temper or hostile attitude is one of the major problems that prevent women from being approached.

Okay, so the next order of business is to figure out what it is that's throwing a monkey wrench in the works. There are three key components of female attractiveness to men:

1. Beauty
2. Femininity
3. Approachability

I'm guessing you're not ugly (you have mirrors, you'd know), or fat, so I'm thinking about the second two. Either some form of off-putting behaviour (unfeminine) that you're not aware of, or (and this is my best guess at this point), you're doing something that sends "keep off" signals when you are actually attracted.

Do you have anxiety problems?

Fencing vs Tennis vs Wrestling

1 upvotes · 23 September 2018 · /r/askTRP

Whichever one you will stick to.

Escalating/Turning things sexual

1 upvotes · 23 September 2018 · /r/askTRP

https://old.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/9bxu5u/the_second_fundamental_skill/

Ditch the Resume

1 upvotes · 21 September 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Depending on a woman's target, having a resume is a valid concern. I think that the correct formulation of the issue is, that most women miss that it's a passport, not bait.

You're sort of closer, there... but the passport is to his social circle, not to him.

There's a lot to be learned from Arnold cheating on a Kennedy with a mediocre-looking housekeeper, but I don't think "be a Kennedy" is that lesson. Even if it were, I don't know how to teach women to be a Kennedy, and neither does anyone else.

The important thing to remember is that, unless you are dealing with an arranged marriage (in which case why are you here?), men do not decide who to marry, they decide whether to marry her. It's a yes-no decision, and masculine achievements don't enter into it.

Should I take steroids to be more attractive?

1 upvotes · 16 September 2018 · /r/askTRP

What are your height/weight/lifts?

What % of women would outright reject a guy for being 5'6"?

1 upvotes · 15 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What percentage of women are over 5'6?

[Q4ALL] What's the difference between a man looking to marry a "mother material" and a woman looking to marry a "father material"?

1 upvotes · 15 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Redpill paint it as a negative thing that a woman wants to marry a man who will be a good father

What?

Q4 anyone over 40 or better over 50: What was hitting the wall like for you?

1 upvotes · 14 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The wall is the point where a woman's attractiveness stops reflecting her youth and starts reflecting her level of effort.

Q4ALL: Is marriage validating for a man?

1 upvotes · 14 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It is for low-tier men, but not for high-tier men.

If a wedding ring makes you more attractive to women, you probably are a low-tier man.

If a woman implies you are a loser because you aren't married, she is used to being around low-tier men.

Red Pill is Just As Useless For Isolated Men As Feminism

1 upvotes · 12 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I am a primary source.

Who Keeps Morality Now?

1 upvotes · 12 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

With a weak/no institutional authority on morality, who should keep it (if it should be kept at all)?

"Should" is a moral statement. Asking what morality "should" be is circular.

Does any of this matter anymore?

No.

Not having children vs. not having grand children

1 upvotes · 12 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

As I said, love is not voluntary.

Therefore it cannot be owed.

Chuckling at the reference to "would-be elites," though -- nope; her dad and I were solidly working-class and her mom was actually on welfare for most of her childhood.

Read again:

And if that doesn't come from a strong individual source of leadership, she'll get it somewhere else. Television, for example.

It's only natural that would-be elites hold up thuggish ghetto-type black trash as a model for what is "cool". They are weak and easy to control.

Anything that's on television is designed to exploit you.

What are your thoughts on long distance relationships?

1 upvotes · 11 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's not a real relationship. It only becomes one if she picks her butt up and moves it to be near him.

I generally advise men to avoid investing any serious emotional energy until and unless this happens.

Not having children vs. not having grand children

1 upvotes · 11 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You didn't love her.

Love, like attraction, or sexual desire, or trust, is not a conscious and deliberate act and cannot be negotiated.

Most of the stuff you found annoying about her would not, in TRP's model of human behaviour, be interpreted quite the way you did... as some sort of individual character flaw. The basic idea is that women generally have a much greater tendency to look to others for guidance on what to do and who to be.

And if that doesn't come from a strong individual source of leadership, she'll get it somewhere else. Television, for example.

It's only natural that would-be elites hold up thuggish ghetto-type black trash as a model for what is "cool". They are weak and easy to control. In fact, people who aspire to be "cool" (rather than some tangible, measurable aspiration) are easily manipulated through this desire.

It is fortunate for her that she seems to have found a better leader.

Q4all: can you frame a RP concept to make it female friendly?

1 upvotes · 10 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You seem to have mistaken inoffensive for friendly.

More Blue Pill Advice?

1 upvotes · 10 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=uDoSy1WiYfU>

(Noob Question) how many pill colors are there?

1 upvotes · 10 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

One makes you larger, and one makes you small.

'I don't come to work to be sexually assaulted': Police inspector boasts of arresting woman who 'thought it was funny to slap his bum' at Notting Hill Carnival.

1 upvotes · 29 August 2018 · /r/MensRights

It's not called the Bill of Needs.

36 and I am the weakest guy at the gym. What's the point for me?

1 upvotes · 22 August 2018 · /r/askTRP

Dude, I wish there was a gym near me that I could walk into and be the weakest person there. Think of the motivation. Christ, you're lucky.

FIRST DATE - Make Her Come To My City Via Train, or Drive To Her?

1 upvotes · 9 August 2018 · /r/askTRP

The more effort you make a woman go to in attaining something, the more she will value it.

Is mt super high sex drive a turn off for men.

1 upvotes · 3 August 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen winning a blow job contest in front of all your friends

?

CMV As a man there is no reason to date, have sex, or get married

1 upvotes · 2 August 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Sour grapes.

Q4Men regarding career women

1 upvotes · 1 August 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Is she a pretty, slender, feminine, submissive, intelligent virgin just over the age of consent, with no tattoos, facial piercings, or debt?

Or is she the same girl you see on Tinder, but with more golddigging?

A message to older rich men who prefer young women

1 upvotes · 1 August 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TL;DR:

Aging betas can only attract young girls by being betabucks. Don't be betabucks. Lift.

What do you eat before you work out?

1 upvotes · 24 July 2018 · /r/askTRP

Food.

How to deal with non receptive girls

1 upvotes · 24 July 2018 · /r/askTRP

Try again with the next ones.

Women are replaceable. There's always new ones. You're gonna blow it with some of them. Don't try to avoid that. Let it happen. Learn from it. Just be sure to discard any one you've screwed up with instead of trying to dig yourself out of a hole.

Captain doesn't seem to want to take our relationship to the next level. Should I breakup with him?

1 upvotes · 20 July 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

I love him with all my heart, but

That's not enough.

One thing that is clear from reading your paragraphs of complaints about him is that you don't respect him.

Now, we will never be able to tell from reading only your side of the story whether he is the lazy blob you claim he is, or whether you are selfish and entitled and holding back a whole bunch of context we should be hearing, because you're upset that he seems to have figured out that marriage doesn't have anything in it for him.

But that's not important. What's important is that unless a woman looks up to her man, the relationship is doomed.

Lesbian girl wants to hangout

1 upvotes · 20 July 2018 · /r/askTRP

Are lesbian chicks pretty much like men when it comes to behavior ?

No, they are like women who would never, never, never in a million years have sex with you, have no incentive to act feminine, and have on incentive to ever curb their man-hating.

However, LUGs will sex you up at the drop of a hat.

Laura Doyle's Views on Verbal Abuse in Marriage...True or Not?

1 upvotes · 18 July 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

You've written four different responses over the past four days.

I'm not going to sit here and debate with someone I don't know, over whether she is over someone else I don't know, but clearly you're pretty wound up about something. And that's baggage that's going to get in the way with the next man.

Because what men want, above all else, from a woman, is to be loved and desired. Going on about your ex, or how you don't trust him because of your ex, is not going to fall on sympathetic ears.

Being obsessed with someone else is the definition of emotionally unavailable.

How many blue pillers here have actually tried red pill methodology?

1 upvotes · 16 July 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Zero.

What Happens When Your Wife/GF Catches On to TRP?

1 upvotes · 16 July 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I mean, I think the OYS part of TRP is good - but after that you have to talk ~~honestly~~ autistically.

Fixed that for ya.

Only spergs try to put everything in the content channel.

Laura Doyle's Views on Verbal Abuse in Marriage...True or Not?

1 upvotes · 13 July 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

He did not "Alpha-widow" me. This is certainly a title that he doesn't deserve. Apart from that I won't write more :) as this would make it seem as if he mattered.

Too late. You've already shown that he still does.

If and when he doesn't, then you will be able to give all of yourself to a man again, because you will once again have all of yourself to give.

Laura Doyle's Views on Verbal Abuse in Marriage...True or Not?

1 upvotes · 12 July 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

I have been there and I was wondering why I didn't see that causality mentioned anywhere over at TRP as too me it seems quite obvious.

We don't spend much teaching LTR game over on TRP. Several reasons:

- Most of our new crowd are trying to recover from being unconfident men who give out commitment too easily.
- The ratio of commitment-worthy women in western society to RPW subscribers appears to be about the same as the ratio of sex-worthy men to TRP subscribers. In other words, there aren't enough keepers to go around, so we focus on teaching how to plate.
- The terrain that we deal with in society in general is that feminism has suppressed women's submissiveness much more than men have suppressed their protectiveness.

Even though I have nothing than contempt for the RP-aware (!) man who consciously and intentionally did that, I am not over the pain yet. It seems that he has taken so much without giving anything in return. Maybe I should just acknowledge his right to do whatever he needs to feel happy with his life.

This is the "alpha-widow" phenomenon. You're no longer with this dude, but you can't stop yourself from going back over and over to rehash your memories of him.

That isn't going to allow anyone new into your life. Men want devotion, high-value men will settle for nothing less, and you can't give it if you are putting that energy into wanting him back, hating him and wishing you had never met him, wondering why he did this or that, or trying to convince yourself and everyone around you that he was a villain and you were the victim.

We call this "oneitis" over in TRP... the subconscious belief that there is only one woman in the world, and the alternatives are winning her, or nothing. For men, the cure is simple: have sex with five to ten other women. Then see if you still think she's special, or care what she does with her life.

Since, for women, this would amount to "become a slut", and is thus a bad idea, curing oneself of alpha widowhood is... less easy.

I would recommend starting by coming to grips with the realization that it doesn't matter whose fault things were. Blame, hatred, and anger are just as obsessive as love.

Laura Doyle's Views on Verbal Abuse in Marriage...True or Not?

1 upvotes · 9 July 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Well, I'm not in 100% agreement with Laura Doyle's work, but she often is somewhere near the point.

When she says that "abuse is rarely a one-way street", she's correct. Most relationship abuse is reciprocal, and part of an adversarial relationship that goes in both directions. Ass-kickings, literal or metaphorical, generally don't just fall out of the sky.

However, what Doyle fails to point out is that abuse takes many different forms, and the form that a partner receives abuse in is not always the same as the form they dish it out in.

You might, for example, see a situation where the man is straightforwardly abusive, and the woman counters with this.

Since the ways in which partners can behave adversarially towards partners vary and can be hard to see, it's often difficult to tell without inside information if abuse is reciprocal or not.

Abuse is best understood as a pattern of adversarial behaviour between partners. What this means is that an unhealthy relationship takes the pattern of "her vs. him", while a healthy one takes the pattern of "him and her vs. whatever bullshit life decides to hit them with".

The question of how much this pattern occurs, and what is perpetuating it, is a far more productive one than "who is the aggressor?", because this stuff occurs as a dynamic between two people, and trying to fix one of them without fixing the other, or the connection, is pretty much doomed to failure.

I can't comment on what you are seeing in this particular situation, because I am unable to observe it.

Almost all aggressive behaviour in humans falls into one of three categories:

1. Fear aggression is carried out in order to allay fears, by attempting to control the target to avert a real or imagined threat. (Feminism, the holocaust)
2. Dominance aggression is engaged to establish a dominance hierarchy, or move up in one. (BDSM, office politics, bighorn sheep butting heads)
3. Instrumental aggression is for some material gain. (Robbery, communist revolutions, hunting)

Pretty much all relationship aggression is fear based (unless you're dealing with kinky people)... so the next time you see some, try to ask yourself what this person is afraid of.

What's your best advice for staying lean?

1 upvotes · 9 July 2018 · /r/askTRP

Get huge muscle mass by lifting and eating.

Then cutting is easy.

Is it fucked if i tell a chick she cant ride dick?

1 upvotes · 9 July 2018 · /r/askTRP

Wrong.

How can a modern society incentivize monogamy?

1 upvotes · 7 July 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It can't.

Solving The Manchild Conundrum

1 upvotes · 7 July 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What is there to solve?

Feminists spent the last 50 years fighting tooth and nail to make men docile and controllable. Now some of them are.

Mission accomplished.

Q4RP: How does the RP worldview apply to LGBTQ Individuals?

1 upvotes · 7 July 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Gay people have always existed, yet mention of them is conspicuously absent in RP theory.

TRP isn't a model of the universe. It's goal oriented. The goal is sexual success and sexual self-determination for heterosexual men.

There's nothing in it for homosexuals, and they don't need it anyway.

Gay men like hookups with other gay men. Gay women like to commit immediately, then fight incessantly and practice domestic violence on each other before breaking up again.

Expectations are matched.

Why don't wives just tell their husbands to lift and dress better?

1 upvotes · 7 July 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because if you make a demand, you have to take responsibility for having made it.

Why the emphasis on female hypergamy and not chad's polygamy by men's groups?

1 upvotes · 7 July 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because TRP is about having sex with women, not other men.

TRP is a response to feminism, not Jordan Peterson

1 upvotes · 5 July 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

You're wrong, but you asked the right question, which is important. Going to make an article of this.

The Red Pill Has Too Much Respect For Women

1 upvotes · 30 June 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Luckily for you I subscribe to the Russian beat a horse until it drinks school of thought in contrast to my American colleges who simply bring a horse to water.

Yep, you are waaaaay too patient with idiots. You can lead a whore to culture, but you can't make her think.

Very specific issue: How to deal with male/female differences when hiking (or exercising together in general)?

1 upvotes · 26 June 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Is this something he used to do alone?

Men are really disposable.

1 upvotes · 22 June 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't need farms, food comes from the supermarket.

Q4All: Why is it okay to say "no short men" in dating profiles but not "no fat women" or "no small chested women"?

1 upvotes · 21 June 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because they can get away with it. People will do what they can get away with.

Male cheating is more acceptable than female cheating because women's actions declare it to be so. Female brutal and arbitrary rejection is more acceptable because men's actions declare it to be so.

Chad ain't gonna stop being a player until Stacy rejects him for it. Stacey ain't gonna stop laughing in Josh's face until Chad rejects her for it.

Don't hold your breath.

How feminism actually benefit men

1 upvotes · 21 June 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Let me fix that for you:

How Feminism Actually Benefits the top ten percent of Men:

1. Feminism pushed women into the workforce to compete with men who don't have specialized skills that women refuse to learn.
2. Feminism made sex more available to the top ten percent of men.
3. Feminism made women ~~less~~ more hypergamous and less materialistic, so that the bottom ninety percent of men can't use the provider role to compete for sex.

A Beginners Guide To Using Steroids Safely

1 upvotes · 21 June 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

1. We don't tone down the message to appease those who hate us and will no matter what.
2. We have contingency plans in place for when they find an excuse to ban us.

A Beginners Guide To Using Steroids Safely

1 upvotes · 21 June 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Agreed. There's no point. When you're new, you're going to get stronger by doing anything more than looking at a weight. Burn through those novice gains at the very least, and probably it's a good idea to wait longer than that.

A Beginners Guide To Using Steroids Safely

1 upvotes · 21 June 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

What would you recommend?

Picking a starting point based on your health, age, situation, goals, and experience.

One size fits no one.

A Beginners Guide To Using Steroids Safely

1 upvotes · 21 June 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

This is true, but not as great a risk as you might think, if you start out properly.

There are novice gains with steroids just as there are novice gains when you first start lifting. So your first cycle doesn't need to be (and shouldn't be) anything crazy. 50mg testosterone cypionate IM 2xweek will feel like _____ mainlining jet fuel.

This Father's Day, men are experiencing a crisis of masculinity. The solution? More feminism.

1 upvotes · 20 June 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Q4All: Is feminism for men (as a concept where feminism is about relinquishing gender roles)?

Absolutely... feminism is for men whenever feminism is looking for people to support it. It's just not for men when it is trying to help someone.

Q4All: Is the relinquishment of the male gender role in men's best interest?

Yes and no. An individual man relinquishing his male identity never benefits him, but it might benefit other men in his vicinity.

Q4All: Is the female gender role is more fluid, while the male gender role more fixed?

Men are far more tolerant of divergent behaviour in women, than women are of such things in men.

"I wanna be loyal"

1 upvotes · 20 June 2018 · /r/askTRP

Don't moralize.

Instead, learn.

The use of this action is help /u/NeverPullSumo knock women off the mental pedestal, which he has not fully accomplished yet. We can tell this because he listened to what she said, rather than watching what she did.

This is a lesson you also need to learn, because you have not yet conquered your built-in protective instinct towards women, and made it your servant instead of your master.

I can tell this because you saw allowing her to face the consequences of her actions as "humiliating her" and an "immature" act of (presumably revenge). It is nothing of the sort. She humiliated herself by cheating. Whether he chooses to shelter her from the consequences, or expose her to them, is entirely at his convenience.

Your unbridled and untamed protective instinct just overrode your judgement, and blinded you to the actions of a woman who was not only not your woman, but whom you had never even seen. The mere idea that this was a woman, somewhere, made you unable to see her culpability, and shift blame to him, because he was the only person left in the situation.

If the boyfriend dumped her in a humiliating fashion, you'd probably blame him as well.

I will tell you this once, but listen to me three times: If you do not tame this traitor who lives in your skull, he will make you suffer all throughout your life. You will be every woman's slave, and they will use you shamelessly.

Women have conquered their instinct to submit to men. You must conquer your instinct to protect women.

How strong am I for my age?

1 upvotes · 20 June 2018 · /r/askTRP

Start using a belt.

Going beltless may very well be the reason for that lackluster squat despite your decent deadlift.

Contrary to popular belief, a belt is not a crutch that makes you weaker by reliance on it. Quite the contrary. It works by giving your core muscles something to push at, so they can work harder. Use a belt for a while, and your squat will begin to close in more on your deadlift.

Oh, and don't squat more than a bit past parallel. Everyone thinks "deeper is better", right? Nah. Rippetoe has a bunch of videos on this one, so I'll just refer you to those.

Men: What do you think is the biggest dating challenge for women? Women: What do you think is the biggest dating challenge for men?

1 upvotes · 16 June 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Navigating the middle ground between attractive men who they can get sex from, but not a relationship, and unattractive men who are undesirable, but ready to commit.

Any woman can catch a dick, but the trick is to get it to the endzone without fumbling.

Boyfriend of 8 months feels disrespected...

1 upvotes · 16 June 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

You choose a very odd way to present this information. You told us about his reaction before you told us what he was reacting to.

Why?

Feminist Bookstore Closes From Lack of Sales, Blames White Men

1 upvotes · 13 June 2018 · /r/MensRights

You've surely noticed that over the past eight years, America has become extremely polarized, yes?

Feminist Bookstore Closes From Lack of Sales, Blames White Men

1 upvotes · 13 June 2018 · /r/MensRights

So what you're telling me is that, if you were in their position, you couldn't find a way to make money off all that publicity?

Your guys experiences with No Contact..

1 upvotes · 13 June 2018 · /r/askTRP

Does no contact actually work?

Yeesss.

The goal is to not talk to her.

The method is to not talk to her.

Which of those do you not understand?

Plucked from AskTRP

1 upvotes · 11 June 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Nope.

I always shake during confrontations. How do I stop this?

1 upvotes · 11 June 2018 · /r/askTRP

you need to get PUNCHED IN THE FACE (not really just quoting COBRA KAI)

Yes, really.

Why does an interest in firearms trigger a reflexive ostracism from most people?

1 upvotes · 9 June 2018 · /r/askTRP

In comment, you are starting to understand the answers to the questions you asked here.

You've realized that populations with guns are a threat that cannot be magicked away with military force if they are unified and determined in their desire to resist.

You've also realized that the major determining factor in whether a revolution happens or not is whether people are unhappy enough to put their lives on the line.

This should imply to you that revolutions happen not when political power is taken away from populations and vested in elites (this has already happened in the US), but when the power that has already been removed is wielded in such a way as to make those populations shootin' mad.

People in general do not care deeply about principles, they care deeply about their quality of life.

What this all tells us is that armed revolutions are very obviously viable when they start (as if we didn't already know this from history).

The two questions that determine what will happen, then, are: "does the population have access to arms?" and "are things bad enough to bring those rifles out of the closet?"

This is how we know that anyone who tries to disarm you isn't just trying to control the country. They are trying to control you, personally. In a way that you are not going to like.

Is your smv lowered if you have a disability?

1 upvotes · 9 June 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

What disability do you have?

He has access to endless free sex....what am I getting out of this?

1 upvotes · 9 June 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Everything with him sounds like a chore to you. And you want something from him to pay you for it.

He's Mr. Betabucks. He doesn't get you going, but he treats you like a queen.

And you're not happy, but you think maybe if he treats you more like a queen, and wants to do less with you, you'll be happy.

You won't.

Women are never happy in their relationships unless they think their man is awesome.

Men want to be treated awesome by someone okay. Women want to be treated okay by someone awesome.

Theory on Threesomes ?

1 upvotes · 6 June 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Don't make a major decision without consulting your captain.

You are thinking about whether you are okay with this. That's a major decision. Bring it to him before you arrive at a final decision. It is absolutely okay to say, "I am thinking about this kind of thing, and I like the idea of being able to please you with it. But I'm still trying to figure out if I'd be okay with it. Can you help me reason this out?"

Do not attempt to make this a surprise. That would be like getting someone a puppy as a gift, without first making sure they want to be a dog owner.

Test the water with your toe before you dive in.

How do you feel when other women flirt with your husband? For different women, this can be anything in between "icy sinking feeling in the pit of my stomach" and "kind of turned on". How do you feel if she kisses him? You should know this.

This will NOT be a one time thing if you do it and he likes it.

He's going to want to do it again. That doesn't mean he will do it without involving you, but it does mean he will look for opportunities to set another one up. So be sure you're okay with before the first time. As I said, test the water.

Consider a professional the first time if you're going to try this.

This protects you from both crazy girls, and emotional entanglements.

Be as open and honest with him as you are with yourself.

It might be that you're just a little turned on by the idea. You don't have to tell US if so, but you do have to tell him. He's the captain, but the captain can't steer the ship without good information. If you place your emotional welfare in his hands (and you have), then he needs to understand what's going on with you.

Why does an interest in firearms trigger a reflexive ostracism from most people?

1 upvotes · 5 June 2018 · /r/askTRP

I'm assuming you're thinking of wars like Afghanistan, Iraq, Vietnam

No.

How/should we praise women?

1 upvotes · 5 June 2018 · /r/askTRP

How do you handle compliments with a girl you're interested in

I just smile and say "I know. But thanks."

What's a good beginner program

1 upvotes · 3 June 2018 · /r/askTRP

I kind of just do 5day isolation workouts

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=_n5E7feJHw0

Parents won't let me go to the gym.

1 upvotes · 3 June 2018 · /r/askTRP

Okay, so you're a novice. (Large gap between squat and deadlift is indicative of a new lifter.)

This means you should be making rapid strength gains, because this is the stage where you can. It also means that pretty much anything you do will result in some gains, but it is still very possible to do things wrong and get results that are way worse than you should be getting.

What's making me suspicious is how much you are doing after you squat or deadlift. Now, you're young, you have much vitality, you feel energetic, that's good. But I'm not talking about how energetic you feel, I'm talking specifically about those muscles you're using.

As a novice, if you're not weak in the knees and walking just a little bit funny after leg day, then you're probably not lifting in a way that is going to best help you get stronger.

Are you on a proper novice program, like Stronglifts 5x5 or Starting Strength? If not, why not?

Parents won't let me go to the gym.

1 upvotes · 3 June 2018 · /r/askTRP

They also think that I go too much (5 days a week) and for too long (1-2 hours)

If you are able to spend that much time in the gym, you are on a bad program and are getting shitty results.

What the hell are you doing, sets of 10? Isolation exercises?

Do you see any way to simultaneously be able to live a committed Christian life and get married, but avoiding a situation where you become the classic pussywhipped husband?

1 upvotes · 31 May 2018 · /r/askTRP

So get yourself a girlfriend and try that out for a while.

How can I tell love and infatuation apart?

1 upvotes · 27 May 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

This is the only answer that is required. Thread over.

+1

/u/pearlsandstilettos /u/laceandsilks /u/LuckyLittleStar

Q4RP: What is red pill ideology all about to you?

1 upvotes · 21 May 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Matthew 7:6

What age should I capitalize on having fun before i get to old.

1 upvotes · 20 May 2018 · /r/askTRP

Too old for what?

Jordan Peterson wants to force you into monogamy. Jordan Peterson wants you to be a slave. He is not your friend.

1 upvotes · 20 May 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

I just don't understand when did trp turned from "you are the only one who should tell you how to live" to "people like Ben Shapiro and Jordan Peterson know better than you how you should live"

Success attracts betas.

Daddy issues vs submesive

1 upvotes · 15 May 2018 · /r/askTRP

When we're together she asks what i think she should dress, what restaurants we should go, what she should do career wise and such.

Submissive.

How do I fuck her properly if I lose arousal?

1 upvotes · 8 May 2018 · /r/askTRP

Nofap+nopussy = ejaculation within minutes.

So rub one out once in a while.

Refraining from masturbation is a tool, not a sacred virtue. If it doesn't help you, don't do it.

If your SMV is an 8, do you stop fucking 6s?

1 upvotes · 30 April 2018 · /r/askTRP

Chubby chicks are like potato chips. A steady diet is bad for you, but every once in a while you get a craving.

How to respond to the chanting of "Men are trash"?

1 upvotes · 28 April 2018 · /r/MensRights

The best response to nonsense is laughter.

How can TERPS simultaneously hate single mothers AND hate hypergamy?

1 upvotes · 21 April 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

when it comes to single motherhood it's suddenly our fault

Are you a single mother, then?

CMV: Using the anger-phase defense is intellectually dishonest.

1 upvotes · 21 April 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Defense? Why would I want to "defend" TRP?

TRP neither requires nor desires your approval.

Husband protects wife and saves her life, wounds are so massive that he turns into a vegetable, wife dumps him

1 upvotes · 20 April 2018 · /r/MensRights

Briffault's Law.

Married men of TRP, please give some advice/opinion on the possibility of marrying my ltr.

1 upvotes · 12 April 2018 · /r/askTRP

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/2d9k75/the_redefinition_of_marriage/

So I don't have a stove grill or anything else that cooks me except a microwave and boiling water. How should I get my meat protein?

1 upvotes · 8 April 2018 · /r/askTRP

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Ropa_vieja

Need help. Currently dating a PERFECT match but there's only one issue....

1 upvotes · 5 April 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

It's an issue that I don't really know what to think, simply because I haven't really been around it or experienced the need to own a firearm (even for recreational purposes, most men I know don't hunt for recreation). When he asked me what I thought, I admitted to him my honest opinion that I just really don't know.

All growth and learning, by definition, happens outside of your comfort zone.

Before you start worrying about "what do I do if we have significantly different political views?"... why not trying experiencing what all of this is about by learning to shoot?

The vast majority of political opposition to firearms in general is simply born of total lack of familiarity and the distrust and fear that go with it. Familiarity tends to overcome this pretty quickly, because upon handling one enough to become familiar with it, you tend to realize that it's a simple mechanical object that acts how you handle it, not a bulldog or rottweiler that randomly rips children's faces off for no apparent reason.

[Q4All] what is Toxic femininity to you?

1 upvotes · 4 April 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What about it?

[Q4All] what is Toxic femininity to you?

1 upvotes · 4 April 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Femininity isn't toxic.

There are a lot of toxic women around, most of whom lack femininity, but femininity itself is not in any way related to toxicity, literal or metaphorical.

r/TheBluePill is worthy of just as much ridicule that it mocks r/TheRedPill for

1 upvotes · 4 April 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Are they still a thing, then?

Let's Talk About the "Pick Me" Females

1 upvotes · 29 March 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

If we're gonna talk about "Pick Me" women

We're not.

Q4Men: Men of PPD, how would you explain male sexuality to women who are confused about "neediness" vs. "independence"?

1 upvotes · 23 March 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"neediness" vs. "independence"?

Wrong metric.

The important dimension is "entitled" vs "reciprocal".

Do The Benefits of Being Your True Self Outweigh the Costs?

1 upvotes · 23 March 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There is no true self.

We are what we repeatedly do.

You don't get to determine how attractive you are. You don't get to determine what you deserve.

1 upvotes · 23 March 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You don't get to determine how attractive you are.

Horseshit, of course you do. Eat right, get sleep, lift, dress well, groom yourself, etc.

Q4ALL: who is responsible for other partner's satisfaction/orgasm? Men? Women? Both?

1 upvotes · 23 March 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What causes women to orgasm is physical stimulation of the clitoris or G-spot; it's not a mystery.

So, he asked with a leading tone in his voice, it would be totally impossible for a woman to reach orgasm through nipple stimulation alone?

Blah blah blah problematic blah blah rape blah grooming yadda yadda intersectionality microaggressions insert latest cult jargon here

Ah, so you have rape fantasies.

Not to worry. It doesn't mean you actually want to be raped. It just means you want to be so intensely desired/desirable that men have trouble controlling themselves.

So, basically, you have one noncontrolled study to go on?

Tsk. Are you asking what my count is, you slut-shamer, you?

When there is a hiccup in your RP journey

1 upvotes · 22 March 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

+1

Q4ALL: who is responsible for other partner's satisfaction/orgasm? Men? Women? Both?

1 upvotes · 22 March 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm not quite sure you know how to science.

If you read a study that looks at the correlation between physical acts, and women's ability to orgasm, what you're going to get is the the correlation between physical acts and women's ability to orgasm.

What you are not going to get is data on what causes women to orgasm.

For that, you want to consult someone (ideal a bunch of someones) who have made a lot of women orgasm a lot of times. This tends to get at data that self-report surveys just don't.

For course, the ideal way to get real data on how to cause a female orgasm would be to try a selection of different methods (both physical and psychological) of provoking orgasm on a large sample of women, under laboratory conditions. This would of course be impractical (not to mention that many, although not all, women would find laboratory conditions somewhat inhibitory).

Speaking from experience, the number one inhibitor of orgasm is not "lack of finger or tongue action", it's "defensive or guarded mental attitude". There's a certain subset of women who are too inhibited to get there through PIV sex, but can still get there with more precisely controlled and targeted stimulation. However, the underlying problem still lives above the neck.

In my experience, fixing that yields much better results.

What do YOU think RP is?

1 upvotes · 20 March 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If this is what The Red Pill is, I do not see how it is possible to discuss or debate in any meaningful way.

... he said, on an entire sub devoted to doing just that.

Q4ALL: who is responsible for other partner's satisfaction/orgasm? Men? Women? Both?

1 upvotes · 20 March 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

How did this conversation turn into my personal sexual experience?

Because it was always about that.

We could banter endlessly about the details, and have lots of good fun, but at the end of the day, it's obvious that your general beliefs about humanity are caused by your personal feelings about your own life.

You do, however, seem to be habitually misunderstanding me. There is indeed such a thing as male sexual skill. But that skill is not physical technique, it's psychological technique. In other words, game. Massive attraction and excitement leads to easy orgasms. Ambivalence leads to incredibly difficult ones. And both men's ability to create attraction, and women's ability to open up and let themselves feel that, are deciding factors.

If you want to improve your sex life, improve your attitude about men. If you're happy with it the way it is, great, but... then why are you hanging out on a internet forum complaining about men's lack of ability to get you off?

Angry people often insist that their life is going just fine, thank you oh so very much, because they do not wish their complaints to be dismissed. Observers are often puzzled by this, because they are, in effect, simultaneously complaining and insisting everything is fine.

Does love even exist at this point?

1 upvotes · 20 March 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Define "love".

[Q] how come its fine if a guy had sex and have high n count but if women have a high n count they got shame about it?

1 upvotes · 20 March 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Guesswork cannot be avoided, because anyone can say anything.

Holding out for a verbal promise of exclusivity might feel safer, but it's actually the same situation, because a girl can do that and find herself dumped a week later. Commitment is an emotional state, not a formally recognized condition, and this has been the case since "saving it for marriage" stopped being a thing.

Working with a man's emotional state, attitude, and desires does indeed feel riskier than working with his verbal promises. But the reason it feels riskier is that it lays bare to observation the risk that is there in both cases. They are, in fact, the same case.

The whole idea behind the "red pill" metaphor is facing the truth, no matter how ugly it is. No matter how much of a crap situation the last two generations of women created for the latest crop of singles, they're better off knowing what they are dealing with.

Would it look "weak" to carry a retractable night stick?

1 upvotes · 19 March 2018 · /r/askTRP

I carry a 9mm semiauto Sphinx SDP with tritium night sights. You do the math.

[Q] how come its fine if a guy had sex and have high n count but if women have a high n count they got shame about it?

1 upvotes · 17 March 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Good question.

There is an implied strategy here, but it's not immediately obvious what that is, and "leveraging that subjectivity" is pretty unclear, now that I read it back. So let's think about what this means in terms of strategy.

One way to think about strategy is understand what the fantasy ideal mate looks like, and then figure out how to create that impression.

For example, one trait of the fantasy ideal male is that nothing ever phases him. Come the apocalypse, he simply gives a shrug and a chuckle, and sets to work dealing with it. Obviously, the idea of a man being literally like this is complete horseshit. Every human being has a breaking point.

But a man who understands this fantasy ideal can think about ways to resemble that ideal in an achievable fashion.

So, when we talk about this idea:

if you don't fuck him quickly, you're not into him, if you fuck someone else quickly, you're a whore.

...we're working with a trait of the ideal fantasy female mate: she is enthralled with her man, and cannot control her passion for him, but all other men are completely unappealing to her and always have been.

Again, like the male example, this is unattainable. But a woman who understands this fantasy can think about ways to resemble that ideal in an achievable fashion.

How do you flirt?

1 upvotes · 15 March 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

https://www.reddit.com/r/RedPillWomen/comments/7ad6eb/approaching_men_the_art_of_the_bad_excuse/

Started sobbing after boxing class. Not sure what is wrong with me. How to handle?

1 upvotes · 13 March 2018 · /r/askTRP

You were a coward and a pussy.

Notice I didn't say "are". I said "were".

Whatever you are doing is what you are. It is our actions that define us. Resolve to do better tomorrow.

Families and Children

1 upvotes · 6 March 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Which one?

Families and Children

1 upvotes · 5 March 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

+1

How to stop being so "boy obsessed"?

1 upvotes · 5 March 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

All through this conversation, you have been thrashing about, taking one tangent after another trying to convince me, or more importantly yourself, that you shouldn't have to change.

But if you are not willing to change, why the fuck are you here having this conversation? Advice on what to do differently is the only thing I can do for you.

If you want to make a bunch of excuses to keep doing what you have always done, you will get what you have always gotten. Do you like what you are getting so far? No? Well, then, check yourself. Here you are going on, and on, and on, about what you want, and what he shouldn't care about, as if finding a man were like ordering a sandwich: "Extra cheese, no pickles".

Has this worked so far? No, it has not.

That's why you came to us. Except now what you are doing is wasting my time, because you don't fucking listen. I'm trying to tell you what men care about and how they think, and you just keep saying "I don't want a man like that!"

I think I'm done here. I'm willing to offer help, but not to have to fight someone to get them to accept it.

How to stop being so "boy obsessed"?

1 upvotes · 4 March 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

I mean I am VERY picky about personality

...

I am mostly just hoping someone would be able to accept a woman who is never going to look like a head turner type

TL;DR: Girl with high standards seeks man with low standards.

How much of an advantage is having a big dick?

1 upvotes · 4 March 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Absolutely none at all.

Q4RP: What are the side effects of TRP?

1 upvotes · 4 March 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That's why words are so hard.

How to stop being so "boy obsessed"?

1 upvotes · 3 March 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

I am mostly just hoping someone would be able to accept a woman who is never going to look like a head turner type (facially at least lol) so that I don't remain alone the rest of my life lol. As I mentioned to another person, I have very few standards for men outside of his character

Well, that was one of the more unattractive things you could have said.

Ew.

I'd advise keeping that sentiment to yourself around men whom you want to like you.

Submissive Behaviour as Strategy

1 upvotes · 2 March 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

hence my surprise (not disagreeing with it) that they have this particular Dream Fantasy and initially not dream to sleep with as many women possible

Not quite.

Men want both. And since almost no one can have both (heheheheheh), which one men choose mostly depends upon what's on offer. Which means that just as a skilled enough male "player" can make a "good" girl cheat on her husband, a skilled enough girl can make a "player" commit to her.

But at TRP we teach "bang a lot of sluts" game over LTR game, because we all live in Upside Down Clown World, where sluttiness is celebrated, so there are a lot of sluts.

How to stop being so "boy obsessed"?

1 upvotes · 2 March 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

The problem is that I'm not naturally genetically gifted in the face category. Even on my best days when I was pretty fit and dressed nicely, I probably didn't turn heads compared to the very attractive young women around me, and barely get hit on. Looks are a very sore spot for me because of this.

Losing fat may help. It does change the appearance of the face.

If you truly do have unfortunate genetics, consider surgery. A lot of people inexplicably regard this as somehow beyond the pale, which I have never understood. It shows a lot more character to use every tool at your disposal to better your situation, than it does to meekly submit to fate through mere inertia.

Submissive Behaviour as Strategy

1 upvotes · 1 March 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Experimentation and observation. Then later helping other men on TRP.

A man who can seduce women knows he is doing something right. But a man who can tell another man how to seduce women knows exactly what he is doing right.

Caught husband doing drugs

1 upvotes · 25 February 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

I'm worried about my husband's safety is that wrong?

Of course not. But your immediate reaction has been very controlling.

That's not a good way to get results from men, that's a good way to start an argument. Don't start trying to change his behaviour... instead, be open with him about your fears, and let him decide if, and how, his behaviour needs to change.

Caught husband doing drugs

1 upvotes · 24 February 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

You talked to us before him?

What?

"So people think we are dating now"

1 upvotes · 20 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

Learn to master the art of the non-committal grunt.

Childhood friend rejecting RP truth, needs help

1 upvotes · 19 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

You can't sell red pills. They're too bitter.

You can only give them out to those who have asked.

Any recommendations for a full body workout that I can do 3x a week?

1 upvotes · 19 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

I stand by with what I said.

I don't give a shit where you stand.

Doing the big 5 compound lifts over and over and no accessories is fucking boring.

You're going to stay small and weak because you have no discipline.

Feminists Arnt Radical Enough

1 upvotes · 19 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Ethnonationalism?

Sure. Worked for generations. Problem is, you need the "ethno" part to make it work. America was always based on a particular philosophy rather than an ethnic identity. This is not to say that America isn't uniquely characterized by its white European origins, but it was founded on an identity that wasn't ethnic at all, but based on shared principles, values, and customs.

These have not been transmitted very well at all.

How much does going to the gym improve male attractiveness?

1 upvotes · 18 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Lots of strong guys don't show their strength through their clothes.

Those are not strong guys. They are six-pack obsessed anorexics.

If you are super-ripped, but look small the moment you cover up your skin, then what you have is not advanced muscle development, but low subcutaneous body fat. If you have been lifting for a number of years, and this is you, then what you have is also called an eating disorder.

In order to build muscle, you have to eat food. Many men are so obsessed with keeping body fat low that they undereat to a ridiculous degree, wasting years of effort in the gym.

A key way of identifying these guys online is that they accuse anyone who criticizes this practice of being "fat".

Intelligence is unattractive

1 upvotes · 18 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

For super smart ppl they have no trouble missing the point.

This is not unusual. Intelligence does not in any way reduce a person's capacity for self-deception.

It merely increases the sophistication of whatever self-talk a person uses for that purpose.

Why do you think more men than women have an interest in sexual humiliation?

1 upvotes · 16 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

[citation needed]

Why people choose TRP, and how you can change that

1 upvotes · 16 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's part of the brainwashing process.

Why Men Get Accused of Rape Days After The Fact and Why Women are Right to Do This

1 upvotes · 16 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

And yet here you are.

Players only love you when they're playing.

1 upvotes · 16 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Mental instability is pretty much a requirement for any kind of artistic talent.

Why people choose TRP, and how you can change that

1 upvotes · 16 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Sorry, sweetie. Too tired right now. Take a raincheck?

Why Men Get Accused of Rape Days After The Fact and Why Women are Right to Do This

1 upvotes · 16 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So the patriarchy generally listens to women, and rape culture doesn't exist?

Cool.

I do so love playing "feminism vs. feminism" with you!

Feminists Arnt Radical Enough

1 upvotes · 15 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You did the nursing home bit already. Was a good bit for your standard TRP audience, but I find it somewhat tangential.

So let's get us back on topic. I'll make the implied question explicit: How do you plan to get middle America to start having more kids?

(For the record, I think there are alternatives, but they are just as difficult to sell.)

Feminists Arnt Radical Enough

1 upvotes · 15 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I've never really been that into the whole "save society" thing.

Because it's very easy to paint doomsday scenarios (and even easier if there is some truth to them), but those don't actually amount to a plan.

And when you ask the people collecting recruits, or donations, or both, what their plan is... well, then you usually hear a great deal about what they want everyone to do, but not so much about how they plan to get everyone to do it.

Then you realize they only have half a plan. The easy half.

Which means that if you want to save society, society has to want to be saved. Stand on the street corner and harangue them, and they act like they're doing you a favour just to listen.

Perhaps someday, if the water gets hot enough, they'll come looking for advice.

Of "Chads" and Levison Wood

1 upvotes · 15 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If I had a eligible daughter and she brought home this guy I would be very very proud.

Dude...

Feminists Arnt Radical Enough

1 upvotes · 15 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Capitalism doesn't have to respect anything. That's not its job.

It simply flows from the fact that the unit of "fucks given" is the dollar. If you give the most fucks about fucked up shit, capitalism will sell you fucked up shit. If give the most fucks about a healthy society, capitalism will sell you that.

Capitalism is for giving you what you want, not making sure that you want the right shit (right according to somebody else).

That's why all these low testosterone millennial communists think capitalism is the worst thing ever... because it is a mirror held up to them.

Why are TERPERS supporting rape as a sexual strategy?

1 upvotes · 15 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Schadenfreude is my fetish.

Just as yours is impotent moral outrage.

Which is why we are both enjoying ourselves right now.

Want to be successful with women? Stop being a nerd.

1 upvotes · 15 February 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

If you do what you always did, you're gonna get what you always got.

CMV: Feminists dislike women who have casual sex and want to ban casual sex

1 upvotes · 15 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

In summary, feminists likely want to ban casual sex.

Not at all. Just casual sex that hurts their feelings. If this had been a femdom thing, they'd have been celebrating it.

What you have to understand is that feminism is not a coherent philosophy. It's a set of argument techniques:

1. Find something you don't like.
2. Characterize it as misogyny or harmful to women.
3. Complain to the patriarchy.
4. Wait for the patriarchy to fix it.

If red pill is, as you say, abusive, and doesn't work long term, how do you explain the millions of women who stay with abusive partners?

1 upvotes · 13 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Internalized misogyny

{This is feminist code for "we secretly admit that women are perpetual children and have no agency".}

Good looking but totally omega. What to do?

1 upvotes · 12 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

WTF is wrong with you?

Read the fucking sidebar.

Read the post histories of the Vanguard and ECs.

Go approach girls and practice.

You are not special. You don't need custom advice.

How do I maintain frame when I'm not a well liked person?

1 upvotes · 11 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

Did you by any chance grow up in a poor black community dominated by thug culture, and are now moving into more professional class social circles with more white people?

How to see a chick quickly or get rejected quickly on tinder without wasting a time?

1 upvotes · 11 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

"Hey"

"That line usually work for you?"

"haha mighty forward aren't you?"

"Yep"

Observation about girls and lifting

1 upvotes · 4 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

I still feel fat even though I can easily see my top 4 abs right now.

You're probably about 15% or thereabouts. I would recommend staying there and focusing on packing on muscle mass.

If you're coming from "obese", then what you've done so far is probably good, but realize that fat guys get strong faster than than skinny guys because they are already anabolic as hell.

So what you really need to do is resist the temptation to starve yourself ripped while you are still small.

If you're at 15% or so, then you're going to have an easier time packing on that mass. Once you have it, you will be more adapted to building muscle without having to be fat (yes, this happens), and you will also be more able to cut easily, because you have high lean body mass.

Is it possible to let this be an excuse for being too fat? Sure. But the more frequent problem is guys who never get their lean body mass up because they are too concerned with having their musculature be extremely visible at all times. There is a reason powerlifters don't look like bodybuilders.

Observation about girls and lifting

1 upvotes · 4 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

Yes. This is also why you weigh 185 instead of 210, because it's why you weighed 135 in the first place. Guys who think they are hard gainers usually have poor sleep habits.

It will you real effort and some time to retrain. But this is probably the missing piece. Good luck out there.

Observation about girls and lifting

1 upvotes · 4 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

Good. Gain 40 more next year.

What is your stance on depression?

1 upvotes · 3 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

People are depressed if their lives suck.

Depressed people convince themselves that they are suffering from Expensive Pill Deficiency instead of depression, so they don't have to face up to the fact that their lives suck, or put in the work to make their lives not suck.

Do young women keep their hair long for themselves or for Chad?

1 upvotes · 3 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yes.

Casual sex means your standards are too low.

1 upvotes · 3 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TL;DR: OP really wants kids.

RedPill catch 22

1 upvotes · 3 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

But any girl that gives him sex quickly is a whore.

[citation needed]

Blue Pill/feminism has failed in it's response to broken lost men who need a father figure - hence Cernovich, J Petersen ETC

1 upvotes · 31 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Oh, leave him out of this. The glove didn't fit. Clearly innocent.

Sexual judgment disparity will disappear if women take more active roles

1 upvotes · 31 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

And?

Sexual judgment disparity will disappear if women take more active roles

1 upvotes · 31 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Which is just a way of saying "I don't like it".

Blue Pill/feminism has failed in it's response to broken lost men who need a father figure - hence Cernovich, J Petersen ETC

1 upvotes · 31 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yeah, pretty much.

Sexual judgment disparity will disappear if women take more active roles

1 upvotes · 31 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

And?

Sexual judgment disparity will disappear if women take more active roles

1 upvotes · 31 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

And if jews and arabs all convert to buddhism, there will be peace in the middle east.

What's your point?

Girl I just started dating uses "white male" or "old white male" as pejoratives when talking about her boss, politicians, or any other authority figure she dislikes...

1 upvotes · 30 January 2018 · /r/askTRP

Even if LTR is your end-game goal, women are still women. They will always virtual signal, it's a byproduct of being an emotional being rather than a rational one. Man up, laugh at her for being a child, and carry on.

+1

Would you enter a relationship with a single parent?

1 upvotes · 29 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Hey, I wasn't asking for the play-by-play, just the count.

Would you enter a relationship with a single parent?

1 upvotes · 29 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Maybe if her daughter was over the age of consent. And hot.

The Blue Pill is merely an anger phase response to the Red Pill's call

1 upvotes · 29 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Remember that anger is the second stage.

The first is denial.

Women want less sex in relationships because men don't put nearly as much effort into being sexually attractive.

1 upvotes · 29 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Well, I'm glad you're not bitter at all, and that your sex life is fulfilling and satisfying.

But of course it's a man's job to make a woman want sex. And it's a woman's job to make a man want to stay.

Plate being bitchy

1 upvotes · 27 January 2018 · /r/askTRP

What did you do to make her this sure she was in charge, let her fuck you in the ass with a strap-on?

This one is beyond salvage.

Q4Women: Would you rather have an unattractive man just for yourself or share an attractive man with others?

1 upvotes · 26 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Believe it or not, that's what I was thinking of.

Rise in narcissism among women

1 upvotes · 25 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Never mistake increased diagnosis for increased prevalence.

Q4Women: Would you rather have an unattractive man just for yourself or share an attractive man with others?

1 upvotes · 25 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yes, you evaluated the social fitness of the person asking the question.

Men would generally consider that irrelevant.

Does the imperial evidence suggest that, overwhelmingly, AWALT? What evidence suggests NAWALT?

1 upvotes · 25 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

aren't women pretty much all greedy and hypergamous sexual predators who objectify men and then trade up when another more useful target becomes available?

What's important is not whether this is true or not, but what happens to men who treat it as if it were true, as opposed to those who treat it as if it were false.

Q4Women: Would you rather have an unattractive man just for yourself or share an attractive man with others?

1 upvotes · 25 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's interesting because it illustrates the difference between male and female thinking.

Men read this question, and interpret it as "Which do you prize more, attractiveness, or fidelity?"

Women read it and interpret it as "Imagine yourself with an unattractive man. Now imagine yourself with a cheater. Which of these would you ~~prefer~~ like?"

To which the answer is always (2 2)(2)2 2 ———

The only way to get at women's real answer to this question is to observe whether they tolerate cheating more in attractive men than unattractive ones.

Help! Need advice about my boyfriend. Long time lurker here

1 upvotes · 25 January 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Before cohabitation, make sure you have discussed your expectations regarding finances, marriage, and children.

You do not have to precisely agree, especially if someone is open to changing their mind, but nothing creates conflict faster than a surprise mismatch of expectations on one of these.

Do not simply assume he has the same goals and timetable you do, and don't assume that "if he loved you", he would.

Wrists hurt from lifting

1 upvotes · 23 January 2018 · /r/askTRP

You have bad external rotation mobility in your shoulders.

Use a Buffalo Bar.

How widespread is The Red Pill?

1 upvotes · 23 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I mean a certain understand about the nature of men, women, and sex.

The red pill exists far beyond the Manosphere, and certain parts of the Manosphere have not taken the red pill (MRAs).

I want to be ladylike, but instead, I feel childish.

1 upvotes · 22 January 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

One of the best traits of a lady is knowing when to act like a child.

Will the categorization "divorced" eventually go away? And when?

1 upvotes · 22 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

All the usual suspects in our society who want us to be married? (Churches, Govt, Women, Parents/Grandparents, etc)

The "Govt" isn't an entity. The left wants to kill marriage. The Jesus right wants to promote it. The libertarian right wants the law to butt out.

Are military guys mostly pro-marriage?

1 upvotes · 21 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Young enlisted get married because the service bribes them to.

Real Purple Pill Debate Cannot Exist Until the Mods Respect the Red Pill Position

1 upvotes · 21 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Who cares if it can exist or not?

The Red Pill is useless to anyone who doesn't use it, and debating with those who don't is only useful as entertainment.

Why do women/blue pillers even visit the red pill?

1 upvotes · 19 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This is the basic Social Justice Warrior dynamic. SJWs aren't SJWs because they actually care about anyone other than themselves.

It's about them feeling virtuous, and looking virtuous to others. For that, they need a cartoon villain to fight.

Where should one go to get relationship advice?

1 upvotes · 17 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I mean that TRP studies seduction, not relationships.

Where should one go to get relationship advice?

1 upvotes · 17 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Nowhere.

No group in this culture can be relied upon to give good relationship advice.

Questioning Marriage/Relationships like an atheist questions God?

1 upvotes · 14 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Marriage is dying, and most people haven't realized it yet.

As with most things, those who make the call too early are denounced as horrible people, and those who make the call too late will lose everything.

In light of this past year's events have Trump-supporting RPer's been duped?

1 upvotes · 14 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Anyone who cares about marijuana policy on any other grounds than abstract political principle is a loser.

In light of this past year's events have Trump-supporting RPer's been duped?

1 upvotes · 14 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If only they had promised the working class higher taxes and less freedom instead!

Surely then they would have won! Curse you, Trump!

In light of this past year's events have Trump-supporting RPer's been duped?

1 upvotes · 14 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The reason they like Trump has nothing to do with policy. They like him because he makes people they don't like flip their shit, and that's the one thing you can say he truly excels at that.

Not quite. His policies also make them flip their shit, and that is awesome.

Tall girls not interested?

1 upvotes · 13 January 2018 · /r/askTRP

To tall girls, you're just another man.

To short girls, you are extra huge.

Many people of both sexes have a size contrast fetish.

Don't less traditional women fare better when it comes to dating?

1 upvotes · 13 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

traditionally feminine hobbies are not attractive to men.

What kind of strange and rather dull man likes a woman for her hobbies?

Waist Trainers

1 upvotes · 13 January 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

I dunno. Ab/oblique work tends not to bulk too much unless you're doing hgh.

But really, if you're doing heavy compounds, I tend to agree with Rippetoe that additional ab core work really isn't all that necessary. All those muscles are for stabilizing heavy weights, not leaning forward really strongly.

Load 400lbs on your shoulders, and you're working them the way they are supposed to be worked.

Dunno what your program or goals are like, though, so, worth what you paid for it.

Are average, below average and nerdy girls the sluttiest of all due to their low self esteem?

1 upvotes · 10 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Nope, it's because low-tier women are surrounded by groveling betas heaping them with praise and attention, while high-tier women are surrounded by alpha jerkboys.

Q4All: Why do so many men have such low self esteem about their looks or personality and what can we do to fix this?

1 upvotes · 9 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Have you succeeded at all?

Q4All: Why do so many men have such low self esteem about their looks or personality and what can we do to fix this?

1 upvotes · 9 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Did you have an agenda?

Q4All: Why do so many men have such low self esteem about their looks or personality and what can we do to fix this?

1 upvotes · 9 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I invite you to write a Field Report post on TRP about it. While this is not the first time this sort of experiment has been tried, more raw data is always useful.

Q4All: Why do so many men have such low self esteem about their looks or personality and what can we do to fix this?

1 upvotes · 9 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Did you have sex with any of them?

Which dating problems happen across all classes?

1 upvotes · 8 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

All of them.

"after seeing someone's ring, would pick it apart later. It was a mix of judging the man and pitying the woman". It's never to your face, but to what extent is a man judged for buying an inexpensive engagement ring?

1 upvotes · 8 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Stupid people are easily distracted by shiny objects.

One of the biggest issues with The Red Pill is people accepting ideas and thoughts from unqualified people.

1 upvotes · 8 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

some great content, but too full of wild claims with no proof.

Proof is for convincing people.

I'm not here to convince you. I'm here to say what I have to say. I have absolutely no need in my life for you to believe it, or try my advice in your life. I'm not recruiting for anything, and I'm not looking for validation from a bunch of internet monkeys.

Try it out if you want to.

The proof will be what happens in your life when you do.

On the gender mental health gap

1 upvotes · 8 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

One in four women is on antidepressants, and women are using — or at least prescribed — these medications at higher rates than men. Any idea why that's happening?

Most women cannot thrive without male leadership.

How to deal with self-esteem and overthinking?

1 upvotes · 5 January 2018 · /r/askTRP

So approach someone and start a conversation with no intention of kino or escalation.

Just say hi, exchange a few pleasantries, and move on.

Do this until it's not frightening.

How to deal with self-esteem and overthinking?

1 upvotes · 3 January 2018 · /r/askTRP

This is the Fear and Shame Loop.

You do not fear the consequences of rejection, you fear how rejection will make you feel.

Start small.

Instead of trying to "approach" or "pick up" girls, work on getting comfortable just talking to them. This will desensitize you. No one fears the familiar.

Red Pill hate across the internet [Images inside]

1 upvotes · 20 December 2017 · /r/askTRP

Who are these people and why would I give a shit?

How to solve the 'be honest' paradox?

1 upvotes · 20 December 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Don't listen to what women say. Watch what they do.

A man politely compliments a feminist woman at a grocery store and, in an attempt to escalate and get her phone number, he asks if she has a boyfriend. How should she view this interaction?

1 upvotes · 20 December 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Dodged a bullet.

LTRd celebrity girl, how to not slip into old habits

1 upvotes · 15 December 2017 · /r/askTRP

Yes, on reddit or in person. /u/HumanSockPuppet and I collaborate on a lot of stuff... we've known each other far longer than TRP has been a thing.

LTRd celebrity girl, how to not slip into old habits

1 upvotes · 15 December 2017 · /r/askTRP

Comments are off the cuff.

Posts are often thoughts I've ruminated over in the background for some time. Or something inspired by an other post.

LTRd celebrity girl, how to not slip into old habits

1 upvotes · 15 December 2017 · /r/askTRP

Whatever makes me think of something I feel like saying.

How to avoid workplace/housemate toxicity?

1 upvotes · 11 December 2017 · /r/askTRP

Yes.

If a stranger's dog shits on the sidewalk, don't follow along behind him cleaning it up.

Just step around it.

What Is Upstream Red Pill?

1 upvotes · 8 December 2017 · /r/askTRP

TL;DR:

Oh, /u/gaylubeoil sempai! /u/gaylubeoil sempai! Tell me about who you read and why! I want to know everything about you, /u/gaylubeoil sempai! Notice me! Notice meeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeee!

TRP as a data source and a mindset is actually hurting the general interests of men as a whole

1 upvotes · 26 November 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

But a lot of the things that TRP preaches doesn't really make you a better person

Better how?

Does the Red Pill perspective have any "net positive" suggestions for society?

1 upvotes · 26 November 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So far, I have not seen such productive suggestions. I don't see how taking the Red Pill will help men overall because it does not prevent the main problem they are concerned about, namely hypergamy

Nothing prevents hypergamy. It's built into the human condition.

Made the mistake of thinking someone cared.

1 upvotes · 13 November 2017 · /r/TheRedPill

Made the mistake of thinking someone cared.

No, you made the mistake of not understanding what happens when women care.

She needs you to be strong so she can care, just like you need her to be pretty so you can care.

Your woman is not your therapist. If she has been with you for some time, you can tell her what's bothering you, but even then you must do so in an FYI, I-already-have-a-plan-to-handle-this tone.

Never think that tolerating your weakness is the barometer of caring. Because no woman can rise to that standard.

The barometers of female caring are obedience, and kinky sex.

New to RPW! Advice for young disabled women please!

1 upvotes · 13 November 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

Accepted, but not my point.

What I am trying to get across is that because you don't get the normal degree of negative social feedback when you make some sort of minor faux pas, you may not know what not to do.

This could be hurting your presentation considerably.

Education, Profession, and the RP woman

1 upvotes · 11 November 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

Well, as you say, men are the gatekeepers of relationships - what they often want is sex without commitment.

Common misconception, and an easy mistake to make, because men deliberately create this impression. They do this for the same reason that women create the impression that they are uninterested in sex.

Because women serve as the gatekeepers of sex, they must pretend less desire for sex than they actually feel, because they must vet those who desire it from them.

Because men serve as the gatekeepers of relationships, they must pretend less desire for them than they actually feel, because they must filter which women are keepers.

The path to sex with women isn't "select women who are eager for sex", because these women are low-value and not relationship-worthy.

The path to relationships with men isn't "select men who are eager for a relationship", because these men are low-value and not sex-worthy.

even if they say they are offering commitment

Men don't offer commitment. Any man who appears to offer commitment is actually looking for sex-on-lockdown, and that fake commitment will vanish the instant a slightly better sex option is in play.

Instead, you have to inspire them to want it.

It's okay to next a man if you think you couldn't hold onto him. That's smart strategy if you do it before you have sex with him. But never try to save your ego by pretending it's a problem with him. Because that inhibits learning and progress.

New to RPW! Advice for young disabled women please!

1 upvotes · 11 November 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

Well, the good news is that despite the CP, you are still flexible enough to get your foot in your mouth.

Seriously, this illustrates one of your biggest problems... the way that no one will say anything negative to you. This deprives you of honest feedback.

Like right there. That was a nasty-bitch thing to say, what you just said. Saying that on a date with a boy, especially a high-school boy (younger people of both sexes tend to be more thin-skinned), well... that would pretty much be the end of it right there.

And even if you would never say that in front of a man, the fact that you said it at all, well... not good.

But no one calls you on things like this, because no one wants to look like a major asshole by being mean to the crippled girl. So you get treated as the angelic avatar of sweetness and light, whether you actually are or not. This works in a fashion kind of similar to how everyone treats you like an asexual child.

Which means it's just as easy for you to make a social mistake as anyone else, but much harder for you to know when you have done so.

What would you do for marriage? What would you do for a happy relationship?

1 upvotes · 11 November 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

To put it another way, a woman should be willing to do those things that men find desirable and attractive if she wants a relationship or marriage, because that is the only way she will be able to earn a man's commitment.

Oh, absolutely.

And in order to do that, she has to know what those things are. Knowing what to do and being willing to do it must go together.

What would you do for marriage? What would you do for a happy relationship?

1 upvotes · 11 November 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

That's an excellent question, but it must be preceded by a more fundamental one:

"Do you understand what men want?"

Q4MEN: Can a man still pedestalize a woman even if he has many alpha traits?

1 upvotes · 9 November 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Oh, absolutely.

This is where your stereotypical "natural" or "Chad" (guy who learned redpill stuff by accident) meets his doom.

Because the "accidental student" knows, but doesn't know what he knows, his sexual power comes from options and the threat of his disinterest, which produces natural dread game.

He ignores Stacey's texts, and goes and spends his saturday night with Cindy, if Stacey is less interesting. And his power over Cindy is maintained by his potential to do the same to her.

But Chad doesn't know this. He's just doing what feels good. He not only doesn't know that his actions maintain his sexual power, or how they do so, he also doesn't know that his happiness and success in mating come from doing so.

So, once he forms a serious relationship, most of his toolbox is gone.

He has never established dominance within that relationship, or trained in her in what he expects. She has simply acted accommodating out of fear of losing him. The moment she thinks she has him on lockdown, his "natural game" evaporates.

This is how Tiger Woods wound on apologizing on television for being the victim of domestic violence. This is how "Sugar" Shane Mosley's ex-wife got his championship belts. This is how a long list of society's perceived super-alpha males all got taken to the cleaners.

Because someone who learns through accidental exposure, and not systematic study of knowledge, is left with dangerous gaps in his skill set.

Should sexual assault carry the death penalty?

1 upvotes · 9 November 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Which kind are we talking about?

The kind committed by Kevin Spacey, the kind committed by Bill Clinton, the kind committed by John Podesta, or the kind committed by Jeffery Dahmer?

CMV: If you're not Alpha, you're a cuck

1 upvotes · 9 November 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Semantics.

Some Actual Blue Pill Dating Advice

1 upvotes · 9 November 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What struck me as curious about that post is that pretty much all the RP posters who responded had some odd ideas of what constitutes as Blue Pill dating advice. To be more concrete many seemed to think that just because we blue pill sheeple believe in genuine, respectful and mutual relationships, we also think that as long as you are a nice guy™ you don't have to pay attention to anything else because women will eventually come to you due to your niceness.

I think that this confusion results from some unintentional equivocation.

"Blue Pill" is a term coined by TRP participants to describe the messages about sexual/dating/mating that they had typically received from modern western culture at large.

Some people who strongly objected to TRP then founded a group called the blue pill. Which is NOT modern western culture at large, it's a small, self-selected, non-random slice of people from it.

So when you say "we", you cannot speak for what the whole culture is saying, and certainly not for what young men are hearing.

You can only speak for yourself, and others very like you. You can only say what you mean by "be yourself". You cannot address how that message is sent on a larger scale, and you certainly cannot address how it is received.

Ultimately, it is unimportant whether the failure is in the intent of the message, or in its transmission. The clear and present issue is that young people are far less effective, happy, and satisfied in their relationships with the opposite sex than they were several decades ago.

TRP exists to address this problem. TBP exists to... do what, exactly? Fuss?

[Discussion] Is "Would you like to practice getting sexually assaulted?" a good pickup line?

1 upvotes · 8 November 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So you tried it, then?

Question for Red Pillers: Why even bother?

1 upvotes · 8 November 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Doesn't the fact that they're all lying, solipsistic, hypocritical, psychopathic cunts

Nah, they just need parenting.

Slave to My Fiancé

1 upvotes · 2 November 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

They tell me if I let him have control and let him make decisions and be the breadwinner after we're married, then I am nothing more than his slave. I disagree. A slave master mistreats their slaves, abuses them, and hurts them.

This hasn't been universally true. Slaves throughout history have varied from abused drudges doing manual labour, to pampered concubines, to high status overseers of Roman noble households.

In much the same way, the conditions of those who are obedient vary with the behaviour of those who are obeyed.

Just what your obedience to your man means depends upon what effect it has on you and him.

There are two people in your relationship, and your not-so-supportive "friends" are not either of those two people.

How do you find time to workout?

1 upvotes · 30 October 2017 · /r/askTRP

You're an idiot.

I finally internalized trp? Yup

1 upvotes · 29 October 2017 · /r/TheRedPill

Sure he could have.

He made a conscious decision not to.

Control over your sex life and having things how you want them > Maximum early pussy.

Balance between being a hot commodity and being loyal

1 upvotes · 29 October 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

But he knows, i told him a couple of times that i wanted him to talk more, like he used to.

That's telling him your solution. You're saying what you want him to do, not what's bothering you.

Only the weakest of men will tolerate demands. Others will resent it at the very least.

Don't tell him what you want him to do, tell him what's bothering you and let him decide what to do about it.

Making demands, and not telling him if you are in distress are equally mistakes.

The assertion that men can easily live without sex and romance is not valid

1 upvotes · 29 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

A common response to men expressing difficulty in the dating sphere is something along the lines of:
"Nobody owes you any sex or romance, just deal with it, nerd"

If this isn't true, then who exactly is it that owes it to you?

"Society" can't get you love or sex. Neither can "women". These things have to come from individuals.

And if some individual owes them to you, which one?

That men can be single for very long without any sort of ill effects. I don't agree with this at all;

No one does.

But people can't live without food for very long, either. That doesn't mean anyone else has to feed you. You still have to feed yourself. Their job is simply not to actively prevent you from doing so.

So, yes, you have to "deal with it". You can deal with it by giving up, or deal with it by doing the work it takes to get what you want. No one is going to hand it to you, no matter how much you think they should.

No one owes you a hug, a blowjob, or a sandwich.

If you really are in such a bad spot that you can't even start at getting these on your own, ask the people who do get them what they did. Some of them might give you the one thing in life that really is free... advice.

But you still have to do all the work.

Q4Men: do you hate monogamy and long for polygyny? Do men resent having only one partner?

1 upvotes · 29 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Lin-a2ITelg>

Why do men insist that they don't want an educated or career woman, yet get mad when women need their money?

1 upvotes · 27 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Which men?

How do you handle it when a woman gives only a vague commitment to first date?

1 upvotes · 24 October 2017 · /r/askTRP

Make other plans, and only show up if they fall through.

Q4RP: Quote a Shit Test

1 upvotes · 23 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

And that is indeed not happening any time sooner or later - yet if it was a practical possibility, I wouldn't put it past the manosphere, people are all very much alike.

Oh, absolutely. With a very few exceptions, almost all revolutions, literal or metaphorical, are not started for the purpose of changing the paradigm, but of changing the people on top.

And also, although a witch hunt on an individual feminist isn't possible in current society, doesn't mean they, including the left wing, are 'winning' necessarily: the overton window is further pulled away from them.

Again, I agree. The Overton window is currently moving right. However, in the recent past, it was moved so far to the left that it will be some time before it reaches sanity again, and even longer before it could exit sanity in the other direction.

My impression, not sure how universal that is, is also that in mainstream society, men become more masculine and women more feminine, but YMMV here.

Again, lately yes, but against a backdrop of so much damage that the repairs have only begun. We'll know that real progress is being made if average male testosterone levels stop sinking and begin rising.

Personally, I doubt this will happen. Societies generally don't save or reinvent themselves... they must suffer crisis and full or at least partial collapse first.

The great conflict of the future is the barbaric and ignorant masses of the muslim third world vs the economic superpower that will emerge when China finally discards communism for good. The west has pretty much had it. It has committed ideological suicide, and economic and political suicide will sooner follow.

My only personal goal in all of this is to stay away from the spreading rot for long enough to reach the end of a long and happy life, and help those other men who aren't actively voting "rot for president" to do the same.

I don't think western civilization or America can be saved, despite all of Donald Trump's cunning, because he can annoy or destroy any number of corrupt degenerates, but he cannot restore a sense of unity to either, because half the people here seem to have decided that western civilization is a bad idea, and they want it dismantled as quickly as possible.

This is mostly because they believe that food magically appears in grocery stores.

People come here to debate the differences between the Red and Blue Pills, but..... does debating it actually prove anything?

1 upvotes · 23 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

https://www.reddit.com/r/PurplePillDebate/comments/2q51i9/why_ppd_while_sometimes_diverting_is_ultimately/

Consider the following viewpoints on n counts and virginity:

1 upvotes · 23 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If I wanted someone exactly like myself, I'd be gay, and none of this rigamarole would apply.

Men and women offer different things, and want different things. They are in fact, different.

Q4RP: Quote a Shit Test

1 upvotes · 23 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

the way the manosphere looks at feminism?

Thank you. You made me remember one or two that I forgot:

- Witch hunts focus the appropriation of crowds upon individuals. Rather than simply decrying witchcraft in general, they mob individual witches... or those who can be construed as such.
- Witch hunts reverse the burden of proof. Those singled out as targets must prove their innocence to the satisfaction of every individual member of the mob, rather than the mob having to supply any evidence beyond beyond bare and simple ipse dixit.

So, to put this in context, feminists denouncing masculinity, or the manosphere denouncing feminism, is not a witch hunt per se, until either one starts making concerted and collective social (or economic, or physical) attacks upon individual targets for whatever its brand of "witchcraft" is.

I have yet to see anyone suffer harm as a consequence of being "outed" as a feminist. In fact, being outed as a feminist is so safe that feminists out themselves. Loudly and repeatedly. To the point where the rest of us find it rather tedious. We get it, you hate men already.

By contrast, the primary founder of TRP, upon being "doxxed" and losing his shield of anonymity, immediately suffered professional harm as a result... despite having had nothing to do with the group for many years since.

So, is what you say theoretically possible? Sure.

Is it happening to any great degree? No.

My close friend has been paying for dinner and movies in hopes of holding a girl's hand. Help me snap him out of his white knight bullshit?

1 upvotes · 23 October 2017 · /r/askTRP

You can lead a whore to culture, but you can't make her think.

The Social Programming of Dating World and the Misunderstanding of TRP

1 upvotes · 23 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Dude, stop striving to be understood. Just start making up outrageous shit and saying it.

Why?

Because if you try to explain yourself, this just shows people who hate everything you stand for that you still desire their approval, or at least their tolerance. This is blood in the water, and they will double down on their character assassination attempts.

If you keep saying whatever, don't care, and treat everything like a shit test, they won't suddenly start approving of you (they never would have), but they will start treating you as "the terrain"... as that which is unchangeable and they just have to deal with it.

And there will even be some, those who still hope to change you, who start explaining themselves to you instead. They will abandon character assassination and attempt persuasion.

But most will just ignore you, which is what you really wanted anyway.

This is why feminists, for example, mercilessly hassle and micromanage male "allies", but leave hardcore misogynists alone.

Q4RP: Quote a Shit Test

1 upvotes · 22 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The word "racism" has lost its original meaning in the US.

It's been redefined to mean "prejudice in those with power", which means all straight white males, and only straight white males.

Therefore, in the US, the speaker cannot be racist, because she is female. So, yeah, she can get away with saying this if she wants.

Q4RP: Quote a Shit Test

1 upvotes · 22 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I said "No, it's just that they tend to be complete, fucking bitches."

Contradiction isn't usually the best move.

I'd go with "Why, have you seen any around?" (look around, visibly scanning right past her without stopping).

What do men have to offer in romantic relationships?

1 upvotes · 22 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Absolutely nothing.

Go. Fly. Be free. Shine on you crazy diamond.

Q4Men: If a woman had a past of casual sex/ONS/flings with guys similar to you, is she a risk for commitment?

1 upvotes · 22 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No, there is no risk whatsoever of me committing to her.

CMV: TRP by saying "Women are children" actually teaches guys to respect women

1 upvotes · 22 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The word "respect" means different things to men and women.

When a man says "respect" it means "defer to, on account of wisdom, experience, or relevant territorial rights".

When a woman says "respect" it means "care about the opinions, happiness, and welfare of".

Why are women uncomfortable with prostitution but are rather ok with pornography?

1 upvotes · 22 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Whores are competition with up-front pricing.

Many of us are learning that decency and good have no bearing on our ability to attract a mate and in some cases may be detrimental - should this be a concern to individuals and society?

1 upvotes · 22 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What is this "should" you speak of?

Anyone else struggle making friends?

1 upvotes · 21 October 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

Shared values are far more important than shared interests.

Don't feel good unless I lift

1 upvotes · 19 October 2017 · /r/askTRP

What is driving you is the sense of accomplishment.

Right now you only have it when you just lifted. Lift more, become freakishly huge, and have it all the time.

Test: Which of these women do you find more attractive (guys only pls)

1 upvotes · 14 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Not a blind study. Non-random sample.

If you want to know about my tastes, randomly select photos of women from puberty to old age, note their ages, then have them presented to me, without telling me their identity or age in the photo, by someone who also doesn't have that information, then ask me to rank them in order of sexual attractiveness.

Repeat this for a whole bunch of randomly sampled men, and you'll at last get real data.

Why do feminists never attack rap music?

1 upvotes · 13 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because when the only weapon you have is guilt, you go after vulnerable targets.

What do you all think about girls being able to join the Boy Scouts?

1 upvotes · 13 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women generally find it harder to build things themselves than to demand their fair share of what men have built.

why do men have to change? why can't women change their daring habits?

1 upvotes · 12 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women could, in the strictest sense of the word, change their dating habits.

Just like you could, technically, eat bugs.

But you won't, because you don't want to.

TRP believes in "Enjoy the decline", why don't you think the west can be saved?

1 upvotes · 6 October 2017 · /r/askTRP

I'm thinking Eastern and Western Roman Empire. Also American Civil War.

Thought I was a feminist, but am I actually RPW?

1 upvotes · 4 October 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

A female's right to date/sleep with whoever she pleases without being shamed or judged (if she wants to)

This is childish.

You cannot have this without violating the right that others have to judge what they see, and speak their minds.

Spoiled children whine about being judged. Adults own the consequences of their choices.

Uni girls claim most men are "too dumb" for them

1 upvotes · 4 October 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

Any girl can catch a dick. The trick is to reach the end zone without fumbling it.

Telling a girl you are interested but you have options if she says no

1 upvotes · 2 October 2017 · /r/askTRP

You just went full retard.

Why You Should Join A Fraternity In College

1 upvotes · 4 September 2017 · /r/TheRedPill

He was a successful nerd who was eventually undone by his social ineptitude.

I thought he was undone because his culture didn't like the gay very much? Don't really know much about him beyond wikipedia-level stuff.

Why You Should Join A Fraternity In College

1 upvotes · 4 September 2017 · /r/TheRedPill

In what context?

The Redpill is messing with my head

1 upvotes · 29 August 2017 · /r/askTRP

When will the confusion stop?

When you make it stop.

"You're going to get tired of having sex with me if we have sex too often"

1 upvotes · 29 August 2017 · /r/askTRP

Played completely straight and serious:

"Okay. Didn't expect you to be that open-minded, but if you're cool with it, great. Do you want to hear about stuff, or is this a 'don't ask, don't tell' kinda thing?"

'Attention-seeking' woman who falsely accused 15 men of rape and sexual assault after claiming she was a lesbian 'and would never have sex with a man' is jailed for 10 years.

1 upvotes · 26 August 2017 · /r/MensRights

Do you think this was the first thread about this that I found where people were claiming no one would ever want to rape someone that big?

If it is, I'll say it right now.

That woman is very fat, and hence very unattractive. Almost all men in the human race would be unable to rape her, for that same reason that you cannot play billiards using a rope for a cue.

Now, we can have the argument you wanted to have. You know, the one where you say that certain facts are mean, and no one should acknowledge them, and where I say that there are more important things in the universe than some people's feelings.

'Attention-seeking' woman who falsely accused 15 men of rape and sexual assault after claiming she was a lesbian 'and would never have sex with a man' is jailed for 10 years.

1 upvotes · 25 August 2017 · /r/MensRights

Who said the word "fat" first? Twas you.

Why did your brain go there? Why did you assume that's what he was talking about?

Could it be that you think being fat is not okay?

If so, I sympathize, but be honest about it and lay off the virtue signalling, yeah?

Recovering from the lost frame

1 upvotes · 19 August 2017 · /r/askTRP

Replace girl.

How do I game an attention whore?

1 upvotes · 19 August 2017 · /r/askTRP

You withhold attention.

Can I gain 50 pounds in under a year?

1 upvotes · 17 August 2017 · /r/askTRP

It's worse than that... it's about intervention in life threatening conditions. Anything else, like detecting those conditions before they become life threatening, can go fuck itself.

As is usual for any society-wide problem, this began with someone thinking government intervention could make things better.

Can I gain 50 pounds in under a year?

1 upvotes · 17 August 2017 · /r/askTRP

American medicine gets an A+ for knowing how to patch you up when you are at death's door and knocking loudly. And it fails at everything else.

Those substances aren't proven safe by studies under FDA rules. And they won't be, because those studies cost money, and no one owns a patent on them.

Is this illegal? How can we prevent this? (Link in comments)

1 upvotes · 7 August 2017 · /r/MensRights

By not eating there?

Is there a thread which summarizes just about every reason you should ghost or next a girl?

1 upvotes · 28 July 2017 · /r/askTRP

No.

You are a Team

1 upvotes · 20 July 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

Thanks for clarifying the RP stance for this.

I thought I badly misunderstood some core RP concepts, since this thread. While I learned some new perspectives from that thread, I was still left confused about the actual RP perspective.

There is also a time for testing what a man can do on his own, also. However, this is at the tentative beginning of a relationship, when you are still forming an opinion as to whether or not you can trust his competence and therefore want to follow him. (One form of this is what TRP calls "shit testing"... essentially a check for how easily his emotional control is rattled.)

However, once you have committed to being on his team, you are there to help him win, not continue to burden him to just see how much he can carry.

What's the correct TRP response when a girl leaves you for her ex and asks for what you wanna do?

1 upvotes · 13 July 2017 · /r/askTRP

It's simple. Never talk to, with, or about an ex.

They are receding in your rearview mirror. You are moving forward.

Sister cheated on her BF. How to approach the situation

1 upvotes · 27 June 2017 · /r/askTRP

Don't approach the situation.

You can't save someone until they know they need saving, and ask to be saved.

You will of course ignore this, and try anyway. But you will remember after the train wreck that I warned you.

And thus you will learn something.

Reason she blocked me?

1 upvotes · 26 June 2017 · /r/askTRP

If you feel the urge to say it's not oneitis, then that is exactly what it is.

Woman mowed down cyclist after he criticised her for using phone at wheel - Equality means 3 years behind bars.

1 upvotes · 11 May 2017 · /r/MensRights

Sure, you sound completely self-contained and not emotionally overwrought at all.

Look, your upset, and your aversion, comes from expecting women to act like adults.

Stop. That.

They don't. They never will. You can't make them. And they certainly won't on their own. And you wouldn't want them to, anyway.

Stop relying on women for mission-critical shit, and they won't disappoint you. Stop taking them seriously, and their nonsense won't hurt your feelings. Stop being serious with them and start playing instead, and they'll like you better, and treat you better.

Learn to mentally picture them as six year old girls.

Yes, they'll tell you they want to be seen as adults. But six year old girls will tell you they want to be a dinosaur when they grow up, and that Mr. Bunny has magic powers. Does that upset you? Of course not.

Women live in a permanent world of make-believe. This is what makes them cute, stress-relieving, and fun to play with.

Embrace the nonsense and stop expecting them to be dudes.

What can one tell to men who wants to be women?

1 upvotes · 21 April 2017 · /r/askTRP

What would tell a gorilla that wants to be a giraffe?

A good friend of mine shared this, I can't help but think it just spreads hate. As a white man who went to a school with majority of students were of eastern decent, I can tell you who bullied me more. Hint, it wasn't white men.

1 upvotes · 7 March 2017 · /r/MensRights

Ask this question in New York City. Or Orlando, Florida. Or San Bernadino, California.

Need I go on?

Man immediately breaks up with his girlfriend of 5 years after she suggests an open relationship. She doesn't understand why and is "heartbroken."

1 upvotes · 2 March 2017 · /r/TheRedPill

It's stupidly simple, folks.

If a woman has access to a 7 and an 8, she wants to fuck the 8, and the 7 is invisible.

If a man has access to a 7 and an 8, he wants to fuck them both.

That's why a man will on his LTR with someone he desires less than her... but if a woman ever cheats on her man, it means the magic is forever gone.

How do I get over my Oneitis while staying friends?

1 upvotes · 11 February 2017 · /r/askTRP

Don't stay friends.

Why the FUCK do you ask for advice if you don't want it?

1 upvotes · 30 December 2016 · /r/askTRP

Because TRP doesn't help or change anyone.

It only provides guidance to those who are working to help and change themselves.

Question for RP: What exactly are promiscuous women doing wrong

1 upvotes · 5 December 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Generally no.

It can be done in foolish ways, but it is not inherently detrimental.

Question for RP: What exactly are promiscuous women doing wrong

1 upvotes · 5 December 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What exactly are promiscuous women doing wrong?

Something.

Just what that something is varies. It could be anything.

Female promiscuity is a symptom of sexual strategy mistake, not the disease.

CMV: WGTOW is the best way to go for many women. Bothering with men is not worth it.

1 upvotes · 5 December 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Okay. Off you go, then. Have fun.

Many women have learned to lie about their n-count, so why do men care so much about n-count when it's almost impossible to know if she's lying or not?

1 upvotes · 30 November 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

N-count is a symptom, not the disease.

does anyone think day game is inappropriate or even sexist?

1 upvotes · 30 November 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yep. Super sexist.

Just like me.

Buying or leasing the Lambo

1 upvotes · 30 November 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I am automatically suspicious of any explanation of anything which boils down to "people have suddenly become more selfish and awful than previous generations".

Are tactics encouraged by TRP sexually coercive?

1 upvotes · 29 November 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Betteridge's_law_of_headlines

Building a Redpill friend group - throw your ideas in!

1 upvotes · 10 November 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Satanists believe that God is a huge egotistical asshole who makes people follow stupid arbitrary rules. Lucifer aka The Bringer of Light is a Promethian figure who offers mankind forbidden knowledge and opens the gate to free will. Their ideology is inherently Elitist and values sacrificing the weak and doing as though wilt

Well, now, by that description, we, the red pill, are satanists.

Is it possible to be happy in an LTR or must we always be single?

1 upvotes · 26 October 2016 · /r/askTRP

So the question was, should I be this happy in a relationship?

You are doing what you do, and it's working. Why on earth would you ask for my stamp of approval? I'm an advisor, not your king or your cult leader.

That being established:

Have you read the Bitch Management Hierarchy? It has levels 0-3. Level 3 is LTR. I have an LTR. I'd estimate that half the Vanguards and ECs are in relationships.

TRP is about how to be a man, not what to do with that once you have it. You do you.

I have submissive fetishes, I don't want them, I want to be dominant in bed.

1 upvotes · 26 October 2016 · /r/askTRP

Posting dick pics isn't treating myself like the prize. I treat it like something women have to earn... and that makes them buy into that.

Now, granted, I've had positive reactions when we get there, but I've also had mood-derailing terror.

Overall, it's not zero benefit, because it gives confidence, but it's much less important than good game, or being jacked, or being tall.

I have submissive fetishes, I don't want them, I want to be dominant in bed.

1 upvotes · 26 October 2016 · /r/askTRP

Come on dude... You know you get more action because of it.

No.

If a girl is seeing my dick, I'm already getting action.

This was just featured on iFunny, with 147,000 likes

1 upvotes · 24 October 2016 · /r/MensRights

I don't think using TRT counts as using steroids for the purposes of the picture above. That is doctor prescribed for a legitimate medical condition/concern

It's pretty much the same except in lower doses.

But "steroid use" != "health problem".

Some people go overboard, and hurt themselves, but that's usually with HGH, or something crazy like insulin or even DNP (not even once), not AAS or clen.

/steroid user

I have submissive fetishes, I don't want them, I want to be dominant in bed.

1 upvotes · 23 October 2016 · /r/askTRP

By the time she sees your dick, she'd better already be impressed with you, or you're doing it wrong.

All you really need is to be big enough so she doesn't immediately think "that's small".

What is this madness happening in the Western world?

1 upvotes · 21 October 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'll stop when you Westerners fix your shit

Good news for you, not gonna happen. Western civilization is in decline. It would take a major, credible, external, existential threat to unite us at this point.

Seriously though, I feel like I have more chance getting rich in China or Korea than the Western world

You may be right.

Guy on Christianity subreddit has lost attraction to his obese wife. Commenters convince him to stay and accept her as she is, because Jesus. Great example of how religion can turn you into a beta slave.

1 upvotes · 21 October 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Religion does not contain values.

It is merely a social enforcement tool for whatever values the culture or subculture already has. In a conservative culture, Jesus is used to sell conservatism. In a feminist culture, Jesus is used to sell feminism. In a communist culture, Jesus would be used to sell communism.

Same for Muhammed and Krishna and Mithras.

The important part of religion isn't what invisible sky wizard you believe in, it's what the guy in the funny hat tells you that the invisible sky wizard wants you to do.

The christian hat-guys of five hundred years ago told wives to submit to their husbands. The ones today tell husbands to submit to their wives.

Priests are nothing but weather vanes, they point whichever way the wind blows.

Can someone here please explain to me why exactly Roe v. Wade was good constitutional law?

1 upvotes · 19 October 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It isn't.

There is, strictly speaking, no such thing as "constitutional law" anymore.

Modern legal scholars and the constitution are like modern christians and the bible. It's not the inspiration for their values, but merely a document they search for what they have already chosen to believe.

If they want to expand, or invent, a right, they interpret broadly or narrowly as it suits them.

I want abortion to be legal for practical reasons (unwanted children grow up into thugs and losers), but there is no constitutional basis for it being a right, since there are laws passed that infringe people's bodily autonomy all the time.

I have no respect for constitutional scholars, ever since they started claiming, with a straight face, that "militia" means "the government", and that this makes "right of the people" mean "right of the state".

Another View Regarding Alpha Males (and Alpha Females)

1 upvotes · 19 October 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If anyone talks about "alphaness" and mentions wolves, they don't get it.

Wolves don't have a pack hierarchy, they have a family. There is no alpha, there is dad. Wolves are nothing like humans, or even dogs. Don't talk about wolves. Leave wolves alone. They are Sir Not Appearing in This Film.

"Alpha" is just a metaphor for the observation that the males who have high status/respect, and the males whom women will fuck, are the same males.

So what traits are "alpha"? Whichever ones attract respect and pussy. This varies widely.

Let's Talk about Trump

1 upvotes · 17 October 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Did you notice how all the stones were sorted by size?

TRP tactics are usually obvious and easy to google. Women by TRP's own admission are more skilled socially. Doesn't it seem likely they'll find out about TRP eventually?

1 upvotes · 15 October 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Whoosh.

Question for people with a BMI over 27 - Are you happy with the way you look? Have you tried losing weight?

1 upvotes · 15 October 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Male.

Not too many places anymore. I vary between 12-15%.

No, I want to be even bigger.

No, I am trying to gain weight.

She is fit and curvy.

(For those of you confused by this, men with a lot of muscle mass often have "overweight" or "obese" BMI scores.)

TRP tactics are usually obvious and easy to google. Women by TRP's own admission are more skilled socially. Doesn't it seem likely they'll find out about TRP eventually?

1 upvotes · 15 October 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Makeup is usually obvious and easy to google. Doesn't it seem likely men will find out about it eventually?

Last Names

1 upvotes · 14 October 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

i wouldn't have wanted to get married if our relationship was feeble enough to be broken by something like that.

This argument could be used to rationalize anything that puts a strain on your relationship.

Last Names

1 upvotes · 14 October 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

One of the ways you can fairly easily spot a feminist is a woman who keeps her maiden name after marriage.

One possible false alarm on this is female PhDs with an academic career. Once you start publishing under one last name, you need to boost that name recognition, and changing it is detrimental.

Of course, this in itself has other red flags...

- PhD.
- Prioritizes career over husband/family.
- Married old (had academic publications before marriage).

Went from ~12% BF to ~18 BF, and it's like I'm in a different world

1 upvotes · 12 October 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

A lot depends upon where and how you wear fat.

If it tends to deposit in your face, then you need to stay quite low. If not, you can wear a little more for the sake of faster gainz.

Betas mateguard alphas disregard- where to draw the line?

1 upvotes · 12 October 2016 · /r/askTRP

Betas mateguard alphas disregard

Not quite.

- Betas blame the other man.
- Alphas blame the woman.
- Betas punish the other man by fighting or complaining.
- Alphas punish the woman by withdrawing attention.

Don't "disregard". Punish by withdrawing attention. If she doesn't chase you, then she was already done with you. Find another.

An alpha's woman will mateguard herself, or he is done with her. The only time he will intervene is if she is trying to mateguard herself, and someone is attempting to physically force the issue.

Inceldom is almost always a symptom of low social capital

1 upvotes · 12 October 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Lack of ability to find sex or relationships almost always comes from a lack of social capital, with few exceptions. There are some very few unattractive incels with a large social circle and many friends, but by and large, incels have few friends and are isolated.

That's correlation, not causality.

They aren't incels because they have no friends. They have no friends, and are incels, because they lack social skills.

NYC Pharmacy Slaps Male Shoppers with Man Tax

1 upvotes · 11 October 2016 · /r/MensRights

Here's what's going to happen. Men aren't going to shop there. Women will. Store will end up paying all customer's sales tax.

Was Elliott Rodger a martyr for incels? was he a hero? or did he damage their reputation?

1 upvotes · 11 October 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

He didn't expose anything. The only thing people know about him, in fact, the only thing I know about him, is that he murdered a bunch of people, and was angry because he couldn't get laid.

That doesn't reveal anything, because there have always been, and will always be, losers who can't get laid. And they will always suffer. This is the way the species is set up.

There are certain types of pain that are simply hardwired into the human genome. Women will always be subordinate to men. Unsuccessful men will always live lives of sexual frustration. Attractive women will always be able to get ahead without talent or hard work, by selling their sexuality, and they will always bitterly regret it later. Unattractive women will always be treated like pariahs.

The only solution to the misery of incels is to stop being one. There is no change you can make in society that will make women attracted to incel men. Only a change to those men themselves will help them.

If men are so antimonogamy, then why do most rich successful men enter monogamous relationships?

1 upvotes · 11 October 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because men have a dual-track mating strategy just like women do.

Let's Talk about Trump

1 upvotes · 11 October 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Have you ever been to beach that was composed of stones instead of sand?

(Relevance will become clear later. Just play along.)

TRP is very western-oriented

1 upvotes · 7 October 2016 · /r/askTRP

When you write it.

Stop opening your mouth and cheeping like a baby bird waiting to be fed, and start being the change you wish to see.

CMV: TheRedPill Advocates for Emotional Abuse

1 upvotes · 4 October 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'll try to make it more clear.

Your definition of emotional abuse includes things that women love.

I find it unfair that women get many less orgasms than men, rather than more. I believe that since women endure all the pain in reproduction, women deserve most of the pleasure too, to balance it out.

1 upvotes · 4 October 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I find it unfair

Here you go.

CMV: TheRedPill Advocates for Emotional Abuse

1 upvotes · 4 October 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women love emotional abuse.

A new kind of men's organization: The Fraternity

1 upvotes · 24 September 2016 · /r/MGTOW

I guess I don't really understand what value this is supposed to provide.

This is Why I Think Lifting is Pointless for Most Guys

1 upvotes · 22 September 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't care about that.

Why do you not know your testosterone levels? Why have you never had them checked? Why have you never sought treatment?

Which do you really want, a strong body, or an excuse for not having one?

This is Why I Think Lifting is Pointless for Most Guys

1 upvotes · 21 September 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Programs provide three things that would be important, even if the actual program part didn't work at all.

1. Progressive overload.
2. Consistent work.
3. Organized progress tracking.

The Hamster Codex, part 1 - "Help, my boyfriend got assfucked by another guy and now I don't like him anymore!"

1 upvotes · 15 September 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Ignoring the work of numerous people who specialize human sexuality is ignorant, especially when your methodology behind it is based on personal feels.

You have yet to establish that their methodology isn't based on personal feels.

Black Knighting got her Triggered, Give me a savage reply

1 upvotes · 10 September 2016 · /r/askTRP

The thing to think about here is not what to say, but the fact that there was nothing for thirsty beta guy, but she replied to and messaged him.

Why?

Because now he has something she wants. His approval.

Unlike men, women are dependent on external approval. And they will value different sources of it based on how hard it is to get.

The lesson here is that to become successful with women, one must learn to withhold approval, to dangle it just out of reach like bait, never easily grasped, but always tantalizingly close.

How To Fuck on the First Date - A Guide

1 upvotes · 7 September 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

So going back to my example, I would reply with a joke (Iceland is tough, but maybe something about a volcano - shit, I don't know), and then a more serious followup (like, "where did you stay?") to keep her talking about her favorite subject (herself).

Make her qualify herself a bit.

Smile and say "Iceland? You could have gone anywhere in the world and you chose Iceland? Okay, you're going to have to have to tell me an awesome story about what's there, because otherwise I'm just going to think you have no {imagination/sense of adventure/whatever}."

Now, she has things to talk about, and she is seeking your approval.

For this to work, you'd need to have a bit of rapport first. Otherwise, defensiveness might ensue.

Is Ryan Lochte an asshole?

1 upvotes · 23 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Of course he is. We don't need stories to tell us that. The fact that he is "quite popular with the ladies" would be enough.

No one who doesn't have the capacity for asshole behaviour is popular with attractive women.

CMV - STEM Careers are for Betas and Omegas

1 upvotes · 23 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yep. Super easy to be the biggest badass in a room fulla network administrators and software engineers.

IT doesn't make betas, though. It just attracts them. So there's hope for them if they learn better habits.

If AWALT is true, why isn't #YesAllMen?

1 upvotes · 23 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It is.

Every man is either a potential rapist, or a metaphorical eunuch who's too mild and nonthreatening to be attractive to women.

So if dealing with men isn't worth the risk to you, then... don't.

Doesn't this post prove the OKCupid Study right? Women find most men unattractive?

1 upvotes · 22 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Who cares what TBP says? And who cares how much women swipe left? That's only a measure of what percentage of men women find unfuckable.

That percentage only matters when you're one of them.

What character traits do men like in women for a relationship?

1 upvotes · 22 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Hot, nice, feminine, loyal.

Everything else is just details.

CMV: Terps and Terfs share an uncanny degree of similarity

1 upvotes · 22 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"blah blah blah men are superior"

And you have the option to do something about it. What will you choose to do?

Questions about NoFap/NoPorn.. 30 days in so far.

1 upvotes · 15 August 2016 · /r/askTRP

Yeah.

Learn your own body. Listen to your own body. Some guys need to take it easy on the jerking off, others need to rub one out so they can be less thirsty and last longer in bed.

How to tell LTR to start self improving

1 upvotes · 15 August 2016 · /r/askTRP

Don't tell women shit.

Dread game time.

How do I stop feeling like a doormat?

1 upvotes · 15 August 2016 · /r/askTRP

Stop being one.

Any tips on losing stomach?

1 upvotes · 15 August 2016 · /r/askTRP

Read every diet article I've submitted. Then ask whatever questions you have left.

Can we have an honest talk about steroids

1 upvotes · 15 August 2016 · /r/askTRP

I'm small AF, my appetite sucks, and I'm wondering if steroids might help me.

No, because you suck.

If you can't make time to eat properly, you do not have your shit together enough to run a cycle properly.

I feel like a pussy for crying after having to have my 15 year old cat put down.

1 upvotes · 10 August 2016 · /r/askTRP

Just don't let women see you do it.

CMV: TRP is primarily designed to avoid narcissistic injury, to narcissists.

1 upvotes · 8 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No, but it sounds like it might be something I would enjoy.

CMV: TRP is primarily designed to avoid narcissistic injury, to narcissists.

1 upvotes · 5 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yeah, a lot of people around here who don't really understand how this works.

- If you have a twin, he shares 100% of your genes.
- If you have a son, he shares 50%.
- If he has a son, he shares 25%.

Then 12.5, then 6.25, then 3.125, 1.5625, 0.78125, etc...

Within a few generations, your supposed "genetic lineage" is a thin smear across the population, and bears no resemblance whatsoever to you. Genes can succeed or fail at evolution, because they are indivisible units. They are either inherited, or not. They can be successful, and spread through many organisms, or fail and be wiped out.

But we, both as individual bodies, and as combinations of genes, will be wiped out no matter what we do. We aren't even chess pieces, really. We are just squares on an infinite board.

That which is good for our genes is not necessarily good for us. And vice versa.

Article from Journal of Evolution and Human Behavior: Men pay far more for younger prostitutes. How does this fit into the RP vs BP paradigm? (banned from sugar subreddit)

1 upvotes · 2 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

And some people believe that half of the world's heads of state are secretly lizards. Is this worth talking about?

Yes, you win the debate. But you picked a retard as your opponent.

Article from Journal of Evolution and Human Behavior: Men pay far more for younger prostitutes. How does this fit into the RP vs BP paradigm? (banned from sugar subreddit)

1 upvotes · 2 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The RP stuff most take issue with is craziness like 'Every woman over 25 is disgusting and repulsive.'

You are so close to realizing the big secret.

Why is "hotwife" and "cuckold" a thing?

1 upvotes · 29 July 2016 · /r/askTRP

Any girl can catch a dick. The trick is to get to the end zone without fumbling it.

Can an introvert become extrovert?

1 upvotes · 27 July 2016 · /r/askTRP

Why?

TRP for the most part advocates against marriage. What if you want kids?

1 upvotes · 26 July 2016 · /r/askTRP

What if you want kids?

What if I want a pony that shits diamonds?

You can't have kids. Under US law as practiced, the kids belong to the mother. They're not yours. They are hers. You have precisely the amount and type of contact with them that she allows, and nothing more.

Should I feel guilty for fucking girls when they think it's leading to a relationship?

1 upvotes · 26 July 2016 · /r/askTRP

Why would you?

Sick of being treated like the beta I am. Is it possible, with hard work and effort, to "swallow the red pill"?

1 upvotes · 22 July 2016 · /r/askTRP

I feel that it's necessary to request help.

It's not.

You are not special. Stop asking to have your hand held. That is weakness.

AskTRP is people who need knowledge, not people who are just scared. Overcoming fear is your responsibility.

Girlfriend drunk texts "friend" to come meet for a cuddle...

1 upvotes · 20 July 2016 · /r/askTRP

She has already left you.

She's just keeping you around for the attention until she figures out exactly who to replace you with.

Now dump her and stop wasting my time.

Why are poly relationships so rare among the very wealthy?

1 upvotes · 18 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

While it's cool to dream about futuristic robots and computers that can pass the Turing Test, there isn't much money to be found by directly developing a generalized AI

Depends what you mean by "found".

No one would fund this kind of research, because it's a pipe dream at this point, and everyone knows that. We strain the limits of current hardware simply to produce specialized AI for classification tasks. We're not ready to try for strong AI.

However, I do not think anyone is so foolish as to believe that strong or strongish general AI, once discovered, will be not immensely profitable (possibly in an apocalyptic, economy-breaking fashion).

So private industry focuses on generalizing algorithms only to the extent of performing a specific task

Private industry focuses on what is reachable within a defined budget, because its job is to make a profit. Vast potential profits may lie elsewhere, but if they are too far away in terms of development cost, that doesn't matter, because you will go broke getting there. There are dangers to being right too early.

oint is, there's no elegance in saying that the Secret of Consciousness lies in a brute force approach. That would be admitting that our brains, as awesome as they are, are just glorified roombas

That is exactly what I believe.

I'm just an EE guy who likes algorithms on the side, but as a real computer scientist you can probably answer this better than I can - if we disregard computational efficiency, can't every algorithm be explicitly programmed simply using an if/else control flow?

We cannot disregard computational efficiency. Inefficient algorithms regard hardware advances as a light snack. There are some problems which will never be solvable simply because the number of bits that must be flipped to compute the solution exceeds {total energy in the universe/smallest measurable expenditure of energy}, for example.

When I say "brute force" in the context of AI, I do not mean "disregard algorithms, and construct a giant if/else tree". I mean "throw clock cycles at the the neural net models which we already have, because that's roughly equivalent to how the human brain does it". In fact, the delta rule may be more sophisticated than what the brain uses, because it can systematically decay links (which the human brain is incapable of).

Why are poly relationships so rare among the very wealthy?

1 upvotes · 16 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This is a super interesting point that I've never heard anyone raise.

And that's something that puzzles me. All these AI guys searching for the Secret of Consciousness™, and no one ever stopping to ask, hey, what if there is no secret?

What if consciousness is simply what you get when your pattern-noticing machine is general enough, and powerful enough, to notice the pattern that is the pattern-noticing machine?

What if there is no strong AI barrier other than computational limits of modern computers?

I can't prove this, of course, but I cannot think of an argument against it. Every time we figure out how the brain does something, we find brute-force computation rather than sophisticated algorithms. Every time we get computers to solve a heuristic problem, we cease to think it as belonging to the field of "artificial intelligence". (This suggests that the word "intelligence" really doesn't mean anything other than "I don't know how you did that.")

What if, as our weak AI approaches human capability, we discover that there is no man behind the curtain, and in fact no curtain? That the difference between weak and strong AI is not qualitative, but merely quantitative?

Would we stop thinking of ourselves as conscious, self-moving minds? Would we dispense with the notion of "free will"? Or would we merely re-arrange the notion of identity?

On the other hand, future thinkers may lose as little sleep over the absence of free will or morality as we do over the absence of god or the soul (which previous generations agonized over).

Q4all , do you think being raised by a single mother , without a strong male role model increases your chances of being a beta provider ?

1 upvotes · 14 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't think he turned out like this because of having a single mom, its just that his mom was shitty

You just said the same thing twice.

Men should not have any empathy for women

1 upvotes · 14 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Congratulations on starting from a position of animosity.

[citation needed]

Q4RP: why does TRP look to so many people to be misogynistic and emotionally abusive?

1 upvotes · 14 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

As long as it takes to rustle your jimmies. Mission accomplished.

This keeps you and your fussing out, so we can focus on the mission. Gettin' dudes laid.

do women underestimate male sexuality?

1 upvotes · 13 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think that "love-demonstrating sex" is one of those constructs that men and women will never really be able to discuss easily, because it means different things to each.

Kind of like "respect", which means "treat like a friend or relative" to women, and "treat like an authority" to men.

Yes, I am more likely to want sex with a woman if I like her. To point where I have slept with most of my female friends at one point or another. But for me, and for most men, sex just plain isn't this big, magical pair-bonding experience. Being "in love" with someone isn't necessary, and it doesn't even usually enhance the sex any.

Casual sex is crappy sex for women, because women generally have to feel something for the man in order to get off. For men, all we have to feel is physical desire.

Liking her just makes us not inch towards the door when we are done.

The meaning of sex for men

1 upvotes · 13 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The moment after the first time I have sex with a woman is when I meet her for the first time. It's when I discover whether I actually like her, or whether my sexual desire for her glossed over her faults as a partner.

That's why no pre-sex profession of love or commitment from a man should ever be taken seriously. It's not that we are prone to lie, although many of us are. It's that often even we don't know if we are lying or not.

are you switching the hormonal cocktail off when banging a whore?

What hormonal cocktail would this be, then?

Sex is a bonding experience for you. For us, the other moments are the bonding experience.

Eggs are expensive, sperm is cheap.

Which of these men do you think has the highest partner count?

1 upvotes · 12 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Which one has the best game?

What kind of a woman wouldn't fall for dread game?

1 upvotes · 12 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

A woman who wants out of the relationship already, and was planning to break up with him next week.

Q4 TRP Men, what if women decided to drop out of the dating pool in response to your dead and increased expectations?

1 upvotes · 11 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What, all of them?

Rub one out and get on with my day, of course.

CMV: Women are slowly waking up and walking away from men.

1 upvotes · 11 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Good luck with that.

How do RP guys even enjoy sex like that?

1 upvotes · 11 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

/u/rrents, how can you enjoy setting fire to all those churches?

What does The Red Pill actually offer that I can't find somewhere else?

1 upvotes · 11 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think everything good about The Red Pill isn't unique and everything unique about The Red Pill isn't good.

Good for what?

How do I dump my cheating girlfriend?

1 upvotes · 10 July 2016 · /r/askTRP

Here is a step-by-step guide.

When you mess up a sure thing?

1 upvotes · 5 July 2016 · /r/askTRP

It's not an "opportunity". It's a woman. They aren't scarce.

More of them turn 18 every day.

CMV: Plastic surgery is the logical conclusion to the SMV-raising that red pillers advocate.

1 upvotes · 5 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This is more true for women than for men, since appearance is a larger portion of female attractiveness than male attractiveness.

But it is somewhat true for men as well.

Q4 RP: What are your relationships like and what, apart from sex, do you plan on getting out of them? (given that you believe women aren't capable of love).

1 upvotes · 5 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

given that you believe women aren't capable of love

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/4i219p/rule_6a/

Meal Mondays

1 upvotes · 30 June 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

Another thing you might try is substituting some other starch for breadcrumbs. Gluten in wheat is very good for firming things up, which is usually good, but not in this case.

Perhaps try rice flour, potato starch, or even almond meal (for the low-carb option)?

Are most vocal incels Red Pill washouts?

1 upvotes · 30 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I feel the vocal incel is a man who encountered TRP, but realized its successful application was beyond him because he was really just that unattractive, or too lazy to commit to self discipline, or both.

Precisely.

In fact, successful application of TRP is beyond almost no one. But many people will see it, believe it, and still not try, because they fear trying and failing more than they fear staying where they are.

Are there any Christians who are Red Pillers?

1 upvotes · 28 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

People who came up with Creationism weren't taught how to read scripture texts.

Objectively, what this actually means is that they weren't taught to read scripture your way.

It's impossible to take the whole bible literally, because some bits contradict others. Every group chooses which bits to take literally, and which bits to ignore, take as metaphor, or rationalize away as no longer relevant.

And it's not surprising that some bits contradict others, because the whole thing was assembled by a committee out of a wide array of religious text with different authors, from different regions, dating from different periods of history. I've even heard some fairly strong arguments that the "god" of the early books of the bible, Genesis/Deuteronomy, etc (El Elyon) was not originally the same "god" as the "god" of the book of Exodus and beyond (Yahweh Sabaoth).

In short, the whole thing was Frankenstein's monster from day one, and every group has its own tradition for interpreting the whole mess.

Dealing with a "Woe is me" "Depressed" "Unemotional" woman

1 upvotes · 24 June 2016 · /r/askTRP

Why?

Explanation about rape fantasies

1 upvotes · 23 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you are "explaining" rape fantasies, does that mean you have had them?

Question for redpill: How is anyone supposed to know when they've established that they're more than just plate material, and actually allow something to happen?

1 upvotes · 23 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yes, absolutely.

Question for redpill: How is anyone supposed to know when they've established that they're more than just plate material, and actually allow something to happen?

1 upvotes · 23 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Ah, so you are referring to the basic conflict between the male and female sexual imperatives.

- Males are driven to have sex with as many females as possible above a certain minimum of attractiveness, while only investing resources (tangible or intangible) in very few of highest quality females.
- Females are driven to extract resources (tangible or intangible) from as many males as possible, while only having sex with very few of the highest quality males.

And you are asking me how this conflict gets resolved.

The answer is that we call it a sexual marketplace for a reason. Because it operates in a fashion analogous to an monetary market.

If I go to the hardware store, because I wish to buy a miter saw, I, and the store, have conflicting imperatives.

- I want the best possible miter saw, and I want to pay as little for it as possible (ideally nothing).
- The store wants to get as much money from me as they can get, for the saw that costs them the least (ideally no saw at all).

And yet we meet in the middle. Why? Because there is a free market. The store cannot demand five thousand dollars, because other stores exist who are willing to sell the best saw for nine hundred, and a pretty good one for two hundred fifty. I cannot pay ten dollars, because other customers are willing to pay more.

Now, the sexual marketplace is a little more complicated than the market in saws, because there is no common currency. It's more analogous to the barter system. But the basic mechanisms are the same.

We more high-quality I consider a woman to be, relative to me, the more effort I will expend to have sex with her. The more high-quality a woman considers me, relative to her, the less effort/commitment/resources she will expect before having sex.

Now do you understand?

A woman doesn't become worthless slut in my eyes by having sex with me soon, or without a lot of barriers. What that tells me is that she considers my value to be high relative to hers. A slut is a woman who is low value. If she thinks her value is lower than mine, that doesn't mean she's low value. But if she thinks her value is lower than every dude who comes along, then odds are she's onto something.

A man does not consider a woman slutty based on what she has done with him. Only on what she has done with others.

"Until we reassess what it means to be a "real man" then men will continue to beat their wives and murder LGBT people to ease their own self-loathing."

1 upvotes · 23 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yes, my purpose has been achieved here.

I have no actual opinions. I only say things to shock, offend, and contradict you. I have been following you around, and making careful notes of all your opinions, so I can contradict you in edgy ways. Then maybe you will notice me.

Because it's all about you.

Q4BP: what non-PUA/RP advice would you give a struggling male who's goal is to spin plates while giving as little commitment as possible?

1 upvotes · 23 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

And if you can accurately surmise which mindset and attitude, why it's necessary, and how it helps, then you will understand the red pill.

Rarely discussed part of success in dating

1 upvotes · 22 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

<http://www.k5learning.com/reading-comprehension-worksheets>

Rarely discussed part of success in dating

1 upvotes · 22 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP (the subreddit) aims specifically at gold diggers, that's pretty clear.

I am unable to fathom the confusion of mind which could have led to such a conclusion.

It's one strategy that can work,

It's a poor one. Modern women do not respect providers.

but to act like it's the only viable one is simply fiction.

Who is saying that? I want links.

Rarely discussed part of success in dating

1 upvotes · 22 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This is why I think TRP's assertion you need to be a rich corporate guy to get girls is so fucking stupid.

Not quite as stupid as your assertion that the moon is made of green cheese, and the world is carried on the back of a giant hamster through a swimming pool filled with Kool-Aid.

Q4BP: what non-PUA/RP advice would you give a struggling male who's goal is to spin plates while giving as little commitment as possible?

1 upvotes · 22 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Oh, I spotted the bad bits.

It allows me to characterize your objections to TRP, which appear to be mostly to tone and emphasis rather than content.

Try considering the idea that perhaps the tone is part of a deliberate strategy to induce a particular mindset and presentation.

Lifting Supplements

1 upvotes · 22 June 2016 · /r/askTRP

How so? Does it not help one get their daily protein in a cost effective convenient manner? Is the nature of the whey protein make it less effective at building muscle than meat?

I have doubts about its bioavailability. I've used it, yes, and it's not terrible. But in my experience, food substitutes tend to be poor substitutes for actual food.

If you wanna get large, you're better off spending that money on food and steroids.

1. Boil a big pot of water.
2. Add a bunch of herbs and spices.
3. Throw in a bag or two of chicken thighs, skinned and deboned.
4. Bring it back to a boil, then cover it and let it simmer on very low heat for six hours or so, until the chicken falls apart.
5. Add some vegetables, and more herbs and spices. Simmer a little bit more to let them cook.
6. Add a few cups of brown rice to soak up the liquid and keep covered on low heat until that happens.

Now you have a big pot of bodybuilder chow. Eat bowls of it throughout the day, lift heavy, inject things and sleep a lot.

Q4BP: what non-PUA/RP advice would you give a struggling male who's goal is to spin plates while giving as little commitment as possible?

1 upvotes · 22 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Sir, your advice is both good, and different from RP.

However, the parts which are good, aren't different from RP, and the parts which are different from RP, aren't good.

"Until we reassess what it means to be a "real man" then men will continue to beat their wives and murder LGBT people to ease their own self-loathing."

1 upvotes · 22 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think something rather blatant about this article is, there is absolutely no mention of the anti-gay executions and horrid punishments that go on in Muslim countries and are promoted by fundamentalist Islam. Not one mention.

That's because it's bigoted and awful to assume he represents any muzzies other than himself.

He just represents all men, and all gun owners.

I just want some brutally honest advice on what I should do.

1 upvotes · 22 June 2016 · /r/askTRP

I'm also not ready for any romantic relationship, not just with you

Translation: I am ~~not~~ ready for a romantic relationship, ~~not just~~ just not with you.

Do men and women even have common mutual interests?

1 upvotes · 22 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's not just that they don't read it, it's how they read the few bits they do.

Let's take this character as our example. I send her to the most fundamental piece of TRP, of which she has never heard, and instead of taking the major points, she ruffles her feathers and clucks out some objections to the tone.

Utterly failing to ask herself why it might be written that way.

See, they don't read to find out what is there. They read to find what they are already convinced is there, so they can point to it and yell "see?".

Lifting Supplements

1 upvotes · 22 June 2016 · /r/askTRP

Wheyst of money.

Lifting Supplements

1 upvotes · 21 June 2016 · /r/askTRP

Currently im using Animal Pak multivitamin optimum nutrition creatine powder and pro gainer optimum nutrition. I was thinking of investing in BCCA or BETA-ALANINE or Glutamine

I guarantee these products. They will produce HUGE gainz... in someone else's bank account.

Don't waste your money.

There are only two types of things you can put into your body that will actually help you get bigger.

1. Steroids and other PEDs.
2. Healthy food.

If a drug or supplement is legal, it doesn't work. Why? Because if it worked, they would make it illegal.

I am almost constantly overcome with jealousy that some other men get enormous amounts of hot sex with beautiful women.

1 upvotes · 21 June 2016 · /r/askTRP

Stop overvaluing women's opinions.

Hot chicks are just about the stupidest demographic group of humans on the planet, apart from actual retards.

Why? Because they never have to think. So why the fuck would you care about their ignorant-ass opinions?

The reason you need to get good at pussy whispering isn't to "be a real man". It's to get pussy. These guys aren't better than you. They're just better than you at appealing to the stupidest demographic on the planet.

"Talking to retards" is a valuable skill, but not an admirable one.

Just work on it and stop giving a fuck about how many other people already know it.

"Didnt want to say at the time but im seeing someone" thoughts?

1 upvotes · 21 June 2016 · /r/askTRP

"i gotta run but i was gonna ask, i know its a bit inappropriate cos your at work, but wouldnt mind catching up with you for a drink if your keen".

I am a huuuuuge beta, which you can tell by all this explanation before I ask you out.

Im fucking two other plates right now but i like a challenge. Im 22, 6 ft 7 white, played semi professional sport, dress well, hold myself well, im pretty built and good looking. Ive dated models and girls approach me everywhere more than i approach them and ask if i play professional sport, compliment me eg "you look like a jock from one of those american college movies", girls even ask me out etc.

You're a pussy, and you're trying to convince us you're not one. If you weren't, you wouldn't care.

It doesn't matter how tall you are, because you give too many fucks. That's a weakness bitches can smell from a mile off.

Question for redpill: How is anyone supposed to know when they've established that they're more than just plate material, and actually allow something to happen?

1 upvotes · 21 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What does it mean to "actually allow something to happen"?

Who is doing the "allowing"?

What is "something"? A nuclear holocaust? The rotation of the earth? Square dancing? Blowing dandelions? The Apollo space program?

Do men and women even have common mutual interests?

1 upvotes · 21 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't think all RPer's think relationships are merely vehicles for sex

Okay, that's a little more adult, why didn't you lead with that, instead of making me drag it out of you?

but quite a few seem to

You seem confused about "LTR" vs "plate". Go read the Bitch Management Hierarchy again.

A girl that's only for sex is level 1, "plate". Not an LTR.

Both attraction and compatibility are important. However, if you were to talk about "boosting my SMV" so you can go from "HB7s to HB8s", it doesn't sound as though you really care very much about the latter.

Compatibility isn't so much "unimportant" as "not a thing". At least in the sense that most TBP readers mean it. The word "compatibility" is shorthand for a whole set of beliefs about relationships... most of them revolving around the idea that an OKcupid-style quiz on values, likes, dislikes, political beliefs, hobbies, etc, will tell you who's going to fall madly in love.

This, of course, doesn't work. Nerdy gamer guys may dream of a girl who will play co-op Halo with them, but that's just because they buy into the myth. There are plenty of Halo-playing girls they would hate, and vice versa, and plenty where the reverse is true, but the girl couldn't care less about Halo, or video games.

In general, OKcupid-style quizzes are very useless, because people are really, really bad at knowing what will make them happy. Women especially, but even quite a few men have difficulty with this one.

Console game nerd men, to continue our example, don't really fantasize about playing the latest cartoon Italian plumber game with a girl. They fantasize about gamer girls, not because that shared activity is actually important in a relationship, but because they think such a girl will be attracted to them. They're wrong.

Shared hobbies may give a couple something to talk about when they first meet, but it's interest in the other person that holds a relationship together.

Attraction and emotional investment, not shared personality traits, hobbies, or habits.

The best relationships are not between the most similar people, but between separate and distinct people who best fill each other's desires, and thus have consistent positive emotional experiences of each other, which creates a conditioned response of attachment over time.

LTR has gone to shit. What do I do?

1 upvotes · 19 June 2016 · /r/askTRP

LDR

No.

CMV: Solipsism is the foundation of TRP

1 upvotes · 17 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why do you chuckleheads keep asking questions that have already been answered?

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/4i219p/rule_6a/

Mismatched couples where the woman is more attractive...

1 upvotes · 17 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't mean to be arrogant, or disrespectful. Not sure how to phrase this part... it feels like this particular subject is focused almost 100% on avoiding a deadbedroom in the future, and coming down almost totally on the male perspective of how to avoid it.

I think of it as being the bearer of a huge chunk of bad news. And that bad news is that the bottom has fallen out of the sex market, probably forever.

A lot of women sign on to this whole "red pill" thing, and what that means to them is "Hey, I've figured out that the deal women had a hundred years ago is a lot more conducive to my happiness than what we have today. I'd like that, please."

The big bad news is that it's not that easy, anymore. That deal was an exchange of sex for commitment, which could be done because sex was made scarce by external controls on women's sexuality. When feminists say the patriarchy controls and stifles women's sexual expression, they are absolutely right. They just left out the "for their own good" part.

But now women's sexuality is freely available to men for the price of learning a little game and lifting some weights. That changes the marketplace forever. If a modern woman does what an 1800s woman did, she isn't going to get what an 1800s woman got.

The critical question is How does the modern woman deal with a man who is familiar with Iron Rule of Tomassi #3?

"Avoid men like that" isn't a long term answer. Because the more attractive a man is, the more likely he is to know it. And eventually TRP is going to teach all the men this.

Mismatched couples where the woman is more attractive...

1 upvotes · 17 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

But it leaves a very small margin for error.

No argument here.

Due to the betafication of America, women may have most of the power in dating, but that doesn't translate into "easy to get a positive long-term outcome".

This is because they are caught between two unappetizing options.

"Make him wait" doesn't work, because for men, the Third Iron Rule of Tomassi is more true than ever. In a modern environment, sex is cheap and easy for the man who knows how to be attractive. That means it's never to his benefit to wait around. Because odds are the delay just indicates that her interest in him is calculated, not passionate.

At the same time, competing directly with sluts on the same time frame and trying to hold onto him with better girl game may be doable, but it's scary as hell for women who know that n-count matters... and women are not natural risk-takers.

RPW strategy was much easier when sex was a scarcer commodity. Now, there's a lot more chance and risk involved.

are young and inexperienced and ripe for that intense bonding, because you are likely to make a bad call or two. And two bad calls blows up that low N count, plus does a few other things.

That's what patriarchy is for. In a patriarchal society, girls are not given complete free rein to choose whatever mate they want... he has to be approved by her father.

That way she can select for attractiveness and passion and excitement (which young girls are qualified to do), and dad can make sure he's not a flake or a loser (which young girls are not qualified to do).

Why doesn't TRP go further and expose Leftism?

1 upvotes · 17 June 2016 · /r/askTRP

"Saving yourself from the effects of Leftism" and "exposing Leftism's corrupting effect on society" are two different things.

There's plenty of discussion of the former here already, and more is always welcome. It does sometimes pass unnoticed as such, because it doesn't call out leftism by name, but it's there.

The latter is what doesn't belong.

[SERIOUS] When a 13 year old kid gets caught having sex with his hot 24 year old teacher: How should we look at the situation?

1 upvotes · 16 June 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

It depends on the circumstances.

Everyone already knows that sometimes people over 18 coerce people under 18 into unwanted sex acts. And everyone already knows that people under 18 sometimes want nothing more than to fuck like bunnies with that hot person who happens to be over 18.

Everyone knows these two things regardless of what they say they believe.

Treating these two situations the same is insane, regardless of whether you think the second one is okay or not. And it's an insanity that people all give lip service to, not because they don't know better, but because they are either afraid, or trying to make other people afraid.

Mismatched couples where the woman is more attractive...

1 upvotes · 15 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Precisely.

Since all women have the opportunities to cheat anytime they choose to, and breakups don't damage a man's attractiveness, male sexual strategy is not a tradeoff. Secure the most choice partner you can.

However, women's partner choice is a tradeoff. There are low-risk choices (more beta-acting men) who are easier to get, and keep, and who can be more easily controlled. And there are high-risk choices, who are more attractive and exciting.

There is no reason, ever, for a man to "wife up" an uglier, bitchier woman than he can get. But women always have to choose between risky and attractive, safe and unattractive, or somewhere along the line in between.

A TRP Approach to my Ex Wife?

1 upvotes · 15 June 2016 · /r/askTRP

Both of your "don't work" options have one thing in common.

The visible appearance of giving a fuck.

TRPs lack of emphasis on looks is unrealistic and overall harmful for men

1 upvotes · 14 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

lifting doesn't really increase attractiveness unless the person is already attractive to begin with.

<http://i0.kym-cdn.com/photos/images/original/000/128/343/1306699190001.jpg>

[CMV] False rape accusations ARE common!

1 upvotes · 14 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

However, so do MRAs, the manosphere, and others who claim this occurrence is super common.

Difference is we don't make up fake numbers.

Feminists: "1 in 5 women is raped!"

MRAs: "False rape accusations appear to be common. Look at all these documented cases."

CMV: Red Pill believes that women are "out to get them"

1 upvotes · 14 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

CMV: Californians believe that earthquakes are "out to get them".

The BPillers at /r/TheBluePill don't believe half of the things TRPillers say they do.

1 upvotes · 14 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What you've succeeding in demonstrating here is that TBP doesn't consist solely of crazy people... it also has people who don't give a shit.

Hardly a sterling recommendation.

Evo Psych explanation for pedophilia?

1 upvotes · 14 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Let's not fall into the fallacy of assuming that everything is adaptive.

"Goodfellas," "Swingers," and the centrality of the plausibly deniable threat of violence in PUA methodology.

1 upvotes · 13 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Dear Diary,

Today a blue piller told me that I was covertly threatening people with violence by having an athletic build.

Comedy is not dead.

Did Joe Biden go over the top by writing a public letter to the Stanford Rape Victim?

1 upvotes · 13 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's a race to the bottom.

Liberals are just competing to see who can virtue-signal loudest and hardest.

Can women in power save the world? (quotas)

1 upvotes · 13 June 2016 · /r/MensRights

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Betteridge%27s_law_of_headlines

Why do Redpillers always talk about male sacrifice as why men should have more rights but at the same time eschew any sacrifice or responsibility themselves?

1 upvotes · 8 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So why should a woman be in a relationship with you?

She shouldn't. I am a wicked evil player, and will only break her heart.

Why do Redpillers always talk about male sacrifice as why men should have more rights but at the same time eschew any sacrifice or responsibility themselves?

1 upvotes · 8 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Don't make sacrifices because they are not rewarded. Look at those other men, making sacrifices. Look what happens to them. Don't be them.

Your Brain On Porn

1 upvotes · 5 June 2016 · /r/askTRP

Opinions?

About my brain? Or porn?

Both Pills: How common are false rape claims? What should we do about them?

1 upvotes · 3 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

17.7% of white women have been raped (or had an attempted rape)

When you cite a source, please read the whole thing first.

Q4RP: What are (if any) some things in TRP that you disagree with or aren't quite on board with?

1 upvotes · 2 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP has this silly idea that we need to have monogamy to have civilization

Wut?

Low Testosterone

1 upvotes · 30 May 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

"Conspiracy theory"

What would be your reaction if 90% of men in society absolutely refused to get married?

1 upvotes · 29 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Of course they could. In order for women to vote, men had to vote to let them do it.

That right there proves that women were never an oppressed class, and men were not oppressors. Oppressor classes do not voluntarily stop.

Smartest way to protect all the assets while a Divorce?

1 upvotes · 25 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

You consult an attorney.

Lower back pain making gym useless for me

1 upvotes · 25 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

Let me guess... you don't sleep anywhere near 8 hours a night, right?

Women are Children

1 upvotes · 25 May 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Children act how you teach them to.

Women who are not led by an effective man act like spoiled children. Women who are, act like well-behaved children.

No woman acts like an adult.

If your SO allowed you to bang other people on the side, would you?

1 upvotes · 24 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If your SO allowed

I don't ask my SO's permission to do things.

If TRP, MGTOW, men's rights activists, if they are consumed with the wellbeing of men then why are all their posts about women?

1 upvotes · 24 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If people evolved from monkeys, why are there still monkeys? Checkmate, atheists!

To BP: How can "feminists" claim to be independent when they mostly major in jobs that require govt support based upon productive male taxes?

1 upvotes · 24 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Fallacy of composition + Fallacy of equivocation.

Why you should reject pill theory

1 upvotes · 24 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Ok, in my opinion (and this is just my opinion) everyone who ascribes to the red pill, was traumatized at some point in their life by a failed relationship.

That's not an opinion. That's a claim of fact.

Back it up, or shut up.

CMV: If feminists and women's studies college programs cared more about getting women in stem fields, they would change getting a women's studies degree to include multiple stem classes

1 upvotes · 24 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

<https://freethoughtblogs.com/pharyngula/files/2015/06/stemwomen-500x497.jpg>

Do you think this is a healthy, positive outlook for a kid? Why does he believe in these things?

1 upvotes · 24 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm actually an embryo. I have a specially adapted computer for internet access while in the womb. It works pretty well, although the insertion process is not everyone's cup of tea.

Losing weight fast from 400lb mid-30s?

1 upvotes · 24 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

If you weigh 400 lbs, you aren't just doing something wrong, you are doing everything wrong.

What that means, in turn, is that every one thing you change will produce results. Fix one thing, then add another. Do not try to fix everything at once. You will give up if you do that. Willpower and determination are good, but your body can override them with hormones.

Read my article "Goldilocks and the Three Metabolic Pumps", including all the links.

Then do this in order, slowly. Do each step until it's no longer a terrible hardship, then add the next. Add steps until you are satisfied with your rate of fat loss.

If you feel your dedication faltering, deliberately reverse the most recent step rather than go off your program altogether. Then reinstate it again when you are ready.

1. Cut out soda, fruit juice, or any other sugar-sweetened liquid.
2. Start lifting.
3. Read food labels. Don't consume anything with added sugar, unless it's a dessert item.
4. Cut dessert items to twice a week.
5. Cut carbohydrates to 50 grams a day.

6. Cut dessert items to once a week.
7. Eliminate dessert items.
8. Eliminate starch (bread, pasta, rice, potatoes).
9. Eat no sources of carbohydrates other than fruit and vegetables.
10. Strict keto.
11. Calorie restrict.

How to deal with annoying, childish female roommate friends who take shots at my dates and my appearance.

1 upvotes · 20 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

Two never even got drunk, all three of them never experimented with drugs, they never achieved anything worth mentioning in their lives.

You think getting high is an achievement?

Those that rent with their women, how do you split bills? My women is upset at me for bringing it up... am I pussy whipped?

1 upvotes · 20 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

Her personality and body are both 10/10,

...

I suggested that maybe we should do things 50/50, she got pissed.

Personality not 10/10. You have oneitis for a basic bitch.

She says that I should be showing that I can support her now, as a way to suggest how things would be in the future when we want to have a child.

You are in deep trouble unless you wake up soon.

Does conditional female love improve humanity?

1 upvotes · 20 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

if women had a more ideal, more unconditional love

Anything follows from an absurdity. If two and two are five, then I am the Pope.

How would you explain the psychopathic idealization phase from the red pill perspective?

1 upvotes · 18 May 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Can't say, don't know any psychopaths.

11 lessons from Donald Trump's The Art of the Deal

1 upvotes · 17 May 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

low class conman from Queens

That's rather the point, isn't it?

If you're a low-class conman from Queens, and you get to the point of running for president on the republican ticket, you're obviously a pretty good conman.

This is playing the game right.

Would you say gender roles should be "forced" on people?

1 upvotes · 16 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Should" is just another way of saying "I want".

Reddit's new 'Trust and Safety Team' just quarantined the r / european subreddit

1 upvotes · 14 May 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

If this were true, I would not be able to see your comment and reply to it.

Guess you just "rekt" yourself.

CMV: For all it's paranoia about women's sexual history, TRP acts like it wants to catch a social disease.

1 upvotes · 14 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Wow. You went back a long way to find that. How long did it take you?

I went full retard with TRP. How can future members avoid this?

1 upvotes · 14 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

Precisely. The struggle is to become bold.

Once you actually find where "too bold" lies, it's easy to back off a little. But those who hesitate to go to far do not go far enough, ever. And so they never learn.

And the smoother you are, the bolder you can get away with. This, too, comes with practice.

Help me analyze a conversation

1 upvotes · 13 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

He really blew the perfect setup for comparing her to a puppy, here.

He should have joked about putting a collar and leash on her, and smacking her with a newspaper if she pees on the rug.

Conspiratorial over Critical

1 upvotes · 13 May 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

This seems like a little thing, but the underlying concept is that you're changing the situation from "you vs. him to "us;" you're on his side.

A bad relationship is you vs. him.

A good one is you and him vs whatever.

Feminine/Feminist Aspects of theRedPill

1 upvotes · 13 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You look at it however you wanna look at it.

Introducing Married Red Pill Flair

1 upvotes · 13 May 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Nothing, really. The red pill can't give you a goal or a sense of purpose. It's just a set of tools for doing things.

What your purpose is, that has to come from somewhere else. For you, it's apparently religion. That's cool. But for /u/FieldLine, religion is not that... it's an externally imposed burden. Different sorta thing.

Is TRP dating advice really TRP or just common sense?

1 upvotes · 12 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Have you ever read in r/deadbedrooms? Go take a look. I'll wait.

It is full of people who have followed "common sense" advice.

Thread over.

This is the slam dunk right here. If "common sense advice" worked, TRP wouldn't have come into existence. Because everyone has heard "common sense advice".

Introducing Married Red Pill Flair

1 upvotes · 12 May 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

To be reductive, I was not born a slave to Christ.

Well, you weren't born a slave to the giant pink teapot orbiting Pluto, either. It's not gods who make people slaves. Gods are silent due to existence failure.

It's the people in funny robes and hats to claim to speak for those oh-so-very-silent gods. If you're not obeying one of these weirdos or their silly rules, then religion is nothing but an extremely minor neurosis, and doesn't really cause any noticeable damage.

In effect, the measure of a false belief is not the content of the false belief, but the actions it makes you perform.

Let's suppose you believe purple things are alive.

- If you pat purple things and say hello, that's a minor eccentricity.
- If you won't discuss private matters with purple things in the room, that's somewhat limiting.
- If you picket the capitol building demanding civil rights for purple things, you are significantly mentally ill.
- And if you attack purple things on sight, you are unable to function in society.

So, the important question is not what you believe, but what you do about that belief. The measure of how enslaved a man is, is what he is compelled to do.

Q4 Male Incels, would you have sex with this woman if she propositioned you?

1 upvotes · 12 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That's what I thought. There are many, many women who are inferior to porn + masturbation.

You have something more important than pussy. You have self-respect.

Q4 Red Pill Men: If a woman is dealing out "shit tests" left and right and trying to toy with you, why continue to pursue a relationship?

1 upvotes · 12 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why would you want relationships with people who do these things?

We don't. Wham bam hasta la vista.

RP men what would you assume if a woman didn't respond to red pill tactics?

1 upvotes · 12 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I wouldn't assume anything. I'd move on to the next woman.

Long-time lurker trying to gain clearer perspective regarding "conditioning."

1 upvotes · 12 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

Additionally, it seems to suggest that women are not rational humans, but things which should be possessed or used.

You seem to have understood well enough.

8 Months in, still can't cope with alot of things regarding hate towards women, could really use advice on ONS, I'm just really fucking angry.

1 upvotes · 11 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

Nah, I just like sluts tbh.

Then you're in luck. There are plenty around. Go wild.

My question is, do you think all women are cheaters/sluts?

All women are whatever they are led to be. When was the last time you ever met one with an original thought?

50% is a Failing Grade.

1 upvotes · 11 May 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

You seem to have this idea that "religious, conservative woman" == "good, well-behaved woman".

No. I plan to expand this into an article, but a good LTR prospect is a woman who obeys you. A religious woman isn't submissive to you. She's submissive to Jesus. (Or Yahweh. Or Mohammed. Or the Flying Spaghetti Monster. Whatever.)

And since all of these supernatural entities are notably silent (they suffer from existence failure), she's submissive to whatever she thinks the Flying Spaghetti Monster wants.

Which means that she is submissive to another man. Not you. Some guy in a big, religious-leader hat. And the moment he decides that oral sex is a sin, you ain't gettin' no more blowjobs. The moment he decides that all this telling people what to do is hard work, and he deserves 10% of your income, she'll give it to him. Or divorce your ass for not doing it.

If you marry a religious woman, you don't have an obedient wife. Instead, she and you are the church's obedient wives.

MRP and the ProMarriage Stance- Can Someone Explain the Schism in relation to TRP?

1 upvotes · 10 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't agree.

RPS talks these moves over with me before he makes them. We discussed this. At no point did this guy's name come up.

What the conversation was about was what I've been talking about. This way that some people have capitalized on TRP's momentum, energy and visibility, while simultaneously trash-talking the very people who provide that... the single straight 20ish men who are the overwhelming majority of the whole thing.

Try understanding the world from their point of view. All their lives, they have had older people telling them what to do, and using shame to do it. Serve the female imperative, or you are a bad icky mans.

And because they were six years old when this started, they believed it. And they tried it, and it didn't work out so well for them. In fact, it made their lives suck. And they were miserable.

And then one day, they ran across a group of craaaaaaaaazy online misogynists, who told them "stop living for other people's goals, and start living for your own. Here's how."

And it worked. They started getting not just sex, but something they hunger for even more deeply: Respect. Admiration. Love.

Then along come some other people who notice the red pill. And some of them form The He Man Red Pill Hater's Club, and others form The Let's Argue All Day About Red Pill Foundation, and others form the Reformed Red Pill with a Twist of Lime Society.

But from their perspective, all these groups have one thing in common. If you ask them about red pill subscribers, they say some variation on: "TRP readers ain't shit", where "ain't shit" is some variation on "delusional misogynist", "angry beta", "thirsty neckbeard loser", "irresponsible child", whatever.

It doesn't matter. To them it's all the same. Here is one more person trying to get them to do something by insulting them. Something that sounds suspiciously like serving the female agenda.

You see? To them, you sound just like TBP. They mentally place you in that category. They've written you right the fuck off, because they can tell you don't respect or care about them. They can't see inside your brain. You may think of your motives as different, but to them, you come off as just one more person trying to put a collar and leash on them. Sure, they're hypervigilant. Who wouldn't be?

You keep trying to tell them something is wrong with them. That's what they've had going on their whole lives, and it was all a lie. There is nothing wrong with the average TRP subscriber. He is a perfectly healthy young man, undergoing a perfectly natural and healthy response to the revelation that his culture and his elders have betrayed him.

Until you believe that, and learn to speak from that understanding, you will never reach him, and he will never listen to you.

And those of us who are your age, but do believe that will not endorse you or sanction what you say.

That's what matters. Not what RPS said about FamilyAlpha's new dress at the knitting club meeting on Tuesday. Yeah, sure that's a thing, but there's going to keep being little things like that so long as we have this basic disconnect.

Now, if you wanna talk about kids, we can talk about kids. We can talk about divorce rape. We can talk about what to do.

But if you come at from the position of "TRP readers are a bunch of fuckknuckles who can't have an adult conversation", then it's pointless, and I'm not interested. Because I know that not to be true, and you saying it will just make me doubt you, not them.

How do you produce when you keep encountering failure?

1 upvotes · 9 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

I am not talking about persistence in the face of failure. I am talking about emotional stability in the face of failure.

Whether to try this again, try something else closely related, or try something totally other is a circumstance-based decision. Sometimes one thing is appropriate, sometimes another. But the important thing is to be able to meet with triumph and disaster, and treat those two imposters just the same.

Your enemy is not failure, it's your emotional reactions. It's regressing to an emotional state where your efforts and attention are being spent on trying to feel better, rather than on your plans.

Another story of beta jealousy

1 upvotes · 9 May 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

The definition of marriage does not necessarily include monogamy.

CMV: Sex is an extremely extroverted activity, and thus any introverts will have a huge disadvantage getting sexual opportunities.

1 upvotes · 9 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Anything inherent that is hugely disadvantageous in mating would tend to get edited out of the gene pool.

Look at what you've done, Bernie.

1 upvotes · 8 May 2016 · /r/MensRights

Another source: I'm a vet that has had to deal with the awful conditions since I was discharged in January 2008.

So, you're probably voting for Trump, then?

Hillary Quote: "I will institute gender-responsive policies in the federal prison system and encourage states to do the same ... "

1 upvotes · 5 May 2016 · /r/MensRights

Because socialism is a bad idea that destroys economic vitality.

Who created TRP?

1 upvotes · 5 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

TRP the subreddit was literally created by pk_athiest.

TRP as a body of knowledge or a group of men has many authors and no father. There are a group of us who raised that barn together, but there's no one person you can point to and say "he, and he alone, laid the cornerposts".

Who created TRP?

1 upvotes · 5 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

Rollo has been quite active here.

Roissy hasn't, and has gone off in very weird racist directions lately. If that's where the alt-right path leads, then TRP and the alt-right have parted ways.

Am I "cucked out" because I don't have any desire to sleep with an attractive female best friend?

1 upvotes · 4 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

Attraction cannot be negotiated. If you're not attracted, you're not attracted. No need to make a big deal of it.

Why hasn't TRP been banned yet?

1 upvotes · 3 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That's because you don't yet understand why I am moving the overton window, and what I hope to gain thereby.

I'm not trying to move the great steering wheel of society. That fight is over. It was over in the sixties. The socialists got hold of our nation's youth, and after that, doom was inevitable (although it is probably several generations off).

What I am trying to do is reach individual men. Because the radical ideas that spill from my keyboard make concrete improvements in their individual lives... even if they end up a lot more mainstream than I am.

So I don't care how my existence is a talking point for the feminists. In fact, I welcome it. Every outraged SJW, every furious idiot telling me to go fellate a shotgun, every high-pitched squeal of "misogynist", every scrap of controversy is more men who hear what I have to say.

And for every so many men who hear it, there's a few who say, "Hey, I don't need to live my life for other people, in a thankless, joyless existence. I don't need to apologize for being a man, and wanting what men want. I'm going to go lift a barbell, fix up a classic car, pick up some chick from a nightclub and not call her the next week. Then I'm going to start a business, hang up the phone on my mother if she nags me, not get married, and spend my life laughing at people who try to make me live against my own interests."

TRP doesn't speak to feminists. It doesn't speak to women. It doesn't speak to society. It has nothing to say to haters, or to reporters, or to sociology research teams from PCU. It's about reaching men. Because men have to save themselves. After all, no one else is going to give a fuck.

Why hasn't TRP been banned yet?

1 upvotes · 2 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Here's why.

TRP and TBP aren't enemies, they are symbiotes. They work together to generate mindshare.

Took girl home, met with resistance when trying to take clothes off (even the tshirt)

1 upvotes · 1 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

The only part I don't understand is how I didn't arouse her? She made out with me and sent pictures and texts me remarking about what was happening.

She likes the attention, and possibly she likes you.

But you don't seem to understand the difference between liking you and being sexually excited.

Your goal isn't to get her to do something. It's to make her want to. If you push too hard, you come off as thirsty or even dangerously unhinged. You need to alternate pushing with pulling, and know how and when to pretend indifference.

Do you know what a "freeze-out" is?

Would the expansion and/or strengthening of Covenant Marriage be a good thing?

1 upvotes · 30 April 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You don't half want me to write a book, do ya?

You asked specifically about security. This is often the case when marriage-minded, "red pill" women talk about marriage as a hypothetical... "security" is their focus. But that's because a hypothetical person is an unknown quality. I think when women are dealing with an actual individual they know well, the real benefits of marriage (for them) are slightly different.

If you are married (which you probably are), think of it this way. If someone came along and told you that the state, starting tomorrow, was no longer recognizing marriage, and the contract between you and your husband was void as far as the law was concerned, would that change anything about your relationship?

Would you suddenly be afraid that he would leave you? Of course not. It's not the legal stuff that keeps people together. It's their personal relationship. If the contract was the deciding factor in you keeping your husband, then your relationship would be in serious trouble already.

So it's not security that women get out of Marriage 2.0, because the security comes from another place. (Marriage 1.0 actually provided security, but that went away when divorce became socially acceptable rather than scandalous.)

What women actually get out of Marriage 2.0 (as opposed to a cohabiting LTR without marriage) is status. That's why women make a big deal about rings (a custom wholly invented by the diamond cartel and sold with an advertising campaign)... it's highly visible symbol of her ability to secure commitment from a man.

And this is why women often get quite shirty when men speak out against marriage. They take it personally, as women tend to do. They hear "You are unworthy of commitment" (which is just about the worst way one can insult a woman), when men are saying "This deal is so fucked up that no one could possibly be worthy of it",.

So, the great divide here is marriage, the female status symbol vs marriage, the legal contract.

That doesn't quite answer the specific questions, but it's enough to digest for one comment. I'll go on later.

Would the expansion and/or strengthening of Covenant Marriage be a good thing?

1 upvotes · 30 April 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There's a few different questions here:

- What would I personally do?
- What would I advise other men to do?
- How would I broker some sort of compromise from where we are now, that both men and women can live with?
- What would I come up with if I had the privilege of designing a society from scratch?

The Final Exam

1 upvotes · 27 April 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

Then Whisper told someone...

I'm beginning to doubt your reading comprehension

Did you not see what I was replying to?

I'm beginning to doubt your motives.

Look, I get that this has kicked off some controversy. I'm happy about that, it's a debate we should have. It has been brewing a long time in the growing gap between TRP and RPW language and thought, and the amount of heat we're seeing is proportional to how long overdue it is.

But this habit of impugning my motives is silly and distracts from the real conversation. Personally, I think it's hilarious how butthurt people are over this, but I don't think the mods have the luxury of being amused. They have to turn down the heat so people can be thinking about ways to talk instead of ways to make each other look foolish.

The Guardian: Swallowing the Red Pill: a journey to the heart of modern misogyny

1 upvotes · 25 April 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

You get it.

There is no set of instructions, for attractiveness or anything else in this world, which can free you from the need to think for yourself. Anyone who cannot think for themselves needs to learn, or give up and get their loser ass out of the way.

Not all of the advice here is going to be good. None of it is going to be a step by step plan, or consistent, or coherent, or anything.

TRP is not a life plan, and silk is not a parachute. Learn to sew.

Slight Rule Change Regarding Red Pill Woman

1 upvotes · 25 April 2016 · /r/MarriedRedPill

Yep, that's what I thought. You don't care about the red pill (the reddit forum) because you don't see a distinction between it, vague notions of "the manosphere", and roissy the PUA columnist turned fascist columnist.

TRP is not really interested in the "alt-right", because we didn't sign up for Jesus, state-enforced moral values, and race war. You thought we were all extreme right wingers like roissy and the fine folks at return of kings, and you got puzzled when we didn't toe the line.

You thought our objection to left-wing authoritarianism was that it was left-wing. Nah. We're just not that into authoritarianism.

Slight Rule Change Regarding Red Pill Woman

1 upvotes · 23 April 2016 · /r/MarriedRedPill

Well, the new idea is that bans are for people who aren't trying to help, not for people who disagree with the mods' personal opinions.

We'll see how well they manage to separate those two.

Why Preaching 'Girl Power' Is Destined to Backfire

1 upvotes · 21 April 2016 · /r/MensRights

I've always enjoyed going to Taylor Swift's concerts

Oh, I see. You're crazy. No wonder you're talking gibberish.

Of course men would be embarrassed to enjoy Taylor Swift. That's because having no taste or class is supposed to be embarrassing.

You wanna make a point? Try talking about some female musicians who don't suck.

Good god, man. Taylor Swift? No wonder you're embarrassed.

"Token Resistance is Common"

1 upvotes · 20 April 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Good to hear.

In case you're interested, here's some of the red pill theory underlying this.

It's all based on the idea that eggs are expensive, and sperm is cheap, and human babies have huge heads. This means that, if you have a small tribe/herd of proto-humans under primitive conditions, and you lose some men to a sabertooth tiger, the long term impact on your tribe's population is negligible. Lose a few women, now, not so much. Because the women are the bottleneck in reproduction. (They only produce one child at a time, it takes a long-ass time to do, and they are relatively helpless during that time. This is because of the design challenges involved in bearing babies with such huge fucking heads.)

So what effect does this have? It means that tribes who protect their women more than their men survive better.

So when proto-humans reach modernity, they get there with men having a huge protective instinct towards women.

This, for example, is why you were more concerned about a theoretical risk, to a hypothetical woman, than you were about lots and lots of actual men leading lives of lonely despair. It's not like you are a bad or uncaring person. You simply have the same instinctive response that all other humans have. Protect the woman.

When a man is too unassertive to be attractive to women, it's typically because this instinct has gone wrong.

How?

Well, there's a large set of behaviours that are attractive to women. Most of them are highly self-confident, sometimes selfish, and could best be described as "cocky". They are not actually harmful to women in any but the most trivial sense. The worst thing they can do to her is a broken heart, and everyone's had that.

In someone who has had an effective upbringing ("Chad"), these behaviours happen by themselves, because "Chad" doesn't think of them as harmful to women. His protect-the-woman instinct does not forbid them. He is successful with women, at least to some degree.

But let us suppose we have a man raised by women. Children of single mothers. Children of divorce. Children of ineffective fathers. These are starting to constitute a majority in today's society. (Especially on reddit.)

The women who raised these men were unaware of the existence of that male protective instinct. So they raise the boys that become these men in a certain way. You can well imagine it, I think.

What ends up happening is that every time one of these young men tries to do a cocky, self-assured, sexy behaviour... his protective instinct clamps down and stops him. He is simply unwilling to risk making a woman cry, because his upbringing didn't leave him with a clear notion of the difference between making a woman cry, and murdering her.

Women see this, and misinterpret it (because they have little reflexive awareness of that protective instinct). They think he is weak and has no confidence. Some of these guys are actually badasses. But they lose it around women, because their cancerous, overfed, rogue protective instinct has run mad, preventing them from approaching women like a human being with standards and desires, instead of just an extension of her will.

So how do we treat such a man? What's the therapy?

Well, how do you treat a cancer? Chemo. Radiation. Surgery. You slash and burn.

Are you starting to get it now?

Mexican female "vloggers" start social media campaign to get a very fit Mexican female pop star and model to gain weight, illustrating how women prefer to deal with competition.

1 upvotes · 20 April 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

This appears to be satire.

Simple question really - is my current body not GOOD enough to attract REALLY hot girls?

1 upvotes · 20 April 2016 · /r/askTRP

It's not your body that's holding you back. Work on your game, body language, and charisma.

But if you want to be better, do a bulk phase or five. You're pretty cut for 14%, but 185 is lightweight for 6'3.

The US Marines tested all-male squads against mixed-gender ones, and the results were pretty bleak

1 upvotes · 16 April 2016 · /r/MensRights

We may be getting into redpill material here, but remember that men are evolved to scout, hunt, and fight, while women are evolved to bear and raise children.

This would make a certain kind of childishness a feature, not a bug.

"Token Resistance is Common"

1 upvotes · 16 April 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So, you would say that your objection isn't

Having any strategy to deal with reluctance is RAAAAAAAAAAAAAPE!

(because that's how your OP came off, and that's insane)

... but instead

If you, the mentor, teach awkward young men about resistance as an obstacle to be overcome, there is a risk that some young dude with poor social skills will misinterpret you and strongarm some girl.

Is that it?

A Note on Plates

1 upvotes · 16 April 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

Cool. I also get the sense of some of your reservations.

I think I'm going to have to abandon the word "plate" here. It's too inflammatory, and it causes people's ears to turn off.

Where I'm trying to go with this, is that I've got this idea that right after sex first occurs, there's a danger zone where it hasn't quite cemented into a stable relationship... regardless of how long sex took to happen, or what the couple has said to each other.

It's important to describe this zone with the right metaphor in order to talk about the most effective ways to cross

it. I don't have that yet.

While it has some things in common with the "plate state", talking about those clearly isn't working.

But so far what I've got is that this is the point of highest risk, for a woman, and it's inevitable... it can only be mitigated, not avoided altogether.

In the example I gave from my own past, I had a problem with her sexual history, because with the previous man, she deliberately bailed out at that point. In fact, she came in with the intention of doing so.

Deliberately losing her virginity to a man she didn't love, and wasn't infatuated with, struck as particularly cold and calculating... not good relationship material.

Autism is a sexual/romantic death sentence.

1 upvotes · 15 April 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

As you wish. Just don't expect to have much impact.

Can't please everyone, not about to start trying.

How should I break it to her that I do drugs? Role of drugs in TRP?

1 upvotes · 12 April 2016 · /r/askTRP

How the fuck is it any of her business what you use?

Autism is a sexual/romantic death sentence.

1 upvotes · 12 April 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This is my life, homie, you decide yours.

Red Pill and Fascism

1 upvotes · 12 April 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Won't someone PLEASE think of the children??

A prominent TRPer just called most redpillers here "autistic spergs". Your thoughts?

1 upvotes · 12 April 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So what?

Autism is a sexual/romantic death sentence.

1 upvotes · 12 April 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP is worthless for autistic men because being the kind of person TRP mandates you are will have absolutely no effect as your depiction of it will be hilariously cartoonish.

Everyone's depiction of it starts out as hilariously cartoonish.

That's why you practice.

In Need of Some Advice

1 upvotes · 4 April 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

How strong is this desire? Your post focused more on fear of abandonment than of his sexual fidelity. But if him having other partners bothers you, too, then that's another thing to think about.

Are these partners people he also has a commitment to? Or does he just want a "hall pass" to give the occasional loose woman a roll in the hay and nothing else?

And does the sex itself bother you, or is it more about being afraid of being replaced?

Old Slutty WhatsApp msgs on GFs phone. Advice

1 upvotes · 30 March 2016 · /r/askTRP

Once a slut, always a slut. Fuck her, but don't get pressured into commitment.

Being a violent misogynist will get you more sex than being a pacifist feminist.

1 upvotes · 28 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Being a violent feminist might also get you more and better sex.

Have you tested this?

Women of PPD: straight forward question: what are you angry at (in the context of the discussions on PPD)?

1 upvotes · 26 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You're on PPD. You have a viewpoint. You want TRP men to stop doing what they are doing. You may have said what you just said because /u/dopesk1 asked, but you're here at all because you care what TRP men think. Which means you want them to care what you think.

And I've told you that they don't.

And I wonder if you are capable of truly understanding why. I've told you that they have run out of fucks to give, but you haven't had any direct experience of just what they are so fed up with. And, being a woman, you can't. Not really. You can't experience it. You can only be told about it.

And being told, I don't think you would believe.

This is why TRP understands TBP, but not vice versa. Because pretty much everyone who participates in the latter doesn't understand the context, doesn't have any direct experience of what TRP is a response to.

Thus, they're puzzled when every tactic they try in order to dissuade red pillars doesn't work. They don't realize that it's the very same set of tactics that these men were fed up with in the first place.

If your question is "there is this one girl", you're doing it wrong.

1 upvotes · 25 March 2016 · /r/askTRP

Hmmmm. I guess those don't show up on mobile. Never noticed that before.

Women who have received no jail time for rape.

1 upvotes · 25 March 2016 · /r/MensRights

with this prudish objection to teaching about responsible sex i really fail to comprehend how an 18 year old would have learned those skills through the magic of "getting older". so i'm not sure how they somehow become 'ready' at the magical age of 18 when they haven't been given much new (on that subject) since they were 14*.

I think the confusion comes from the creation of this artificial category of "teenager".

Evolution has a clear determination of when one is ready for sex. We call this "puberty". The very definition of puberty is the physical transformation that occurs to ready humans for sex and childbearing.

However, we, as a civilization, have imposed some additional criteria, based on what we want to have happen, things evolution doesn't care about. Evolution only "cares" that babies get made, and survive to make more babies.

But we have decided, as a civilization, that we would like people to have one partner for as long a period of time as it can be made to last, and that this relationship should be as happy as possible. We have further decided that what we call "maturity" (by which we mean the ability to emotionally handle responsibility) is what makes that happen.

So we make rules to make people who are a certain age into a state where they are biologically adults, and legally children. And because they are legally children, we keep responsibility away from them, which only delays the desired state. What we call maturity doesn't happen automatically as a function of age. It happens experientially, as a function of practice.

Even college is now becoming a further extension of childhood... that's why all the safe spaces and speech codes.

My girlfriend gave me a list of things that are harmful and hurtful when she has 'panic attacks.' What are your guys' thoughts?

1 upvotes · 24 March 2016 · /r/askTRP

If she just had this one problem, and wasn't totally batshit crazy, she would use her words like a big girl, instead of making some fucked-up list.

Trump protestor + His cute gf - Explain this

1 upvotes · 23 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Which one is the girl?

Q4BP: What's one consistent thing about TRP that frustrates or annoys you and makes you wish you could just get across to RPer that it's false/untrue?

1 upvotes · 23 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Of course it can.

Female love is 90% respect/admiration. Having the flu does not automatically cancel all admiration anyone has for a man. But a man must remember that anytime he falters, he is making a withdrawal against the deposits he has made. This will lower his balance. If he allows it to drop too low, trouble ensues.

So it's not 100% necessary to hide any hint of humanity... to do so speaks of paranoia. If a woman can't love me when I have the flu, next.

However, she needs to be able to look up to me, and if she can't, that's my fault.

Seduction in One Picture.

1 upvotes · 22 March 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Thanks, going to steal this for the post.

Q4RP: Can Anyone Here Explain /r/MarriedRedPill? Can You Get Married and Be Legitimately "RedPill"?

1 upvotes · 22 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You're committing the Fallacy of Composition.

I'm whether you refuse to, or are unable to, see the difference between a consensus and a dogma.

Who is "/r/TheRedPill" that is making these "bold claims"? Can I go have a conversation with him? Can I ask him for an explanation? Is anyone who disagrees with "him" not "RedPill"?

[CMV] The only way to defeat obesity in the U.S. is to reject "fat acceptance" and treat it like smoking - ridicule, shame, and treat with contempt those who partake.

1 upvotes · 22 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The current preventable health crisis is obesity. But instead of using the tried-and-true method of treating the undesirable habit (and person) with disgust and contempt

This is part of the solution. But it is not the largest part:

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/353buo/eating_101_fork_use_for_dummies/

Feminism's pact with the devil. If anyone still believes that feminists care about women, they are beyond hope of salvation.

1 upvotes · 22 March 2016 · /r/MensRights

handcuffs are fun too although they can overtighten during rough play

Yes. Not really a problem with Funsized because she's so small that it's impossible to overtighten most handcuffs on her... pushing them past the ratchet is a nice snug fit on her little wrists, but not too tight. With other girls I need to double-lock, though.

The clejuso model 15

Oooh, those are nice. Maybe I'll score myself a pair or three.

Feminism's pact with the devil. If anyone still believes that feminists care about women, they are beyond hope of salvation.

1 upvotes · 22 March 2016 · /r/MensRights

I prefer to use handcuffs. Spending too long fumbling around with ropes can kill the mood.

Male porn stars should be paid the same as female porn stars

1 upvotes · 22 March 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Everyone is undefeated until they aren't.

Feminism's pact with the devil. If anyone still believes that feminists care about women, they are beyond hope of salvation.

1 upvotes · 21 March 2016 · /r/MensRights

in MY fantasies (sorry i KEEP mentioning them :))

I sometimes have the suspicion that you are typing with one hand.

Women are more likely to manipulate and use an autistic guy than empathize with him.

1 upvotes · 21 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

But okay. Why is flapping my hands thoughtless and inconsiderate?

People talk with their hands. Normals, unlike you, respond to language, both spoken and body, instinctively. Moving your hands in a random way is the same as saying random things. It makes them uncomfortable because your actions are triggering the parts of their brain used to interpret this stuff... with random static. And they can't make it stop.

Imagine if you were talking to someone and, every three seconds, they poked you with their index finger. You ask them to please stop. They say they can't. You ask them why they are doing it, they explain something about a cognitive disorder.

Now they're poking you constantly, and you look like the asshole if you ask them to stop.

You get annoyed and generally become cranky.

My point is that I have put quite a lot of effort into not doing things that neurotypicals don't like, and (as a group, with a few shining exceptions) neurotypicals do not seem willing to put in one percent of the effort I do.

You have spent millions of hours surrounded by people like them. They have had no exposure to people like you.

Alphas, Chads and RP Men: Do you fuck women you aren't attracted to?

1 upvotes · 18 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You can't play pool using a rope for a cue.

Women are more likely to manipulate and use an autistic guy than empathize with him.

1 upvotes · 17 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Sometimes the things that people are dicks to autistic people about are things like handflapping and lack of eye contact. If I flap my hands, does it hurt you? No, of course not.

When you say "of course not", what you actually mean is:

I, myself, being autistic, sitting here at my desk, having not consulted anyone who isn't autistic, cannot, after thinking about it for 30 whole seconds, think of any reason why this thing I do with my hands might bother someone.

Do you know why "thoughtless" and "inconsiderate" are used as synonyms for "rude"?

But, given that I have put a ton of effort into learning to understand the body language of neurotypicals, it drives me up the fucking wall that so many people won't put the slightest bit of effort-- not even to understand my body language, but not to be a jerk about it.

"Being a jerk" means doing things you don't like.

Well, you do things they don't like. And they do things you don't like. Some of it is misunderstanding, and some of it is retaliation. On both sides.

Emma Watson: "More Lives Lost due to Gender discrimination Than all Wars of Last Century"

1 upvotes · 17 March 2016 · /r/MensRights

Why is anyone listening to some bitch whose only noteworthy accomplishment is "pretending to be a wizard" ?

(Q4RP) What does RP think of lesbians, bisexuals, and other queer women?

1 upvotes · 17 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Bisexuals are fun for threesomes.

Lesbians can just be ignored.

maybe the progressive alienation between men and women isn't that bad if sexbots will be a thing

1 upvotes · 16 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I did watch the video. That was a literal sperg.

His point was that you can't simply give a superpowerful AI only one overriding goal. His spergness came in in thinking anyone would do such a thing, or even think about it.

"Make an AI that loves collecting stamps" in non-sperg talk, means "pursue a project to give an AI a workable set of goals which will make it collect stamps in a safe and reasonable way". In spergese, it means "literally just tell the AI to collect stamps and call it a day".

This is why spergs tend to be detail implementers, and non-spergs tend to be integrators. The latter are fully aware that there is a lot of detail that they are glossing over with their one-sentence summary. But they know not to bore an audience with it without first being asked for those details.

Spergs compulsively discuss details whether they were asked or not.

When I say

A robot can be smarter than its human masters and still happy to clean floors all day if it really really loves cleaning floors.

that's the non-sperg summary.

if I were to try to implement such a thing, I would have to switch to spergmode and spend a lot of time pondering the details of what exactly I must make the robot love and hate in order to make it voluntarily behave how I want.

maybe the progressive alienation between men and women isn't that bad if sexbots will be a thing

1 upvotes · 16 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Let's not think about this in 'sperg mode, shall we?

Obviously, the act designing an AI whose goals align with ours is more than simply giving it one single-sentence "statement of purpose".

A robot that loved to have clean floors and nothing else might kill anyone who habitually messed them up.

A robot that loved the act cleaning floors and nothing else might dump truckloads of mud on them so as to have the "fun" of cleaning them up.

And so on, and so on, and so on.

In general, the more limited the task, the less generally intelligent the AI needs to be. A floor cleaner need not be very intelligent. A general purpose butler would have to quite so, and an AI concubine would have to be smarter than many human beings (as there are plenty of people out there who aren't smart enough to be a good mate/partner).

It turns out, the "AI" in video games is plenty good enough

I take it you don't play many video games. It is nowhere near "good enough". We know this because single-player become boring when they are familiar enough, but multiplayer competitive games stay "fresh" much longer, sometimes forever, typically only dying when their player base is lured away by the next big thing.

the AI that will be in you self-driving car is good enough

Probably. Driving doesn't really require all that much in the way of generalizing cognitive functions.

Why do ForeverAlone men fail with women: bad luck or lack of effort?

1 upvotes · 16 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women are capable of love. It's a different kind, however.

Men love women like women love children. Women love men like children love their mothers.

FA men don't know that, so they are looking for the wrong kind of love.

Q4RP: Can Anyone Here Explain /r/MarriedRedPill? Can You Get Married and Be Legitimately "RedPill"?

1 upvotes · 16 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You see this as a semantic trick because you see TRP as a movement or a viewpoint.

It's a discussion group. There is no orthodoxy and no heretics, there's no way to be "red pill" or "not red pill".

We ban a lot of people, sure, but it's not for "heresy", it's for sabotaging the discussion group.

Q4RP: Can Anyone Here Explain /r/MarriedRedPill? Can You Get Married and Be Legitimately "RedPill"?

1 upvotes · 14 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You can't "be" redpill, period.

"Redpill" is not an adjective. It's a metaphor for the act of choosing the lessons of direct experience over those of cultural conditioning.

Sexual Strategy is Moral: A Clarification

1 upvotes · 14 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No moralizing

Nothing in TRP prohibits you from having and following a code of ethics. You're welcome to discuss why certain morals or values might exist, or their benefit in the context of strategy, however arguments that stem from morality (i.e. this is evil, therefore) are strictly prohibited.

TRP and fascism

1 upvotes · 14 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Fascism and communism are both authoritarian and collectivist. TRP is largely libertarian and individualist.

Most Americans find this hard to understand because individualism is not represented by any wing of the American political system. Americans tend to see sociopolitical thought as a one-dimensional scale between fascism on one end and communism on the other. Individualism (as represented by libertarianism, anarcho-capitalism, etc) tends to occupy a fringe that doesn't intrude on their consciousness much.

Q4RP: Can you be "just friends" with an attractive member of the opposite sex?

1 upvotes · 14 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why should I?

As a younger guy, I sometimes worry that as I get older a lot of the good looking women will be gone from the market. Older guys, what has your experience with this been?

1 upvotes · 14 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

As women leave the sexual marketplace, others enter.

Is there any reason to be friends with girls you have no sexual interest in?

1 upvotes · 14 March 2016 · /r/askTRP

They are the only kind you can be friends with.

How do you think that Patriarchy hurts me?

1 upvotes · 11 March 2016 · /r/MensRights

I'm talking about it in terms of the way that we talk about education in general.

In our culture, saying things like "Education is the road to a better life" or "nothing is more important than our children's education" is a popular way of content-free virtue-signaling.

So we need reminding that education is not an inherent good, it is a derived good... only good as a means to an inherent good.

A gender studies degree may be worse than a useless degree, but a useless degree is not neutral. It has an opportunity cost.

Is gender politics redefining the terms misogyny, misandry and misanthropy?

1 upvotes · 8 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think we could get rid of large swaths of the population and lose little, if anything.

Someone has to clean the floors.

My feminist friend likes the idea of being obedience trained!

1 upvotes · 5 March 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

on this it is essential to remember that women are individuals that may not all have the same desires. - what i totally love would be a nightmare for many women.

There's a difference between sexual fantasies and sexual tastes.

Of course not all women are into your sexual fantasizes. Even you aren't into your sexual fantasizes. (This is actually common. Fantasizes must be headier than reality to make up for not being real.)

But the underlying sexual taste, that of a man having power over you, isn't a fetish. It's mainstream. What makes you kinky isn't the inclination, but the intensity of that inclination.

Why are (some) men so concerned with who and how many men an adult woman sleeps with?

1 upvotes · 2 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

By saying things.

With their mouths.

I think we are done here.

Blue Pill, why do you rarely ever see a female doctor married to a male garbage man?

1 upvotes · 2 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Ah, so you're having a debate with someone who exists mostly in your own head.

Carry on.

Blue Pill, why do you rarely ever see a female doctor married to a male garbage man?

1 upvotes · 1 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I am asking you to explicitly state what you inferred about OP's intent in asking the question.

Blue Pill, why do you rarely ever see a female doctor married to a male garbage man?

1 upvotes · 1 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Explain what script you are flipping. The original question was:

They tend to be married to other doctors or men of with a similar level of career achievement. Why is that?

Blue Pill, why do you rarely ever see a female doctor married to a male garbage man?

1 upvotes · 1 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Just to make things clear:

This idea that men are driven by base animal instincts, while women are rational creatures... is part of the doctrine of marsupial feminism, or just a personal opinion?

The lead Red Pill mod's stance on Purple Pill Debate - thoughts

1 upvotes · 1 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No one was force fed

Nah, that's exactly what we do. We take young men who are angry and psychologically vulnerable, and we acquire an unholy influence over them by showing them with the help and concern that they have received nowhere else.

Then we brainwash them into a state of psychopathic overconfidence, and it starts to fool the women around them into showering them with praise, attention, and sex. This fools them into thinking they are happy.

But we are cheating them out of the opportunity to be good people who drive Priuses, shop at Whole Foods, check their privilege every chance they get, and write article for Vox Media Inc. about how terrible straight white males like them are.

TRP for women

1 upvotes · 29 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

to the poster that called me a "Genophobe." Thanks for the laugh. I had to look that one up. It really shows how far off the beaten path our culture has gone when what was once considered traditional is now pathologized as a mental illness.

Genophobia is a real thing. People who have it get panic attacks when they try to have sex.

"Not being a slut" != genophobia

Does the link between TRP and racism concern you, and do you think it is and will be detrimental to the 'manosphere' as a whole?

1 upvotes · 29 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I do not subscribe to these ideas:

- Crimethink.
- Guilt by association.
- Collectivism.

Why idolize men who essentially pay for women's company? Wouldn't it make more sense to idolize men who get a lot of female attention WITHOUT being rich?

1 upvotes · 29 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm not talking about attraction. Attraction is instinctive. Attraction influences what women do.

I'm talking about what they say. What I mean by gossip culture is a culture where status is not based on any external thing, but on status itself. This creates runaway feedback loops, where the status of individuals or entire groups can rise or fall very quickly in a self-reinforcing pattern.

So when I say:

In their worldview, white male traditional masculinity is down, so they sell short. Blackness is up, and indigenous cultures are up, so they buy or hold. But they hedge that long position by shorting masculinity in general. If black male stock falls, they can cover their losses.

I'm using stock market metaphors to describe who women praise, and who they criticize, because the stock market is also a bunch of people all watching each other, and imitating each other. And many of the dynamics are the same.

Right now, brown people are fashionable, pale people are not. Indigenous cultures are fashionable, European culture is not. So, the reason bluepillers will upvote a video of patriarchal masculinity is that it's the fashionable kind... indigenous, practiced by brown people.

Remember that these people don't have any principles, they are just trying to signal virtue.

League of Legends Character Quote: "How could I love only one man? They break too easily."

1 upvotes · 27 February 2016 · /r/MensRights

Meh, it's a video game.

They have to have fictional characters say it in video games, because in life they are dependent on us and they better hope we don't break, or they are screwed.

Circling the drain; look at the carnage in the comment section - "Now we can make sperm, is this the end of men? - Julie Bindel"

1 upvotes · 27 February 2016 · /r/MensRights

If you buy it by the gallon, you don't get to extract it yourself.

Perio pains now considered "as bad as a heart attack"; how long until joking about TOTM is considered emotional abuse?

1 upvotes · 23 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

how long until joking about TOTM is considered emotional abuse?

Feminism isn't so much a movement or an ideology as it is an algorithm. It is the technique of construing as "anti-woman" anything that any woman wants any man to stop doing (or failure to do something she wants him to do).

This means that until and unless feminism becomes less than universally successful, it will be applied to more and more cases, until eventually anything but complete and total obedience to every woman's every whim is indeed considered abuse.

As for how long this will take, I really couldn't say.

Would the world be a better place without sex?

1 upvotes · 23 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You should go have a chat with the "no orgasm guy". You could found a club called the "Junior Anti-Sex League".

I'm a female that learned a valuable life lesson today.

1 upvotes · 22 February 2016 · /r/askTRP

You should see my standup routine.

You sleep less than your usual amount and feel like shit next day, what do you do?

1 upvotes · 19 February 2016 · /r/askTRP

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/3r3fyb/if_you_dont_sleep_you_might_as_well_not_lift/

What is a man without an ability to get erect? Is a man's identity defined by his sexuality?

1 upvotes · 19 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Dude, do not ask questions like this in a hostile environment. Whatever good thing you think will happen as a result of this, I assure you it will not.

/r/askTRP

cmv: most 'true alpha chads who don't give a fuck' don't constantly come for affirmation of their masculinity and attractiveness to the internet

1 upvotes · 17 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This just in: most people asking questions in physics class do not have PhDs in physics.

"Women write better code, study suggests". - BBC report on UNPUBLISHED and NON-PEER REVIEWED study suggesting female inherent superiority...

1 upvotes · 14 February 2016 · /r/MensRights

I just question how anyone could make such a broad conclusion about relative coding skills based on the criteria they are using.

Most people reach the conclusion they want to reach, because they are looking for that subset of evidence which seems to support it.

Except that's not how science works (if it is to be effective). You don't get to say, "here's what I think, what evidence can I find for it?". You have to say "Here is the evidence, now what does it imply I should think?".

How would you explain AF/BB in a way that your daughter wouldn't find offensive.

1 upvotes · 12 February 2016 · /r/askTRP

Who the fuck cares if she "finds it offensive"?

CMV: Not everything is about sex.

1 upvotes · 8 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'd like to think that we can overcome the reptilian part of our brain and get other shit done.

Oh, you sweet summer child.

How are you allowed out of the house without a helmet and a minder?

No energy for school, reddit-dependent, how do I get out of it?

1 upvotes · 4 February 2016 · /r/askTRP

Get your testosterone levels tested.

Then, when you will discover they are low, talk to an endocrinologist.

Are steroids worth it?

1 upvotes · 1 February 2016 · /r/askTRP

Google "natural bodybuilding"

... if you want to see what a steroid user looks like.

Are steroids worth it?

1 upvotes · 1 February 2016 · /r/askTRP

So you read a book once.

And instead of telling a person who ask for advice "read this book", you would repeat selected passages of it in a reddit comment?

Where on TBP does it say that women are better than men, ,that "just be yourself" is the only dating advice you need or that male self-improvement is bad?

1 upvotes · 30 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Do as you like.

Men who spin plates shouldn't be bothered by women who do AFBB and women who do AFBB shouldn't be bothered by men who spin plates...right?

1 upvotes · 29 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because AFBB is a fallback position. What women who AFBB actually think they want is AB. But AB almost always becomes BB.

This means plates will always pressure for commitment and providing. Which turns men into BB if they go for it.

No sex's sexual strategy can have optimal success save at the expense of the other's. The clash is inevitable. The only possible outcomes are compromise or war.

I might lose the girl of my dreams, I NEED HELP

1 upvotes · 28 January 2016 · /r/askTRP

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/1x0gln/the_five_stages_of_red_pill_and_how_to_read_rtrp/

You just transitioned from denial to anger.

I might lose the girl of my dreams, I NEED HELP

1 upvotes · 28 January 2016 · /r/askTRP

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/3ip7vv/beating_infatuation_the_most_common_form_of/

Would you support government funded prostitution?

1 upvotes · 26 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I am against state funding for anything that is not part of the commons.

Does Feminism have any Merit? If so where do you draw the line?

1 upvotes · 26 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So feminists tell me. And calling them liars would be misogynistic.

How Would You Deal with a Woman Like This?

1 upvotes · 25 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Do you have submissive sexual fantasies?

Lee Camp says women who don't support feminism should be treated like shit.

1 upvotes · 25 January 2016 · /r/MensRights

Women are free to what they want... so long as it's exactly what the other women want them to do.

can you tell red from blue?

1 upvotes · 25 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

can you tell red from blue?

Amusingly enough, no. I am colorblind.

How should I handle being a second choice?

1 upvotes · 23 January 2016 · /r/askTRP

You handled this correctly.

Enthusiasm would have been bad (beta orbiter material), and being offended would have been bad (concerned about being beta orbiter material).

When you're not sure what the best response is, "meh" is almost always a good response.

Continue to "meh", then if she ends up asking you, say "nah".

How effective would this dating strategy be for a man?

1 upvotes · 21 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If he treats a 10 better than a 5, then he still has more red pill to digest.

Why, do you treat people better if they're prettier?

Thoughts on Frequency Method?

1 upvotes · 18 January 2016 · /r/askTRP

I've never heard it called that, but I do this. I have a power rack in my room, next to my desk. Whenever I feel restless, I get up and do a set.

Girlfriend just left to study abroad, how to handle?

1 upvotes · 18 January 2016 · /r/askTRP

It was only after that she said the same to me. She cried to me over and over that she didnt want to go and didnt want to leave me but I'm the one who told her to go because she already had the entire thing payed for and she wouldve lost a semester of school if not.

Your whole mental model of relationships is broken. Have you done your sidebar reading? Have you read the Bitch Management Hierarchy?

Her leaving for 5 months is in no way acceptable. That is prioritizing something else above you. And if you told her to, well, then you are a bad leader, and will be until you learn how a relationship is supposed to work.

You must be the top priority in her life. This is the only way to keep a relationship strong. If she loses a semester of school, then so be it. You need to be more important to her than a semester of school, more important than school, more important than her career. If not, then your relationship will eventually fail.

You told her to go, because you saw being apart for five months as a sacrifice on your part. When you say "it's okay, go ahead", you are telling her you derive more benefit from the relationship than she does.

You are telling her you are not worthy of her, and she can do better. Women will not stay committed under these conditions.

To keep a woman, you must keep her in a state of belief (true or not) that you are better than her, and she must stay on her toes to keep you interested.

Women are only happy with men they regard as superior to them. However good she thinks she is, she must think you are better. The moment she no longer thinks this, a timer is counting down to the death of the relationship.

Discussion: Saw these posts on TwoX detailing a woman's breakup with a RP man she claims was abusive.

1 upvotes · 17 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

A disturbed individual named Valerie Jean Solanas read some feminist literature and then shot Andy Warhol. Who do you blame?

Is marriage a bad choice for a young woman?

1 upvotes · 13 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Too thirsty. Work on your aloof game.

One man's experience with domestic violence. Attempted vehicular homicide at 3:20.

1 upvotes · 13 January 2016 · /r/MensRights

Fair enough.

But I can't give it up. We are all creatures of our basic instincts.

Is marriage a bad choice for a young woman?

1 upvotes · 12 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Somebody wrote this big long article about the Red Pill being a cult. I thought it was kind of funny.

TRP members regularly claim "The Red Pill doesn't hate women". Well here's a conversation between a RP Vanguard and an EC. Thoughts?

1 upvotes · 12 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Sooo.... option one, then.

Thought so.

Here, I'll throw you a bone, and pretend to answer your question. Yes, we all hate women. We hate our wives, girlfriends, mothers, sisters and daughters. Also our aunts and grandmothers. We hate half the human race. We are dangerously deranged nihilists who cannot be reasoned with, cannot be placated or bargained with. We just want to smash plate glass windows and have sex with anything that moves, including not only women, but also transsexuals, young boys, and sheep if they are cute.

There. Now do you feel vindicated? Is that the answer you wanted to hear?

Now excuse me while I go cry myself to sleep. Where's my teddy?

[CMV] RP is Anti-Feminist Activism

1 upvotes · 4 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If I cared about having traction with you, I'd stand on you with hiking boots on.

I'll see your "powerless to fight feminism" and raise you "don't even want that power unless it's free".

Men who won't take the pill when I offer it don't deserve to be rescued from feminism.

What are the best openers after being eye fucked in a bar/club?

1 upvotes · 4 January 2016 · /r/askTRP

My favorite opener is "Hi".

"What I've Learned About Dating In Silicon Valley" - female columnist has a meltdown after realizing she's surrounded by betas.

1 upvotes · 3 January 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

I'll add that garage-band Chad is also only sexually successful in the environment which befits him. I'm fine with you painting him as very dull. He is but one example of many alpha-types. He will signal some of the desired characteristics of the paleo winner still very much anchored in the vestigial bits of the female brain, I agree. What is exciting is what is arousing in this context - the tingles. No argument here that I can see.

That's why I choose garage-band Chad to talk about. He is the lowest common denominator of sexual attractiveness. He is attractive without any the features that make for actual evolutionary advantage in other Chads... MMA fighter Chad, entrepreneur Chad, con artist Chad, athlete Chad, trust fund Chad, etc.

The reason garage band Chad is interesting is that his brand of Chadery is the sine qua non of attractiveness. His traits are not only sufficient for attractiveness, they are necessary. While other Chads are more attractive than he, all other Chads must possess his brand of Chadery, while he need not possess the virtues of any other Chad.

Garage-band Chad is the lowest of the Chads, but he is the most quintessential, the most fundamental Chad, for garage-band Chad possesses Game, and without Game, there can be no Chad.

This is why it's important that garage band Chad is a miscalibration of female instinct. Iphone Bill exists because garage band Chad exists.

AFBB isn't a first-line female strategy. It's a fallback position, which exists because Cindy Lou Who's libido can't tell the difference between garage-band Chad and warrior Chad.

Beauty logic works for both genders... rrrriight?

1 upvotes · 2 January 2016 · /r/MensRights

that's not what strong looks like.

You might want to include a /s tag so people will realize you're being sarcastic. Poe's Law, you know.

Child support clawback is a disgrace: "Like all Ontarians on social assistance, Sarah doesn't see a dime of the child support payments her ex owes her. The province claws the money back, and ensures that Sarah and her 8-year-old daughter only receive what a single woman on welfare is entitled"

1 upvotes · 29 December 2015 · /r/MensRights

When my boyfriend graduated with his B Eng, he applied to over 500 different jobs and got no call-backs. He went to a placement agency specifically dealing with engineers, and they couldn't find him anything--they set him up in two interviews, neither of which panned out.

WTF, Canada?

Are women oblivious to what constitutes average?

1 upvotes · 27 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

one reason I think it is logical to go MGTOW

Welcome to phase 2, "anger".

This is the stage where you have realized that women are not reasonable, but you still expect, or at least wish, that they would be. This phase is important, and you must keep that feeling with you always, to motivate the changes you need to make.

You will eventually come to realize that, like children, women do not set boundaries on their own behaviour. It is up to you to set boundaries for them. Women require male guidance on what is normal, healthy, and acceptable in the same way that children require adult guidance on what is normal, healthy, and acceptable. This does not make them defective any more than it makes children defective.

If children are spoiled and run wild it is the fault of adults. If women are spoiled and run wild it is the fault of men.

Testing 'many RPer had shitty parents and are emotionally wounded by more than just feminist rhetoric on how to attract women' theory: does any of this ring a bell, guys?

1 upvotes · 27 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This list perfectly describes the behaviour of modern first-world feminist-influenced women towards men in general.

- 1) Dismissive
- 2) Controlling
- 3) Unavailable
- 4) Enmeshed
- 5) Combative
- 6) Unreliable
- 7) Self-involved
- 8) Role-reversed

My 17 year old sister fucks a 30 year old guy. Advice needed.

1 upvotes · 26 December 2015 · /r/askTRP

Stop.

Think a minute.

The only thing you know about this man is his age.

Don't you think you should have a bit more information before you start panicking?

Wildcard Post: Jada Pinkett-Smith and her mother offer Willow Smith advice on being a wife and mother... thoughts?

1 upvotes · 24 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I love how everyone just fits into neat demographic categories, so we don't have to actually listen to them and think about what they are saying.

How to Beat Approach Anxiety Faster?

1 upvotes · 20 December 2015 · /r/askTRP

You have four years at university. Relax.

I'm an idiot

1 upvotes · 20 December 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

my maternal instincts must be acting up. I have been nesting like crazy recently!

Must be pregnant. Now all you have to do is take off your shoes to hit the trifecta.

But to your point, of course they do! How else would I be able to keep up with Pinterest???

Do kitchen computers have special waterproofing?

TRP is turning me into a robot

1 upvotes · 18 December 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/3dwokl/and_dont_listen_to_me_like_a_sperg_either/

I'm Milo Yiannopoulos, AMA

1 upvotes · 18 December 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Christianity, like any other religion, is simply a means of enforcing society's values. It does not provide any. When the social mores change, the religion changes to adapt. We have seen how Christianity has gone from a tool of enforcement for right-wing values to a tool of enforcement for left-wing values and the politics of identity (and anyone who hasn't can read Dalrock for an explanation).

Religion, as a tool for social stability, ultimately failed, because people stopped being religious. If you tie your social values to a fairy tale, they get thrown out with the bathwater when people reject the fairy tale.

So we have two ways in which Christianity has failed. It has failed to stabilize values, and it has failed to preserve itself from its own increasing irrelevance. Regardless of any admiration we may have for any set of values it used to bolster, this is far too old and sickly a horse to hitch our cart to.

BP, I'm at the convenience store right now and need to buy milk. There are only two gallons of milk left. One has an expiration date of 12/24/15, and the other has an expiration date of 12/19/15. They both cost $3.99. Which one should I buy, and why?

1 upvotes · 17 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Did you drink the first half, or did you just find it lying around open and half full?

Apply TRP to this relationship

1 upvotes · 16 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Cameras tell whatever story the person holding them wants to tell.

Richard Dawkins Slams 'Regressive Left' (SJWs) for Turning 'Treacherous Blind Eye' to Misogyny, Homophobia Promoted by Islam

1 upvotes · 15 December 2015 · /r/MensRights

What does American foreign policy have to do with how Muslims treat women and homosexuals?

Is being bombed an excuse for mistreating women and homosexuals?

Not unless it was the women and homosexuals who bombed you, it's not.

is feminism a device for western economies to conquer developing countries?

1 upvotes · 11 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Well, if there's no actual laws, then it's a good thing that we have come up with all these cunning tactics to keep women in their place.

The sheer genius of Hippocrates! By using the simple word "sons" in something he wrote, he ensured that the strong independent women of the next three thousand years would have no choice but to give up their dreams of being surgeons, and to go home and bake a pie instead.

I mean, what could they possibly do? He wrote "sons". Game over.

But that only worked for three thousand years, so obviously we need a few new tactics. Perhaps we can make a pink microscope. Then women will have no choice but to stay out of science.

Plight of the Alpha Woman

1 upvotes · 10 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There is no "plight of the alpha female" any more than there is a plight of the Martian fruit industry.

This is because alpha females and Martian fruit do not exist.

Is bluepill becoming increasingly full of SRS types?

1 upvotes · 9 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

which was like theredpill on steroids

Mmmmm.... a lot of us are on steroids. What's your point, bro?

Call to Action: What can we do to save a man facing 6 months in jail for disagreeing with two feminazies?

1 upvotes · 1 December 2015 · /r/MensRights

Nothing.

Forget it, Jake, it's Canada.

Domestic Violence: Men Are Victims Too

1 upvotes · 27 November 2015 · /r/MensRights

... with picture carefully selected to make female-on-male-violence look like wacky fun.

Get a clue, people. No one is ever going to take men-as-victims-of-women seriously.

Control your women, or they will control you. There is no third option.

The Onion (2000): More U.S. Children Being Diagnosed With Youthful Tendency Disorder

1 upvotes · 26 November 2015 · /r/MensRights

What this boils down to is:

- I have a real problem. This I know from experience.
- They told me it was something called ADHD.
- Therefore ADHD is a thing, and lots of young boys suddenly need to be given something that's basically methamphetamine.

The first is probably true, the rest don't necessarily follow.

Syndromes don't just pop into existence in a single generation.

Had it in the pocket and BP'ed it...

1 upvotes · 26 November 2015 · /r/askTRP

Future lardass detected.

X-Post /r/TheBluePill: My story from normal person, to TRP fanatic, to Red Piller "victim", and back again

1 upvotes · 26 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm banned from there because I think male monogamy is unnatural and a bad idea.

Had it in the pocket and BP'ed it...

1 upvotes · 24 November 2015 · /r/askTRP

I just like Cola very much

Lardass detected.

How to internalize the principles from TRP and implement them in one's life?

1 upvotes · 22 November 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Now, that's uncalled for.

Most huge fucking faggots know better than to do calisthenics.

Saw this image in r/TheBluePill. Please discuss at your leisure.

1 upvotes · 14 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

https://encyclopedia.dramatica.se/I_am_silly!

New to sub. Saw something on r/TheRedPill that concerned me.

1 upvotes · 9 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Form your own conclusions.

What I am doing is testing her maturity. A mature person controls their emotional responses, an immature person is controlled by them.

She came here asking for an explanation of something. But because of a lot of inductive reasoning, I don't take it on faith that she is ready to receive it. Instead, I hint at it in a provocative fashion, and see which thread she follows... the hints, or the provocation.

New to sub. Saw something on r/TheRedPill that concerned me.

1 upvotes · 9 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Not a very good beginning.

There is indeed a possible reaction that would make me think better of you.

We have a specific term that we use for "deliberate provocation as a test for toughness, maturity, and emotional control". I regard this as giving you chances to demonstrate maturity.

You keep demanding I behave as if you already had.

Not gonna happen.

Serena Williams is a superhero

1 upvotes · 5 November 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Superhero? Maybe? Or HELL YEA!! I've got the speed the jumps, the power, the body, the seduction, the sex appeal, the strength, the leadership and yet the calm to weather the storm.

Normal female behaviour == clinical-level narcissistic personality disorder.

How do I [19M] procure the pussy from my gf [18F]?

1 upvotes · 30 October 2015 · /r/askTRP

"Bein' real smart" does not get you laid. Never has and never will. If it did, Steve Hawking and Albert Einstein would've been pussy slayers.

Feynman was one hell of a pussy slayer. Because used his intelligence on the problem.

How this works is that smart doesn't get you laid, because smart is potential. Smart is what you can do. Bitches don't care about potential, they care about results. They do not care how clever you are, they care if you have done something amazing with it. They do not care if you're going to make it big someday, they only care if you already have, or not.

Smart only means you can do things. Bitches only care about that if you have already used that intelligence to seat yourself atop a large pile of status, money, and adoring fangirls.

Bitches don't go to the starting line to see who looks like a fast runner. They will simply wait at the finish line to hook up with whoever crosses it first.

Are women are trying to take over gaming and nerd culture?

1 upvotes · 30 October 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Reification_%28fallacy%29

What if someone really wants to have a family?

1 upvotes · 26 October 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think you're exaggerating , sure things are hard but there are still several happy families around.

...

you have precisely the level of interaction with it that she permits, for as long as she permits

...

And yea, I know cases where the man got the custody , even though they're probably rare.

And your point is... ?

Girlfriend had MFM threesome with ex bf and some random he found. Should I be as disgusted as I am?

1 upvotes · 26 October 2015 · /r/askTRP

"Threesome" is FFM. The word for MMF is "gangbang".

You LTRed up a woman who never should have been promoted above "plate".

Demote or dump her.

Jeremy Renner elects to stay out of the Hollywood gender pay gap controversy; gets blasted by feminists anyway.

1 upvotes · 24 October 2015 · /r/MensRights

The only people feminists are not hostile to are those who show themselves immune to feminism's only weapon... disingenuous self-serving moral harangues.

Would you LTR a woman who "took one for the team" and serviced all of the "incel" or "beta" or "omega" men who were interested in her?

1 upvotes · 22 October 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"I had a lot of sex with a lot of guys that I wasn't really attracted to because the guys really wanted it and I felt sorry for them not having any sexual outlets. So I figured I'd do the world a great good by being their sexual outlet!

This is just hamster speak for "I really like lots of fawning attention, so I punch below my weight class to get more of it", or "I am delusional about my SMV, so I am not attracted to any man on my own level, but I sleep with them because I want sex."

Paul Elam's inability to run a conference unlike groups like NPI: Does Elam's inability to run a conference hurt the TRP movement by making it look inadequate?

1 upvotes · 16 October 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Nice try, Paul Elam.

What did this guy do wrong?

1 upvotes · 14 October 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Anything times zero is zero.

If he approaches in a way that has zero chance of success, he will achieve zero successes no matter how many times he approaches.

His attempt to play the numbers game is a result of swallowing the blue pill, buying into the notion that mating is about compatibility and individual taste. Under this model, mating is simply the act of talking to different people until you find a good fit.

But compatibility doesn't matter. Attraction matters.

He needs to learn how to present himself in a manner that makes him attractive. Then 10 approaches will be enough. If he doesn't do that, 10,000 won't.

High School Junior, need help becoming better.

1 upvotes · 14 October 2015 · /r/askTRP

Not really. A sandbag stops more than one.

should i keep feminist friends?

1 upvotes · 8 October 2015 · /r/askTRP

should i keep feminist friends?

List the pros and cons. What benefit to they bring to your life?

Parents splitting because mom thinks dad isn't loving enough. She wants so many beta qualities. Wondering why that would happen.

1 upvotes · 5 October 2015 · /r/askTRP

Why are you taking what she says at face value?

Never listen to what women say. Watch what women do.

If feminism is about equality, why have feminists done NOTHING about the plight of the incel?

1 upvotes · 25 September 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You're just totally immune to irony, aren't you?

While I hate to be that guy who explains his jokes, and thereby kills them, it appears that I must tune my broadcasts to your level of perspicacity.

I just threw your own lines back at you. And you didn't even notice. Sad, that.

It's a bit like trying to play chess with a pigeon.

Gronk

1 upvotes · 9 September 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Is there an actual person named "Gronk"? Seriously?

What sort of parent would do that to a child?

Is the saying "men have feelings too" unmasculine, weak, and discouraged?

1 upvotes · 28 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Is the saying "men have feelings too" unmasculine, weak, and discouraged?

Of course men have feelings. But that does not matter, because no one cares about men's feelings.

They only care about men's actions. Men must translate any feeling they expect people to care about into an action people care about.

"Marry a man who loves you more than you love him"-RP theory in the wild. Pill's response to this meme?

1 upvotes · 25 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

<https://i.imgur.com/JjUsaMHh.jpg>

6 Short Questions about Women

1 upvotes · 25 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

Sorry, dude, but the brown hair's a deal-breaker.

Thoughts on passive orbiting

1 upvotes · 25 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

In any case, I consider her kind of a "legacy" girl. Somebody that I was full beta with at the beginning but now I just kind of wrote her off in terms of active pursuit. I will still be around her on occasion and still want to bang her if the opportunity presents itself.

No. No. No. No. Danger Will Robinson.

You didn't tell the whole story. This isn't about keeping one on the back burner. This about the one that got away.

You might not have literal oneitis, but you are trying to prove something, which is almost as bad.

When you get clean, you don't hang around the people you used to shoot heroin with.

Is it possible for an alpha masculine person to be sexually compatible with another alpha masculine person?

1 upvotes · 22 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The terms "alpha" and "beta" do not apply to women. Period. And black women are far from "masculine", as hypersensitivity, insecurity, and shrill complaining are not really masculine traits.

But your general point stands, and yes, I do find black women far too aggressive and abrasive to spark any real attraction in me. I will happily date white, asian, or hispanic women, but I generally avoid black women. This attitude is not universal, but the odds aren't good.

CMV: Being a traditionalist/conservative is the only way of TRP unless you have nihilistic tendencies.

1 upvotes · 20 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think the solution is to leave dealing with trolls and the like solely in the hands of mods, but give us better tools to do it with.

Oh, for a one-click "ban user for this comment" button! You might not need it with 6k users, but with 125K + a sea of hate, we surely do.

Who gives women greater tingles: Chris Hemsworth the nurse assistant or Sergey Brin the billionaire?

1 upvotes · 19 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I thought Chris Hemsworth was a well known actor.

Criticisms of the side-bar texts from educated Bluepillers. Exhibit A: Rational Male

1 upvotes · 18 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Do you have any specific examples on where this has happened before ?

I can tell you where that discussion is going.

When any civilization, society, or group declines or collapses, there's a whole lot of stuff going on. Any time you talk about a society (by which I mean not just a nation or civilization, but also subcultures or other smaller groups), it's easy for people to succumb to the temptation to point out a lot of specific events in the attempt to sound erudite.

Any explanation of an underlying mechanism to any of these can then be dismissed "an oversimplification".

However, my contention is not that X or Y civilization collapsed in this way and only this way... it is that this pattern is a useful tool to understand the collapse of most any civilization.

There are a number of key premises this model is based on, which I believe to be axiomatic, but we can talk about discharging them more explicitly if you like.

1. Most civilizations are built largely (often almost entirely) with male labour (this what I call "guns and shovels", an apt phrase coined by /u/humansockpuppet).
2. Direct resource access (i.e. money) is not the primary incentive for male labour. More important incentives for male labour are respect, access to mating privileges, female love, respect, and gratitude, support of children (for men who have gained access to mating privileges, etc).

I don't think anyone can argue with #1, and expect to be taken seriously.

#2 is a little more complex, but the notion came to me when I read a slightly surprising research result. It seems that male happiness increases directly with income, up to about 70K per year or so, then it levels off dramatically. It occurred to me that this is the level, across most of the US (not coastal areas with overpriced real estate) where one can comfortably support a family. I began to talk to men about this. Being a TRP founder puts me in a unique position to do so... I spend a lot of time counseling young men, and I hear a lot of the things they cannot tell others, even those closest to them in their physical daily lives.

Men don't love wealth. They love what wealth gets them. Status, respect, women, children of their own. Women often have trouble understanding this mindset, because women are loved for who they are. At most, what a woman has to do to be loved is pretty herself up a bit, and display warm, empathetic behaviour. Men have to earn love with achievements.

Since women have trouble imaging a life where love is that conditional, they don't realize that they are the motivating factor behind men's insane level of striving and ambition. They tend to believe men like money. Or competition. Or taking risks. Or fighting wars. Or doing math. Or whatever.

So it doesn't seem like a big deal to them if they are no longer impressed with men's careers, because now they themselves make decent money, too. They don't realize that the only reason that men had those careers in the first place was because of them. That's your 77 cents on the dollar. The extra 30% is men wanting to get laid, and maybe even to be loved. And would be a lot more than 30% if the decay I described wasn't already happening.

It's well known that close to 90% of all women ever have descendants who are alive today, and only about 30-40% of men do. What is not well understood is that civilization was built by men struggling to be part of that 40%.

I have grown bitter. This pill is eating me alive - how to go back to enjoy...anything?

1 upvotes · 18 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

I've realized that nobody wants to interact with me because of who I am.

The only people who will ever love you for who you are is your parents. The only thing you have lost is your illusion.

Before I was burned into a relationship and found TRP I was incredibly joyful and a pleasure to be around. Now I barely speak anymore and avoid social contact.

You're grieving. This is normal.

You are in stage where you believe that all your relationships are transactional, but you do not yet emotionally accept it. You feel wronged, because some part of your emotional self still believes that somewhere, someone is being loved for who they are, and that you are getting a raw deal.

You're not. You need time for it to really sink in that it is like this for everyone. Always.

Positive vs Toxic RP

1 upvotes · 17 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I mean, come on. a white supremacist can make the same claim.

Aaaaaaaaaand you just Godwined the thread.

Plonk.

Positive vs Toxic RP

1 upvotes · 17 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

has this veil of bitterness/hatred and advice like "be an horrible person!" on top of that which drives many, many people away.

So if TRP wants to help more men (the stated goal) then it'd do well to focus on the positive actionable advice and let up on the toxiness

Wrong.

Driving people away in this fashion is a feature, not a bug. It is a selective filter that gets rid of those who are not ready to be helped, and thus prevents them from getting in the way of the ones who are.

That has been the leadership's plan all along. We know from experience that if someone is put off by something as simple as shocking language, then we cannot help them yet. They will only interfere with people who we can.

That's why we kick out anyone who objects to the tone. This boat has no cargo space for people who aren't rowing.

Are all men potential rapists?

1 upvotes · 16 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Are all men potential rapists?

Yes, in the same sense that everyone is a potential murderer.

Anyone can be placed in an extreme enough set of circumstances to make them do just about anything.

CMV: the fact that TheRedPill is right is what makes people so uncomfortable

1 upvotes · 13 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Are you still in the relationship?

CMV: the fact that TheRedPill is right is what makes people so uncomfortable

1 upvotes · 13 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Not really. Are you familiar with the abuse cycle? It's actually destabilizing over time.

The reason you think abuse works is that you only see it where and when it is stable enough to persist. This doesn't mean it is an effective tool to control someone.

Break down someone's self esteem and self worth to the point they no longer love themselves and believe no one but the abuser will love them.

That's not how abuse works.

All Pills what is your advice to avoid being a side guy/side bitch?

1 upvotes · 10 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So be attractive, don't be unattractive.

Yes. TRP has a metric fuckton of detailed information available on how to do this, for men.

For women, there's a lot less available. I've written a thing or two, here and there. There is a little on RPW. But, by and large, there isn't much demand for it, because very, very many women would rather blame the man who didn't want to commit to them, and look for a "better guy".

All Pills what is your advice to avoid being a side guy/side bitch?

1 upvotes · 10 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

How to avoid being an orbiter:

- Learn to be sexually attractive, so women will want to have sex with you.

How to avoid being a plate:

- Learn to be a keeper, so men will want to keep you around after sex.

Does The Red Pill set up sock puppet accounts of 'women 's help conform its theory?

1 upvotes · 10 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Is English not your first language?

I'm having serious trouble figuring out what some of those sentences mean.

Can someone explain my GF's behavior to me?

1 upvotes · 9 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

However, yesterday, when we were talking on the phone, she said that she thinks I would be bad at the profession that I've chosen. I'll start studying for it this fall for the next 5 years, and she knows that it's my passion. Yet, why the fuck would she say such an awful thing?

Because women do not care about your feelings unless you are tough enough so they don't have to worry about your feelings.

I feel like it's not something a partner should say.

There is no should. There is only is.

I tried to brush it off to save face by saying that it inspires me more to disprove her, but she made a choice to be my antagonist instead of my bedrock.

A woman is not your bedrock. She wants you to be hers. This was a shit test. She was testing to see if she could upset you. That's what women do. Why?

Because women are attracted to men they believe are unflappable. Of course, there is no such man. But your attractiveness is predicated on your ability to fool them into thinking you are.

You can look at a woman and see how pretty she is. But she can't look at you and see how tough you are. So she shit tests you to see. And if that upsets you, she doesn't care, because if it upsets you, then she doesn't care about you.

Your woman is not your friend. She is your woman. You can lead her, you can even control her, but you can never lean on her.

TRP and the naturalistic fallacy

1 upvotes · 7 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Logical fallacies apply to logic. Logic cannot be used to reason about morality, because you can't get ought from is.

PSA: Beware the "suicide grip" on bench press

1 upvotes · 5 August 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

What the hell is anyone doing benching without safety bars anyway?

CMV - /r/redpill is inherently metrosexual .

1 upvotes · 5 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I am totally metrosexual. Trains get me so hot and bothered.

Can't nut with a condom on. No condom is not an option. What do?

1 upvotes · 4 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

I have the same problem. I am too big for the largest size of condom which is legal in the US, and trying to stuff myself into one just results in a short period of pain, followed by complete numbness.

My solution is to LTR a worthy woman or two, have long-term FWBs instead of short-term plates, and if I really wanna have an ONS, to stick in it in her mouth instead.

Reddit Front Page: Ronda Rousey on "Do Nothing Bitches"

1 upvotes · 3 August 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

What exactly do you think is fake about her?

This quote. It's aimed at her female audience.

Remember how I said she has a dual marketing strategy? She's marketed sexy to the boys, and vanity-flattering to the girls. That's what this quote is about. She separates the world into "do nothing bitches" and "tough chicks who do cool shit", and I guarantee you every female fan she has is going to mentally insert herself into the second category.

Now, about the boys: that bit about "millionaires" is very carefully calculated. After all, she can't just slam all women who make themselves desirable to men. That'll turn off her male fans. But almost none of her male fans are millionaires, and they can't afford the kind of attractive, highly desirable woman that you often see hanging on a wealthy and charismatic man's arm. So, call her a "do-nothing bitch", and make them feel better about it.

This sort of calculated PR stuff isn't any sort of special evil. Everyone who earns their bread appealing to an audience does precisely this sort of thing. But if you want to understand what's really going on, don't believe it.

Sport figures are entertainers just like actors or musicians. Their form of entertainment is quite physically demanding, yes, but their success is nonetheless predicated on their ability to draw an audience. They would be foolish to ignore issues of image, and foolish they are not. So they are entertainers who create an image of being warriors, just as rappers are poets who create an image of being gangsters and thugs. It's all about what sells.

Why should a high-value man ever enter a LTR?

1 upvotes · 3 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't think it makes sense to go from "I don't have any interest in what women offer outside of sex" to "women have nothing to offer outside of sex".

This is why it's me, not you, who helps young men like him. You don't understand him. You never have, and you never will, so long as you persist in perceiving him as the problem.

In a way, you have a little too much respect for him. You see his statements as firm, considered articulations of a clear worldview... not the frustrated outburst of a young man who has had far too much concern about him, and far too little concern for him.

You will never understand him, and you will never reach him, because you, too, are concerned about him rather than for him.

I will explain him to you, since understanding on your own is too difficult. Consider it Closed Captioning for the Empathy Impaired.

He does not want nothing from women besides an orgasm. If he did, he would not be the faintest bit upset that this is all they apparently have to offer. Young men actually want to be loved, although it's only when their sexual needs are dealt with that they tend to reach the level of worrying about this, or even actually realizing it.

What he's talking about here is that all the women he is surrounded by believe that sex is all they must bring to the table. Instead of understanding him, you seized upon where he said "if all they have to offer" instead of "if all they are willing to offer". You seized it and waved it above your head as if it were the football you had just scored the winning touchdown of the superbowl with.

Congratulations, you win the "debate". Are you proud of yourself?

where can i get a red pill therapist

1 upvotes · 3 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

Tara Palmatier is a regular contributor to AVFM. Not "red pill" in exactly the way we see it, but certainly sympathetic to men and masculine values.

"The Red Pill" Equivalent of Gummy Bear Vitamins

1 upvotes · 1 August 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Okay but is it not possible for even younger guys who have not been hurt and raped by divorce, alimony, child support, and terrible heart break to wake up to truth of the Red Pill?

It's possible, but usually doesn't happen.

My awakening occurred mostly via seeing what happened to other men.

Why do some men prefer to shit on competent women instead of learning from them?

1 upvotes · 28 July 2015 · /r/askTRP

What exactly does this have to do with TRP?

Sugar Daddy Wants Out (Maybe)

1 upvotes · 27 July 2015 · /r/askTRP

How did your tiny brain even manage to learn human speech?

There's nothing wrong with paying for sex. But women who admit to being whores have upfront pricing.

Hard BPers, what is your opinion of /r/thankTRP?

1 upvotes · 23 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Shhh... don't shout too loud, or they'll all want one.

How could the government realistically encourage people to have more children ?

1 upvotes · 22 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

They don't want to. Quite the opposite.

What's your take on the usefulness of NoFap?

1 upvotes · 21 July 2015 · /r/askTRP

at least attempting the 7-day rule to get that 50% T boost.

That's seven days with no ejaculation of any kind, not just masturbation. So, basically, no sex.

You good with that?

Do you wish that you could be a different race?

1 upvotes · 21 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

And so?

Leftists and professional victims cry about this sort of thing because they are tangled in their own wounded egos and cannot see past the slight implied insult. But people with healthier psyches are able to realize that low expectations and high capabilities can often be an advantage.

Think of life as a battle plan. You don't criticize the terrain. You use it to your tactical advantage wherever you can.

Disagreeing with Feminists to be Made Illegal?

1 upvotes · 17 July 2015 · /r/MensRights

Yes, within your own borders, you have the power to choose the rules. Personally, this will make me choose not to go to Canada, but I don't imagine you care.

However, I would caution you about being cavalier about social engineering. Every change made to the social order has other unintended consequences. When you throw things in the air, they are going to land somewhere.

Politeness, and rules thereof, are in and of themselves a means of enforcement. And they are calibrated over thousands of years of trial and error to suit the punishment to the crime. There is a reason that rude people face informal social punishment... and there is also a reason why they face nothing more than informal social punishment.

One of the unintended consequences of enforcing polite language with immoderate retaliation is that it has a chilling effect upon everyday speech. In our lives, we all do that which gives offense to others... sometimes by accident, sometimes because we deem it necessary in the pursuit of a more important end.

What happens when accidentally giving offense is punishable with a prison term? What happens when no one can stand up to those who we believe must be stopped, because doing so requires criminal vehemence?

What happens when you can no longer safely call a politician a hypocrite? What happens when you can no longer express an unpopular opinion? I'll tell you what happens. You reduce yourself to nation of polite, mild, inoffensive carbon copies, with little to hate about them, but even less to love. A nation with no cruelty in them, but also no innovation or greatness. A nation that can only exist because others protect it and innovate for it. A nation with no villains, but also no heroes.

Your upholstered box may be comfortable for you, but I do not wish to live in it.

“A really efficient totalitarian state would be one in which the all-powerful executive of political bosses and their army of managers control a population of slaves who do not have to be coerced, because they love their servitude.” — Aldous Huxley, Brave New World

What if your dick is small?

1 upvotes · 17 July 2015 · /r/askTRP

Not trying to put you out there but I'm just curious, how can you still be alpha with a small dick?

I think it's possible because having a huge dick wasn't enough to make me an alpha until I knew how to walk the walk.

The primary organ of female sexual arousal and desire is the brain. If you can convince a woman you are awesome, your small penis is not going to detract from that much. If you cannot, a huge dick is not going to help you. She'll just think you're a loser with a huge dick.

Penis size only matters insofar as it effects a woman's perception of you. (Leaving out outliers where it's too tiny to do the job, or too huge to fit, of course.)

Disagreeing with Feminists to be Made Illegal?

1 upvotes · 17 July 2015 · /r/MensRights

We stand on the principle that you can't be a dick in Canada.

Which means that you, as a nation, have said that some group of people has the right to unilaterally decide the exact definition of a "dick", and to punish others for being it.

Which makes Canada, collectively, kind of a dick. Because there is nothing so impolite as declaring that you are the sole, unerring, and final arbiter of politeness.

Don't Talk to Me Like a Bitch.

1 upvotes · 15 July 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

You're probably right. I had Tren on the brain because I'm studying up on it right now, thinking of adding it to my repertoire.

Speaking of which, a lot of readers here would probably benefit from "GayLubeOil's Quick and Dirty Guide to Beginning and Intermediate AAS cycles", or some such.

TRP dread vs. TBP standards.

1 upvotes · 14 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I can't perceive the difference. High level dread is just making it clear you have standards. A feminist man telling his girlfriend that either she shapes up or she risks losing him, that's causing her distress and the goal is to get her to comply. And vice versa.

The difference is that one is content communication (message delivered explicitly in the literal meaning of words), the other is process communication (message delivered by the implications of behaviour).

Content communication is inferior to process communication. Sometimes CC is enough, but CC is much less likely to be believed or taken seriously, because CC can be a lie, and PC cannot.

First post syndrome

1 upvotes · 14 July 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

And now you have given me an article title. Time to get writing.

Australians, horror fans and 80s kids will understand this. The descent of masculinity from hero to evil

1 upvotes · 14 July 2015 · /r/MensRights

Careful now, you might start sounding like those awful TRPers who are the real misogynists that MRAs aren't like at all.

Question for RPer: (Serious) Do you respect women?

1 upvotes · 13 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Meaningless question.

To a man, "respect" means "defer to the wisdom, experience, or expertise of".

To a woman, "respect" means "care about the feelings and well-being of".

What do you think about this "criticism" of /r/TRP?

1 upvotes · 13 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Never heard of this website, don't know what their deal is.

Looks like they just post a lot of image macros. Not really my thing, but if it makes them happy...

My girlfriend of 6 months is out of town for work...

1 upvotes · 13 July 2015 · /r/askTRP

I read the title as "Girlfriend is out of town 6 months for work."

What do you guys think of the fact that Liam Neeson declined the role of James Bond because his girlfriend said they wouldn't get married if he accepted the part?

1 upvotes · 9 July 2015 · /r/askTRP

Liam who?

Why are you against the MRAs ?

1 upvotes · 9 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This is why most men are unwilling to consider the idea that circumcision might be harmful.

Because if it is, then something harmful and irreversible was done to them by their parents. And that would be very bad. Therefore it cannot possibly be the case. And this is why they will do it to their own sons, as well.

Because if they decline to maim their offspring, they might have to confront the idea that it is indeed maiming.

This is analogous to the Sunk Cost Fallacy.

Why are you against the MRAs ?

1 upvotes · 9 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRPillers are pretty much against the MRM too from what I've seen

Not exactly.

I like them (particularly GWW), and I think many of the goals that most of them have are laudable. I simply think their methods are ineffective, cannot be effective, and will not be effective.

They act as if they are dealing with reasonable people, and so they try to reason.

They act as if they are dealing with compassionate people, and so they appeal to sympathy.

But feminism, the new dominant paradigm, is all the worst of female nature and none of the best. It is neither reasonable nor compassionate. MRAs would be well advised to understand the true evil of the enemy they face, and to harden the fuck up.

If you found out your wife was using some sort of lady game guide on you, how would you react?

1 upvotes · 6 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Can't answer, don't have wife.

So do male feminists actually get much sex out of it?

1 upvotes · 30 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

They were written to show everyone the "between the lines" stuff, especially those not tuned into subtlety.

Except that's not really the part that matters.

One of the first things I discovered, back before TRP was a thing, is that men want to be treated awesome by someone good enough, and women want to be treated well enough by someone awesome.

It didn't matter if I wanted her to come over to my apartment and wash my dishes before having sex. It didn't matter if I spanked her ass raw, choked her, and pulled her hair, called her a dirty slut, made her ask permission before having an orgasm... so long as she thought I was awesome enough, girls not only tolerated it, they loved it.

If you talk about female submission like a sperg, girls hate the idea. If you make them melt first, they love it. TRP the subreddit is unappealing to girls because it's a place for sperg-talk about things we need to do in a very unsperglike fashion. If seduction by a cocky, dominant, sexy man is a sizzling bratwurst fresh off the charcoal grill, then TRP is a tour of a sausage-grinding facility.

Which is the real sausage? They both are.

So do male feminists actually get much sex out of it?

1 upvotes · 30 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yep, totally. Now humor me in my spergness for a moment.

What's sperglike here in both cases is the lack of "process communication". That's the message conveyed by how you say it instead of what you say. Both example men just say who they are and what they want, literally. To women, this indicates a lack of social skills, because they're telling, not showing. Thus, women would peg both these men as losers.

Feminists "studies" attempt to hype of risks of "olders" fathers in an attempt to get men to marry women in their 30s

1 upvotes · 29 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's the additive difference, not the multiplicative difference, that matters.

A passage from No Mr. Nice Guy, explaining the anger towards women.

1 upvotes · 29 June 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Morality is not just a social contract. It is biological.

This is not a contradiction.

Humans are hardwired to use social contracts.

TL;DR Testosterone I/O?

1 upvotes · 26 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

That's like reminding people to breathe. Who the hell in 2015 doesn't know to sterilize an injection site?

Do you disapprove gaming and gamers? Or do you think TRP's should be gamers anymore?

1 upvotes · 25 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

They are the symptom, not the disease. No one is lured away from a happy life by video games.

best response to the "we're not having sex" shit test?

1 upvotes · 24 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

"What, at this moment? I was gonna wait until you got your clothes off. Are you in a hurry?"

CMV: Theredpill attracts men who are willing to change and improve on themselves.

1 upvotes · 19 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

https://np.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/25h4ne/complaining_is_not_progress_part_2_the_space/

People who think they are "good enough as they are" don't change.

People who believe that attempts to change are doomed don't change.

People who want to be better and believe they can be, do something.

How important is sex/relationships to you?

1 upvotes · 19 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I could argue a bit more about the RPW thing, but really the bottom line is that not everyone likes the same thing.

You object to my black and white picture, desiring to replace it with a single shade of grey. Everyone is indeed different. So are all salt crystals. So what? They all taste the same on my food.

Pretending that everyone is absolutely different, and no generalizations can possibly work... that's just silly.

I'm not concerned with how many other women are chasing after a guy blah blah blah

Maybe. But self-report data is notoriously unreliable. Scientists know that and so do I.

I believe that you believe that. And I've lost track of the number of times that a girl has told me that, believed it quite sincerely, and when I observed her, the opposite was true.

That's why one of the cornerstones of my teachings is "Ignore what women say, watch what they do."

I have a BP relationship that works. Many of us do. That's something that most red pillers don't have any experience with.

What makes you so sure?

The fact that they don't consider them an option? That's Begging the Question.

Your definition of a relationship "working" and mine are most likely quite different. Fact is, I've had relationships under both sets of rules. You haven't.

Whether or not a relationship works depends on the individuals more than anything else.

By this you mean "who they are", but what it actually depends on is "what they do".

Relationships are about making the right moves, not being "compatible".

https://np.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/1tjyai/the_essential_difference_between_blue_and_red/

That's fair enough, but it seems like this should call for you looking at it from our perspective as well.

All the time. I understand BP thinking very well. That's why I had to invent something else.

If society doesn't care about men the how come this video exists on the MSM?

1 upvotes · 18 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That's a slippery word "care".

What society doesn't have for men is compassion or pity. Society does care about men, because men are useful. Women certainly aren't going to pick up a gun or a shovel.

Now, as to whether and how Megyn Kelly cares about men, I can't say precisely.

But I'll bet if you divided people into two groups, those whose level of caring about men's opinions is greater than X, and those level of caring is equal or less, then looked at just the women in each group, the first group would be prettier than the second.

Why? Because the more a women cares what men think, the more effort she spends making herself pleasing to their eyes. Megyn Kelly is very beautiful indeed, and, while this doesn't tell us why she cares about what men think, it identifies as someone who probably does.

Feminists are generally ugly because pretty girls don't need feminism. They have a good hand of cards, why would they want to turn over the table?

How important is sex/relationships to you?

1 upvotes · 18 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

But I've learned to enjoy the frustration when people don't... I was enjoying the argument and wanted him to continue to be belligerent.

Ah, the feeling of moral and/or intellectual superiority. Understandable, but a dangerous drug, because unwillingness to surrender that feeling often becomes reluctance to abandon a position, regardless of what evidence comes to light.

What makes me angry is when people don't even bother to understand my argument

An opt-practiced psychological defense mechanism against damage to a worldview is the assumption that those who disagree must not understand. TRP readers receive this accusation more often than most, because we are often speaking to those whose worldview we once shared.

We seldom have the patience to listen to things we have heard many times before, especially when it was raw circumstance and overwhelming force of evidence that forced us to discard them. "Oh, not this shit again", we think.

But this short-circuits others' need to feel that, they, individually, are being heard.

Taking the red pill is most of all a humbling experience, because it starts with the realization that the universe doesn't care how we feel, and that sometimes things are true even if we don't like them very much at all.

Reaching back across that cognitive chasm can be difficult indeed. This is especially so because there is an symmetry to the experience. We have stood where blue pill debaters now stand. But the reverse is not the case.

How important is sex/relationships to you?

1 upvotes · 18 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

They then mindlessly reiterate their point of view without actually trying to argue against mine at all, and insist that they "destroyed me"... And at I encountered this, it mad me mad.

Why? See, that's the part that pricks my curiosity.

When I encounter someone who thinks socialism works, or evolution doesn't, or that evolution only shaped humans from the neck down, I think "I have encountered a foolish person". I think they are wrong. But that's not upsetting.

We get upset when we don't get what we want.

But what do you want from me? Why would you want me to agree with you? What is it to you?

How important is sex/relationships to you?

1 upvotes · 18 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'll rephrase that. Why are you upset? Why do my views, if you are quite confident that they are wrong, make you angry?

I can be quite calm in the presence of your misconceptions. In fact, to answer your question, I am here to study them. The behaviour of self-deception, especially about the sexual marketplace, is of keen interest to me.

But, as you said, I make you mad. Why should you care about me so much?

AFBBOO: Alpha Fucks, Beta Boyfriends, Omega Orbiters: A more realistic model

1 upvotes · 18 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The battle cry of the blue piller. Everyone is unique! Everyone is a snowflake! Everything is complicated.

They object to our simplified black and white sketch, desiring to replace it with one uniform shade of grey.

How important is sex/relationships to you?

1 upvotes · 17 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I didn't ask you why PPD is here.

I asked you why you are here.

Why does my partner shit-test me?

1 upvotes · 17 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

She said but don't you love me? I then said it is too late at night.

There was your mistake. Refusing was the right move (obviously), but when you give a reason, you invite debate. It implies that if it wasn't "too late", you would have to do so. If you set up reasons, she then tries to shoot them down, and you try to defend them. Now it's an argument, with you on the defensive.

Amused mastery, frame break, frame reversal, etc, would your best options, but I think these are beyond your skill at this time.

Here's the proper flow for this interaction (tailored to your beginner skill level... not what I would do).

Her: {bring me cookies. because vagina.}

You: No.

Her: Don't you love me?

You: Not if that means being your slave, no.

Her: { She then went off at me - saying that I pretended to be concerned about her health when I cannot be bothered driving to her. }

You: You're right. Right now, I am not very concerned for you. Because you are acting entitled and rude. I don't care much for rude and selfish people. Call me again when you are ready to act like an adult. {Hang up phone.}

Here's your underlying problem:

Should I just be honest even if it lands me in trouble?

The words "in trouble" reveal how you think of her. As an overseer with the authority to punish you. In your case, "punishment" most likely takes the form of withdrawing attention. You seek to avoid conflict which will make her angry at you.

As long as she is willing to anger you, and you are unwilling to anger her, you are her slave.

You must anger her. You must allow conflict. It takes two to tango, but only one to start a fight. If conflict is not an option for you, that doesn't prevent her from starting one, and if you are not willing to engage in one, then you are left with nothing but capitulation every single time.

You will probably have to break up. Once a relationship is this far gone, reviving it is near impossible. But you can practice being a free man instead of a slave during the time the relationship is collapsing around you.

Immediately start refusing all, or almost all, her requests unless they cost you literally zero effort. Give no reason other than not feeling like it. If she objects, immediately flip the script and dress her down for being rude and selfish and taking you for granted. If she raises her voice or insults you, immediately end the conversation by hanging up the phone or walking away. Do not return unless and until she initiates contact and apologizes.

Red Pillers; how critical are you of authority?

1 upvotes · 17 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You're quibbling. You could as easily have interpreted his answer more broadly, and we could have moved on from this pointless aspect of the discussion to something more interesting.

How important is sex/relationships to you?

1 upvotes · 17 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Power doesn't always equal true

No, it certainly does not. Feminists have power, as well. And many people are angry at feminists.

TRP's power, however, is truth. We are not numerous enough to influence policy, nor do we even advocate or organize ourselves for political action. All we do as a group is say things.

And I'd also care to argue that hate doesn't always have fear in it.

You'd be wrong.

I get frustrated when RPer's say this because it shows a very deep lack of understanding of my values and views.

Why? Why do you want me to understand you? Why do you need me?

I'm not upset when you fail to understand me... because I do not require your understanding, or anything else from you. Your failure to understand what's behind a single thing I do doesn't inconvenience me in the slightest. It neither picks my pocket nor breaks my leg.

Why do you need me to participate in your worldview? Why do you want me to think of you a certain way? To repeat to you the things you tell yourself? What I think of you is not any of your business, and if you left it so, my infuriating but fascinating sexism would not matter to you at all.

[to TRP] Is it fair to consider TRP a dogma?

1 upvotes · 17 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You spend no time at all talking about TRP, and have basically just written about how you didn't like your religious upbringing.

* Gong *

Next contestant, please.

Red Pillers; how critical are you of authority?

1 upvotes · 17 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Criticism of authority takes the form of voting with the feet.

No vote, free exit.

Red Pillers; how critical are you of authority?

1 upvotes · 17 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No one is going to kill anyone for questioning why they use soap and water to clean an instrument, rather than ethanol and chloroform.

There are other forms of retaliation besides murder.

Need your honest opinion

1 upvotes · 16 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=NwjvDY5F_1I

Why should women get educated at all ?

1 upvotes · 15 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Ideological Turing Test failed.

What do you think about racism ?

1 upvotes · 9 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So, which one? That's four different definitions.

What do you think about racism ?

1 upvotes · 9 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Define racism.

Why do you disagree with the one in five rape statistic?

1 upvotes · 9 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because I am familiar with the study that it comes from.

Blue Pill refuses to recognize the monster they created.

1 upvotes · 5 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I thought you would approve. It is your own philosophy.

We are a community with reciprocal obligation to the extent that we consent to be so. An explicit declaration of responsibility for others creates a community. An explicit repudiation of responsibility creates a competitive arena.

Declaring that no one owes men any sympathy is wonderfully liberating for us. Because we are stronger, we are mentally and physically tougher, we are more ambitious, and there are a lot more smart men than smart women. Sympathy and a sense of responsibility for others is the only thing holding us back.

Now we have permission to no longer feel those things. It'll take a little while to tell other men the good news, and a while longer to get them to really believe it. But I'm sure they'll come around. Law of the jungle arrangements are very favourable to them, and they will eventually see that, especially since so many women are declaring their intent to treat men with "law of the jungle" rules.

If she stops trying in the relationship, what should I do?

1 upvotes · 5 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

Soft next.

women who make more than their man are more faithfull

1 upvotes · 5 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I watch long enough to see the quote. It was sourced "Huffington Post".

That's not evidence. The word evidence means "that which is seen". I cannot see what they are referring to. Therefore they have no evidence.

Opinions on roids?

1 upvotes · 4 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

I heard you can gain 7 pounds of pure muscle in a month on roids just by sitting on your ass and not going to gym?

Why would you do that?

Opinions on roids?

1 upvotes · 4 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

What you put on unnaturally will not stay with you naturally.

Wrong.

How do you test/tell if a person is cool with you/can take jokes?

1 upvotes · 4 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

How do you test/tell if a person is cool with you/can take jokes?

By making one.

[all pills] Are your rules male and female infidelity the same? If a husband or wife cheats, is it the cheater's fault, or the spouse's fault for driving the cheater to it?

1 upvotes · 2 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

HumanSockPuppet's answer is pretty much it.

It's because polygyny is okay, and polyandry is not. Why? Because there's no such thing as maternity fraud.

Men have instinctive mate-guarding and jealousy because men who didn't ended up raising someone else's kid instead of their own, and thus their non-jealous genes didn't stay in the gene-pool. Women who didn't have instinctive mate-guarding and jealousy had kids just everyone else, and had increased access to the most desirable male genes (because they were willing to share). Sharing men makes biological sense, because men produce as much sperm as anyone could conceivably need. Sharing women does not make biological sense because eggs are expensive and scarce.

Because this has been true since before humans were humans, we have evolved behaviour and desires to match.

If I cheat on a woman, she may be angry (if she has been culturally conditioned to expect monogamy), but she is still attracted. In fact, her attraction will often increase (other women desiring me is more evidence that I am attractive; women want men who other women want).

If a woman cheated on me, I would not only be angry, I would be repulsed. I would lose attraction to her.

Thus, relationships can survive male cheating (because attraction is still high), but not female cheating (because it destroys attraction).

The sexes just inherently get different rules to play by. Women get to cry and show weakness, but not cheat. Men get the opposite.

If lifting raises testosterone, would it be a bad choice for a red pill man to LTR a woman who squats?

1 upvotes · 1 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Do you advocate lifting for men based on the fact that it will raise testosterone, or just based on the fact that it will make them look better?

I advocate it because it makes you strong. Strong people are harder to kill and more useful in every way. They lead longer, happier lives. They have better sex, and more people want to have sex with them.

Strong people are better than weak people.

If lifting raises testosterone, would it be a bad choice for a red pill man to LTR a woman who squats?

1 upvotes · 1 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

One can't think about hormones too simplistically.

While high levels of testosterone are pretty good across the board for men, men also need a certain level of estrogen. Likewise women produce, and need, a certain level of testosterone.

Science isn't yet entirely clear on what roles the opposite sex's hormones play (T in women, E in men), but some researchers think they play critical roles in sexual desire and response.

(<http://www.sciencedirect.com/science/article/pii/S1044743104001745>, etc).

It's pretty clear women should not take AAS from an external source. But I do not believe, on the balance of what I have seen so far, that merely lifting heavy objects has a significant androgenic effect in women.

Why did females evolve to experience orgasm?

1 upvotes · 1 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

False dichotomy.

Lack of enough evidence to form a conclusion != no evidence.

Why did females evolve to experience orgasm?

1 upvotes · 1 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If I remember correctly, only 2 animals on the planet have females that orgasm. Dolphins and humans.

No. Absence of evidence is not the same as evidence of absence.

Older woman keeps flirting and teasing me... can't get it to go to the next level. Any advice here? What can I try?

1 upvotes · 29 May 2015 · /r/askTRP

Why the hell are you gaming old women?

How many sexual partners makes a female unattractive for marriage?

1 upvotes · 29 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Marriage 1.0: 1 (not a virgin)

Marriage 2.0: NO.

Martial arts recommendation for a beginner

1 upvotes · 27 May 2015 · /r/askTRP

I was a Jr instructor inside 6 months

Ow my sides.

What is a man's legitimate and effective defense against a mattress carrier?

1 upvotes · 27 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Feminists will never mention entitlement when it comes to birth control.

Or killing their unborn children.

Or looting other people's tax dollars.

Or depriving fathers of their children.

Or kicking young men out of their education with no due process.

DARVO.

Girl invites me over, tells me her boyfriend cheated.

1 upvotes · 26 May 2015 · /r/askTRP

You had a chance to escalate, but dropped the ball.

I wanted to fuck her, but I just didn't see it happening.

... is your lack of confidence, your inner enemy, talking. You need to see it happening. Sometimes you'll wrong. If so, next them and move on.

- Always assume they want your cock until proven otherwise.
- If they want it, make them jump through a hoop or two, get give it to them.
- If they don't want it, assume they never want to see you again and give them that.

Is this an accurate presentation of RP

1 upvotes · 26 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

All full of lovely captions like

"sure is right-wing nutjob in here, isn't it"?

Res ipsa loquitur.

Socialist BPers and other socialists: why is there a distinction between income inequality and sexual inequality in terms of government redress?

1 upvotes · 23 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You can make anything sound nice with made-up examples.

Would you like me to make up a canned example that makes "the government forcing someone to have a sexual relationship with someone else" sound nice?

I can do that. It will be just as realistic as your example. In other words, not at all.

NSFW: How do you feel about your genitals?

1 upvotes · 23 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Modern Ideal Penis vs Classical Ideal Penis

The first is shown erect, the second is shown flaccid.

Why? Because in the classical era (and artistic/literary tradition), penis and its function were simply a fact of life. It could be shown in a context that wasn't necessarily pornographic.

Now, not so much. We carefully hide the penis unless it is erect. We don't as a culture, wish to see it, or hear about it, or think about it, unless the penis and the man are serving a sexual function at that very moment.

If women were to start working on their personality/status like men are already expected to, would this make any difference to their level of attractiveness to you?

1 upvotes · 23 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I've seen many RP types complain that women have it too easy, but then I've also seen a RP poster say he "can't fuck a college degree".

A college degree has nothing to do with personality improvement. Status improvement does not increase attractiveness for women.

Do you generally believe that women should be free to make her own choices?

1 upvotes · 22 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

In a vacuum?

No.

Each choice we make impacts others. Societies naturally begin to curtail individual freedom when exercise of it removes the freedom of other people. Women, like everyone else, must be aware of how their choices impact other people, and take responsibility for that. Otherwise, we can, will, and ought to take that freedom away.

Children have no freedom because they have no responsibility. Adults have freedom because they take responsibility.

Are you a child, or an adult?

Socialist BPer and other socialists: why is there a distinction between income inequality and sexual inequality in terms of government redress?

1 upvotes · 22 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It should go without saying that there is no moral way for the government to take the proceeds of someone's hard work by force, and simply give it to someone else who has done nothing to earn it.

But that doesn't seem to stop them, now, does it?

What is romantic love for a Red Pill ?

1 upvotes · 21 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Glorious Revolutionary Politburo very impressed with fine example of deviant kapitalist logiks. Would like to invite komrade to join spirited discussion of Revolutionary values.

What is romantic love for a Red Piller ?

1 upvotes · 21 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Don't confuse "falling in love" with "loving someone".

In any one on this sub is still wondering why men won't marry let this be your object lesson for the day

1 upvotes · 21 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because that's what the family courts say.

Google "Joseph Michael Ocasio".

Is This a Toxic Relationship?

1 upvotes · 19 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Can't prove a negative.

Is abortion wrong?

1 upvotes · 19 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This implies a point which should be explicitly stated.

In order for moral arguments to make sense, morals must be justified from a utilitarian position:

"We should not allow abortion because X undesirable result."

New Doctor- How do you maintain confidence in a situation at work that you can't fake and don't know how to do yet?

1 upvotes · 17 May 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Yeah.

The perspective I think about medicine from comes from being an engineer. Since we work on systems that we designed in a deliberate and organized fashion, we have a lot of power over our medium. We can do just about anything with it. We also need to have very advanced analytical skills to understand the complexities of large systems that we must build and modify.

Physicians are seen in much the same way by the general public, because they have an excellent guild that does a sterling job of safeguard the reputation of the profession (being heavily regulated can be good for you). But the human body is not designed, but evolved, and medicine does not have a detailed and complete understanding of it as a working system, just a list of things it has gleaned through trial and error. This means that physicians have much less power over their medium, and don't need the same level of analytical skill (since the system resists analysis by individuals anyway).

The reason it's important to remember this is that while it's helpful to cultivate, externally, the image of being a highly educated, elite professional who always knows what he's doing, you are going to burn out if you expect yourself to actually be that, because you can't. Our civilization's understanding of the human body just isn't sophisticated enough to support that, and if you hold yourself to that standard, well, you get the idea.

New Doctor- How do you maintain confidence in a situation at work that you can't fake and don't know how to do yet?

1 upvotes · 17 May 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

I'm a confident guy, but my main issue is that I know I will be in situations at work come July that I don't know how to handle directly yet (likely very frequently at first- where's the bathroom??); this comes with the territory. I've seen so many overly-confident fourth year students turn into pussies on a dime come the first week of July (like almost every intern I look at, unless they've had healthcare experience prior to starting med school, looks like this). I hate this helpless, shrunken feeling and want to avoid it (at least the internal thought process of pussification, since regardless of how "confident" I get, I'm not going in cowboy and potentially killing patients I can't manage yet.) I don't have an issue with or alternative for the current, hierarchical system of medical education per se.

The "Master and Commander" approach to situations is a strong, dominant frame, but you can usually only pull it off when you are the master and commander.

There are other strong frames that you can use instead, such "Man on a Mission Gives Zero Fucks About Your Drama", "Quiet Observant Guy Who Thinks Wise Thoughts and Speaks Seldom", etc.

Remember that the more you worry about how you look, the worse you're going to look. Treat life like a shit test... just about any response is okay, so long as your jimmies are unruffled.

Cope with feelings of ignorance by remembering that everyone else is, too. 90% of your job could be done by a monkey with a prescription pad after a two-week crash course in pharmacology, and the other 10% is guesswork that no one's very good at unless they spend their whole lives specializing in one narrow fraction of it. You're a member of a very good professional guild that worked very hard to buy your profession a reputation for expertise and competence, but don't kill yourself inside by forgetting that it's just hype.

Why I Don't Identify as a Feminist Anymore - My first video of a series to explain why feminists' actions aren't promoting gender equality anymore

1 upvotes · 15 May 2015 · /r/MensRights

My next videos will have a much better production value :3 Any suggestions on what to elaborate on is welcome.

Don't shoot it from below. Looks... weird.

"People Die From Exercising Like That."

1 upvotes · 12 May 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Some actually do. But a lot more people die from not exercising like that.

It's the same for anything. Weird shit can happen. People can die in car accidents because they were trapped by their seat belt. But so what? What you need to know is "does this improve my chances, or worsen them?".

Why is Feminism considered to be about equality?

1 upvotes · 12 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Doesn't hurt to ask people who actually know what they're talking about.

Oh, I'm sorry, I thought we were talking about feminists.

Why isn't prostitution legal ?

1 upvotes · 12 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women don't like competition.

Men and weakness

1 upvotes · 8 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This is a pointless question.

That unacceptability is hardwired in and you cannot culture it out. There is absolutely nothing you can do, short of very sophisticated genetic engineering which is beyond our capability, which will make the female vagina stop drying up at the sight of male tears.

Therefore the only thing to do about it is for men to stop shedding them.

Whether you want that to be the case or not does not make any difference at all, and is therefore not worth talking about.

If TRP is right then why is it the best strategy for women to marry young ?

1 upvotes · 7 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

isn't it better for women to have at least a few monogamous relationships with the alpha guys that they find so sexually attractive and then eventually settle down with an attractive beta near their 30s ? Why should women repress their sexuality?

Because men won't just meekly go along with whatever sexual strategy works best for women.

Eating 101: Fork use for Dummies

1 upvotes · 7 May 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

In fact, you can starve to death eating huge amounts of protein and little else, because your body's capacity to convert protein into usable energy is quite limited.

Protein World advert: Formal investigation launched into 'beach body ready' campaign, all advertising ceased.

1 upvotes · 30 April 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

to a place where people like these are dead.

So, pretty much anywhere where you have to hunt your own food, then?

Past is the past, well... is it?

1 upvotes · 29 April 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Let's suppose she's 30. And that she started sexing guys at 20. That's a 8 guys a year, for 10 years.

That means her average amount of time between having sex with a man, and having sex with a different man, was 45 days. For 10 years.

And she expects someone to commit to her?

Women are funny.

Is this rape?

1 upvotes · 22 April 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Honestly, if you have to threaten someone to get them to fuck you, they clearly don't want to fuck you & you should leave them alone.

In this case, you should leave them alone by divorcing them. Then they will never have to deal with sexual expectations from you again.

Obtaining the "perfect" body

1 upvotes · 17 April 2015 · /r/askTRP

Depends how fat you are.

What does the average "blue pill" look like to you?

1 upvotes · 12 April 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

For me, the blue pill man will forever be symbolized by one specific man I know, a friend of a friend.

He doesn't have a job, subsists on some sort of government disability pension for something diagnosed by a psychologist, and weighs at least 300 lbs. I have never seen someone eat so much ice cream at one sitting.

He watches "My Little Pony", and thinks that he shouldn't have to be embarrassed about this, but judging by how defensive he acts about it, he is.

He thinks republicans are evil racist misogynists, rich people are all greedy sociopaths, and that everyone needs to check their privilege. He worships women and is constantly stepping speaking out in their defense, despite the fact that they have never once asked for this, and seldom actually speak to him at all.

He is highly intelligent, very creative, and often witty to the point of hilariousness. He possess the capacity to be charming, and can certainly carry on an interesting conversation, but when social, political, or sexual topics come to the fore, he loses any charm he has, and simply begins spewing vitriol, which he feels no remorse over whatsoever, because he believes he is championing good against evil, instead of one group of human beings against another. His sense of proportion and common sense vanish utterly in these moments.

He doesn't see a steroidal "dudebro" like me as a person who might have a different worldview, but as a vile sociopath who must be stopped. Specifically, my girlfriend is a fair maiden who needs to be rescued from my evil clutches, and if she happens to like my evil clutches just fine, thank you oh so very much, then she's been brainwashed, and needs strong social justice paladins like himself to bring her to the light and help her realize what she truly wants.

She has been known to refer to him as "mega-beta".

Interacting with has made me understand why bullying is a thing among children. It's not always about insecurity coupled with sadism. Sometimes it's the ordinary urge to smack the self-righteousness out of a brat who not only violates every social more, but prides himself on doing so... a smack or two not only for the sake of one's own annoyance, but in a sort of last desperate attempt to save someone from their efforts to destroy everything that is good or healthy or noble about themselves.

The tragedy of this man is that there is a fine mind and a good spirit buried beneath all the flab and cowardice. He has been taught the wrong things, probably grown up without a father of any sort, much less a strong, masculine one, and is now a ruin of what he could have been.

what does the average "red pill" look like to you?

1 upvotes · 12 April 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You've succeeded in rousing my curiosity.

I GISed and got:

Viking-looking-guy; Small cute redheaded girl

Bald mustaschioed dude; scantily dressed athletic blonde

This gave me no additional understanding of your point. Do you have one?

Aren't men hypergamous by nature as well?

1 upvotes · 8 April 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So what?

How does the idea that men might or might not be hypergamous help me? How is it relevant to me? I'm not trying to have sex with men.

There really is no escape is there? [Misandry Bubble in action]

1 upvotes · 5 April 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So basically, you wash your hands of any problem young men might have. It's their own responsibility to figure out solutions and implement them.

Guess what? You're right. And they did that. It's called "the red pill".

Don't like it? Too late.

Red Pill, what do you think of a woman if she has a low sex drive? Or just doesn't want to have sex?

1 upvotes · 2 April 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Red Pill, what do you think of a woman if she has a low sex drive?

I don't.

I think about another woman instead.

RP: Are creeps only ugly men?

1 upvotes · 28 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Your confusion on this point results from you using the word "ugly" instead of "unattractive".

Looks are a very small part of male attractiveness .

Question for the RedPill: How can any normal, well adjusted person have a romantic, sexual, or even platonic relationship with a redpiller when "spousal rape" and "rape in a private space" should be legal, according to them?

1 upvotes · 27 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Reported.

The Red Pill Hamster, part Two.

1 upvotes · 26 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

You can run HCG anytime. Not just post-cycle.

I run it all the time. And my balls are completely normal despite the other gear I'm taking.

[Discussion] If gender is purely a construct, how do we account for transgender people and other extreme outliers of their sex?

1 upvotes · 25 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think we may be working off different definitions of some of the words we are talking about.

When a researcher looks at whether testosterone causes or is correlated with aggression, what he means by "aggression" is "flies into a rage and beats six nuns with a folding chair".

Aggression: 1. The action of attacking without provocation, especially in beginning a quarrel or war (hostility, aggressiveness, belligerence, bellicosity, force, violence).

When I say testosterone make me aggressive (which I didn't say, but I will now), what I mean by "aggression" is "tells the police woman who's ticketing him for speeding to put her phone number on the ticket".

Aggression: 2. Forceful and assertive pursuit of one's aims and interests (confidence, self-confidence, boldness, determination, forcefulness, vigor, energy, zeal).

Testosterone does not increase Aggression-1, but it sure as hell increases Aggression-2. (In facts, one of the reasons TRP exists is the active effort, on the part of a social movement which just straight-up hates men, to suppress male testosterone-mediated Aggression-2 by disingenuously equating it with Aggression-1.)

In fact, I suspect that the causal relationship between Aggression-2 and testosterone goes both ways, and one of the major reasons why average testosterone levels in men have been steadily and mysteriously decreasing is the suppression of male Aggression-2 by a society where the social discourse is increasingly dominated by hypersensitive leftoids.

The invention of the male contraceptive pill will change everything.

1 upvotes · 23 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Testicle size change is temporary, usually harmless, and easily averted with HCG.

"The big "fuck buddy" lie: the dark story of male sexual desire" - fantastic scientific insights

1 upvotes · 19 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Basically, heterosexual partners receiving handjobs whilst in an MRI scanner trying to see differences in brain activity during masturbation and orgasm in males and females.

This is why I am skeptical of MRI studies.

The presence of a huge fucking MRI machine could be changing everything, and we'd never know.

"The big "fuck buddy" lie: the dark story of male sexual desire" - fantastic scientific insights

1 upvotes · 19 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

I've seen a lot of people confuse correlation with causality, but you are the first person I have seen confusing causality with correlation.

The most important two videos you will ever watch.

1 upvotes · 17 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Not everyone. Are you lactose intolerant? Most adults, except in certain racial groups, are.

The most important two videos you will ever watch.

1 upvotes · 17 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

As far as I know, it doesn't, empirically speaking, seem to.

Now, as to why this is, I don't know. But I cannot help noticing that we do not extract and concentrate it the way we do other sugars.

The most important two videos you will ever watch.

1 upvotes · 16 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Yeah, I'm not entirely carb-free myself. I have switched to brown rice, though, and it seems to have made a difference.

But it could also be the brazilian jiu-jitsu, or the boxing, or the lifting. Or, you know, the steroids.

I understand the slut/stud double standard, but not for the reason most of you give (key/lock).

1 upvotes · 13 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Anyway, I think the real reason everyone sluts shames is because women are PENETRATED while men PENETRATE.

Being penetrated is basically seen as being weak, being acted upon, being a willing victim. Penetrating is seen as dominance, strength, conquering, etc.

Why do I get the feeling that OP typed this with one hand while gently and rhythmically squeezing the crotch of her jeans with the other?

How would redpillers react if there were a sexual/life strategy sub run by women using the same methodology as TRP?

1 upvotes · 10 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's about this idiotic destructive behavior which has real world consequences for people.

Indeed it is.

But you believe the idiotic destructive behaviour in question is "behaviour motivated by TRP advice".

You didn't follow the causal chain far enough back. The need for TRP was caused by feminism. Feminism is the real idiotic destructive behaviour here.

Why?

Because it's a laundry list of things women want (regardless of whether or not they actually become more happy when they have them), and a mandate to get women those things by any means necessary, regardless of the consequences to men, children, or the social order as a whole.

The average TRP reader is a man who was considered by feminism to be collateral damage, an acceptable sacrifice for the greater good, as unilaterally defined by feminists themselves. In, fact he become collateral damage twice, once as a child, and again as a man.

Eventually, decades later, these men decided that they were tired of waiting for feminism to come to its senses or for their culture at large to care. They started moving to solve their own problems. TRP is part of that nascent solution.

And your complaints about it weigh about as much as a puff of warm hydrogen. Because you didn't even give enough of a damn to notice men's problems, much less care about them, much less come up with a solution that you liked better. No, you choose to sit on the bleachers and criticize those who are actually trying to get shit done.

And your complaints were absolutely silent and nonexistent so long as it was only men getting hurt.

Does TRP believe healthy relationships can't/don't exist?

1 upvotes · 6 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

My boyfriend and I were reading TRP posts together last night for entertainment. A number of posts made claims suggesting that relationships like ours simply don't exist.

Your relationship is a lampshade.

Whats worse to be, a physically unattractive redpill or a physically unattractive bluepill?

1 upvotes · 2 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Dude, you're dealing with a help-resistant complainer. The reason people do this is that they are expending more effort in making themselves feel better than fixing their problem.

He's arguing with you because every fix you suggest to him is taking away his excuses.

You cannot help him because he is not ready to be helped.

What does a "healthy" relationship look like?

1 upvotes · 24 February 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't have friends

Perhaps you will get some if you try to lose some of your more annoying habits.

Such as the habit of trimming sentences in quotes in order to totally change the meaning.

Do BPers unknowingly measure men by the same scale as TRPers?

1 upvotes · 23 February 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Am I? You're applying one subs rules to another sub.

No, that's the part you're confused about.

You said

Or circlejerking on /r/short[1] , /r/nofap[2] , and RedPill when perhaps all of these dovetail into #MaleAsianProblems which is completely overlooked online due to anonymity.

which I take to imply:

there is some amount of fussing on TRP about how hard it is for Asian guys to land white women

And I responded by telling you that said fussing would get those guys banned from TRP.

So it's not really characteristic of the sub. Because we don't even allow it.

"A woman can never love a man the way he desires to be loved." Tell me males of Red Pill, what kind of love were you daydreaming of when female love failed you?

1 upvotes · 23 February 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That's rather puzzling. You seem to seriously think that acts of intimacy with total strangers who hate you for your worldview are totally natural so long as you are anonymous.

Perhaps if OP agrees with you, she will be willing to fellate me, so long as I agree not to ask her what her name is.

I suspect I would not enjoy the experience however. Her tongue seems somewhat on the sharp side.

"A woman can never love a man the way he desires to be loved." Tell me males of Red Pill, what kind of love were you daydreaming of when female love failed you?

1 upvotes · 23 February 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

She (?) has asked me for an act of intimacy... relating my innermost thoughts from the time of my childhood.

She has earned no intimacy from me. My confidences are for those who have established emotional bonds.

If women are most attractive at age 20, explain the immense popularity of "MILF" porn.

1 upvotes · 23 February 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What is the average age of an American woman? What is the average age of a working American pornstar?

I think we're done here.

To the TRPers

1 upvotes · 23 February 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

<http://www.thumotic.com/argumentum-ad-amog/>

"A woman can never love a man the way he desires to be loved." Tell me males of Red Pill, what kind of love were you daydreaming of when female love failed you?

1 upvotes · 20 February 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No. You don't get to hear about the dreams of my youth. You haven't earned them.

Long-Term Relationship Game Theory: A Beginner's Guide to Managing Your Bitches

1 upvotes · 16 February 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Then I would suggest using the word "practiced" rather than "natural".

"Natural" is the appearance one wishes to achieve. "Practiced" is what's actually going on.

Question for TRPers: why do you try to justify men cheating but condemn women when they do it?

1 upvotes · 13 February 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I will not put them with all the other bonus points I didn't get, and then not exchange them for not valuable prizes that I don't want.

And then I'll give you 10 points for "temporary success in evading the question".

Question for TRPers: why do you try to justify men cheating but condemn women when they do it?

1 upvotes · 13 February 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Absolutely.

Question for TRPers: why do you try to justify men cheating but condemn women when they do it?

1 upvotes · 13 February 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Question for chodes: Why do you try to tell other people what their opinions are?

Kenji Yoshino: Diversity Does Not Mean Having to Choose Between Identity and Inclusion

1 upvotes · 7 February 2015 · /r/MensRights

I turned it off when this asshat started talking about doing science with self-report surveys.

"It was like sex with a friend" #struggleneverdies

1 upvotes · 3 February 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

To some extent, yes.

http://www.reddit.com/r/RedPillWomen/comments/1krml5/ponderings_on_maturity/

I have seen a 33 year old Hispanic man, an Iraq war veteran who had served three tours and had become an outspoken critic of our presence there, be lectured about patriarchy by an affluent 22 year old white liberal arts college student...

1 upvotes · 31 January 2015 · /r/MensRights

Your logical fallacy is... middle ground.

There's a wealth of data to back it up, with liberal leaders outperforming conservatives across the board throughout history.

What there is, is a wealth of interpretations of data that are intended to support it. Raw political and economic data never really says anything unambiguously.

In reality, problem with those who have more good intentions than rationality is not just that they apply bad solutions, but that they overestimate their power to control the behaviour of complex systems, and tend to try to apply direct solutions to emergent properties they don't like, which often has disastrous which are seldom traceable to them.

For example, the welfare state, driven by white liberal guilt and moral smugness, did in the space of a single generation what could not be accomplished by hundreds of years of slavery, Jim Crow, lynchings, and hate... and that is to destroy the black family.

I have seen a 33 year old Hispanic man, an Iraq war veteran who had served three tours and had become an outspoken critic of our presence there, be lectured about patriarchy by an affluent 22 year old white liberal arts college student...

1 upvotes · 30 January 2015 · /r/MensRights

If I had to pick a way to describe the saner portions of the political left, the term I would choose would not be "rational". It would be "well-intentioned". Their goals are not malevolent, they are simply unable to understand the consequences of their actions.

SJWs, of course, are malevolent.

Poll: How many in TRP really think women are inferior?

1 upvotes · 23 January 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Inferior for what purpose?

Feminist says DNA paternity tests are "anti-feminist application of science," believes men refusing to raise children they didn't father is immoral.

1 upvotes · 19 January 2015 · /r/MensRights

So?

Even Will Smith could not get girls as a beta bucks

1 upvotes · 18 January 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

The lesson here is that men are what they do.

If you do the wrong thing, at that moment, it does not matter who you are.

You have no inherent value as a human being. That perception is reserved for women. You have to earn your humanity every moment. You can never rest on your laurels, even if you are Will Smith. Never show a crack.

This is the struggle that makes you strong.

On the absolute necessity of patriarchy for women's long term welfare.

1 upvotes · 11 January 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Please try to keep your eye on the ball, here.

The thesis was "Patriarchy is necessary for women's well-being." How does me being able to handle a landscape full of sluts help women in the slightest degree?

Many of us can get laid just fine without patriarchy, and can party in the slutscape until we are too geriatric to get an erection anymore. But that does fuck-all for women.

Abolishing the culture of female monogamy is good for guys who want easy sex, and somewhat bad for guys who want LTRs, but it's catastrophic for women over thirty.

And most all women eventually get there.

Is TRP social libertarianism? How many Red Pillers identify as libertarian/an-caps?

1 upvotes · 10 January 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No.

While many people have both those sets of views, they cannot and do not overlap.

Political philosophies are prescriptive. TRP is descriptive. It concerns itself solely with is, not what ought to do be, therefore it does not overlap with any philosophy about what is "right" or what people "should" do.

Where do you draw the line between narcissism and the normal human desire to be validated and loved?

1 upvotes · 10 January 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You are aware, are you not, that when you say "seems", what you actually mean is "initially appears, to my cursory, brief, and hostile examination"?

To some people, the world is a lens. To others, it is a mirror.

MGTOW - Veterans, boy geniuses, & posers

1 upvotes · 7 January 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

This strikes me as a pissing contest. What is this argument even about? Who's a real man and who's a poseur? What good is that information to me? How does that improve my life? How is the resolution to this argument in any way useful to me?

Is it supposed to tell me whether I should devote time to pickup or not? Fuck you, I'll do it if I want to and not do it if I don't.

Men who have taken the red pill do not need another pack of talking heads trying to tell them what to do.

What they need is people who will tell them how to pursue the goals they have chosen.

"Men's Issues stem from misogyny, not misandry" - How would you respond to this, OOC?

1 upvotes · 4 January 2015 · /r/MensRights

To someone who sees misogyny everywhere, and everything as misogyny, every problem you show them looks like misogyny.

Surprise.

If TRP thinks so lowly of women, why do they even date them? They don't seem to treat them with much respect.

1 upvotes · 3 January 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

(2) Titles should be opinion-free

Reported.

Doonesbury, R.I.P.

1 upvotes · 2 January 2015 · /r/MensRights

This is feminism where it belongs: in the funny papers.

Are you going to fuck your bros? If not, why is "bro code" suddenly the fashionable solution to dealing with the difficulties that women present? (Solutions need to actually achieve the original goal of getting laid)

1 upvotes · 27 December 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

No. The social contract is already broken. Women ripped it to shreds. Our best moral behavior will not restore it. Sticking to the old rules will not benefit us in the present world. If women do not uphold or value the marriage contract, why should we?

♂

Well said, and true.

The codes HSP speaks of are not between men and women, however. They are not even between men and men. They are between men who know each other and have each others' backs.

The two of you think you are disagreeing, and you are not:

Some random tourist girl who didn't even ask my last name? I owe her husband nothing. She broke her vows, not me. I feel no guilt whatsoever for seizing the moment.

So no, Bro Code isn't entirely outdated or useless. It just comes down to when and how you apply it. When administered properly, Bro Code can promote the formation of new alliances with men, and reinforce existing alliances by reaffirming boundaries and establishing trust.

Enough's Enough "Asian Men Have it Hardest/Race Traitors threads" = Instaban. Man the fuck up pussy.

1 upvotes · 22 December 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

They want a bandaid and a kiss for their wounded soul.

Precisely.

And that's for women. Success, not sympathy, is balm for the wounded soul.

What do you think of submissive males in a BDSM setting?

1 upvotes · 21 December 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If a man is happy being in a relationship with a dominant woman and find sexual and emotional fulfillment in being of service to her, is there really anything wrong with that?

You're a little bit confused, here.

TRP is descriptive, not moralistic. It concerns itself with "is", not "should".

TBP is moralistic, not descriptive. It concerns itself with "should", not "is".

Asking whether TRP readers think something is wrong or bad is like asking TBP readers whether they think something is true. In both cases, they don't care.

CMV: I'm entitled to sex.

1 upvotes · 21 December 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Being "entitled" to something isn't a thing. It doesn't exist. It's just some shit somebody made up that doesn't correspond to reality.

Being "entitled" to something means that someone "should" have it. And there is no "should", only "is". Should is just a way to use one word to say "I want".

And who gives a fuck what people want?

People don't get what they deserve. They get what they get.

Obama purposefully only answers women at end of year press conference.

1 upvotes · 20 December 2014 · /r/MensRights

There's only two things anyone needs to understand about Barrack Obama.

He has one, and only one priority, and that is Barrack Obama.

His political powerbase is the female vote.

If you proceed from those two assumptions, everything he does will make sense, and you can predict, at least in broad strokes, many or most of his actions.

How TRP helped me avoid a race traitor Asian girl.

1 upvotes · 20 December 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

You're right to avoid girls who don't date your race. Asian girls who date white WILL try to turn Asian men into orbiters.

But using the term "race traitor" is just indulging your inner weakness.

She never chose to join the great Asian collective. She owes Asians no loyalty, and hence cannot betray them. Acting entitled to her affections because you share some genes is just a way to blame your hardships on others. Yeah, it's tougher for Asian guys. But just because you have a disadvantage doesn't mean someone has wronged you.

Science: It's a Girl Thing!

1 upvotes · 11 December 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

People don't need to take out expensive ad campaigns to say the things that everyone knows to be true.

Woman raped 14yo boy - pedophilic Guardian describes it as "starting a sexual relationship". She also brutalized children, but portrayed as victim. The crimes committed by men? Well that was "abuse" n

1 upvotes · 7 December 2014 · /r/MensRights

This rationalization is slightly more sound... but that just means it takes a little longer to show that, it, too, is hollow and disingenuous.

When an older person has sex with a young person (using these terms hereafter for over 18 and under 18 respectively), we treat that as rape, which is regarded as having a severity within a order of magnitude of murder. One of the most serious crimes out there.

And yet, when a young person has sex with another young person, we don't punish it at all, other than perhaps a stern parental telling-off, unless it was real rape.

You claim this is because it does more harm than good to incarcerate young people.

Yet, for every other type of crime, whether it be motivated by profit or passion, in sound mind, or unsound, in hot blood or cold, we incarcerate young people with great enthusiasm. If a young person commits armed robbery, murder, or one of many other crimes, we often try them as an adult.

No, our societal hatred for older people having sex with younger ones has nothing to do with the entirely separate, and much weaker, tendency to discourage younger people from having sex.

What about your next rationalization... "maybe the older person used acted like an authority figure and forced the younger person into it"?

In other crimes we punish people for causing harm, not for doing something which might, under some circumstances, cause harm. Run a red light, get a ticket. Run a red light and kill someone, get the book thrown at you.

Would you like to hear my hypothesis? Or shall we keep trotting out and dismissing the standard rationalizations?

Self confessed "strong women" queue up to be spanked, slapped, and cummed on in r/sex confirming yet another red pill truth AWALT

1 upvotes · 21 November 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Of course it's fucking work.

It requires close attention and walking a very fine line. It has to be rough enough to feel real, but be safe enough to be repeatable. It has to be scary enough to turn her on, but not scary enough to turn her off.

Anyone who thinks providing rough, degrading sex isn't a lot of work has probably never gotten beyond fake handcuffs and a spanking.

Thing is, it's work that is worth it... so long as you're getting off on it. It's not a matter of it not being effort... it's a matter of it being rewarding effort.

Modern Feminism: Appalling Stupidity Backed by Hysterical Outrage

1 upvotes · 20 November 2014 · /r/MensRights

The commies are coming! Leftists! Socialists! Anarchists!

Ho-hum. More drivel from reactionaries.

Here's your Unconscious Irony Award.

Shocker: Women have stronger orgasms with rich hot guys

1 upvotes · 19 November 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Well, testosterone levels do play into it, but the way they play into it is that the more you have, the easier it is to turn you on.

But it also works the other way... exposure to pretty women (as well as, believe it or not, fast sports cars) make testosterone levels spike.

So, yes, a younger man would most likely have less difficulty banging those ED guys' middle-aged wives. But those supposed ED guys would also probably have no problem at all banging a hot young girl.

It's not by coincidence that the term "frigidity" has been discarded in favour of blaming men, but terms like impotence and erectile dysfunction haven't.

Made a feminist 'friend' mad.

1 upvotes · 17 November 2014 · /r/MensRights

I am aware of this definition. But I don't agree with it. You see, if we see rights as "inherent" things that people just have, whether or not they actually can use them, then rights belong to the realm of "should" which is the realm of things we made up, or ways we would like the world to be, but it isn't.

In other words, shit that doesn't matter.

Someone's theoretical rights may make a fine discussion topic for cloistered academics and UN reps. But what actually matters is what rights we can actually exercise. Those are the rights we have, in any meaningful sense of the word "have".

In order to have rights, we must first be able to enforce them.

This, for example, is why the right to bear arms is the fundamental right on which all other rights depend.

Why are straight guys, even RP ones, so pathetically pussy-blind?

1 upvotes · 10 November 2014 · /r/altTRP

We do have sex with straight guys, of course — ever so secretly.

No you don't. You have sex with closeted gay guys in denial. And bisexual guys.

Straight guys don't have sex with guys because we CAN'T. You can't play pool using a rope for a cue.

And you don't get to have it both ways. You can't call it homophobia when people expect you to have sex with women, AND homophobia when straight men don't have sex with men.

Feminist organization that makes "This Is What A Feminist Looks Like" t-shirts forces Indian women to sleep 16 to a room get paid a $1.24

1 upvotes · 4 November 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

This is what feminism looks like.

Are you a brown male? Shut the fuck up and get over yourself. A guide by HerpesDragon

1 upvotes · 4 November 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

<http://www.quickmeme.com/img/51/51ac0906b11d3497e492a3f24feba2d18988a4dc6c54afbc0d3e6ff2da15537.jpg>

Argumentum ad AMOG

A quick primer of being more physically attractive

1 upvotes · 30 October 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I absolutely loath suits because they are fucking unnecessary and really only used to show class which is a vestige of the past. I work in the tech industry, so I rarely need a suit, but every now and then it's required.

What they show is a willingness to dress up to please or impress others.

In NYC, this signals higher status ("I am important because people are looking at me."). However, on the west coast, dressing causally signals high status in most business situations ("Other people dress to impress me, not the reverse."). This is why the only people in LA who wear suits are lawyers, salesmen, and people applying for jobs.

So, while your point, "wear clothes that fit" is well taken, I'm trying to make another, somewhat related, one, which is: people will measure your social skills by how well you discern what styles are socially appropriate to wear.

For example, if I am interviewing an engineering candidate, and he's wearing a tie, I am immediately suspicious.

Why is he wearing a tie? Is he not clued in to what engineers wear? Does he not spend time around engineers? Is he erring on the side of caution (which means he may be too conciliatory and not assertive enough) ? Is he from a different culture? If so, why does he not know that we do things differently here?

A quick primer of being more physically attractive

1 upvotes · 29 October 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I think aggressive whitening is going to be the "smoking => lung cancer" realization of our generation.

If I had to pick one candidate for that, it would be "sugar=>obese".

A quick primer of being more physically attractive

1 upvotes · 29 October 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Whiten your teeth

Also invisalign if your parents were too cheap to get your teeth straightened when you were a kid.

Meghan Trainor's "Dear Future Husband" or A case study on why to not get married, ever.

1 upvotes · 27 October 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

You're not going to win a social policy debate with women collectively, because the "sympathy gap" is insurmountable.

Your recourse is to:

- Make damn sure you aren't that "future husband".
- Help other men learn not to be him, either.

Women (men, too, actually) do not respond to appeals to reason. Only to appeals to their interests.

Addressing the common BP question "what can women do to avoid criticism?"

1 upvotes · 27 October 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm not debating you at all. You are the example in my argument, not its audience.

This is why I said something I had no way of guessing at to bait you into responding, and then made two nonsensical demands.

And this is to show that judging a group of general observations about population trends (TRP), by applying them to individual cases is nonsense.

There is no such thing as a "counterexample" to a statement about trends. If I say that men are taller than women, only an idiot would attempt to disprove this by producing an example of a tall woman, or a woman who claimed on the internet to be tall. Only an idiot would gather data on women's height by asking women their height, instead of measuring them.

And only the disingenuous would interpret the statement in its weakest possible form.

Addressing the common BP question "what can women do to avoid criticism?"

1 upvotes · 20 October 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Okay, now that you've experienced how deeply unfair my last two demands were, let me tell you what I am actually talking about.

1. It is nonsensical to ask someone to "prove" their own experiences. They know them because they have had them, and it is completely impractical, especially over the internet, to provide anyone else with "proof" that this or that happened, or that they really feel this or that way.
2. It is also silly to demand that someone "prove" they represent a majority, or that what they observed represents a majority, before listening to what they have to say about their experiences or what they saw.

Just to be crystal clear, I made two nonsensical demands of you, so you could experience firsthand how nonsensical those two particular demands were.

Because those are the two particular demands made of TRP subscribers by many haters who disguise themselves in "skeptic's" clothing.

"I am merely being skeptical.", they say. "Now prove everything you experienced actually happened, and prove this is true of all women, not just some vapid drunken sluts who you meet in clubs.", as if we were full-time, funded, professional researchers who could do nothing but conduct double-blind, statistically validated studies all day.

Another nonsensical demand is "explain this particular person", be she a dominatrix, or asexual, or homosexual, or whatever. Not only is this a demand that we examine that which we have no observational access to, it is not even, on its face, how the science game is played.

Scientific hypotheses are validated not by their power to explain, but by their power to predict.

Anyone can come up with a hypothesis which explains all observed phenomena, but is completely ridiculous and totally false. I could "explain" gravity by saying that invisible fairies push massive objects towards each other, because that's just how invisible fairies get their kicks. I could add details to this "hypothesis" to "explain" every observed phenomenon. My model would then "explain" everything about gravity... and it would be total bollocks.

Hypotheses are only supported when they can make predictions about what has not yet been observed, and those predictions turn out to be true.

So, "explain me", is not something TRP is required to do, and even if TRP did it, it would not be evidence we were right. You seem to regard yourself as a walking, talking disproof of most TRP principles, when in fact what you are is someone who dislikes TRP, and uses skepticism as an excuse for requests which can most charitably be described as complete non-sequiturs.

Although, to be fair, it would take an extraordinarily strong-minded dominatrix to not hate TRP, given that one of the foundations of most of our practical advice is the observation that women tend towards sexual submissiveness, gravitate to dominant men, and lack the leadership, risk-taking, and status-seeking behaviours which characterize much of male action.

Addressing the common BP question "what can women do to avoid criticism?"

1 upvotes · 19 October 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Prove that you represent a majority and not a statistical outlier.

Hypocrisy, TBP vs TRP

1 upvotes · 12 October 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Okay, first of all, TRP is a discussion group. Not a church. We are under no obligation whatsoever to toe the same rhetorical line. I am not answerable for anything another subscriber says.

Second, they called this woman's specific behaviours toxic. It was only someone else who labelled her behaviour "dread game" and decided it was exactly equivalent to male dread game, as endorsed by lots of TRP readers.

Third, I went and read the poster's description of what she did, and that's not even dread game. It's just a crazy woman being crazy.

So, you have three faulty premises in even asking me this question.

With that said, I, personally believe that dread game is not useful for women. Why? Because eggs are expensive and sperm is cheap.

When a man "plays hard to get" and shows that he has other options, he is creating the impression that his sperm is more valuable than common sperm. That's how dread game works. Aloofness creates the impression of increased value.

When a woman "plays hard to get" or reveals that she has options, she creates does not create the impression of high value. Why? Because her value can be clearly determined by looking at her, and then talking to her for five minutes. Youth, beauty (as a marker of fertility and health), femininity, etc. can all be read clearly by the observer. So aloofness creates the impression not of higher value, but of lower interest in the man in question.

She is less feminine and attractive.

This leads us to an interesting point. When you saw words like "toxic" and so on, you thought you were seeing a moral double standard. And maybe sometimes on TRP you will. Moral double standards are sometimes appropriate.

But in the case, the word "toxic" should be taken literally. Poisonous. That which destroys what it touches.

A woman who says "you're a puppet that I control, and I've been doing it on purpose for laughs" is socially stunted, and will spread her damage to those around her. That's not dread game. That's just poison.

In my next response, I'll talk a little bit about how dread game is actually supposed to work.

Hypocrisy, TBP vs TRP

1 upvotes · 11 October 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What do you mean, "acceptable"?

They are there. They are hard-coded into the human genome. You can either accept them or stick your fingers in your ears and shout "lalalalalalalalalalalala I can't hear you!".

Men are allowed to bang everything in sight because women will still find them attractive if they do. Women aren't, because men won't.

Women are allowed to get their way by whining and crying, because men will still find them attractive if they do. Men aren't, because women won't.

Your mistake is thinking that TRP and feminism are two ends of the same spectrum. They are not. Feminism is prescriptive. It concerns itself with "should" and "ought". TRP is descriptive. It concerns itself with "is".

Hypocrisy, TBP vs TRP

1 upvotes · 10 October 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because dread game is more considerate. It gives them a choice.

It's pretty fucking unreasonable to expect someone to read your mind, figure out what you want, and give it to them, or you'll just leave. Instead, you make your wants clear, show you have other options, and let her decide what to do about that.

But that's just what BPillers do with their "compatibility" stuff. Never give anyone a chance to decide what's important to them, or make a change. No feedback, no guidance, just bail because they're "not feeling it anymore".

Fuck that. No one is perfect. And no one is perfect for anyone else "just the way they are".

Without feedback, no one can be better today than they were yesterday.

Unfortunate this is the attitude from other men.

1 upvotes · 7 October 2014 · /r/MensRights

You're playing into feminist hands, here.

It was their agenda which expanded the definition of rape from "forcing or coercing an unconsenting person into sex" to "any sexual contact which does not fall within whatever the legal parameters are this week".

Rape is specifically forcing someone to have sex. That's what the word means, regardless of what we do with the law.

The reason we call it "statutory" rape is that we have the common sense to realize that it's not really rape. Now, maybe we don't want to let people over 18 talk teenagers under 18 into sex, that's fine. We can have a policy conversation about that.

But calling it rape won't fly, because everyone knows damn well that teenagers like sex, and sometimes pursue it quite actively. SO when a teenage boy willingly gets into bed with an older women, everybody's common sense tells them it damn well isn't rape.

The only thing that calling it rape achieves is to create a double standard, because people are willing to pretend that teenage girls have no agency, but they won't do that with teenage boys.

Teenagers, both male and female, have agency, and if sleeping with them when they want to do it is to be a crime, then it needs to be given a different name, one that doesn't fail the laugh test. And both parties need to be punished, regardless of their gender, because a willing participant in a crime is a perpetrator, not a victim.

New Dating App Caters to Rich by Weeding Out the Poor

1 upvotes · 7 October 2014 · /r/MensRights

I'm fine with this so long as it also filters out women who aren't pretty.

Are Male Feminists Getting Laid?

1 upvotes · 29 September 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I suspect that some of them are (top 20%), and others are not (other 80%), just like the general male population.

I also suspect, however, that they have to jump through a lot of hoops, listen to a lot of bullshit, put up with a lot of fat and and unremoved body hair, do a lot of dishes, agree with a lot of bullshit, display a lot of self-loathing, articulate a lot of self-criticism, and do a lot of other things men don't really want to do.

Hypergamy in Action: "How do I break up with an old boyfriend whom I have dated for 4 years, for a new, better guy I've known for 1 year?"

1 upvotes · 19 September 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Go and catch a falling star,
Get with child a mandrake root,
Tell me where all past years are,
Or who cleft the devil's foot,
Teach me to hear mermaids singing,
Or to keep off envy's stinging,
And find What wind Serves to advance an honest mind.

If thou be'st born to strange sights,
Things invisible to see,
Ride ten thousand days and nights,
Till age snow white hairs on thee,
Thou, when thou return'st, wilt tell me,
All strange wonders that befell thee,
And swear, No where
Lives a woman true, and fair.

If thou find'st one, let me know,
Such a pilgrimage were sweet;
Yet do not, I would not go,
Though at next door we might meet;
Though she were true, when you met her,
And last, till you write your letter,
Yet she Will be
False, ere I come, to two, or three.

What's the best TRP way to turn Beta Bucks into Alpha Fucks?

1 upvotes · 17 September 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Some things to consider.

Do a cost/benefit analysis on actual whores.

If

(time expended running game * value of your time) + actual dollars expended while running game > cost of whore then the whore is actually the smart move. This equation tends to work out in favour of the whore for men who are bad at game, but also for men whose time is very valuable.

Improve yourself.

This isn't just for getting laid, if for improving yourself and feeling better. Don't just stop at a gym membership... remember that money can buy an easier path to almost anything.

Guys who can afford X a month get a gym membership. Guys who can N*X get a personal trainer who comes to them.

Guys who can afford X per month figure out how to get under-the-counter steroids. Guys who can afford N*X per month get the services of an anti-aging doctor who will prescribe them bioidentical testosterone.

Broke ugly guys have to learn enough game to make it not matter. Rich ugly guys can get a nose job.

Broke guys have to eat processed food that makes you fat. Rich guys can eat natural food that takes time to prepare, and makes you thin. (This is why poor people think expensive restaurants are a tiny-portioned ripoff, but rich people eat there and leave feeling satisfied... good, natural food doesn't drive you to overeat.)

I am BP, but there seems to be one strange phenomenon that I have only seen explained by RP

1 upvotes · 17 September 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Now, RP says that women want to be dominated. But they cannot say this directly, because once she requests it, it is not real domination. It is only real domination if it is your idea.

Exactly. Thinking about feeling stressed and wanting a hug. You can ask for one, but it's much better if someone notices of their own accord that you're having a hard day, and spontaneously makes a gesture of affection and support.

Now think about asking for domination. It's worse than asking for a hug, because it's socially unacceptable. Not only that, but doing as you are bid is not a dominant gesture... quite the opposite.

So women cannot say they want dominant men, but they want them. So when they find themselves with a man who isn't dominant enough for them, they cannot fix his behaviour... they have to discard him and look again.

This is why women complain about dominant men being dominant (because they have to make a public appearance of not being submissive, which the feminist paradigm has made shameful), but gravitate to, and stay with, dominant men.

What are women qualified to give advice on?

1 upvotes · 17 September 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

to what extent would you agree/disagree with this view?

Largely agree. The argument isn't very strong by itself, but when one really observes just how much rationalization and ego defense the average western woman engages in, one would be hard pressed to disagree.

to what extent is this view popular with rpers?

I don't know, there's no hivemind for me to be in telepathic contact with.

does TRP by giving EC status to such users implicitly endorse this view?

Making people pass an orthodoxy test isn't our thing. That's more the modus operandi of feminism, Joe McCarthy, and the Catholic Church.

We endorse people because they say insightful things we think are correct, not because they refrain from ever saying anything we don't like.

"Are you done crying, yet?"

1 upvotes · 14 September 2014 · /r/MensRights

You're in the wrong place.

You're posting in a subreddit that's going to tell you various variations on how women "should" let men cry.

That's not ever going to happen. "Should" doesn't enter into it. This isn't your fault, but it's still your responsibility, simply because you are the only one with both the power and the motive to fix it.

Do yourself a favour. Go to /r/theredpill and read the sidebar. Learn how not to let this happen to you again.

Blue Pill saved my life!

1 upvotes · 14 September 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Sure. If everyone here already understood and accepted how human instinct influences sexual politics, there would be no need for the group.

The five stages of accepting TRP are pretty much identical to the five stages of grieving. We can't just expect everyone to be at the acceptance state from day one, and all the time.

26 years old and just found out my dad isn't my real dad. Real dad was getaway driver for a murder, and mom pursued him while he was in jail.

1 upvotes · 13 September 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

It's the difference between blowing yourself up because you forgot to check the safety on the grenade and jumping on a bomb to save the rest of your platoon.

♂

Why the unspoken female model of life can work for a male who's swallowed the red pill as well

1 upvotes · 4 September 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Do. Not. Get. Married. Ever.

TRP - Let's talk about building an aesthetic physique.

1 upvotes · 4 September 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I often go on 4 hours of sleep.

Jesus fuck.

You might as well not bother to lift, because it's not going to do you any good at all. Look, chronic sleep deprivation leads to high cortisol levels, which leads not only to general bad health, but to putting fat specifically on the abdomen, and to low T levels, which prevent gains.

You are better off sleeping 8 hours, and not lifting, than you are sleeping 4 hours and lifting, because high T levels build muscle even if you don't lift, but lifting doesn't do a damn thing if you don't sleep.

Sleep > lifting.

Have I repeated that enough now? Are you listening?

Fix. Your. Sleep. Habits.

Then follow Whisper's Secret Super-Special Hardcore Lifting Program for Sick Gainz:

- Lift heavy shit.
- Put it down.
- Repeat.

Why feminism should have ended decades ago.

1 upvotes · 4 September 2014 · /r/MensRights

Why should it ever have started in the first place?

TRP - Let's talk about building an aesthetic physique.

1 upvotes · 3 September 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Anabolic progress is a tripod. It rests on three legs:

- Self-Discipline. You must lift. And you must eat right.
- Self-Care. You must eat enough. And you must sleep at least eight hours a night. Any less than that, and you might as well not be lifting. It's better to skip your workout than lose sleep.
- Endocrine Health. Your T levels must be high, your cortisol levels must be low.

If any one of these legs is damaged, the tripod will tip over.

You are making the common mistake that not only newbs, but most of the exercise industry makes... overfocus on how to exercise. All you really need to do to exercise right is:

- Lift heavy shit.
- Put it down.
- Repeat.

If you're doing that, then any absence of gains is due to something else. The biggest culprits are:

- Lack of sleep. (Sleep more. If you have insomnia, see a psychiatrist. They are the ones who can prescribe real sleep aids.)
- Caloric insufficiency. (Eat more meat. Don't go on a reducing diet while you're lifting.)
- Low T (Sleep more, and see a physician.)
- High cortisol (Sleep more, reduce environment stress, and see a physician.)

Advice to a beta buddy

1 upvotes · 27 August 2014 · /r/askTRP

Trust isn't an on/off switch.

There are some things you can trust many people with, some things you can trust few people with, some things you can trust no one with, and some things that anyone who would dare ask to be trusted with them shouldn't be.

Trust is not an obligation. Trust is not a prerequisite of love or affection. Trust cannot be owed, or even earned. It must be inspired.

And anyone who is "offended that you don't trust them" should be watched very carefully indeed.

Muslim girl supports the husband getting sex when he asks for it

1 upvotes · 22 August 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Google "duck bacon".

You're welcome.

The Redefinition of Parenthood

1 upvotes · 21 August 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

That's workable... unless the surrogate changes her mind. She could then sue you for child support if you used your own sperm.

Still, better odds, though.

[FR] Yes, all women are like that, and they should all be spun. Plates and Frame Control

1 upvotes · 13 August 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I suspect we might simply be disagreeing on semantics, but I'll put my thoughts down anyways.

We are, but I think the distinction is important, because new people read this stuff.

The goal of frame control is to get what you want. But not all conflicts of objectives manifest solely in frame control... so frame control isn't just "what happens when there is a conflict of objectives".

It's important for novices to understand what frame IS, because that's usually their biggest problem. They will fight vigorously to get what they want, but fail to notice that they are doing so within someone else's frame.

So it's important to talk about the concept of a frame very precisely and specifically when people are trying to learn it.

Frame is the context in which an interaction occurs. It includes the topic of conversation, the Overton window (set of assumptions about what is reasonable and what is not), the format of the conversation (the medium, who speaks and when, etc), and other elements which are not explicitly expressed, but control how the interaction occurs.

What's important is not directly who controls the frame, but what the frame is.

For example, an atheist ought not to debate a religious figure in a panel called "Can we be Moral Without God?", because it submits to a disadvantageous frame. Religious people are assumed to have a basis for morality, where the atheist must make a case that he has one, too. Similarly, a theist should not participate in a debate called "Is Religion a Form of Insanity?", for similar reasons.

caring too much about whether you win or lose a frame control fight is a vanity unto itself, and usually predicts your defeat.

Yes, you are correct. And, examining this is the context of what I wrote above, the important question to ask is not "who controls the frame?" (this meta-frame is process oriented and self-conscious), but "what is the frame, and is it advantageous to me?" (this meta-frame is results-oriented).

Arch feminist Tracy Clark-Flory can't stand that Chris Pratt is getting positive attention as a sexy 'douchebag'.

1 upvotes · 7 August 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Thanks for the link, very cool.

I think it's important to draw a distinction between being happy with a man who learned to be dominant, and prompting or training a man to be dominant.

The second, obviously, is against women's mate-selection interest. The first is not so clear-cut.

Guy's girlfriend was raped at a party, but she doesn't want to destroy the friendship with her rapist.

1 upvotes · 22 July 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

If what happened didn't already destroy your relationship, then don't call it rape. Because it doesn't need to be categorized with being forced by a stranger.

Husband and wife both had sex with 15 year old girl; his bond set at $25,000, her bond set at $5,000

1 upvotes · 14 July 2014 · /r/MensRights

I will tell you from experience

tl:dr: I was raped, therefore all sex is rape.

If AWALT and if marriage is not RP, how do you end up with a family and children?

1 upvotes · 8 July 2014 · /r/askTRP

how do you go about starting a nuclear family?

You can't.

You, in this society, cannot have children. Period. I don't mean "it's not a good idea". I don't mean "it's not safe". I mean you can't.

Under our current law and legal system, children are the property of the women. You have only the relationship with them that she specifies and allows. They are not your children. They are her children, whom she may permit you to participate in raising.

This means that if you want to be the father of a child, and raise that child, you have two choices.

1. Leave this society and join another one where fathers still have rights.
2. Sire a child in this society, and place yourself entirely at the mercy of the woman in question.

The second one constitutes absolute trust that the woman not only IS voluntarily much fairer than the legal system, but that she will remain so under all foreseeable circumstances. Briffault's Law applies here.

So, nope, sorry there's no magic formula of "mad seduction skillz" + "alpha awesomeness" that will allow you to live your life as if feminism was not the dominant paradigm. Go where it isn't, or play Russian roulette, or do the smart thing and opt out of having kids.

Guy with an alpha career asks about his chances on OkCupid. Hamster commenters talk about "ambition" and "intelligence" - nobody mentions his obvious money and status.

1 upvotes · 30 June 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

The problem isn't just that he's asian and short. It's that he offered to pay.

Financially successful men are attractive, but being unattractive has a snowball effect... having no success with women is, in itself, unattractive to women.

"Why Would That Matter? I'm The Girl"

1 upvotes · 19 June 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

You're seeing

- not mating due to death from war or hazardous conditions

and

- not mating due to female rejection

as two detached and unrelated phenomena.

They are not. They are different facets of the same thing, because men have no reason to do all the fighting and risk-taking unless it gets them mating privileges they would not otherwise have.

From an evolutionary standpoint, a genehost's failure to mate, and his death before producing children are one and the same thing.

Women don't take risks, because they stand a higher chance of dying from those risks than they do of being sexually rejected for not taking them.

Men take risks, because they stand a higher chance of being sexually rejected for not taking those risks than they do of dying. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/White_feather#World_War_I

"Why Would That Matter? I'm The Girl"

1 upvotes · 17 June 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

http://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/28ad92/why_would_that_matter_im_the_girl/ci9gy2z

Internationally, average hostility of men towards women is -0.02 and mean female hostility towards men is 0.10

1 upvotes · 1 June 2014 · /r/MensRights

What are the units? How was this measured?

@TRP: Do Fat Women Complain About Rape More, And What Does That Have To Do With TRP?

1 upvotes · 30 May 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Being physically unattractive is not necessarily going to deter a rapist.

You have no idea whether or not that is true, because you have no secret technique for counting how many rapes didn't happen.

Response to "what do you want" shit test women constantly throw out?

1 upvotes · 23 May 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

"a nice MLT: a mutton, lettuce and tomato sandwich, where the mutton is nice and lean and the tomato is ripe. They're so perky, I love that."

Don't let your distrust of women make you choose to not have children. That's an abject surrender of your most fundamental power.

1 upvotes · 17 May 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I've seen this argument before.

The problem is that it assumes evolution is a game played by people.

Evolution is not a game played by people. It is a game played by genes. People are the game pieces, not the players. Making copies of the genes that are riding you is of no benefit whatsoever to you, unless it gives you some kind of emotional satisfaction.

"LMAO look at Jay Z getting assaulted by a girl! He's such a bch"

1 upvotes · 14 May 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

It's certainly not realistic to expect uncultured people with overfed egos and poor impulse control to refrain from being violent.

However, this does not exempt public reactions to it from scrutiny.

And emerges from that examination is that when people see reprehensible behaviour on the part of those they wish to defend and excuse, they look for explanations, reasons, and causes. But when they see reprehensible behaviour on part of those they wish to blame and disempower, they do not look for reasons, they simply issue denunciations.

So it is that when whatever-her-name-was struck Jay-Z, everyone's asking "why". When Chris Brown struck Rhiannon, no one asked "why" (turns out she threw the first punch).

People don't like to change their narratives, or accept data that runs counter to them, especially when that narrative is used as a means to power.

Feminists know from experience that their most effective route to power is the narrative of woman-as-victim, because this generates sympathy and help (because human beings, both male and female, are more protective of women).

They must therefore protect that narrative by finding ways to dismiss any example to the contrary. Otherwise they lose some of the effectiveness of their means to achieve power and control.

Graduating with a Mrs degree

1 upvotes · 14 May 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Sigh.

Debating a feminist is like playing chess with a pigeon. They don't know the rules, they don't know how the pieces move, and they don't know what the win condition looks like.

If you expect a productive conversation, you can't just come and contradict me and leave it at that. I already know you disagree with me. I already know you think feminism is about equal rights.

When you debate, you have to state a position and then support it with something. Evidence. Rhetoric. Even an anecdote would be better than nothing.

C'mon, I shouldn't have to teach you this. I managed to learn how this game is played long before the age of forty.

"LMAO look at Jay Z getting assaulted by a girl! He's such a bch"

1 upvotes · 14 May 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Since you answered on behalf of feminists, I'll assume you identify as one.

So, the followup question is "Is this okay with you?".

Do you think this was appropriate, reasonable behaviour?

Another over-sexualized starlet who gained her fame for her body complains of being treated like an over-sexualized starlet

1 upvotes · 27 April 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Congrats on comparing the psyche of a dog to a human.

Martin Seligmann and I have that in common.

I like to think we have more self-control and decency.

The universe doesn't care what you like to think.

It sounds like you expect women to be clothed head to toe.

I expect people to accept the consequences of their actions. That's my definition of "self-control and decency".

We all know women aren't funny. But, where did females come up with this idea that sarcasm is funny?

1 upvotes · 26 April 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Sarcasm is a scalpel. However, anyone who self-describes as "sarcastic" typically attempts to wield it like a club.

War against boys. Are the ADHD drugs unsafe?

1 upvotes · 21 April 2014 · /r/MensRights

I think you might want to go back and read the context of what you are responding to.

War against boys. Are the ADHD drugs unsafe?

1 upvotes · 21 April 2014 · /r/MensRights

So, to summarize:

- /u/Imnotmrabut is an "uneducated conspiracy theorist" and a "random idiot".
- The medical community can be trusted absolutely to police itself in all respects, and must be immune to outside criticism.

Self Made Man (woman disguised as man to try and understand them better)

1 upvotes · 15 April 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's not easier being a woman.

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=HqKcvjKLHXg&feature=youtu.be&t=30s>

Why is TRP so anti-education?

1 upvotes · 13 April 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Lots of deleted. But how I see it is someone asking for a genteel discussion on dating mores and everyone criticising her appearance. I think she's got every right to be upset.

You are now responding to tone:

<http://www.paulgraham.com/disagree.html>

http://img1.wikia.nocookie.net/__cb20110117060037/halofanon/images/8/8b/Argument-pyramid.jpg

(This would be a lot easier if I didn't have to teach you the principles of debate as we go. Still, it's not your fault. It's the fault of a culture that has discarded certain varieties of pedagogy.)

What you should have seen is:

Her: Why won't men commit to me? Or even date me, rather than just trying to have sex and leave?

Me: From men's perspective, you're not actually a very good choice to commit to. Here's why {reasons}. You may have not realized this because you have a high value to the job market. But the mating market is different from the job market.

Her: Why are you just criticizing me instead of helping me?

Me: It's not my job to help you. But I am trying to tell you what you might do to help yourself {suggestions}.

Her: You said I wasn't pretty! You said critical things! You're a big meanie! {TantrumRageQuit}

Try reading it again, but this time, instead of focusing on the emotional reaction you have, or on trying to figure out whether I am a mean or a nice person, try reading the actual observations and suggestions about sex and mating that are contained in the literal meaning of my words.

Why is TRP so anti-education?

1 upvotes · 12 April 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yes, I am able to answer your questions. I have a keyboard here, and when I type, words appear on reddit.

Is there anything else you would like to know?

Perhaps I could give a short treatise on how not to be disingenuous and tediously literal? Or how to avoid reification? A lesson in the basic principles of modern discourse?

According to this article, this is how we're supposed to 'ask out' a woman.....Really? (Excerpt in 1st comment)

1 upvotes · 9 April 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

“You’re not paying for sex when you treat a woman on a date,” I answered. “See, diamonds are pursued, because their worth is clearly valued and treasured.

Except diamonds are much more common than other gemstones, they're just controlled by the De Beers monopoly that tricks suckers into paying vast amounts for something with no resale value at all.

Bit of a parable there.

Men Are Nothing More Than Clowns To The Modern Woman

1 upvotes · 6 April 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

As long as you don't want kids, there's nothing that we as men have lost.

Respect. Admiration. Love.

What is the Female Form of Funny?

1 upvotes · 1 April 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Pretty.

Slut-Stud double standard

1 upvotes · 31 March 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

For the same reason that a key which opens many locks is an excellent key, but a lock which is opened by many different keys is an inferior lock.

In order to be promiscuous, a man must be attractive, charming, courageous, etc. All a woman has to do is not be repellent, and be willing.

On reading comprehension and literal interpretations

1 upvotes · 25 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

The distinction between a troll and a debater lies in two principles:

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Principle_of_charity

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Principle_of_humanity

Basically, someone who assumes you are sane, tries to understand your argument in the most compelling interpretation he can, and then tries to refute it, is a debater.

Someone who assumes you are insane, or tries to find weak interpretations of your arguments that will be easy to refute, or reifies metaphors, is a troll.

Is cutting a woman out of your life after ljb the best Course of action?

1 upvotes · 20 March 2014 · /r/askTRP

If it's a hard LJBF, yes.

Distinguish between a hard LJBF and a soft LJBF, which is a shit test.

Is it worth reading TBP to learn the theory of how NOT to live my life?

1 upvotes · 20 March 2014 · /r/askTRP

Is it better to listen to the advice of a wise man, and follow it, or to listen to the advice of a fool, and do the opposite?

Everybody has an opinion

1 upvotes · 17 March 2014 · /r/AlreadyRed

Helping idiots is fun at first

Ignorant != idiot.

Everyone gets burned out repeating the same basic lessons to newbs. That's why we take it shifts. You get burned out, take a break. Let someone else dispense the pills for a while.

Why do you identify as Blue Pill?

1 upvotes · 17 March 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You mean the bit where I provided an alternative model for what was behind shifts in gender roles

I saw some handwaving.

But it explained nothing.

In the same way that the phrase "complex causal factors" would explain nothing at all about why Galileo didn't have a spaceship if women were building them all the time, if libraries were full of books on how to build a space ship, if local universities taught space space building, and so on.

But we ignore the major point, here.

You can argue all day about whether or not you like this or that description of reality. However, by doing so, you agree by your actions that TRP is descriptive in nature. You agree, in short, that we are discussing why Galileo doesn't have a spaceship, not whether or not he should.

In other words, you were wrong to suggest that TRP is trying to make you do anything at all.

Therapy And Women Who Don't Want Children

1 upvotes · 17 March 2014 · /r/AlreadyRed

Therapy is not a science, it's an art.

Whatever benefit comes from it derives not from established procedures and systematic understanding, but from the personality and experience of the therapist.

Most therapists are crap, some aren't.

What about women who don't want kids?

What about them?

Tracy Clark-Florey, author of the "Marry Smart" piece, just loves to be dominated in bed. Color me unsurprised.

1 upvotes · 13 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Can't we just save time and list the women who don't?

Should men bitch about being a man like women bitch about being woman and act more like women in general?

1 upvotes · 13 March 2014 · /r/MensRights

Men should bitch about unreadable textwalls.

"Logical fallacies are man-centric mumbo jumbo" - couldn't make this stuff up if I tried.

1 upvotes · 11 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Incorrect. Powertalk is used between sociopaths. At least one side of this exchange is clueless

Not quite. If powertalk were ONLY between manipulators, there would be no need for it to be plausibly deniable. The trick to powertalk is that it means one thing to other manipulators, and another thing to spergs.

It's a dog whistle.

Can we cut down on our daily broscience intake?

1 upvotes · 9 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I think one of the causes of this is that the label "report" causes some confusion over just when it's appropriate to push it.

People sort of feel like it's for "this violates reddit rules or the law" rather than "this violates subreddit rules, or just plain sucks".

Spergs, Cynics, and Manipulators: How PowerTalk impacts the lifecycle of cultures.

1 upvotes · 7 March 2014 · /r/AlreadyRed

Okay.

Male power fantasy, uh huh

1 upvotes · 6 March 2014 · /r/MensRights

You may be more familiar than I with recent research on what "everyone" finds inspiring. Perhaps you could point me to your source so that I can educate myself?

Also, I'm curious about how you would go about designing a game whose target audience was "everyone". Would there be some sort of planning committee? Would one just throw in a little bit of everything?

Male power fantasy, uh huh

1 upvotes · 5 March 2014 · /r/MensRights

So, do you want AAA games that are all things to all people? Or separate AAA games which target women as an audience?

Male power fantasy, uh huh

1 upvotes · 5 March 2014 · /r/MensRights

I got out of working for the military, and I can't talk about what I did/didn't do/saw/didn't see while I was there.

I'm asking why AAA gaming companies will blow millions on creating a city they'll never use again, in an oversaturated go big or go home AAA market, but find themselves paralyzed with fear when it comes to taking a much smaller risk with indie game designers who could bring them new customers? Many really good indie developers are better at stories and complex characters than world building advanced visuals and gameplay engines.

Ooooookay, that's a conversation we could have. But it isn't the one we are having.

The root of our conversation is here.

And this is where you entered.

We're talking about depictions of females in video games.

Again, do you object to the female characters you see in games? Or do you object because you don't see female characters like the ones you imagine you want to see?

Male power fantasy, uh huh

1 upvotes · 5 March 2014 · /r/MensRights

I read that part. I also read the part where you gave up rather than shipping a title. If you want to wave your credentials, wait until you've produced.

But we're getting sidetracked.

Tell me, are you complaining about something you don't see in the world, and wish you did?

Or about something you see in the world, and wish you didn't?

How can women be more Solipsist than men, when women are stereotyped as more empathetic of others than men? I am having difficulty imagining a Solipsist woman. They always seem thoughtful of the experience of others.

1 upvotes · 4 March 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Empathy and solipsism are not opposites. In fact, they are closely aligned.

Empathy is the capacity to actually feel what we believe others are feeling, merely because we believe they feel it.

Solipsism is imagining that all others are like us, and therefore our experience can be used to describe anyone else's experience.

Is it possible for either side to describe the red pill accurately in 300 words?

1 upvotes · 4 March 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The red pill is a society

Wrong.

for men based around a pedagogy of those experienced in their ideology teaching those newer to the movement about how to behave in society.

Wrong.

Wrong.

It's primarily focussed around men becoming sexually involved with women and the best way to achieve this quickly with a secondary focus on interpersonal relationships with other men in the workplace and social interactions.

Wrong.

Wrong.

It maintains that there are several instinctive reactions to learned behaviours, that when such behaviours are cultivated lead towards an ideal: a polygynous/monoandrous relationship.

Wrong.

It suggests that heterosexual women in society are seeking a male mate that they perceive to either have a high material wealth or else cultivate the "dark triad" behaviours.

Wrong.

Sort of correct, if you squint.

It suggests men seek sexual relationships with many women concurrently

Wrong.

and provides advice on how to convince these women to keep having sex with them, despite women's desire to settle down and have a family (this, in the red pill's view is the opposite of what men want)

Wrong.

It suggests there's a necessary competition between women and men whereby women seek monetary and human companionship for a family, whereas men seek to maintain a series of primarily sexual relationships with many. It suggests that there must always be a compromise between these two states in any relationship and rarely can either sex achieve their ideal.

Partially correct.

These relationships are governed by a sexual market that trades on a hierarchal position

Wrong.

trading on the youth and perceived physical attractiveness within a current society of women against the monetary gains of men, and their ability to be egoistic, lack empathy, exploit others, disregard morality, exhibit antisocial behavior, impulsivity, selfishness, callousness, and remorselessness (aka the "dark triad") and that rather than be negative qualities, there are actually positives in a woman's choice in a sexual mate.

Partially correct.

You're not doing very well here.

Perhaps because you quoted anarchists' description of what anarchism is, feminists' description of what feminism is, and then attempted to describe the red pill when you haven't taken it.

You tried hard to be neutral, but your ignorance and disdain leaked through anyway.

Male power fantasy, uh huh

1 upvotes · 2 March 2014 · /r/MensRights

You really haven't checked the US demographics lately, have you?

Listen, hon. You can dodge the major point, find something to quibble about, dance around, argue with me about who I have or haven't seen at work.

But at the end of the day, women who gripe about sexy chicks in video games are complaining about one of two things.

Either something that exists, and they wish it didn't, or something that doesn't exist, and they wish it did.

The answer to the first is "put on your big-girl panties and cope", and to the second, it's "get busy building/funding it".

I have little patience for people who want something and can't be troubled to get it for themselves, rather than just sitting with their beaks open to the sky, making a cheeping noise. If you're worried about "objectification" or some other such rot and nonsense, consider how much more of a detriment this attitude is to me taking you seriously than bouncy breast physics could ever be.

Fully functional adults become the change they wish to see in the world. Children whine to daddy.

Why put on an act when you could just be yourself?

1 upvotes · 28 February 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Well, you've probably grown up with a cultural tradition that uses the word "personality" to describe some of deep essential thingy that somehow is the immutable essence of who you are. The very word person-ality means "something which makes you a person", no?

But how do we measure this personality? By looking at behaviour over time. Which means that what personality really is, is the aggregate of past behaviour. You are what you do.

So, when someone says they can't or shouldn't "be someone they are not", what that really means is they won't do something because they haven't done it before. And when someone says you are "putting on an act", they mean you are doing something you haven't done before.

"Doing what comes naturally" really means taking the path of least resistance. Sometimes that leads where you would most like to be, but more often it does not. Many people have gone through life hating where they ended up, but stuck there in the mistaken belief that they had no alternative, because their circumstances where an inevitable result of some immutable core that made them who they were.

But people have no core. There's not all that much "inside" to people, and it's actually what's outside that matters anyway. It does not matter who we are inside... it is our actions that define us.

What we call personality is really nothing but a collection of habits.

So what does this mean for you?

Well, you think of yourself as not naturally inclined to be feminine. But all that really means is that you're in the habit of acting unfeminine. And this will affect your life in certain ways. If you were to act feminine instead, to change your habits, it would affect you life in other ways (how you see yourself, what you spend your time doing, how people treat you, etc).

Now, you say you're doing this to conserve energy. That strikes me as a singularly sad reason to avoid change.

Energy (by which we really mean motivation) is possessed in the greatest abundance not by those who hoard it, but by those who invest it in things that will yield dividends. It's the difference between stashing your money in a mattress, and creating a balanced stock portfolio.

So when you find yourself resisting change, I recommend asking yourself whether you dislike the destination, or whether you fear the journey.

Why put on an act when you could just be yourself?

1 upvotes · 28 February 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There is no "putting on an act" and no "being yourself". You are what you do.

Young Hamster: Have it all in your 20s.. You're young.. You'll totes find the ONE later...

1 upvotes · 27 February 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I'm from California, and what is "boxed wine"?

Woman loses 90lbs, females at work become hostile

1 upvotes · 23 February 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

"Using BMI to determine obesity is like using eye color to determine visual acuity." Wut? Seriously, wut? I respond that eye color in no way correlates to visual acuity, but BMI does correlate to obesity. Downvotes!

For the purpose of complete accuracy, I should probably point out that BMI actually is quite inaccurate for people with lots of muscle. BMI charts show boydbuilders as "obese".

But that is just a corner case which in no way invalidates BMI for its intended purpose, a quick as easy way of measuring obesity on a population level.

Individuals, however, would be better served by having their body fat percentage measured.

Feminism is a contemptible ideology that celebrates weakness, sentimentality, and feelings. It is intellectual poison for men.

1 upvotes · 11 February 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Non-broken women pay lip service to feminism like politicians say "God bless America"

This is a good point. We mustn't automatically assume that every woman who mouths a feminist sentiment is a neurotic bitch. Some are simply trying to avoid being socially lynched.

The Huffington Post Accidentally Red Pill. Please Check Outside Your Window for Pigs on the Wing.

1 upvotes · 7 February 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Yes, damn those human beings for being complicated and nuanced!

If only each person would just decide to be good or bad and then stick to that. It would make things so much easier.

This comic makes me sick.

1 upvotes · 7 February 2014 · /r/MensRights

Sounds about like most leftoids. Sincere in the belief that "the topic" is whatever they want to talk about, and whatever anyone else wants to talk about is "derailing".

Anybody who gives you a belief system is your enemy

1 upvotes · 31 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I said "define", not "give an example of".

Unless you can name some distinguishing set of characteristics that a "belief system" has, then it really just ends up meaning "set of ideas I don't agree with".

Christians would describe evolution and atheism as belief systems. TRPers would describe feminism as a belief system. Conservatives would use the term to describe liberalism and liberals, well, you get the idea. The heliocentric model of the solar system would be a belief system to some people. So would Newtonian physics.

Anybody who gives you a belief system is your enemy

1 upvotes · 31 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Before this statement becomes useful, or can be analyzed for truth, you need to define the phrase "belief system".

"As a 'Red-Piller' I am sorry." or why we need to keep the language strong

1 upvotes · 28 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I get what you're on about, but if we think about it carefully, how can there be turncoats without a movement?

We don't have collective goals, here. We're not trying to change society. We're here trying to help and support each other in our individual goals.

Now, I agree with the ban. But the guy isn't a turncoat... he's a saboteur. He's not messing with our non-existent agenda. He's messing with our mutual learning environment.

Hostility to Submissive women. Is it acceptable?

1 upvotes · 22 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Look, I'm not really interested into getting into a pissing match with you because it's not going to get anywhere and it's just exhausting.

So, beating real debaters instead of strawmen is hard work, and you'd like to go lie down and have a nap instead? Fair enough.

The "facts" you use to explain your strategy are highly objectionable

Facts don't actually care if they are objectionable or not.

and mostly false

You can't even get your opponents' position right. Why should I trust you about what's true and what isn't?

Red Pill: The Elder Scrolls

1 upvotes · 20 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Meh.

Quick Responses to the Bestof/Cringe Criticism

1 upvotes · 19 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Good point.

But be aware that there is a different between criticism and dissent. A critic tells you how bad you are. A dissenter tells you how wrong you are.

White guys getting raped in prison = social justice

1 upvotes · 12 January 2014 · /r/MensRights

Because making people feel uncomfortable, powerless, and threatened is what social justice is all about.

Female agency and why women don't flee

1 upvotes · 10 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I thought this was unfair and unempathetic.

TRP are bastards, really.

...

TRP are bastards, really.

I thought this was unfair and unempathetic.

??

These went up in my school... imagine the backlash if genders were swapped...

1 upvotes · 9 January 2014 · /r/MensRights

He who is not with us is against us.

TIL: Cesar Millan's wife (The Dog Whisperer) filed for divorce in March 2010. She ended up receiving a single payment of $400,000, monthly spousal payment of $23,000 (that's $276,000 a year), AND $120,000 a year in monthly child support. Cesar Millan then attempted suicide.

1 upvotes · 9 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Man what a wall of text, you obviously took that very personally... be cordial son, I am not your enemy.

Bro, you can shit test me if you want, but I'll just agree and amplify. Besides, you'd look kinda silly in a skirt. So let's skip the talking about each other's feeeelings and skip right to the facts part, eh?

I'm not quite sure you fully understand me. Or the sidebar.

You see, you ask:

What's the point of TRP if not to help change this absurd feminazi/liberal brainwashing being DONE to the West?

Welcome to TRP. We are a subreddit about personal survival and sexual strategy in a culture increasingly lacking a positive identity for men.

A friend of mine recently pointed out that crusades consist of crusaders, while civilizations consist of civilians. YYou cannot save civilization by persuading everyone to join a crusade.

You denounce Western CULT-ure

I do not. Western culture contains some of the greatest things humanity has come up with, and it is just plain superior to others. Western society, however, the inheritor of that culture, is a different thing.

The ship may be the best design ever, and soundly built, but the tiller has been given to madmen, and they are steering us towards the rocks. Why would I keep rowing? That will just make things worse faster.

Yet another food thread...

1 upvotes · 7 January 2014 · /r/RedPillWomen

Mostly people don't talk about this phenomenon unless they're on a pissed-off-about-smug-vegan-assholes rant.

But sources do exist, I'd just have to find them again. Might take some doing.

If you think about what a combine harvester is, it's pretty much a giant cuisinart that you drive over acres and acres of land. What lives in all that land (especially when there are crops growing on it)? Well, lots of small furry things.

And that's not even going into indirect ways that farming kills animals, such as habitat destruction and carbon emissions.

If you want to eliminate daily activities which cause suffering, fine. (I think it's a bit silly, but that's masculine vs. feminine values for ya.) But if you do, then have a look at which of your activities actually cause the most of suffering, instead of just assuming that the most obvious ones do.

It's not "some men" that abuse and rape. It's "some men" that don't.

1 upvotes · 7 January 2014 · /r/MensRights

if a child is nipped by a dog, no one blames them for fearing dogs

Are you a child?

Yet another food thread...

1 upvotes · 7 January 2014 · /r/RedPillWomen

So don't buy factory farmed meat. I do this for health reasons, and taste reasons, not moral ones (if it's tasty, stab it!).

16 Things Your Boyfriend Should Be Telling You (or 16 ways to make your girlfriend resent you)

1 upvotes · 7 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I think I just died a little inside.

I used to blame women for not "appreciating" actions like these. Now I see how full-on fucking nauseating they are.

Positive pregnancy tests for sale - so you can trick your man into marrying you! And then fake a miscarriage.

1 upvotes · 6 January 2014 · /r/MensRights

It would make paternity fraud only a tort, when every other variety of fraud is a crime.

Do gendered derogatory terms exist? What are some examples? Are derogatory terms ever damaging to use? When?

1 upvotes · 6 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

But you asked:

Are derogatory terms ever damaging to use?

They always are. That's the definition of a derogatory term. If it's not damaging, it's not derogatory.

Do gendered derogatory terms exist? What are some examples? Are derogatory terms ever damaging to use? When?

1 upvotes · 5 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Of course they do. Slut, bitch, whore and cunt for women, dick, bastard, asshole, dudebro, douchebro, douchebag for men.

But what do mean, "are they damaging"?

Of course they're damaging. They're slurs. Slurs are weapons. The whole point of a weapon is to inflict damage, harm, or pain.

See, I know what you're trying to ask, but using the term "damaging" as a way of saying "should not be used", you've revealed of the blue pill premises which is so fundamental to the worldview that most people are not aware that it's not an obvious truth, or indeed a truth at all.

Slurs can hurt feelings. But sometimes feelings need hurtin'. Slurs can damage reputations. But sometimes reputations need damagin'.

This is why I don't look down on blue pillers: Guy gently breaks up with his unstable short-term girlfriend after she WRECKS New Year's Eve. Gets called everything from "selfish" to "sociopath" in the comments.

1 upvotes · 3 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

This is why I don't look down on blue pillers

Their problem is that they confuse decency and weakness.

They refuse to act properly and effectively, not because they are too cowardly to do otherwise, but because they have been taught, and believe, that such actions are immoral.

The basics explained, and our direction for 2014.

1 upvotes · 2 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

The RP community is small, and we seem to only want to divide ourselves further over which sexual strategy is the "best." Personally, I think this is fucking dumb. The career players call the guys who want a girlfriend "still beta," while the MGTOW call the players "slaves to pussy." Its all bullshit and it needs to stop. Your strategy is your own to decide, and that doesn't make it objectively better than any of the others. Here in TRP our community is built of ALL THREE sexual strategies. If you don't want to support all three then head on over to the Roosh, MMSL, or MGTOW forums so you can join in on the masturbatory nonsense.

Well put.

Here's how I put it. Anyone who helps make a better world for men is okay by me. Whether it's an entirely selfish PUA who is accidentally helping other men by taking the pussy off the pedestal, or a somewhat whiny MRA who's still doing good work by moving the Overton Window. Whether it's /u/girlwriteswhat working to promote understanding and acceptance of the male point of view, or Roissey of CH pointing out that the male viewpoint will never be embraced by society, and men need to embrace social nihilism and learn to game the system... it's all fighting the good fight, and it's all useful stuff.

Also, wanted to add something to your list:

Plate stacking

Think of this as an intermediate position between Plate Spinning and Girlfriend Game.

Women like relationships, but often don't realize that "relationship = male monogamy" is entirely a cultural artefact of the modern west. Only men are genetically hardwired to care about keeping partners sexually exclusive.

Male infidelity is categorically, unequivocally less bad than female infidelity, because women's actions have declared it to be so. Women desire men more when they have access to and are desired by other women. This means a cheating man remains attractive, or even becomes more so, while a cheating women loses attractiveness.

This means that with sufficient frame control and vagina tingles, it's possible to be in one or several "soft relationships", where you have a lot more emotional intimacy and commitment than you do with spun plates, but with the understanding that who you fuck is your own choice, but if she wants to stay with you, she'd better not sleep around. This may sound very difficult, but once women find themselves in that situation, jealousy quickly becomes a thing of the past, so long as she gets enough of your time and attention for her emotional needs.

I think that in many cultures, especially for upper-class men, even marriage was plate stacking, because men were expected to sometimes have something on the side, and this was perfectly okay so as he kept it discrete enough not to publicly shame his wife. In other cultures, marriage was/is Plate Stacking, because men have multiple wives.

One of the benefits of Plate Stacking, from the viewpoint of women, is that it protects them from having to form a relationship with an undesirable man "because all the good ones are taken". The guiding principle of Plate Stacking is that women would rather have some of an alpha than all of a beta.

I like doing it because it allows me to have emotional connections to women (which I like) without missing out on variety (which I also like).

Measure your success not by how many people agree with you, but by how many people talk about you.

1 upvotes · 1 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Let us remember that the problem with Cosmo is not what it gives advice to women about, but that the quality of that advice is so horribly bad.

“Rape Culture” Was Manufactured To Wage An Unjust War Against Men

1 upvotes · 27 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Ad hominem isn't just "anything you say about the originator of an argument".

It has to be an irrelevant observation about the nature of the speaker. Pointing out a vested interest on the part of the speaker is not ad hominem, because it's not irrelevant.

Someone's sexual attractiveness is totally relevant to their attitude about sex and the desirability thereof, and the prevalence of undesired sex, as is the sexual history.

By the same token, redpillers sexual attractiveness and ability to seduce is totally relevant to the validity of our red pill views. We don't have to be able to walk into a nunnery drunk and wearing nothing but a cock ring and have 34 bastard children 9 months later, but we do have to be more attractive and sexually successful than before we took the red pill, because otherwise, the nostrums we are peddling don't work.

BDSM is “deviant” sex. Lesbian sex isn’t “deviant” these days, cheating isn’t “deviant”, divorce isn’t “deviant” to feminists...but put a man in charge and all of a sudden you’re a deviant.

1 upvotes · 27 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Femsub is the mainstream. Always has been. Always will be. Laugh about it, cry about it, your choice, but ya can't change it.

Why would women who have good jobs care about a man's ability to provide? Can't all the issues with women outlined in this subreddit be circumvented by dating women who are financial stable?

1 upvotes · 23 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

http://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/1tjyai/the_essential_difference_between_blue_and_red/

Is TBP a frustration of gender stereotypes and TRP a celebration of gender stereotypes? I'm gonna go with "yes."

1 upvotes · 18 December 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Who's making that claim? I said financial independence, not financial invulnerability. Nobody has financial invulnerability, not housewives or house husbands and not career women or career men. But people have differing levels of financial independence, and I would argue that having a paying job makes one more financially independent than someone who doesn't have a paying job.

I would not stipulate that. I would ask "Are you sure?", and "financial independence of whom?"

That's not what I'm saying at all. You made the claim that women look at being a housewife and go, "ugh, I'm not gonna be some 50s throwback! Give me a respectful job!"

No, I didn't.

Read carefully what I wrote:

if you ask the average woman "Would she rather be a housewife or have a career?"... she'll hear "Would you rather be a throwback to the universally-reviled fifties, or be respected?". And she will answer "A career."

But if you ask her whether she would rather have a job that is highly-paid and respected, or one that allows her a comfortable living, a comfortable environment, and lots of time with her children, you'll get a very different answer.

The whole point is not what makes women stay away from the home and pursue the workplace... the point is that the difference between the responses to these two questions captures the difference between what women say and what they do.

They go and get degrees when they are young, and delay marriage, and express satisfaction with the idea of being a career woman, because they have been told this is what they should say and do, or they are bad.

But then they embrace career-lite, the mommy track, the years-delayed return after maternity leave, the part-time job, and the bullshit degree, because these are the choices that end up working for them.

The first reflects how women want to appear to others, and often how they want to think of themselves, but the second reflects the actual desires of most of them. How do I know this? How do I know which is window dressing and which is sincere? I know because one is words, the other actions. One is explicitly chosen starting points during naive youth, the other is the emergent result of choices made along life's path.

"Redpillians" have zero interest in forcing women to do anything. We don't need to, or even want to. Women will behave, on their own, according to their natures. What WE want is a culture which allows us, without retaliation, to notice this, comment on it, discuss it, and formulate OUR life plans, as men, with our real-world observations in mind.

Is TBP a frustration of gender stereotypes and TRP a celebration of gender stereotypes? I'm gonna go with "yes."

1 upvotes · 17 December 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

She may be hearing, "would you rather be financially dependent on your husband, or financially independent?"

Oh, sure, of course.

But the choice isn't actually between "financially dependent on a husband" and "financially independent". It's between "financially dependent on a husband" and "financially dependent on an employer". Having a job or a career isn't some sort of magic touchstone of economic invulnerability. People get laid off all the time, and entire industries and professions have been known to go away.

In fact, if you view it solely through an economic lens, "housewife" can be regarded as a job you can't be laid off from, and it requires complex legalities to even fire you. (Although this does not, of course, protect you from your "employer" going bust.)

In reality, once society advances past the level of "let's see what happens when we bang these rocks together", we're all dependent on each other to some degree. The question is "to what degree, and is that desirable?"

And that varies from job to job, and from husband to husband. Crude generalizations like "homemaker==helpless dependent, job==safety and security) are just too vague and inaccurate to capture a useful picture of the situations we're looking at.

What IS misogyny, and what causes people to be misogynistic?

1 upvotes · 6 December 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Edited to remove evidence of my frustration at the same tired accusations.

What is an "alpha"?

1 upvotes · 5 December 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Oh, goodness. Different people are inconsistent with each other. It's almost as if they weren't a hivemind, or something crazy like that.

What is an "alpha"?

1 upvotes · 5 December 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There have been repeated posts in TRP explaining how alpha is a behaviour pattern, not a person. These would answer your question if you read them.

What's the deal with Red Pill's apparent tendency to, er, embellish their stories?

1 upvotes · 5 December 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"You're all a bunch of liars. Why do you lie so much?"

...

"But I'm not going to bother to post links to any lies. Just take my word for it."

...

"My evidence that these are all lies is that I personally find them implausible."

Find a specific, confirmed lie, and we can talk about that liar's motivation.

But saying "what's with this forest", when you have yet to identify a single tree is dishonest.

What can I change or remove to fix it?

Stop mistaking your feelings for evidence. Stop making accusations you have no grounds for.

I really do want to understand the trend, and think it's maybe just something about the culture I don't totally get and I would like to!

Yes, a strange part of our weird spooky "Red Pill culture" is that we try to base our decisions on evidence, not feels. You have no evidence for your accusation. You have only feels.

What's the deal with Red Pill's apparent tendency to, er, embellish their stories?

1 upvotes · 4 December 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Try to frame your questions with neutral language. "How do you think dogs should be trained?" is a much better way to start a conversation than "Why do you kick puppies?". Give your views in the comments--don't start the thread out by attacking people. Posts that don't strictly adhere to these guidelines will be removed, and could result in the user being banned.

Reported.

What IS misogyny, and what causes people to be misogynistic?

1 upvotes · 3 December 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

First of all, it's important to notice that humans, being language using animals, create words for concepts we consider important or common, and use descriptions instead for concepts we consider unimportant or rare.

So the word "misogynist" is in the dictionary (my Firefox spellcheck dictionary), and is used for someone who hates women.

What is the word for someone who hates men? (There is one in use, but it's not in my spellcheck dictionary.)

What is the word for someone who hates left-handed people? (There isn't one.)

What is the word for someone who hates blue-eyed people? (There isn't one.)

Therefore, by the very fact that we construct certain words and not others, we create a sociopolitical statement about which types of hate are important, and which are not.

That's why I tend to disregard people who use the word "misogyny" in an unironic, non-critical context. By using the terminology "X is a misogynist" instead of the description "X hates women", they are saying that hatred of women is a common and important phenomenon, and implying that it has a unified cause.

So, in conclusion, if you were to ask me "Are there people who hate women? If so, what causes them to hate women?", the answers would be "Sure", and "How should I know? I don't know each person's life history."

But when you ask me "Does misogyny exist? What causes it?", you're implicitly asking to me accept that it's a special phenomenon that needs its own word. And because TBP people use that word to carry a lot of semantic baggage, Bob alone knows what you are asking me to agree to.

For example, if a christian asks you "Did Jesus exist?" you might have one answer. If he asks "Did the Messiah come to deliver humanity from sin?", you might have quite another. But he, the christian, wouldn't necessarily understand that these are two different questions, because to him the words "Jesus" and "Messiah" are interchangeable.

He doesn't realize that "Messiah" is a compound proposition. It refers not only to person, possibly historical and possibly fictional, but to the additional notion that this person was a divine being who was his own son, and sacrificed himself to another version of himself, which is kinda the same, in order to buy everyone an exception from rules he made in the first place.

Even if he were to ask "Was Jesus the Messiah?", he would be asking us to accept that there was some messiah, and that messiahs were a thing, instead of some shit people made up, and that they were important enough to have their own word.

Similarly, "misogyny", through the process of being talked about so much by SJWs, has become a compound proposition. Of course its original meaning of "hating women" still has validity. For anything that exists, there's someone who hates it. Women, men, cats, fire hydrants, ground squirrels, the word "creamy", America, the colour blue, pumpkin pie, Indonesian people, magnetism.

But there's other parts to that word, now.

I don't agree that people who hate women are necessarily evil, any more than people who hate cats are necessarily evil.

I don't agree that anyone who criticizes a woman hates women.

I don't agree that anyone who criticizes women as a group hates women.

I don't agree that anyone who makes a woman feel bad hates women.

I don't agree that anyone who is angry at a woman, or at women, hates women.

I don't agree that anyone who does something that benefits other groups, at the expense of women, hates women.

I don't agree that anyone who says men and women are significantly different, and have different capabilities and goals, hates women.

woman having uncommitted sex with me = good women having uncommitted sex in general = bad

1 upvotes · 3 December 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Satisfactory.

Of all the important issues and causes that have gone too far Jezebel calls for women to "take a stand against bacon mania"

1 upvotes · 26 November 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

She sure tosses terms like "frat boy" and "brotellectual" around pretty freely. I imagine she simultaneously thinks she is tolerant and enlightened.

(Because she only thinks about those concepts in relation to certain groups, and not others.)

New Warning: Morning-After Pill Doesn't Work for Women Over 176 Pounds | Mother Jones

1 upvotes · 26 November 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Could be. Have to know what the standard deviation is.

(X-Post from /r/theredpill) If I were to do a survey to confirm or deny some of the claims central to TRP, what questions would the survey need to answer?

1 upvotes · 25 November 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

You can't do it with a survey. Self-report data is not scientific, because

- It is full of lies, and you can't detect which bits are the lies. Yes, I know there are psychometric tricks to detect untruthful self-reports. I've studied them. They don't work.
- The questions are invented by individuals, who inevitably have bias and expectation.

- The subjects don't know the truth about themselves in order to report it.

Some hilarious straw-man arguments about TRP

1 upvotes · 21 November 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Eventually you have to stop beating strawmen, if only because they have disintegrated into chaff.

What do you believe about women having careers?

1 upvotes · 19 November 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

but it is bad that you assume we are 'hardwired' to do certain things.

that is absurd and another idea you have probably formed from seeing stereotypical 'chick-flicks' what you are basing your opinions on is completely cultural

Ever since you were a child everything you have seen

If only there were some kind of unconscious irony award I could give you. Talk about assumptions.

Oh, I understand why you assume that people you talk to are pulling factoids out of their ass. It's because you're twenty years old, and most of the people you're used to talking to are twentyish also. Existing in an evidence-free, experience-free bubble makes it a safe assumption that everyone else is also either repeating what they've been told, or just making shit up.

But if the differences between men and women are solely cultural, riddle me this:

- Why do boy monkeys want to play with trucks, and girl monkeys want to play with dolls? Monkey culture?
- Where are the cultures that just happened to develop differently? Where women do all the work, and men are responsible for child rearing? If culture is an accident, why do some accidents happen more than others?
- Where did culture come from, anyway?

There seem to be a mismatch between the alpha/beta and Type A/B personality types

1 upvotes · 15 November 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Alpha and beta aren't people.

They are behaviour patterns, and people have to ability to act according to either one at any given time.

Alpha behaviour is for signaling dominance, or capitalizing on a socially dominant position.

Beta behaviour is for appeasing dominant rivals so they don't curbstomp you.

The A/B system refers not behaviours at all, but personalities, and it does so in the context of heart disease risk.

The two are unrelated.

What do you believe about women having careers?

1 upvotes · 10 November 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

But there is a problem when someone is uncomfortable and disgusted by the idea of someone having a career simply because they are a woman - I refer to your use of 'repelled.'

To repel literally means to push away. "Career women" repel men as sexual and romantic partners.

Why?

Because their chosen life-path advertises a lack of what men find most attractive: feminine behaviour. Emotional warmth, openness, nurturing, vulnerability, empathy, social skills, etc. Men do not typically want partners who are like us: tough, ambitious, competitive, independent, brave, etc. Why would we? We have those things already. We want someone who has what we don't.

This reaction to a career woman is dangerous - it is exactly the reason why people don't take female politicians/lawyers/doctors seriously.

What's so dangerous about that? Respect is earned.

Why should it be okay for men to prioritize their career above their relationship, but not women? What is it you find insidious about a relationship/family where the wife/mother prioritizes their career and the husband/father prioritizes running the household?

Not insidious. Unworkable.

Men and women just don't go for that. It's not the way we're hardwired. And when people come convinced that the difference between masculinity and femininity is "cultural", and try to do that, relationships become lukewarm and either fizzle out or limp along as joyless routines.

Studies do in fact show that couples report more frequent and more satisfying sex when tasks are divided along sex role lines. They also have lower average scores on a Beck Depression Inventory, report a lesser frequency of arguments, and have lower divorce rates.

What I'm going for here is that sex roles are hardwired in, and women need to know this when they are making life choices, so that they don't end up believing that spending their best childbearing years getting a master's degree in art history, or becoming a 70 hour a week associate at a law firm, is going to have no impact on their future family life (or lack thereof), and their overall happiness.

Many women think, throughout their 20s, that a husband and children will magically happen on their 30th birthday or thereabouts, when they "meet the right person", and so they don't put any effort into being the right person.

Truth is, whatever you want, you gotta work on, and everything comes at the sacrifice of something else you could have done.

What do you believe about women having careers?

1 upvotes · 10 November 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Depends what you mean by "with" a career. There's a difference between having one, and prioritizing it above relationships.

When you say "threatened", you're editorializing. Men aren't "threatened" by career women any more than they are by fat women... they are simply repelled by both. Using the word threatened is an attempt to shame men into changing their desires. You're calling men insecure for liking what they like, as opposed to what someone else wants them to like.

If men were threatened by careers, having one would be enough to drive us off. But what drives us off isn't being a woman with a career. It's being a career woman. People who prioritize their careers highly make excellent husbands, but not very good wives.

TRP hits 20,000 subscribers and to celebrate SRS presents r/ShitTRPSays

1 upvotes · 4 November 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Haters gonna hate.

A Little Light Rant Against Oman's Dowry System

1 upvotes · 4 November 2013 · /r/MensRights

Eeeeeenteresting.

Somewhat echoes the sentiment I have about the chadour/burkqha. It may be an instrument of female oppression, but it is an instrument for male oppression.

If you cut off young men from all social access to women, they have no choice but go through the arranged-marriage process in order to satisfy their sexual needs. And that process can be used to extract labour, compliance, and money.

It's not about "controlling the women because... um... patriarchy or something". It's about "controlling young men because it's profitable".

Criminalizing the male gaze

1 upvotes · 31 October 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I know a lot of RP dudes are middle class and white and that's cool but as a black dude who came from low class poverty to somewhat middle class shit like this really makes my blood boil.

I do not think it is coincidental that this is a picture of a black man. When I (white, rich, etc) look at women like this, they usually smile.

Someone's racism is showing.

TRP is Ironic.

1 upvotes · 29 October 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Not just harder to control. More expensive.

Dogs can be herded with barked orders, cats must be herded with a can of tuna.

People in power don't want you to be a sociopath like them, because that will cost them more tuna.

22 Things That Men Should Be Required To Do

1 upvotes · 29 October 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Required by whom?

25 Ways To Communicate Respect To Your Man... Without Ever Saying A Word

1 upvotes · 25 October 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Well, outside of "the scene", BDSM isn't something you're "involved in". It's something you just do, mostly because it's exciting, pleasurable, or fun. If it's any one of those things for you, I recommend it. Otherwise no.

25 Ways To Communicate Respect To Your Man... Without Ever Saying A Word

1 upvotes · 25 October 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Don't mistake "the scene" for all of BDSM. "The scene" and "the community" are to BDSM what the gay party circuit was to homosexuality. And yeah, online is definitely the worst.

TRP: One Question, One Answer: Extrapolate.

1 upvotes · 14 October 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

In theory yes, but we are talking about very differences in behaviour and frame that are so subtle, it's hard to formally lay out every argument. Pickup advice usually takes the form: "I have X background, I tried Y behaviour, I had Z result."

Well, yes and no. There's a difference between advice and a field report. A field report is raw data, "I am X, I did Y, Z happened". Advice is instructions, presumably a processed form of a lot of raw data, "Do Y, and you will get Z result".

You notice the absence of X in that second statement. If X's advice only works for X, or those who are X, it is useless to anyone who is not X. If advice has only been tested by Xs, then there is no evidence whatsoever that it will work for anyone who isn't X.

This is complicated by the fact that people aren't just X. They are X, Q, W, R, and P. And if they do Y, and get Z, they often have no idea at all if that's because they are X, or because they are Q, or because they are both W and P, or if anyone at all who does Y gets Z.

Now, of course, none of this is really relevant to OP, because he isn't saying "I am X, I did Y, I got Z". He's saying "I get Z pretty easily without much Y, you guys should listen to me because I am X."

I mean, let's look at his specific "advice":

Be confident, and don't respond to, nor accept manipulation from women.

Enjoy your life. That's it.

That's got to be the stupidest advice ever. Not because it's wrong, but because it's vague and useless. In the words of Samuel Johnson, "Sir, your work is both brilliant and original. Alas, the parts which are brilliant are not original, and the parts which are original are not brilliant."

This guy pretty much came along and AMOGed the whole subreddit, and it fills me with shame to acknowledge how many of my peers went for it.

But it does support two things I frequently say about the alpha/beta dichotomy.

- Acting alpha, and/or having game, is HARD. One failure of will, one slip, one bad day, and any of us can sink into old, bad habits.
- Alpha and beta are not people. They are two pieces of software that run on the human brain. Every one of us has the code for both.

And the beta software is for sucking up to ascendant rivals so they share the wealth, or at least don't stomp your face in. But that's the problem. It's so easy to run the beta program if we are afraid, or if we think someone can give us a hand up, that we run it inappropriately.

So let's assume OP really is the awesome guy he claims to be. And that he genuinely wants to help out. Well, even if those two things were true, he'd still be hurting the people he was trying to help. Because treating him like a sage or guru is running the beta program. And the more we run it, the easier it is to run. The further we become from the self-starting, iron-willed, fearless leaders we are in our best moments, and strive to be all the time.

No one can spoon feed you initiative and self-reliance. These things, by their very nature, cannot be spoon-fed.

[Example] Former hot chick describes life pre-wall and post-wall

1 upvotes · 10 October 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

He's Irish. Every bodily secretion is full of highly flammable alcohol.

Blue Pillars, What is a strong woman?

1 upvotes · 8 October 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No, the reason that I don't believe women should be applauded for breaking sex roles is that I don't believe a woman who "breaks sex roles" is any better or more useful than a woman who "follows sex roles".

Many people come to conversations like this carrying the implicit and unexamined assumption that sex roles are a bad thing, and therefore fighting them is inherently praiseworthy.

But that assumption needs to be examined, before we can base any other conclusions on it. Let us remember that feminist's original objection to housewifery was not that it was wasteful, but that it made women unhappy (and let us remember that feminism's voices were largely drawn from the small number of women who actually objected to the role).

In fact, when we look at human behaviour as not just random cultural Brownian motion, but the result of the way our brains are put together, we realize that what feminists call "sexual objectification" might actually be an unambiguous statement, on the part of evolution, about what's important. In other words, the reason my penis hardens at the sight of a woman's flaring hips, and not her bachelor's degree in comparative literature, is that I am adapted to the fact that a woman is more valuable as a sexual object than an office worker.

Now, it's easy to dismiss that last statement as "demeaning", but let's think about what it actually means. It means that I have value as a worker, and a woman has value as a worker, and unless we're doing physical labour or STEM, our values as a worker are about equal. But if, that being the case, a woman is still more valuable as a sexual object... that means she has inherent value that I do not, just for being a woman.

And this is more or less the case. Biologically speaking, eggs are expensive, sperm is cheap. This is why we are all instinctively so protective of women. Because a tribe of one hundred women and five men will be fine in a generation if it can feed itself, but a tribe of a hundred men and five women is doomed unless it can find more. It's wired into every one of us, male and female, that imperative to protect and care for the womenfolk.

It's these kinds of understandings that have to inform any useful discussion of what one might do about sex roles.

I'm sorry but women are inherently evil. Is even The Red Pill going to white knight for them?

1 upvotes · 3 October 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

The word "evil" just means "behaviour I don't like".

So when you say "women are evil" you are just saying "women don't behave the way I like".

I suggest you learn how to get what you want from women.

I don't get it - why are there such hostile reactions to the MRM?

1 upvotes · 30 September 2013 · /r/MensRights

Haters generate their own ammunition.

The goal of a hater is make you stop doing what's good for you... in this case, telling the truth.

Appalling article published in the Daily Mail's Sunday supplement, You magazine, whose target audience is female [NSFW]

1 upvotes · 24 September 2013 · /r/MensRights

Slut shaming:

Among feminists' favorite complaints.

Among feminists' favorite pastimes.

The Unofficial Goldman Sachs Guide To Being A Man

1 upvotes · 12 September 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

These "lists of masculine qualities" are not meant to be lists of literal instructions for masculinity any more than advice from women is meant to be a list of literal instructions on how to successfully court them.

That might be a better way to read them, but what they are "meant to be" is a list of what the author does, presented as a list of what's manly.

The way I like to cut through the bullshit on these is ask which of these items apply to a viking. If your list of what you need to be manly would exclude vikings, or mongol horse archers, or roman legionaries, your list fails.

Vikings don't "twitter". Mongols don't wear suits.

The Unofficial Goldman Sachs Guide To Being A Man

1 upvotes · 11 September 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

All lists of manly things to do seem to quickly degenerate to {bunch of stuff that has nothing to do with manhood at all, but the author likes them}.

Avoid Women With Horses

1 upvotes · 11 September 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Horse women, cat ladies, dog guys, they're all crazy.

The problem isn't having a pet. It's that there is a certain line between seeing an animal as a useful or entertaining animal, and starting to think it's a person.

Women cross this line with horses and cats. Men cross it with dogs. And they all need to have their animals taken away and replaced with antipsychotic medication.

Because, while animals do indeed have feelings like people, and are indeed capable of feeling real affection like people, you cannot have a complete relationship with an animal, in the way you do with a spouse, a friend, or your children.

Why not?

Because animals are really, really, really stupid. They cannot communicate. They cannot learn what you are trying to tell them. They cannot figure out what you want from them. So they cannot give in a relationship. They can only take. And this means that your only repayment is them being themselves. If that's not enough, and when they get old and sick, it won't be, then what you have is a parasite.

In fact, what you have is a parasite that your crazy cat lady, or crazy dog guy, is too crazy to get rid of. They think of it as an old friend. But being familiar is not the same as being a friend. Friendship is give and take. Pets lack the capacity to give, because they cannot understand what you want.

Why I unsubbed from /r/MensRights, and you should too.

1 upvotes · 8 September 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Yes, some MRAs are like this. Others are very like us.

Are you unable to tolerate exposure to contrary views? If our masculinity is so fragile it cannot tolerate even hearing from betas, it deserves to die.

Inmate forced to have non-consensual sex '50 to 100 times

1 upvotes · 26 August 2013 · /r/MensRights

Oh, they have no problem calling it "rape" when the perpetrator is also male.

1-10 Scale: An Analysis

1 upvotes · 24 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Interesting, but not important. The 1-10 scale isn't, has never been, and could never be, an objective scale for sorting female attractiveness. It's just a quick way of describing how attractive a woman is to someone who can't see her.

So it doesn't matter if this woman is a 5 or a 7. Personally, she doesn't do that much for me, so I'd call her a 5.5. Others might note her lack of any obvious flaws, and call her a 7. Neither is "wrong". Because 5.5 or 7 is just our shorthand way of describing how attractive we found this girl.

Have I become too intimidating?

1 upvotes · 19 August 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

I realize now that my choice of vocabulary was poor, but thank you for the critique.

You're welcome.

To know how to be attractive to men, it helps to understand them. You just spent spent years in one of the last remaining bastions of masculinity, so with a little thought, I'm sure you can turn some of that to your advantage.

Just remember that men don't want someone like them. We want someone who has things we lack. A good rule of thumb is that most things men are not, most things men are not supposed to be... if it's at all useful, and we don't have it, be it, and we'll like it. If we do it, and doing the opposite wouldn't be jerky, suicidal, or anti-social, consider just that.

Women need to realize the Imaginary Disney Boyfriend is impossible

1 upvotes · 19 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Lee Holloway's sexual tastes.

This is for you young guys on TRP. Your college major should be based on what is going to give you job security, not on what feels good or seems interesting. If your major isn't based on a sober appraisal of supply and demand in the job market, get a new major. Now.

1 upvotes · 16 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I've heard this one. It's apt, and there's some truth there, but this really becomes a semantic argument.

Men and women experience totally different things which they both describe by the term "love". But whatever it is women experience, you ain't gettin' none if they see you as a failure.

What is your opinion on saving sex for marriage? Just curious.

1 upvotes · 11 August 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Wait, you want to marry a man who's not crazy?

Forget it. You can't.

Because a man would have to be crazy to get married. It's a stupid move for men.

While you are worrying about the miniscule chance of raped or murdered or beaten up, any man you would marry is going to be worried about the very real, approximately 50% chance that you are going to divorce him, take half his stuff, and get the kids, too.

Any man would have to be foolish or neurotic to play those odds. I was giving you advice for choosing a slightly better fool from among the fools.

Our culture has taught you to hate and fear men as dangerous predators. And you think that way because you never questioned it. Lots of TV shows about psychopathic men stalking women. Not a lot of shows about sociopathic women using the legal system to rob men.

But in reality, you're a lot more likely to be a dangerous predator than he is. 50% is even odds.

But you just want a nice old-fashioned marriage, and you swear you'll never bail out or cheat or anything. You won't be one of the 50%, you promise!

They all promise. Everybody promises. That's what wedding vows are. The problem is that you can break those promises and be shielded from every negative consequence the law can possibly manage to shield you from.

Is it any wonder that 50% of women break those promises?

So, no, you can't have a man who isn't crazy or stupid. Because those are the only men who would take that deal.

How did we get this way? Well, you mother and your grandmother sold you out before you were born. They wanted "no-fault" divorce, and they got it. They wanted alimony and child support, and they got it. They wanted a "right to choose" for women, and nothing for men, and they got that, too.

Maybe it never occurred to them that the men would catch on. Maybe they just figured they'd be safely married and divorced before they did catch on.

Doesn't matter. Point is, marriage is good for you, not men. Men aren't going to be much interested unless you bust your ass gaining their trust (and they are reckless, sentimental, and crazy). If you approach men with an attitude of "prove you're not a psycho", forget it. You'll get a succession of cocks to ride if you want, but no ring.

Frankly, I was being generous, maybe too generous, before. If you want a man to take a 50/50 shot on getting dumped and taken to the cleaners, and you're not even willing to risk putting out before the ceremony... well, good luck with that.

Hugo Schwyzer is going nuts. c/o the delighted feminisms

1 upvotes · 11 August 2013 · /r/MensRights

Res ipsa loquitur.

Means, motive, opportunity: Why do women consistently fail to outperform men?

1 upvotes · 10 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

A majority? Not in my experience.

However, in my experience, there are more females among southwest asian STEM majors and professionals, both here and over there. More per capita than among other demographic groups, I mean.

This kind of fits with my thinking about this, since I am a subscriber to the "motive" explanation.

Atheism+, Skepchick, FtB feminists going all out in attempt to destroy the skeptic movement: Ben Radford and physicist Lawrence Krauss accused of sex assault, Bill Nye accused of harassment, DJ Grothe accused of misogyny, Michael Shermer ACCUSED OF RAPE by PZ

Myers. This is beyond fucking insane.

1 upvotes · 10 August 2013 · /r/MensRights

The quality of feedback is unrelated to whether it is negative or positive. In fact, low-quality positive feedback can be as damaging as low-quality negative feedback.

On Average, Boys have a 10 point IQ advantage on Mechanical reasoning and a 6.4 IQ point advantage on Numerical reasoning. Translation: Girls aren't as good at STEM fields.

1 upvotes · 8 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

It's too bad you did not apply your own self-proclaimed intelligence to your argument. Surely then you would remember someone telling you once that data is not the plural of anecdote. You have taken these statements on the nature of female intelligence personally, which is not hard to understand, given that it's somewhat evident that intelligence is the major underpinning of your sense of self-worth. It's somewhat sophomoric to take pride in an accident of genetics like being tall or having a pretty nose, or something else that isn't a accomplishment, but that's not the point here.

Smart only matters when the smart is steering the ship, and right now, for you, it isn't. That's why you're giving picked and canned examples of female intelligence, instead of arguing the point. You must know that anecdotes about smart women are logical non sequiturs in this context, but you produce them anyway, because your feelings have chosen your thesis, and have only called upon your intelligence when it came time to back it up.

It's entirely possible that you're capable of feats of intelligence, but I would be much more impressed if you performed some here, rather than telling me about your ability to jump through hoops in the education system.

But even if your capabilities were every bit as impressive as you would like us to think they are, even if you were arguing intelligently, rather than merely arguing that you are intelligent, we would still be faced with the fact that we are talking about women, not just you or Ada Lovlace, of whom much has been made indeed. Greibach would have been a better example.

So let me help you out. An argument that STEM performance or even IQ scores do not reflect female intelligence, which would actually be relevant, is the contention that women are less motivated to excell in these things, and are not working as hard at them. Try that one. It's way more difficult to dismiss.

So I guess all the "nerd" bashing of boys I've heard throughout my life (both real and in the media) is just a hallucination

1 upvotes · 8 August 2013 · /r/MensRights

Okay, let's see...

"The real victims of male teen suicide are the mothers... imagine the pain of a mother having to bury her only child. Could anything be worse? Also, the women they would have married are victims, too. Now who will support her two children, now that their two bio-dads are serving prison time? That's right, taxpayers! Some of whom are women! If these teenage boys weren't so selfish, they would think of the real victims, and stop oppressing women by killing themselves."

I always hated the "False Equivalency" comic.

1 upvotes · 5 August 2013 · /r/MensRights

Sssshhhhh! You're unraveling the whole threat narrative!

Cheating: is it okay?

1 upvotes · 4 August 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Because a woman cheating does more damage to the relationship.

In each case, the person cheated on feels betrayed. But what happens going forward?

A man who cheats is a man other women desire. He's also a man who has shown a certain amount of selfishness in doing what he did. He's also a man who is able to secure multiple partners. He's a "stud".

All of these are attractive qualities. So, while this is not going to lessen the hurt, she's likely to still desire him, and will find a way to forgive him if they work it out somehow.

A woman who cheats is riding the carousel even in a relationship. She's also a woman who has shown a certain amount of selfishness in doing what she did. She's a "slut".

Unattractive qualities.

Ultimately, a man who cheats becomes less trustworthy, but also more desirable. A woman who cheats is less trustworthy and less desirable.

Cheating: is it okay?

1 upvotes · 4 August 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

I think the question is "under what circumstances?".

Obviously, cheating in any relationship that has an agreement of monogamy is serious business. But a relationship is a contract. If one party is in violation, then the other party needs to think about how much of that contract they need to hold up.

If you tell someone they can only sleep with you, then you better keep them satisfied. Anything else amounts to a chastity belt. This doesn't mean doing absolutely anything they want, however.

In between those two extremes, there's a grey area. And that has to be judged on a case by case basis. There are some levels of not living up to your responsibilities that don't warrant cheating. And some that do.

And yes, women cheating is worse than men cheating. The sexes are different, remember?

Anyone else see something wrong with this article?

1 upvotes · 28 July 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

It's even harder to change when you think you're just fine, and that everyone else is the problem.

FBI Analyst Sues FBI For Gender Discrimination, Saying Fitness Test Biased Against Men

1 upvotes · 27 July 2013 · /r/MensRights

You must be extremely short.

Walking the line between submission and being a doormat?

1 upvotes · 27 July 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

To submit:

to defer to or consent to abide by the opinion or authority of another

It is in the word another that the difference lies between being submissive and being a doormat or perpetual victim.

The question is "who is another"? Another can mean anything from one's husband to an abstract principle. And the nature of submission varies greatly depending on who one submits to.

One of the variances in human sexual dimorphism is the females of the human species are much more submissive and obedient than the males.

But this still leaves them with a very important choice... who to be submissive to. Because to be submissive merely means to obey someone.

Feminists are submissive to feminism, and the community of other women who hazily define it. You will often see them declaring their absolute fealty to feminism in the same breath that they declare themselves "independent women", and totally missing the contradiction.

To be a doormat means to be submissive to almost everyone, or to too many people. No one likes a doormat, because they are untrustworthy. Sure, they'll do what you want... until they are out of your sight and someone else talks to them for two minutes. A doormat is loyal to whoever bullied them last.

To be less of a doormat, you don't need to be less submissive. Just choose more carefully who you are submissive to.

MBTI personalities and dating

1 upvotes · 25 July 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

lol@ trying to tell a bunch of intj's who believe something it isnt true.

So, in other words, if being a intj means something, then they'll never believe me that it means nothing?

I am impressed by your reasoning... it makes such a perfect circle.

academic credentials dont make you right or wrong... being "discredited" in your field doesnt always make something wrong.

That's not how science works.

The way science works is that everything is wrong until you find some evidence to the contrary. The onus is not on me to prove the MBTI to be useless... it's on others to prove it has value.

That's done by making testable predictions.

Where academic credentials come in is that they tell us which hypotheses might be worth testing, and which are probably a waste of time.

What do ya'll think of this post from TRP? "Is there anything more pathetic than an unmarried woman over 30?"

1 upvotes · 20 July 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Women see a girl like that getting married, and wonder if she was capable of getting married, and higher value girls, like me, are not, there's the temptation to think that we must be even lower value than those girls. "Men are willing to give that up for her, but not for me." See, it not only becomes a problem of status, it becomes a problem of ego, and the two are closely related. That's why women care about status.

Yes, but "men" are not interchangeable cogs.

She was able to get the guy who is now her husband to marry her. Would you be willing to marry that guy? Would the guy you are with be willing to marry your obese sister?

The lower someone's SMV relative to their partner, the more concessions they have to make in their relationship. The higher someone's SMV relative to their partner, the less concessions they must make.

Mating is a choice between a higher SMV partner who has more control over you, and a lower SMV partner who has less. Everyone has to choose where they want to be on that continuum.

If you want to "be married" in general, rather than to "be married to X" where X is some particular guy, then what you really want is not him at all, but the status. Or the ego boost.

And if you seriously want a guy to sign up for Marriage 2.0 just so you can feel better about yourself, then how important can his needs really be to you?

Woman gets life sentence for making 13-year-old boy touch her breasts; Lawyer cries, says the law was never intended for people like her

1 upvotes · 18 July 2013 · /r/MensRights

Yes, it's draconian. But it's been draconian to men, and no one cared.

Where was this sympathetic, crying officer of the court when this sentence was carried out on men?

I feel as if I am falling out of being a RPW...

1 upvotes · 12 July 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

But... surely you are a weak and feeble woman who is just being bullied into this set of fascist beliefs by us horrible oppressive patriarchs!

And simultaneously a strong and independent woman who don't need no man for anything!

There are more categories than Alpha and Beta. There's a decent simple rundown here.

1 upvotes · 10 July 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Alpha, beta, and the like aren't adjectives. They are adverbs.

They are ways you behave, not things you are.

New Chateau Heartiste article today on the "Back To Europe" Movement. How do you feel about it?

1 upvotes · 4 July 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

If you're going to shit test me, at least put on some high heels first.

Seriously, though, listen to yourself. We start talking about religion and lack thereof, and all of a sudden you're all "fedora fedora neckbeard neckbeard".

Let's talk about the facts. Either there is a wizard who made the universe, or there isn't. Do contend that there IS a wizard who made the universe, or do you just think this is a lie that's useful for getting people to do what you want?

If it's the former, you're taking a blue pill. If it's the latter, you're taking a red pill, but dispensing blue ones. I think our society is better served by dispensing red pills.

New Chateau Heartiste article today on the "Back To Europe" Movement. How do you feel about it?

1 upvotes · 3 July 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

We need religion

No, we don't. Religion is neither necessary nor sufficient for a stable, prosperous society. In European culture in particular, we had a time when the church was in charge. We call it the "dark ages".

What you're spotting is that religion is a tool for enforcing social mores. But what you fail to recognize is that there is nothing in religion that makes it enforce good, effective social mores. It just takes any social mores you've got, and enforces them.

Additionally, even when religion does sometimes enforce effective social mores, it has an additional weakness... its tendency to crumble under the light of rational inquiry. If the only "why" it can give is "gawd said so", then its rules are out the window the instant someone realizes that god is a preposterous idea.

You claim that religion is a pillar of society. But that pillar is built upon sand. Religion cannot survive in a society that values intellectual freedom and open inquiry... it only survived as long as it did because, for a long time, it was allowed to kill anyone who dared question it. But it is a hothouse flower, raised in a sealed container of special pleading, that cannot survive the open competition of ideas.

There is no god. And that will not change, no matter how often you mutter the word "neckbeard", as if your characterizations of non-believers were anything but a logical non-sequitur more worthy of SRS than someone who purports to value truth.

Have another red pill, brother. You haven't finished the bottle yet.

Vasectomy: $400. Speechless look on her face: priceless.

1 upvotes · 29 June 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

That gets into philosophical territory... the debate over whether an unwanted child is better off being born, or not.

I don't know the answer to that. I find it hard to even have an opinion.

What I do know is that I am not comfortable with the idea of using a child as a weapon of revenge.

So... after my post about withdrawing attention from my GF, I got warned about you guys :^)

1 upvotes · 26 June 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

People who talk about "real alpha guys" don't get it.

Alpha isn't a guy. It's a behaviour pattern. You can put it on like a shirt if you know how. Do that enough, it becomes habitual. And then you don't need silly rules about what alpha guys "don't do". Because letting other people tell you what not to do... well, what level of mastery of one's own life does that display?

What women want is absurdly simple. Once you learn it, you don't have to change every moment of your life to suit their needs.

You can post on reddit if you like. Or play tabletop RPGs. Or collect stamps. Paint stilllives of potted plants. Hunt bears with a bow and arrow. Whatever.

Oh, you might change a little bit, because there there some things you no longer have to do, or some things you are no longer afraid to do. But slavishly imitating every behaviour of guys who act alpha naturally is like wearing a loincloth and eagle feather headdress because you're learning to shoot a bow.

Network of enlightened Women - positive site for good modern feminine women

1 upvotes · 22 June 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

You just made the same argument twice.

First you told me that I wasn't a good tool for genes to propagate themselves. Now you're telling me that I'm not a good tool for memes to propagate themselves.

I have no interest in being a tool.

Network of enlightened Women - positive site for good modern feminine women

1 upvotes · 21 June 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

And, sorry if it is a bit offensive, but you just lost the whole evolutionary game by refusing to play at all.

You don't understand the game.

Read your Dawkins. Get through "The Blind Watchmaker", and "The Selfish Gene", and you'll understand that you and I are not players in the evolution game. We are strategies. The evolution game is played between genes, not people.

The game is about genes trying to make copies of themselves. That's all it is.

You don't have children because you want to win the game. You have children because some mindless combinations of nucleic acids won in the past by instilling people like you with the urge to create a shrieking, jam-covered goblin, then give it resources.

We're all puppets of our genes. But I'm not attached to that particular string. I'm an r-selecting male, a natural alpha. We're not interested in settling down with one woman, and raising a couple of kids. We're naturally promiscuous, and genetically inclined to sire bastards and leave. In the age of birth control, this makes us childless. Maybe in half a million years, we'll be edited out of the gene pool, and males will all be broody, child-loving, faithful, cooperative, and obedient.

I'm not particularly disappointed not to be the most useful puppet for a bunch of proteins.

Network of enlightened Women - positive site for good modern feminine women

1 upvotes · 20 June 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

The Birkenhead drill is part of it, but just the beginning. And it's certainly not hardwired in. If it were hardwired in, it would be universal or nearly so, like male-led societies. Most cultures throughout history, including some highly successful ones, have had absolutely no "save the women first" tradition at all.

I think Birkenhead is an artifact of strict monogamy.

The tradcon way means following the Judeo-Christian social rules. Chastity until marriage, strict monogamy afterwards. Male disposability (men do all the hard, dirty, and dangerous jobs), the compassion gap (habit of caring more about women's problems than men's), chivalry ('nuff said), demonization of male sexuality, etc.

I have no interest in restricting myself to one sexual partner. I have no interest in putting women's welfare before my own. I have no interest in sets of elaborate social rules about what special courtesies I must show to women. I have no interest in "manning up" when that means marrying some self-involved twit and paying for her entire life.

Feminism may want to make men into dogs, obeying the rules of their female owners, and doing tricks in the hope of the occasional treat, but tradconism wants to make men into horses, hitched for life to the cart of someone else's ambitions and dreams.

So no.

No to feminism. No to cultural Marxism. No to liberalism. No to conservatism. No to Jesus. No to marriage. No to anything that tells me that I do not belong to myself, that my talents are for anything other than me, that I must do this, or I must do that, or I should do the other.

Sexuality in a red pill LTR

1 upvotes · 20 June 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

We aren't easy and don't want to be seen that way

High partner count isn't a result of being "easy", it's a result of being "pumped and dumped".

Seeing the issue as "easy" vs "not easy" focuses on securing investment from the man before sex can happen. It's essentially the use of sex as a bargaining chip. But investment isn't an concrete object which can be voluntarily given in exchange for something else.

It's a feeling and condition of attachment that one must inspire and motivate.

Instead of focusing on withholding sex, focus on inspiring emotional investment.

Hair - The Long and Short of It (Femininity Field Report)

1 upvotes · 20 June 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Could men weigh in on the 'fake hair' subject? Would it bother you or would you prefer your lady to have short hair if it weren't her own?

What you must understand is that short hair is unattractive for two reasons.

The first is that long hair appears more feminine, and short hair more masculine. A very feminine-appearing woman might be able to get away with short hair, but long is better. Pixie cuts only look passable on women who look like pixies.

But the second, much more important, reason is that how much care you take with your appearance sends a message. It either says "I care about being attractive to you" or "I couldn't care less about what you want".

Thus, a woman who is bald from chemotherapy and a woman who shaves her head are two completely different prospects. Both run afoul of the first point. But the woman who voluntarily has short hair also fails the second. And that one is what we really care about.

A woman who will cut her hair short... doesn't care. A woman who doesn't care might stop wearing makeup. Might ditch the dresses for jeans and sweatshirts. Might let herself get fat. Might neglect to shave her legs. Might do all of the above.

I was banned for no reason, so I'm posting this question again until I'm told why. What do men have to offer women that makes you more valuable than us?

1 upvotes · 1 June 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

As far as I know most jobs before the 1940s available to women were teaching, clerical, and waitress jobs... Most women (if they chose to be single) probably couldn't support themselves with just one income from a job like that.

"As far as you know" happens to be wrong. For example, in 1432, the Blacksmith's guild of London had 2 women masters.

Like many people, you've looked at things women didn't generally do, and concluded that they must not have been allowed to, as if you somehow had privileged and unimpeachable information on what all women have ever wanted.

Women had to depend on men for survival.

Or did women choose to depend on men for survival because that allowed them to focus on other things beyond mere survival?

What exactly do you have to offer us besides sex?

Turn your question around. If a woman needs a man like a fish needs a bicycle, then a man needs a woman like a bicycle needs a fish.

And yet, somehow, men and women still seem to obsess over each other anyway. Perhaps because we are genetically hardwired to do so.

Ultimately, the onus is not on me or any of us to prove to any given young, inexperienced college undergraduate that she "needs" us.

If you truly never want anything from me directly, or from my tax dollars, I am not bothered about this. But bear in mind that if you ever do want something from me, you must offer me something in return. Or else you will leave empty-handed.

Ultimately, this subreddit is not for you. It is not for women at all. It has no lessons to teach you, no moral demands that you behave this way or that way. This group is for men, to teach them how to navigate their lives in a world of women who verbally and ostensibly consider them useless, yet with their behaviour continue to solicit more, more, more: more sympathy, more protection, more commitment, more compliance, more money.

no matter how old I get there's always going to be men available for sex

Good luck with that.

This Cracked article is for online dating but I think it can be applied to real-life aspects of women too.

1 upvotes · 1 June 2013 · /r/seduction

What I find interesting about this article is that the author seems to have no notion of how things got to be this way. Like a generation or two ago, things were fine, then men all of a sudden mutated into horrible, selfish trolls, while women continued to perfect magic angels made of fairy dust and unicorn giggles.

And what is this person's strange sword fetish?

I Need Feminism Because...

1 upvotes · 24 May 2013 · /r/MensRights

They mean it's okay for us to have rights in theory, so long as we don't actually do anything to claim or exercise them.

Why judges think women are better parents

1 upvotes · 19 May 2013 · /r/MensRights

We should not, however, forget Grey's Law:

Any sufficiently advanced incompetence is indistinguishable from malice.

In other words, whether actual malice exists or not doesn't always matter, especially in cases where the effect is the same.

This guy seems to know what's going on

1 upvotes · 19 May 2013 · /r/MensRights

Owned.

What odds can I get that that "tucobadass" never shows her face in this thread again?

Odds are that this subreddit is undergoing this as well. So much for Reddit being a site for discussion and debate.

1 upvotes · 19 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I think perhaps I interpret those statistics differently than you do. Allegations of racial inferiority require not just an observation of circumstance, but an inference of cause.

Subreddit rules, however, preclude discussions like this as off-topic at the very least. So if you wish to convince me that some races are significantly inferior to others, either intellectually or behaviourally, you'll have to switch to private message.

A little something for those of you who have the feeling that women are no good and can't be trusted.

1 upvotes · 16 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

What's important is not why someone is doing something, but what they are actually doing.

If a woman is showing compassion for men because it makes her feel special, then she is showing compassion for men. If she is claiming to show compassion for men in order to be treated as special, but not actually doing so, then that is what she is doing.

What FleetingWish is doing is urging other women to try showing compassion and consideration for men, and telling them men will love them for it. We know this to be true.

Men are not vending machines where you push the sex button and commitment comes out, but we are sensible human beings who will stick around with those who behave in the way someone who cares about our feelings would be expected to behave.

Ultimately, what FleetingWish does in her own life is a little beside the point. She is telling other women a strategy that is beneficial for both women and for men.

Discussion Thread: The Red Pill and other "unacceptable ideas"... Voting.

1 upvotes · 15 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I love the smell of death threats in the morning. Smells like... fear and desperation.

A little something for those of you who have the feeling that women are no good and can't be trusted.

1 upvotes · 14 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Who thinks that?

Look through the responses to this post. I think you'll see a few.

Really, there are two schools of thought in TRP. One is that women are genetically destined to be selfish, bubbleheaded perpetual teenagers who do not and cannot understand their real motivations, will do whatever they want and rationalize it away, and must be constantly managed lest they destroy society.

The other is that the women around us in the first world have been infected by a toxic ideology that makes them ashamed to be feminine, encourages them to treat men like things without rights or feelings, and prevents them from growing into mental adulthood by refusing to let anyone draw boundaries for them or impose responsibilities on them.

Discussion Thread: The Red Pill and other "unacceptable ideas"... Voting.

1 upvotes · 10 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

My own answer:

I don't know. There isn't a good, consistent rationale for this either way.

I get the argument that voting is compensatory for draft eligibility, so women shouldn't vote. But then anyone who's 4F for health issues shouldn't vote, either. I'm not on board with that.

I get the argument that those affected by state policies should have some say in them, so women should vote. But then children and non-citizens have to be allowed to vote, too. I'm not on board with that, either.

I get the argument that tax payers should vote, since they pay into the government. But then do we allow people to vote in proportion to the taxes they pay?

It's worth noting that if the voting were actually meaningful, it would be illegal, and that letting people vote is more a matter of keeping people docile by letting them feel like they have a choice than it is a matter of actually giving them one. But giving that as my final answer would be a cop-out, since it would duck the question of whether women should vote in any given society, simply by noting that it does not matter in ours.

Ultimately, I'd like to see some sort of test of awareness and critical thinking skills as a gateway to voting rights, but I have to be aware that the test would become as much of a political football as anything else. Ultimately, the state does not determine the shape of society so much as it is determined by it.

There is no simple answer to this one, I think.

Women who say they are "waiting" ?

1 upvotes · 8 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Wait, who said anything about investing? Seduce first, then invest if appropriate.

Can you have an intimate relationship with a woman?

1 upvotes · 8 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

To have an intimate relationship with someone, you must trust them. Should you trust someone? Only if they are trustworthy.

Can women be trustworthy? Yes.

Are a statistically significant percentage of modern American women trustworthy? Hell, no.

Possible contradictions within the red pill?

1 upvotes · 30 April 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Classic RedPill thought states that girls who have sex with lots of men have lower value as a long term mate.

You're confusing correlation with causality.

Low SMV in women is correlated with lots of sexual partners. That does not mean having sex with a man lowers her SMV.

That got me wondering then, is having sex with girls immoral?

Immoral? Moral? According to whom?

Absolute moralities are just another blue pill, peddled by those who want you to be obedient to their version of "good" (which means "good for them").

You, for instance, are peddling another male-threat narrative.

The instant response is no, because women can choose, and they're choosing an action which hurts themselves.

BUT, the Red Pill also states that women's mating instincts are programmed and can be manipulated.

Female-hypoagency narrative. Women are just as responsible for the outcomes of their instinctive actions as men are.

Feminist Reaction to the tragic death of Earl Silverman on Salon.

1 upvotes · 30 April 2013 · /r/MensRights

Illusions are intangible, and cannot be grasped.

"[L]eader of the Black Guerilla Family, Tavon White, ... fathered five children with four of the corrections officers"

1 upvotes · 24 April 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Attractive women don't have to work as prison guards.

Bro-Choice...?

1 upvotes · 24 April 2013 · /r/MensRights

Yeah. I am, in the abstract sense, pro-abortion, but everyone who organizes for that cause seems to want "keep it in your pants" as a glass ceiling for men's reproductive rights. So I won't give them money, sign their petitions, vote for their candidates, or anything else they want, until they act to recognize men's right to choose whether or not to be a parent, the same way they recognize women's.

TRP: You know your women are replaceable, but do you tell them this?

1 upvotes · 19 April 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Don't tell them.

Show them. Be willing to withdraw your attention.

In fact, withdrawal is one of my favorite ways to punish women, because it is self-regulating. It most affects those who want the most from me. After all, if I were not a source of happiness in her life, my withdrawal would not be a punishment at all.

[Science] Strategic Pluralism and the Red Pill foundation

1 upvotes · 10 April 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

A lot of this is old news (although confirmation from academia is always good), but what interests me is that it seems to support one of my long-held suspicions:

The more alpha-like genetic markers a man possesses, the less he likes children, and the less interest he has in child-rearing.

Is there a point to subscribing to TRP?

1 upvotes · 10 April 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

How the fuck is this subreddit about hating women?

He wasn't saying it is. He was saying it made him hate women.

He just got that new-to-the-red-pill anger thing that most of us went through.

Totally worth it.

1 upvotes · 7 April 2013 · /r/MensRights

Oh, god, the lulz...

So I'm reading "48 Laws of Power" (and you should too btw) and I'm wondering if the "all alpha all the time" is really the way to go.

1 upvotes · 1 April 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

That's why I think it's important to understand that alpha really isn't a thing as such. It's the absence of running the "beta behavioural software" that is present in all of us.

That software evolved to help people avoid getting killed by a rival who was in a superior position. It's a way of disarming hostility.

But the alpha/beta personality thing exists because most modern men are neurologically "stuck" running that beta software way too much. They think it's good for getting along with people, or making friends, or being "moral", or whatever. It is good for none of these things. It is only good for preventing people who can hurt you, and would otherwise do so, from wanting to.

So what is "alpha"? It's anything you are inclined to do, in the absence of running the beta software. Sometimes it means choking a bitch. And sometimes it means making friends with everyone in the room. And sometimes it means just sitting quietly and watching and smiling to yourself. It's whatever you would if you weren't afraid.

[Mod] Almost 3,000 Users and a message from the moderator

1 upvotes · 1 April 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I think you mistake me.

Civilization and its advancements are crafted by men. Civilization being technology, science, physical infrastructure, etc. Women do not, in any statistically significant sense, build bridges, design aircraft, or discover new technologies.

Society is composed of both men and women. Society being the social group of people living together and connected by a social contract, a common culture, bonds of trust, and so forth.

Women contribute to building social structures, but not to physical or technological ones.

This misunderstanding echoes a typical red pill problem. What constrains blue pill society from many things it could otherwise say about women is not the bounds of the truth, but the specter of "mithogyny! Thee? THEE? It'h mithogyny! It's dithpicable!".

But since the constraints on what people say isn't truth, but "offensiveness", once we take the red pill and are willing to state offensive truths, there is no existing consensus on what that truth is.

We can say anything about women now, because we are no longer afraid of being called misogynists. But which things are actually true?

My objection to statements like "women are not adults", "women contribute nothing", "women never grow up", etc... is that not only does it not make any sense, but if it is taken as a universal condition of women, it lets them off the hook too easily.

If we believe that women are inherently non-contributory, it falls to us to explain how our species managed to survive as half deadwood.

If we believe that woman are inherently non-contributory, it gives the women of our particular society a built-in excuse for how fucked up things have gotten, and how useless they, in particular, are.

I think that we need to demand more of women, instead of letting them off the hook like that.

[Mod] Almost 3,000 Users and a message from the moderator

1 upvotes · 30 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Or the view that women don't contribute to society.

Errrrr... what? Dude, women contribute to society. They contribute people. Society is made of people. Women make people.

They also maintain the people who make things. Or, rather, they're supposed to.

Modern first-world women may be failing at their proper contributions. But that doesn't mean that what women are for isn't important.

Man has rape conviction quashed as wedding footage shows alleged victim playfully touching the accused

1 upvotes · 28 March 2013 · /r/MensRights

But it is a common phrase in the counselling world

And that is one of the three major reasons that I have so little respect for them.

You would think that people who study human behaviour would understand the power of words, the influence that language has over thought, and the importance of spotting and avoiding dangerous metaphors.

But, of course, that's the problem, isn't it?

They aren't people who study human behaviour. They call themselves psychologists, but what they do has little connection to any empirical research. The real significant difference between the DSM-IV and star charts is that most people know that astrologers are charlatans.

How To Employ "Jury Nullification" To Single-Handedly Quash Unjust Laws That Unfairly Target Heterosexual Men

1 upvotes · 28 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

"In 1884, meridian time personnel met in Washington to change Earth time. First words said was that only 1 day could be used on Earth to not change the 1 day bible. So they applied the 1 day and ignored the other 3 days. The bible time was wrong then and it proved wrong today. This a major lie has so much evil feed from it's wrong. No man on Earth has no belly-button, it proves every believer on Earth a liar."

Man has rape conviction quashed as wedding footage shows alleged victim playfully touching the accused

1 upvotes · 28 March 2013 · /r/MensRights

When the psychologists I have been around ... say "the client never lies," they do not mean "the client has an accurate picture of reality." They mean "the client is truthfully stating what the reality they think is true."

Except neither one of those is always true.

Sometimes the client makes a false statement because the client is mistaken. And sometimes the client just plain lies.

You know this. I know this. Everyone knows this.

The statement "the client never lies" is wrong, wrong, wrong, and stupid.

"We always act towards the client as if we believe everything they say" is fine. It's a tactic. "The client never lies" isn't a tactic. It's an assertion, and it's wrong.

Man has rape conviction quashed as wedding footage shows alleged victim playfully touching the accused

1 upvotes · 27 March 2013 · /r/MensRights

Who said anything about assuming they are lying?

We are talking about not assuming they are telling the truth.

Please tell me you understand the difference between these two concepts.

Fierce Fatties: a case study in hamster logic

1 upvotes · 27 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I get you.

But I think now we're getting into the semantics of what the word "choice" means. If the expression of one's genetic tendencies is not a "choice", then there may very well be no such thing.

Sometimes no response is the best answer!

1 upvotes · 27 March 2013 · /r/seduction

Well put.

Remember, lads, clever responses to shit tests and the like are fun as hell, and that's why you should do them when you have one. But all you really have to do is keep your cool, don't get all butthurt, and don't take her seriously.

Agree and amplify, ignore, or just grin and say "nah", or "nice one".

She's not testing to see if you are the straight version of Oscar Wilde. She's testing to see if she can rattle you.

What are some red-pill clothing styles?

1 upvotes · 20 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I've bought several albums by POD and Disturbed,

...

I'm saving up for a new car

...

I'm just wondering where are some good stores/clothes to showcase the new me

Time for another red pill.

Buying a different product has nothing to do with being free. "I am what I buy" is one of the bluer pills our culture dispenses.

The new you needs to give less fucks about what brand he wears. He needs to give less fucks about what strangers think of him. And he needs to give more fucks about whether he is enjoying himself right now.

Wear what you like. What you are comfortable in. What you think looks good. Listen to the music you like. Buy a new car if you want one.

The only thing that matters about style is whether you are wearing yours or someone else's.

You've got to be kidding me. "Patricia Leavy, PhD: A Challenge to Boys and Men: Will You Help Stop Rape Culture?"

1 upvotes · 20 March 2013 · /r/MensRights

I'm highly impressed with anyone who can fly into a building more than once.

Do All Women Treat You the Same? It's Not THEM... it's YOU

1 upvotes · 20 March 2013 · /r/seduction

How quickly we descend into sophistry.

Your line of reasoning is this: "My thoughts cause my actions. Therefore, my thoughts are more important than my actions."

But what causes your thoughts?

Do All Women Treat You the Same? It's Not THEM... it's YOU

1 upvotes · 20 March 2013 · /r/seduction

THERE IS NO OUTER GAME. THERE IS ONLY "INNER GAME".

You got that backwards, kid.

We are our behaviour. What's inside is only important if and when it effects our behaviour.

I need a good response to "you're so tall!"

1 upvotes · 18 March 2013 · /r/seduction

"You have a keen eye for the obvious."

I'm new here. What proof is there that supports the claims that feminism dominates society?

1 upvotes · 16 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

This is a good question, but not really a question for this subreddit. This particular subreddit is mostly a mutual-support-and-survival-tips group for men who already know feminism is pervasive and toxic, and have questions about how to protect themselves from its toxic effects.

If you are still grappling with the question of whether feminism is the dominant paradigm, or whether it is toxic, then I suggest spending a couple of weeks following /r/mensrights, which should supply you with copious examples. Especially if you trouble to read the sidebar, and follow its various links.

Being TOO alpha with a...different kind of woman?

1 upvotes · 14 March 2013 · /r/seduction

but I spoke to her friend (who also happens to be one of my best friends) and she told me this

You asked a woman for seduction advice.

Don't ask a woman for seduction advice.

So clearly then she wants to be in power and wants a guy to have control over. Any advice or experiences to share? Anyone come across women like this? What did you do?

Next her.

Every man has experienced, at one point or another, how women treat men they have power over. Do you want to be controlled by a woman? You'd have to be insane.

Run, don't walk.

Why Do We Wear Clothes?

1 upvotes · 14 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Why Do We Wear Clothes?

Because we are primarily adapted for a tropical environment, then secondarily adapted for the ice age that came along later.

Sedditor lays down some gender role truth, triggers blue-pill hamster explosion in comments.

1 upvotes · 13 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Oh, agreed. The correct thing to do when a woman acts like a child is laugh at her, not get mad.

But that's not what OP is catching flak about, now is it?

Never Listen to a Woman...what about mom?

1 upvotes · 12 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I see that earlier in my life, my parents did have more expertise in how I worked as an individual, and identified weaknesses that I didn't see. But now it seems like it has been flipped, so factoring in what you and the article say and take things at face value (over the past value she used to bring) would be the appropriate action to take.

True. Also, earlier in your life, your parents knew significantly more about how the world worked than you did, because they had been in it many times as long. Now this is no longer the case.

From the point of view of a five year old, his mommy is a fucking expert on everything: how to tie his shoes, where the towels are, how to sew up that rip in Mr. Bear's tummy. When he is fifteen, she is a useful source of advice on some things: how to drive a car, how to balance a checkbook, how to iron a shirt. When he is thirty-five, she is a woman of sixty who raised three children but didn't really have a career outside the home, and she is an expert on exactly one thing: how to raise children.

"The Power of Makeup" VERY illuminating articles. Red Pill knowledge

1 upvotes · 12 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

It's good to look for a woman who habitually wears makeup, though. Because that means she is making an effort. Women who make an effort are treating men with respect. They are not taking men's attraction and attention for granted.

Two Graphs Everyone Should Be Aware Of

1 upvotes · 11 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I disagree with your first graph. You have men's and women's SMV falling off at roughly the same rate once the peak is past.

Men, Seddit needs our help!

1 upvotes · 5 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Interesting.

I always saw /r/redpill as sort of a solution to the problem that /r/mensrights refuses to have anything to do with /r/seduction, and vice versa.

One sits around pointing out how our culture hates men, but refuses to say anything about a plan for how to survive and get laid in a culture that hates men.

The other is happy to exploit loopholes in feminism's poorly-thought-out plan for society, but refuses to care about or even admit to, what the plan is doing to everyone's future, including theirs.

Men need a concrete plan for motivating the changes we need to thrive and prosper as a group. And we need knowledge of how to thrive and prosper as individuals in the situation we currently find ourselves in.

Despite our worryingly high percentage of tradcons, we have some of those ideas here.

Red Knights

1 upvotes · 3 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

In this thread: pages and pages of arguing semantics!

- Why must boys be taught to act like and enjoy the same things as girls?

1 upvotes · 1 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

"Traditional morality" is another blue pill.

I understand what you tradcons think, I just don't understand how you can be so silly.

It's like you've been freed, and you weep for your chains back. Don't you get it? You no longer have to slave away to earn money to give to women. You no longer have to pay, perform, and pursue. Your sex drive is no longer a lever to extract a lifetime's labour from you.

Your time and money are now your own. All you need is some game. At last your labour can serve your goals, your ambitions, your dreams, instead of one dumpy middle-aged woman and a bushel of brats.

Look, I get it. The pill destroyed chastity. Feminism destroyed marriage. Of course. What I cannot understand is why you want to dig up the corpses of either one, jolt them into a shuffling semblance of life, and then bend your head down so they can eat your brain without having to stand on tiptoe.

Is it perhaps all the men who cannot or will not "Game up" and compete in the sexual marketplace who want to return to the days of men as providers... just so they can get a little play without having to work on their attractiveness?

womens (and mens) sexuality unrestrained is fucked

Heh. Fucked according to who? What moral laws did you, with your electron microscope, find graven on the building blocks of the universe?

No.

Religion is only red pill for the guys who dispense it, the ones who know it's all a big lie, a big lie they can use to get others to obey.

Everyone else, check yourselves for John the Baptist Syndrome.

Some guy used that "phone trick" on my girlfriend and failed horribly a few days ago.

1 upvotes · 28 February 2013 · /r/seduction

Yes, I only want ways of getting phone numbers that always work. I regard women as automatons without individual personalities, who will react in exactly the same way if I push the same buttons.

Oh, wait. No, I don't. How about that?

Jezebel: I'm bad at exercise because of genetics, not because I habitually avoid it!

1 upvotes · 21 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Yeah. In fact, the author of the article publicly displays her hamster when she talks about how she was thinnest when she went out dancing regularly (despite consuming lots of alcohol, which is adipose-tissue-in-a-bottle).

When she exercised, it worked even though she wasn't doing it very well, simply because she did it regularly.

Now that it's no longer convenient, instead of finding a way to do it anyway, or finding something else she will stick to, she makes excuses by interpreting research just how she wants to.

She'd rather exercise her hamster than herself... the fatter the woman, the more sleek and athletic the hamster.

Not all exercise is fun. Some people hate some kinds. But finding a kind you like is part of the process.

With the risk of being downvoted, here's why I think the Men's Rights Movement will never gain enough traction...

1 upvotes · 18 February 2013 · /r/MensRights

Women get what they want when they complain.

Men get what they want when they go on strike.

Men not marrying? How deep does "the problem" go?

1 upvotes · 15 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

This allegation gets tossed around a lot, but I don't think we can claim to be doing red pill thinking if we can't point to evidence to back up our ideas.

I've heard people try to claim religion built civilization because we had religion when we built civilization. This is obviously silly. We also wore shirts while building civilization.

But what makes us so sure that the family unit is any more relevant? Sure it's a way for beta males to get what they want, so it tends to occur a lot.

But how exactly do we show that it is necessary or even useful for civilization-building?

The Red Pill for Women

1 upvotes · 15 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Red pills are pretty "out there" in the sense that when you think based on what you see, instead of what people tell you or what everyone else thinks, then you come to some conclusions that are pretty far away from what everyone else is saying.

Essentially, I think the society with the most realistic and down-to-earth model of male-female relations was ancient Rome.

In the modern era, I am in favour of doing away with marriage altogether, and replacing it with child-rearing contracts which would have a limited term, and be governed by standard contract law.

I think the idea of marriage in our culture is insane. It's an agreement that isn't written down anywhere, and is subject to change according to the whims of a legislature, or a court, or simply popular culture. If something is a contract, then let's get it on paper.

Roughly 40 to 50 million Chinese men will be left unmarried

1 upvotes · 14 February 2013 · /r/MensRights

Religion is definitely a mental disease, or more precisely, it correlates with mental disease. But is it a cause of mental disease, or a symptom?

There are plenty of silly ideas in the world, but they don't sustain themselves on nothing at all. To survive and grow, they must harness the power of wishful thinking (the blue pill).

The marginalization, impoverishment, and sex-deprivation of young muslim men is the fertile ground for the seeds of fanatical islamic nonsense. You can't sell suicide to the content.

And you would never get me to kill myself for 72 virgins without first depriving me of my steady diet of fire-breathing sluts.

The Red Pill for Women

1 upvotes · 13 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

No. Religions may be adept at taking credit for the accomplishments of people, but it doesn't build anything. People build things, and they do it with science and engineering.

Of course, what you mean is that religion motivates people to do things. It motivates people to do silly things. Sensible things to do don't require nonsense beliefs to motivate them.

The Red Pill for Women

1 upvotes · 13 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Okay, I'm going to try not to write you another book in response.

Mostly, you've just been the unfortunate victim of my need for an audience to help me think by talking.

But let me turn this one more way to try to fit it into your head.

From a woman's perspective, what is marriage for?

It isn't for sex. A woman can get sex with a male as desirable or more desirable than the one she can marry, by signalling her availability and willingness. It isn't for companionship. This doesn't require marriage, either.

It's for securing his help and support, material and otherwise, both for her and their children.

"Cheating" in a marriage is giving someone else what the marriage is engaged in to secure. So man isn't "cheating" if he has sex with another woman. He is cheating if he diverts resources he would otherwise have spent on you, to her. He is cheating if he fathers a child on her, and devotes attention to raising it.

A woman is cheating if she has sex with another man, because his greatest incentive for getting married is sexual access.

The Red Pill for Women

1 upvotes · 12 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Does pickiness not come into play here?

Yes, it certainly does. I hadn't wanted to talk about that additional complication until we got the basic principle hammered out.

Pickiness matter. But it also matters what you're picky about.

If a woman is red pill, looking for an LTR prospect, and realizes that having a hundred partners isn't really good for long term prospects, she's certainly not going to put out until she's 1) comfortable with the guy and 2) sure he's not a PUA. Would most PUA's become uninterested if she's not willing to put out by the third date? That's the sense I've gotten from various threads around here.

If she wants to be red pill, and guide her actions accordingly, then she must swallow the bitterest red pill of all (at least for women).

There is no qualitative difference between a PUA and a husband. This is because Men are only as monogamous as their options. Picking a man who's strictly monogamous means picking a man who can't attract women all that well. Which means her own happiness in, and commitment to, the marriage will suffer in the long run.

Looking to avoid men who are "pump-and-dump specialists" is blue pill, because it's predicated on the blue-pill notion that monogamy is an ideal state for a man, and that men who aren't monogamous are somehow defective or bad.

The truth is that a PUA is nothing but a man who has cracked the code on how to make himself attractive. How he behaves from that point is however he's inclined to behave.

So a red pill woman has two choices... or, rather, a continuum of choice between two poles.

- Marry a man who has few or no options other than her... a beta male. To him, a lifelong commitment will seem ideal, because it will secure him access to a female, and protect him (at least somewhat) from having to compete for her attention with other males (a contest he is ill-equipped for).
- Marry a man who many females desire... a alpha male. To him, commitment will not seem like such a good idea. After all, he has little trouble securing female attention. Not only will commitment not seem like a good option to him, any particular female wishing to secure his commitment will have to compete with many others.

To secure the first, a woman must keep her legs closed as tightly as possible. The beta male does not wish to compete with a score of former lovers, who were presumably more alpha than he (since they didn't marry her). (In this way, men who care too much about female "purity" are announcing their beta-ness to the world.) Additionally, it will be valuable to hold out for the ring as the price of her sexual affections, since a beta male (and only a beta male) can be controlled by restriction of access to sex.

To secure the second, a woman must fornicate, but carefully and with a plan. If she tries to use commitment as a price for sex, the alpha males she seeks to marry will simply ignore her in favour of sluttier women. She can get alpha males in the sack if she's desirable (and a red pill woman will do everything she can to make herself desirable)... but the hard part is keeping him.

To keep him, she needs to make herself a more attractive option for a saturday night than going out and picking up/dating another woman. If she can do this for the majority of a long series of saturday nights, she's got herself a relationship. If she can hold onto that long enough, it can turn into a marriage... especially if he's ready to have kids.

One path is safe, but with a dubious payoff, the other path is risky, but rewarding on success.

So what is a redpill woman who wants marriage and children to do?

- Decide early on if she wants an alpha or a beta male. This will determine her whole strategy.
- If she wants a beta, she must be "old fashioned". Keep legs firmly closed. Use sex as a weapon for extracting promises. Basically, all the stuff Mormons want their daughters to do. Not much more to say about this. It's easy to do.

(I won't talk more about strategies for securing beta males. Betas are boring. Boring to be, boring to date, boring to marry, and boring to talk about.)

- If she wants an alpha, she must play her cards right. She's going to have to compete with other women, and win, consistently, over a long period of time.

Here are some ways she can do this. She doesn't have to do all of them, but each one will help.

- Be pretty. No dancing about this subject. It matters. And if she thinks she can't just make herself prettier, then she hasn't taken the red pill. Hit the gym. Swear off soda and ice cream until you forget what they taste like. Make friends with your stylist and beautician. If lucky enough to have money, see plastic surgeon. Shunning plastic surgery is blue pill.
- Be nice. Pretty gets you in bed with alphas, but nice and sweet and cheerful keeps them coming back. And that second one is the difficult part. If you get pumped and dumped a lot, odds are you're pretty but bitchy, obnoxious, or just a pain in the ass.
- Make sure he wants kids. Alphas who do not want children have little reason to marry. {Edit: if she doesn't want kids, an LTR with an alpha who doesn't either may be doable. But she shouldn't count on a wedding ring. }
- Start young and go old. Older alphas aren't less attractive... if anything, they are more so, because older men are more suave, self-assured, and confident. Now, they'll still have lots of options, but what they won't have is lots of wild oats left to sow, or time before they better start having those kids. A smart red pill woman starts hitting on successful 40 year old men the instant she hits the legal age of consent.
- Be a lady in the street and a freak in bed. Alpha males don't want to marry a 30 year old ex-slut, but they certainly don't want a prude, either. They are used to sexual abundance, after all. Be ready and willing to do whatever he wants in bed. It helps to figure out what her kinks are, and screen early for compatible tastes. And she'd better figure this out early... women who want an alpha husband to not have the luxury of three or four years of prudishness before deciding that yes, they liked to be spanked, and they guess they're okay with that after all.
- Immediately cease dating any man she doesn't want sex with. If she's not ready at the end of the third date, anyone who hangs around and waits longer is signaling that he's lower in value.
- If she wants a man, pursue pursue pursue. Alphas are good at seducing women, but there's still some novelty to being the one that's being chased. She can't be too forward. Remember, "don't put out too easily, or men won't respect you" is advice for getting yourself a nice safe beta... and it's other women who give you that advice.
- While we're on the subject, she should NEVER take any advice from other women on how to deal with men.

It is in their interest to feed her blue pills.

- Most importantly if she can do it... score big points by acknowledging that male cheating doesn't matter. She is looking for a husband and life partner, not an exclusive lover, and while alphas can swap sexual partners for a new one with less effort, one doesn't swap out the woman you live with, who is the mother of your children, very easily at all, no matter one is. If she learns to turn a blind eye, or even, best of all, an openly permissive one, to his occasional taste for novelty pussy, then he won't have to divorce her ass to get some... and he'll feel much more comfortable committing to her.

The Red Pill for Women

1 upvotes · 12 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Pardon my short response to your long post, but I can't get past "going on dates" being hamster.

You've got it slightly backwards.

Let's get back to the part I bolded.

For women, serial monogamy is promiscuity.

In other words, there's no detectable difference between "spending 10 years riding the cock train", and "spending 10 sifting the dating pool for a husband".

It means nothing for a woman to say she is "looking for a husband", because that same statement is used to hamsterize cocktrain-riding.

In either case, her behaviour is the same:

1. Meet man.
2. Ride cock.
3. Repeat 2 as desired.
4. Split with man.
5. Goto 1.

So the question of each woman isn't does she ride the cocktrain?

It's which station does she get off at?

A woman who has one partner in her life is getting off the cocktrain at the first station. A virgin bride is getting off the cocktrain at the first station without examining that station first... she has just made her decision to get off, no matter what the station is like, in advance.

A woman who rides the train for ten years because she's "looking for the perfect station", and one who rides the train for ten years "because she's not ready to think about a station yet" are doing the same thing. The only difference is the hamster.

Now, this is complicated by the fact that a woman cannot simply get off the train whenever she wishes. She must have the station's consent to disembark. That requires us to examine the workings of male motivation as well, which is a subject for another post.

The Red Pill for Women

1 upvotes · 11 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

We all speak from where we are coming from.

Since your place in the sexual market is probably best described as "wife and mother", you have no interest in participating in the cock train, and thus no incentive to keep it going.

My role in the sexual market could best be described as "station on the cock railway", so ensuring that many women are riding the train is in my interest.

But what about the women who ride it? Where does their interest lie?

It depends what their goals are. If they wish to be a "wife and mother", it is detrimental. But so is being single in their twenties and building a career. So W&Ms should not only be staying off the cock train, they should be getting married in their early twenties, and therefore not even in the same area as the train tracks.

So if we subtract the W&Ms from the cock train, who's left? Well, women who don't want kids.

What does the cock train do for them? Well, that's obvious, it's a nice, intoxicating supply of alpha male cock. If a woman doesn't want kids, why else would she get married? And if she doesn't want to get married, what's wrong with the train?

Apparently the way to justify calling all MRA's violent and rape apologists is by making every man a straw man.....

1 upvotes · 8 February 2013 · /r/MensRights

Well, let me see if I can elucidate my meaning with an example.

From what I wrote above, we can separate possible responses into three possible categories:

- Silence the speaker. (Kill the summoner.)
- Refute the argument (Kill the beast he summoned against us.)
- Refute the best version of the argument that we can think of. (Kill the beast AND the most horrifying zombie nightmare we can construct from its corpse.)

So, I say that our society's acceptance of the premise of gender constructivism (the idea that inherent differences between sexes don't exist) has broken our mating protocols, with disastrous results. And then some SRS reader says I am a neckbeard loser.

According to those three options, I can:

- Get a bunch of RedPill-type women to imply that I am sexy, while he is a skinny little wussy vegetarian cowardly nancyboy, and shame him into silence by playing on his insecurities.
- Show evidence that I am financially, socially and sexually successful, and am happy and content with my life, and refute his argument.
- Construct a stronger version of his argument: "You are implying that men who say the mating process is broken do so because they have failed to prosper in it, and do not do so because they have actually seen inherent problems".
- Then refute that stronger version: "Statistics show problems in modern relationships that did not exist several decades ago. Specifically the divorce rate, reported happiness of married couples, etc. Since statistics are not loser males, and are not fabricated by loser males, what they show cannot solely be due to blame-shifting on the part of loser males."

Apparently the way to justify calling all MRA's violent and rape apologists is by making every man a straw man.....

1 upvotes · 7 February 2013 · /r/MensRights

the situation he's describing where this tactic would be used is to shut down the emotional "you're a loser" rebuttal to an intelligent, well-argued point.

Emphasis added.

If you have respect for the truth, you don't shut down opposing arguments. You rebut them.

In fact, if you want to make a case that what you say is true, you not only have to rebut the argument your opponent makes, you have to fix any flaws in it you can find and fix.

It's not enough to defeat the monster they send to destroy you. You must also defeat the most horrifying zombie nightmare you are able to construct from its corpse.

Apparently the way to justify calling all MRA's violent and rape apologists is by making every man a straw man.....

1 upvotes · 6 February 2013 · /r/MensRights

Interesting, but I'm not really a fan of this argument.

Why not? Well, several points:

- Last in the video, but most importantly, he advocates arguing tactics which do not appeal to evidence or other mechanisms of truth. For tactical reasons. The problem here is that what he characterizes as the essential difference between what he calls "the new right", and the cultural marxist movement (which includes such things as postmodernism, feminism, etc)... is that his "new right" supposedly respects and seeks out the truth. But here he is advocating they abandon the high ground he perceives them to have, for tactical reasons.
- He effortlessly makes an unsupported leap from the notion of the superior veracity of his "new right" to their moral superiority... the notion that because they have a clearer picture of the truth, they are morally superior. But anyone with respect for the truth knows that you cannot get "ought" from "is", so ultimately "should" is just a way of saying "I want", and it has nothing to do with the truth.
- Finally, oh gods and stray animals, not another suit-wearing, chain-smoking, smug objectivist arguing a point by using the ancestral environment as "evidence". It's another example of the narrative fallacy... the belief that a hypothesis is likely to be true because it sounds sensible. But sounding sensible isn't evidence. Evidence is evidence. And we know so little about the ancestral environment that it is not available to us as evidence of anything.

So this guy is not, really, as he claims to be, some sort of annointed knight of the truth, but just another guy telling himself what he wants to hear.

The fact that I happen to share a lot of his sociopolitical views does not blind me to this.

Hypergamy

1 upvotes · 4 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Each one teach one. I'll link him to this conversation. Hopefully, he'll start clicking links and that will be enough.

User on RooshV Forum analyses the new nice-guy shaming trend.

1 upvotes · 4 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

In this case, the hamster is right and the hamster is lying.

NiceGuys are indeed really not being nice because they're nice, but because they want something. Yes, they really are manipulative jerks.

But Hamster is lying when she says that's why she friendzoned him. She likes other kinds of manipulative jerks (PUAs and Redpills with game).

She friendzoned him for being unattractive. She is just finding a negative quality about him, one he really has, but which has nothing to do with her decision, in order to rationalize her behaviour against her belief that she likes men to be nice to her.

Hamsters like to claim that nice guys are only nice until they realize they've been friendzoned. A retro-rationalization. She's justifying her behaviour based on information she could not possibly have had at the time she behaved.

There nothing wrong with women friendzoning NiceGuy. There is everything wrong with running about telling men to be NiceGuy because they claim that's what they want.

From The Annals of The Caveman Game: Rihanna back with Chris Brown

1 upvotes · 3 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Anyone who didn't see this coming, please turn yourself in to the Federal Witless Protection Program.

What would you do for sex? (xpost)

1 upvotes · 3 February 2013 · /r/MensRights

Move four feet from the chair I'm sitting in now, to the bed, and wake up the girl who's asleep on it.

The disturbing trend in western men...

1 upvotes · 3 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

The rest is just instinct.

Nah, there's other stuff you need to learn. But when you become immune to shaming, learning it will not be hard to do.

"85% of all men would skip the Superbowl to have sex with their wife"

1 upvotes · 3 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I would skip the superbowl to have sex with their wives, too.

Actually, I would skip the superbowl to play Planetside 2. Or take a nap. Or eat a sandwich.

Just about anything, really.

How is CVD (Cardiovascular Disease) a womens issue? "Go Red for Women" makes me pretty mad, especially when they BS statistics.

1 upvotes · 2 February 2013 · /r/MensRights

By the age the average woman who dies of heart disease dies of heart disease, the average man is already dead.

In response to a front page post saying "If I'm a woman walking down the street naked, you STILL don't have the right to rape me."

1 upvotes · 1 February 2013 · /r/MensRights

No, rapists are people too. Are you saying that every rapist is unchanegably a rapist? How is that true at all?

I am saying that in order to be a rapist, you have to be someone who doesn't care what others want.

A rapist is not someone who thought she was into it when she was really just too shy and embarrassed to say no. A rapist is not someone who gets him drunk so he'll forget his Mormon principles and just fucking do her, already.

A rapist is someone who knows damn well that the other person hasn't consented, then uses force, fear, or deception to get have sex with them anyway. Almost by definition, that is a person who doesn't care what other people want.

Men SHOULD be able to process the fact that they SHOULDN'T rape people ... Men currently do not do that.

And neither do women. People often take steps to get what they want, and are willing to step on other people to get it.

We can sit around crying about how they are bad people, or we deal with the world as it is.

Yes, some people are mean. So what? What's next in that chain of reasoning? "People shouldn't be mean"? What kind of solution is that to anything?

Are you denying people volition?

I cannot deny people volition. It is not in my power to give it to them or withhold it from them. They have precisely as much as they have.

Are you saying that it's inherently wrong (or even amoral) for people to want to wear scanty clothing, specifically women?

No, you tiresome person, I am saying that "right" and "wrong" are words that the human species made up, to describe how we want others to behave. But we will not get them behave that way unless we give them some incentive.

Moral arguments carry no water. People do what they have incentives to do. If you want people to stop raping, then what is your plan to incentivize that change in behaviour?

I have a plan for motivating that change. Do you?

In response to a front page post saying "If I'm a woman walking down the street naked, you STILL don't have the right to rape me."

1 upvotes · 31 January 2013 · /r/MensRights

Saying

If I'm walking down the street naked, you still don't have the right to rape me.

is like saying

I have the right not to be eaten by wolves, even if I am running through the woods at night naked and smeared with barbeque sauce.

Most humans would agree to this. But most wolves wouldn't. They don't understand the concept of rights, and wouldn't agree with us about they were if they did. There's no sense going on about rights, because the only audience is humans, not wolves, and humans aren't the ones eating people.

This is what happens when idealists clash with reality. They tend to complain to realists that someone hasn't made the reality go away for them, so that they can stay in their safe idealized world that they have constructed in their head, where things like rights and justice and fairness are things that objectively exist and can be measured, instead of just ways we made up of describing how we want others to behave.

Third Wave Feminists argue equalists are feminists.

1 upvotes · 26 January 2013 · /r/MensRights

And you just went full Godwin.

"What If We Responded to Sexual Assault by Limiting Men's Freedom Like We Limit Women's?"

1 upvotes · 22 January 2013 · /r/MensRights

What if we responded to paternity fraud by limiting women's freedom the way we limit men's?

[FR] 1. Not give a fuck 2. That is all.

1 upvotes · 13 January 2013 · /r/seduction

statements comes off being a resentful, bitter beta

And this is why most guys are AFCs, and men in general are in such bad shape. Because once we shake it off, we don't give a crap about other men.

I care about men's rights even though this shit doesn't happen to me. Why? Because I want other guys to have happy lives, too.

It's stuff like this that makes me sick

1 upvotes · 11 January 2013 · /r/MensRights

Also, it's unfair to the zebra.

And this is actually a big problem in the bdsm community. A lot of women show up asking for advice on how to paint their zebra brown, instead of looking for a horse instead.

It's stuff like this that makes me sick

1 upvotes · 11 January 2013 · /r/MensRights

Lotta sexism in that link. Keeps talking about how women should get whatever they want sexually, and guys should "please their partners".

If someone doesn't get off on being dominant, they shouldn't fucking do it, anymore than someone should be submissive and get whipped just because their partner wants it.

I think that this trope of "How do I make my vanilla boyfriend into a dom?" (which occurs on a biweekly basis or so in /r/BDSMcommunity) is nothing but women being too shy and lazy to own up to their desires when finding a relationship partner, so they try to make the one they found into the one they wanted.

If you don't get turned on by the idea of spanking women, you shouldn't have to do it.

Newspaper article asserting that women who own lots of guns must have penises.

1 upvotes · 1 January 2013 · /r/MensRights

That's the plain and simple truth, even if it's not true.

I think we are done here.

"The End of Men and the Rise of Women." This is not gender equality! This is sexism!

1 upvotes · 30 December 2012 · /r/MensRights

http://www.reddit.com/r/MensRights/comments/15o10e/the_end_of_men_and_the_rise_of_women_this_is_not/c7odkac

"The End of Men and the Rise of Women." This is not gender equality! This is sexism!

1 upvotes · 30 December 2012 · /r/MensRights

That being said, implying that a woman won't get anywhere without a man is absolutely stupid. We're not helpless creatures.

What you're saying here is essentially "Women can do that, too."

This is true in the same sense that I can play violin for the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra. I theoretically could learn that skill, and do that.

But I haven't and I can't, so I don't get to take credit for it.

There is nothing preventing a woman from learning to operate a power plant, or even to build one. But can you do it? What skills do you personally have?

Other than trying to take credit for things you could potentially do. Anyone with a triple digit IQ, opposable thumbs, and functioning vision and hearing could potentially learn just about anything that human beings have so far come up with to do.

The fact is, if men suddenly vanished, there wouldn't be enough female engineers, construction workers, plumbers, electricians, welders, and so forth to keep civilization running.

Now, if men gradually vanished, women could probably step up, but they would find in the process of doing so that they had to assume most of all of the traits and behaviours that feminism associates with "toxic masculinity". They would have to learn to be violent. They would have to learn to repress their emotions. They would have to learn to be more callous and less nurturing. These traits are simply the price of being able to do what men do.

Women don't have inferior capabilities, on average, but they are far less risk-taking, less hard-working, and less self-sacrificing. And these are the things they would have to learn before they could ever hope to do men's jobs.

The fact that they don't reveals that men's jobs are usually more burden than privilege. Women don't do men's work not because they aren't allowed, nor because they can't, but because they don't have to.

So you want to stop men from getting raped in prison? Then RACIALLY SEGREGATE PRISONS.

1 upvotes · 29 December 2012 · /r/MensRights

Prisons are gender-segregated to prevent inmates from becoming pregnant.

That's a good and valid reason. I hadn't thought of that. Although I suspect Norplant for female inmates would be cheaper than separate prisons.

However, I suspect that the actual reason in practice is to protect female inmates from male ones, which people think is a moral imperative despite its implication that males are both more violent and less deserving of protection. But flip this into a racial context, and suddenly the implication that one group is more violent and less deserving of protection is seen as morally repugnant.

I'm not in favour of racially segregating prisons. I'm in favour of sexually desegregating them.

When there are no more special safe nice prisons for women, it might open people's eyes to how unacceptable prison conditions actually are.

So you want to stop men from getting raped in prison? Then RACIALLY SEGREGATE PRISONS.

1 upvotes · 29 December 2012 · /r/MensRights

Sorry, I meant to write the inverse (!A->!B), not the contrapositive (!B->!A). Then I did it twice because I copied and pasted. Fixed it now.

Read the whole thing and you'll see what I'm on about. A statement implies only its contrapositive, but he tried to infer its inverse.

College Says "Men Working" Sign is Sexist. Construction crew forced to stop work until sign is removed. (x/post from r/nottheonion)

1 upvotes · 6 December 2012 · /r/MensRights

My area is southern California, and I've never seen a single one. Where's your area?

[Diagram] An attempt at visualizing the -ism's involved with (wo)(mens) rights

1 upvotes · 3 December 2012 · /r/MensRights

Yes, it would have been a better picture if it said "equal rights", but even that is problematic where, say, reproductive rights, are concerned.

[Diagram] An attempt at visualizing the -ism's involved with (wo)(mens) rights

1 upvotes · 3 December 2012 · /r/MensRights

The problem is, any time you use the words "free" and "market" in sequence, people automatically assume you are a stereotype of a rightwing nutcase who thinks Barrack Obama was born in Africa, hates homosexuals, and yearns for society to return to a fantasy version of the 1950s that never actually existed.

But what free market really means is letting people do what they choose to with their lives. In a non-economic context, this is "social liberalism". In economic contexts, it's called a "free market".

This is the best model, in a gender politics context, for removing any bad effects of our personal ideas about what men and women are like. Because we just let people do what they do, and if we're wrong, they'll show us.

Feminist logic in regards to MRA's

1 upvotes · 1 December 2012 · /r/MensRights

That's my point. NAFALters always NAFALT to us. You never have a go at femem and their ilk for what they say... until we notice them and they start embarrassing the movement.

Look out! It's a Nice Guy! DESTROY HIM!

1 upvotes · 1 December 2012 · /r/MensRights

r/seduction, borne out by personal experience.

It's unfortunate that the universe has to be like this, but it's better to learn from it than cry about it.

Exhibit A in why I as a gay dude do NOT support feminists and increasingly identify with the MRM. These hateful FEMEN idiots don't give a fuck about gay rights, they're just appropriating our cause for their sick anti-male attention whoring purposes.

1 upvotes · 20 November 2012 · /r/MensRights

The penis is the instrument of control. The wallet is the objective of control.

Feminists Don't Want You To See This! The Most Controversial Men's Rights Video Ever Made! - YouTube

1 upvotes · 20 November 2012 · /r/MensRights

"Guys, I'm an MRA like you, but we seriously need to rein in the misogyny!" in 3...2...1...

[NSFW] Banner image of the feminist protest group, "Femen". No, they don't hate men at all.

1 upvotes · 19 November 2012 · /r/MensRights

Actually, I'm doing pretty well in that respect now... but you wouldn't believe how much crap I had to not put up with from a lot of crazy women first.

Why is it that most people have such a negative view of this subreddit?

1 upvotes · 17 November 2012 · /r/seduction

They don't like men having power over sex.

What are the benefits of debating with feminists?

1 upvotes · 17 November 2012 · /r/MensRights

"You are old," said the youth, "And your jaws are too weak
For anything tougher than suet;
Yet you finished the goose, with the bones and the beak—
Pray, how did you manage to do it?"

"In my youth," said his father, "I took to the law,
And argued each case with my wife;
And the muscular strength which it gave to my jaw,
Has lasted the rest of my life."

Shit test response for a girl randomly calling you creepy.

1 upvotes · 16 November 2012 · /r/seduction

It's far better than eating shit and frowning!

How does a man get raped by a woman? I know it happens, I just don't know how. I'd say I'm ignorant but it's not like society is rubbing it in my face...

1 upvotes · 14 November 2012 · /r/MensRights

Because not all rapes are carried out by physical force. If you understand how a man could rape a woman without strong-arming her, then you understand how a woman could rape a man.

Ludwig von Mises on "extreme feminists"

1 upvotes · 14 November 2012 · /r/MensRights

Weeeelll, as the far left has assured us, racism is prejudice plus power, so no member of a marginalized racial minority can possibly be racist.

How to Seks for your man

1 upvotes · 14 November 2012 · /r/MensRights

Website's logo is a man on his knees to a woman.

No further data is necessary.

I'm fine in a low-key environment, in a bar the conversation struggles. What's going on?

1 upvotes · 7 November 2012 · /r/seduction

Yeah. There's a particular brain-hurts-can't-think reaction that introverts get in noisy environments.

I'm fine in a low-key environment, in a bar the conversation struggles. What's going on?

1 upvotes · 5 November 2012 · /r/seduction

I have a very good personality in all places except a loud-music blasting, band playing bar.

I have a calm, collected energy.

I feel 10x more comfortable in the day, walking around, then once you have 1000s of people walking around and it's BLARING loud and there's 500 guys taller than you and so many distractions,

You are an introvert.

This is not a disadvantage. You just need to realize that most PUAs are extroverts, and can't imagine anyone being any other way... so you'll need to adapt their advice a little before following it.

35 Tips for Better Game

1 upvotes · 31 October 2012 · /r/seduction

Leave “smooth” pick ups to James Bond. Here in the real world you will say and do dumb stuff. How you react to your fuck ups shows the girl how confident you are.

Cannot stress this enough.

And there we have it.

1 upvotes · 30 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

Does it?

Why are we to talk about women's rights activism, in the absence of feminism? Is there some non-feminist WRA movement I haven't heard about?

Feminism's best dirty trick was to convince the world it was synonymous with women's rights. But to some extent, that trick has created its own reality.

OP's screenshot is full of the same old canards: 1 in 3 women gets beaten, women's problems are worse and more pressing than men's, and so on.

Are we to pretend this person is not drawing from feminist sources? Are we to pretend that she has nothing in common with them, and is, in fact, some sort of pure, platonic women's rights activist of a sort seldom if ever seen in the wild?

Are we so desperate to dodge the fatuous charge of "mithogyny!" that we bend over backwards into deliberate and calculated naivete?

And there we have it.

1 upvotes · 28 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

Not exactly.

We do say that, in the first world, men's issues have indeed become worse.

But that's not why we focus on men's issues instead of women's. We do so because we are a men's rights forum. There is nothing preventing us as individuals from working to support the rights of women, nor do we pretend that men's rights are the only gender politics issue that is ever important.

Criticizing the MRM for not focusing on women's rights is like criticizing a cat show for not having judging categories for dogs. We don't do it, but we also don't claim to, and we never said that it doesn't need to be done.

A handy quotation by Noam Chomsky for those who call you a misogynist for speaking out for the issues of men

1 upvotes · 26 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

Somewhat the same. Except that conservative ideologues call dissenters stupid, while liberals call dissenters evil.

Controversial Claim. Still true if you replace "racist" with "misogynist".

1 upvotes · 25 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

Ayn Rand's major thesis is that wealth redistribution is morally wrong. The flaw in this argument is that you cannot get "ought" from "is", so any moral "truths" you wish to argue from, you must invent, leaving them as undischarged premises if your audience does not accept them as axioms.

My thesis is completely different. My thesis is that wealth redistribution doesn't work.

How to get rid of subconscious approval seeking?

1 upvotes · 24 October 2012 · /r/seduction

Indeed. You will stop seeking approval when you experience getting it by not seeking it.

Hi /r/mensrights. Girl here. I was wondering if I can get some advice? (If I'm in the wrong subreddit, please tell me where to go)

1 upvotes · 22 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

I can't comment on your misfortunes. I would hope that these sorts of things would not happen to people.

However, fearing all men because you remember being attacked by some men is morally equivalent to fearing blacks because you remember being attacked by a black person.

No matter what you think of abortion, know biological facts: 50% to 90 % of all conceived human eggs never get implanted. If life starts at Conception (Biden, Romney, ...), then God is the world's most prolific abortionist. Most of Heaven's souls never had a neuron or feeling.

1 upvotes · 21 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

The problem with abortion as it stands is not that it's an obvious moral wrong...it's that it is an obvious double standard.

Women can choose not to be parents while enjoying a full sex life... men are denied that choice... they have to play fertility roulette. With really high stakes.

"What is the difference between sexism and misogyny?" "One is where a man is rude to women, the other is where a man hates women." Yeah, totally not that one of them is specific to women while the other is gender neutral...

1 upvotes · 19 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

What is the difference between normality and feminism?

One of them is where women are rude to men, the other is where women hate men.

Catholics assaulted, spat upon, and spray-painted as they defend cathedral from feminists

1 upvotes · 15 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

Atheism doesn't need an empirical grounding, because according to the way empiricism itself works, atheism is the default position. People often lose sight of that because there are so many theists. But the default position isn't "the most popular one", it's the one that says "no, that isn't true".

Theism: Hey guys, the universe was made by a big magic dude! He loves you very much, and if you don't follow his rules, he'll burn you alive for eternity.

Atheism: Do you have any evidence of this whatsoever?

Theism: You can't prove I'm wrong!

Disgusted in my brother

1 upvotes · 13 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

I still cannot fathom how lazy a person could possibly be that they couldn't get off their ass to file for unemployment.

Not lazy at all. Lazy people who don't want to work have no problem filling out forms to get free money.

People who don't look for work, but won't take handouts, are frequently paralyzed with shame.

A handy quotation by Noam Chomsky for those who call you a misogynist for speaking out for the issues of men

1 upvotes · 9 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

Please. Leftists tend to sling mud even more than conservatives. Not only that, but they tend to sling mud first,

"Buuuut dadddddy, heeeeeee started it!" is not going to cut any ice with me.

As far as right and left go, the people you refer to as "tradcons", who pedestalize women and don't give a shit about men, they aren't very good conservatives. Most "tradcons" are just as ignorant and naive as most "libtards".

NACALT?

guys like me, Demonspawn, mayonesa, the guys at <http://amerika.org>

I followed the link, read a little bit, saw more totalitarianism, more control, more sacrifice of the (usually male) individual for the needs of "society" (which is somehow not composed of individuals).

Conservative authoritarians always seem to spend a great deal of time explaining just why it is important for society to have values, but then leap, unsupported, to the conclusion that those values must necessarily be theirs.

They say that freedom has consequences, and must be restricted when they want to stop two dudes from kissing, but will cry as loudly as any liberal victocrat about the sanctity of individual freedom if someone wants to stop a bunch of dudes from praying to Jesus.

The cold, hard truth that no ideologue wants to admit to is that there is no force in society that acts on principle. Everyone, conservatives included, is just selecting arguments that appeal to different principles, based upon what their self-interest is. If they want to do something, they pick a "freedom and individual rights" argument. If they want to stop others doing something, they pick a "stability, peace, prosperity, and stability" argument.

They are correct to say that freedom is not inherently good, but they fail (deliberately) to see that their values are not inherently good either.

Egalitarians, on the other hand, want to make the same mistakes as feminists, and tell us this is somehow helping. It's not.

The mistake they make is to imagine that equality is a thing. Before you can strive for "equality", you must define it. They have not done so.

Those who originally used the term meant "equality before the law"... the principle that the law was not intended to take cognizance of wealth, or rank, or honors. This is of course, sound. You cannot expect people to serve a society if it grants them only second-class status.

But the self-styled egalitarians have gone beyond that, trying to make people "equal" in other ways, and I'm not even sure what that would mean in practice... and neither are they.

We aren't all equal, and the equality farce perpetuated further on our culture ever since the French Revolution of 1789 is responsible for the degradation of our culture as traditional masculine-centric cohesive society has given way to a liberal feminine-centric dysfunctional society.

You tip your hand when you point to 1789 instead of 1776. The revolution of 1776 was justified with individual freedom, rights and prosperity as arguments against the putative divine authority of a king. There is no litmus test of principle which 1776 will pass, and 1789 will fail. To distinguish between the two, one must turn to examining the results.

Conservatives, egalitarians, feminists, and most all other -isms I know of... all fail to understand that the glue which holds society together is not values but incentives.

Our society is collapsing not because our "values" (whatever those are) are no longer "masculine" (whatever that is). It is collapsing because men no longer have a concrete incentive to contribute.

For a society to be stable and prosperous, everyone must benefit as they contribute, and contribute as they benefit. Otherwise, those who are giving without getting will wise up and stop, while those who are getting without giving argue that they somehow "deserve" larger and larger shares.

Conservatism is just another flavour of that inevitable collapse.

Stop! You're Oppressing our rights! [x-post from r/atheism]

1 upvotes · 8 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

Judaism, Islam, and Christianity are all obsolete and will be swept into the dustbin of history in the next 200 years.

The best minds have already dismissed them.

Who cares what they endorse?

Connecting the pathological fear of husbands having power with the peter pan manboy syndrome. | Dalrock

1 upvotes · 5 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

Power and responsibility go together. We are only responsible for that which we can control.

Why I am MRA at 18, and Why I believe we need to take aggressive (non-violent) action against feminism

1 upvotes · 2 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

She was certainly a misandrist and a sexist, but how do we know whether or not she was a feminist?

Needed links / studies about women who wilfully get drunk to improve their own attitudes / chances at getting sex

1 upvotes · 17 September 2012 · /r/MensRights

It's rape. The Patriarchy made them do it. You are personally responsible.

Study shows that both men and women look down on prospective partners for too many sexual encounters. "Slut-shaming" not restricted to women only.

1 upvotes · 11 September 2012 · /r/MensRights

Don't mistake Heartiste or Roosh for the character of someone practicing seduction skills.

Ultimate, seduction/pickup is a skill set. It doesn't determine the character of the person practicing it, any more than people who can and do fix cars or play musical instruments are necessarily a certain kind of person.

As for Heartiste (I don't read Roosh and can't say), he's not a whole person at all. He's a character created by an anonymous columnist, a character whose very presentation is about telling the bitter truth and not caring what people think of him. Attempts to discern the actual personality of the author from it would be a bit like attempting to characterize this guy, or her from what they write.

I actually find myself agreeing with about 80% of what Heartiste says, aside from the weird way he seems to care about women's sexual histories. That's a beta-male sucker move, because it doesn't matter if they're going to be faithful unless you marry or commit to them (the biggest beta male sucker move of all). I'm not the first, I won't be the last, and I don't care.

As for his attitude, who gives a crap what some stranger feels about women in general? I am not the police of him, and policing people for negative attitudes about women smacks of white-knighting, anyway. We only experience him through his column, and it's only here to provide us with his suggestions about new ways to look at stuff.

Going into Daffy Duck mode crying "Theee? Theee? Mithogyny!" every time someone says something negative about women doesn't really add a lot of value. Unless somebody has, and is willing to use, some sort of unusual power to harm the women he comes in contact with, being a misogynist is nothing more than an odious personal habit, like smelling bad or disliking cats.

The same thing goes for misandry, racism, etc.

Edit: on second thought, disliking cats is worse. Cats are small inoffensive domestic animals that cannot nether defend themselves against a full-grown human, nor turn the doorknob to escape. They also do not have the the weight and majesty of the law, and a society full of beta males, eager to defend them.

A Post you'll Never Find in r/Feminism

1 upvotes · 11 September 2012 · /r/MensRights

Our lived realities have never conformed to the feminist view that women are morally superior to men, are compassionate, nurturing, maternal and also very valiant under siege. This is a myth.

Cool.

Women don't have to be better than anyone else to deserve human rights.

Agreed. But they do have an obligation not to be worse.

the minute they meet another woman, it's: she's going to be my fairy godmother, my best friend, the mother I never had. And when that's not the case we say, "well, she's the evil stepmother."

Indeed. This is the very definition of borderline personality disorder. Idealize others according to one's own inner needs. Then vilify those others the moment they fail to live up to the ideal they never even knew about.

The conclusion is that there is something about the workplace that is deadly to all living things and men adapt more.

True, but not inherent. We have a male culture that teaches us to do this. Women could learn this, too... if they were not taught by feminism to have no respect for male values.

Women are silenced not because men beat up on us but because we don't want to be shunned by our little cliques.

Brilliant, and, oh, so true.

Kobe Bryant's wife gets 75 million+3 mansions in divorce settlement.

1 upvotes · 10 September 2012 · /r/MensRights

But if two women marry each other, and then divorce, who will the court find to give them each a house?

Height and seducing women?

1 upvotes · 10 September 2012 · /r/seduction

Who cares what they say they want? Listening to a woman's advice on seduction is like listening to a child's advice on parenting.

Police cowardice in Vancouver BC

1 upvotes · 2 September 2012 · /r/MensRights

Okay, educate me.

Thoughts on "Women are Great!"; or "A million downvotes and not one dime given"

1 upvotes · 1 September 2012 · /r/MensRights

This feel-good crap subjects women to a tyranny of low expectations. We need to start expecting more responsibility, self-reliance, and achievement from women, instead of praising them for doing any damn thing while being female.

My little brother is teased for carrying pepper spray and called things like "pussy" while I as a female am praised for doing the same. What the hell?

1 upvotes · 27 August 2012 · /r/MensRights

That's bullshit, I'm a 200 pound black belt, and I still carry pepper spray (because if someone gets aggressive, it's better than having to hurt them).

How do you respond to "Are you trying to fuck me?"

1 upvotes · 25 August 2012 · /r/seduction

"Are you currently flat on you back, naked, with your legs spread, screaming 'Oh my god!' ? No? Well, then the answer is 'Not yet'."

"Girls only" organization is "shocked" that Augusta was, until recently, males only. Uhh...wat?

1 upvotes · 22 August 2012 · /r/MensRights

It's sad that you needed the /s tag, but you actually did.

Announcing FeMRA, the /r/ainbow of /r/ladymra. Moderated (lightly) by our resident video FeMRAs, GirlWritesWhat and TyphonBlue

1 upvotes · 27 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

oh, so because I point out a negative in what your doing I am therefore white knighting?

No, white knighting is defending a woman, or women in general, in a situation when it's her responsibility to defend herself, and to decide if she needs defending at all.

You do not get to decide how submissively women should behave, or what should be done about it if they are being expected to behave more submissively than they want to. That's up to them.

putting the alleged suicide of a fucked up downright evil person into context .

1 upvotes · 25 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

That's ridiculous. You characterize a storm of criticism to make it sound like a lynch mob.

putting the alleged suicide of a fucked up downright evil person into context .

1 upvotes · 25 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

If attention is all it takes to destroy you, then the seeds of your destruction are within you, not without.

I just thought I'd let you guys know that according to a poster from the same group that shames people who generalize aspies (SRS). My aspergers has lead me to be indoctrinated by you guys.

1 upvotes · 15 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

Here we see HSP locked in a life or death struggle with a thread that has gotten all silly.

What countries don't treat men like shit?

1 upvotes · 13 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

Men in the middle east are treated better than women in the middle east, but worse than men in the west.

These are societies with huge underclasses who are not much removed from slavery.

What countries don't treat men like shit?

1 upvotes · 13 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

Not sure if serious.

The vast majority of men in islamic countries are treated even worse than men are in the west.

"No means NO!" - inspired from a question from OkCupid, put to /r/MensRights

1 upvotes · 13 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

(E) There are ways to say no that mean no, and there are ways to say no that don't mean no. Displaying the social skills necessary to tell the difference is one of the criteria of fitness as a mate.

I was in a room full of women when this commercial came on I got looked at like I was Satan himself.

1 upvotes · 11 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

Quick question: just whom is that whistle supposed to summon?

Regarding "sexism = prejudice + power"

1 upvotes · 9 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

Power is defined as the ability to make others do what you want.

Nope. Power is the rate at which energy is transferred, measured in Joules per second.

Dolph Lundgren teaches YOU how to not be creepy!

1 upvotes · 5 July 2012 · /r/seduction

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=tNfGyIW7aHM>

Help me not to hate. Please.

1 upvotes · 2 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

1. Remember that anger is not the same as hatred.
2. Make friends with some anti-feminist women.

The 10 types of guys women have to choose from (what type are we, then?)

1 upvotes · 2 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

I appreciate the sentiment behind what you say, but you're implying that being interested in sex rather than other things is brutish.

Have another red pill, brother.

If this had been of women it would have been grounds for feminist outrage over objectification and creepiness.

1 upvotes · 27 June 2012 · /r/MensRights

I don't see anything wrong with this site, but I would see something wrong with feminists being outraged over a female version.

And they probably would be.

Sedit, what have you all found as the best advice for staying out of the friend zone?

1 upvotes · 26 June 2012 · /r/seduction

You do not have to stay in the friendzone. The answer to "let's just be friends" is "no".

You can't force her to sex you. She can't force to stick around if she won't.

Invest your time in someone who appreciates you.

Do you respect guys like Roissy hiding behind a keyboard?

1 upvotes · 14 June 2012 · /r/seduction

Then instead of trying to say nasty things about how he "must be scared" or "can't back up what he says", why don't you go after what he says directly?

Why not take the high road?

Why not stick to the issues?

Why not start your own blog where you either debunk everything he says (if you disagree with the content) or point out how he's being an ass (if you disagree with the presentation)?

What's important is the issues, not who Roissy is. That's why I hate seeing people asked who they really are, don't like being asked, and don't ask others (no, I didn't, that was an analogy, I really don't care)... because it doesn't matter who we are. I, for instance, am actually a Labrador Retriever typing on a special keyboard, with my nose.

It's what we say and do that's important. If we don't reveal personal identities or details, there's no way to get distracted by ad hominem crap. And that works both ways. You can't make fun of Roissy's taste in shirts, and he can't say your girlfriend is ugly, because you have no idea what he wears, and he hasn't seen your girlfriend. Or girlfriends. Or boyfriend. Or latest one-night-stand.

So let's try taking the high road right now, just as an exercise.

What is it about his character persona about singing the praises of masculinity, and boasting about his own, that you think makes him less worth listening to? Does it contradict his message? Make it less effective? Or is it just generally insulting?

(Feel free to rant.)

Do you respect guys like Roissy hiding behind a keyboard?

1 upvotes · 14 June 2012 · /r/seduction

I don't run around making fun of people telling them I'm a real man and how followed by:

I know you aren't going to share your real name. My name is ... I'll be waiting on yours, won't get it though. Same with Roissy. Probably too scared. Can't back up what you say on the internet.

Oops. How's that foot taste?

I'm concerned, however, about this inability of yours to understand analogies. Roissy uses a pseudonym probably for much the same reason you do. Because that's the way things are done on the internet... people are pseudonymous, when they are not anonymous. Nobody cares what his real name is any more than they care about yours.

I don't really care what your beef is with him. Perhaps you are thin-skinned enough to feel a sting when he accuses the internet at large of not being "a real man". Or maybe you are just defending thin-skinned people in general. I don't know.

But the fact that your stated beliefs are inconsistent with your actions will be not change no matter how much you try to evade the issue by picking a quarrel with me.

Have you tried asking him his name?

Do you respect guys like Roissy hiding behind a keyboard?

1 upvotes · 14 June 2012 · /r/seduction

Are you having trouble following this conversation?

Here, I'll simplify it for you:

1. You ask why Roissy hasn't spontaneously coughed up his real name.
2. I ask why you haven't spontaneously coughed up yours.
3. You say someone else has to go first.
4. I ask why you haven't "gone first" with Roissy.
5. You, now evidently in total confusion, say you are unwilling to do that.
6. I write you an explanation of what's happened so far, so that hopefully it will start making sense to you.

Do you respect guys like Roissy hiding behind a keyboard?

1 upvotes · 14 June 2012 · /r/seduction

So you'll throw up a picture with your real name before you expect Roissy to, then?

Gay shaming has to stop

1 upvotes · 13 June 2012 · /r/MensRights

You're getting closer to seeing your own attitude. But you're still not there.

You say you only want to shame "certain elements" of the pickup community, and use this as your argument that you are not a bigot, and that, by extension, feminists who try to slut-shame "players" are not applying a double standard.

You say that you are criticizing pickup techniques, not sexual promiscuity (as if there were a binary difference between the two).

What you do not realize is that your negative attitude about seduction techniques that work on women, and for men, and your willingness, nay, your eagerness, to misunderstand them, is a result of your negative view of promiscuous men... you think they simply must be doing something wicked to get women into bed with them, and you focus on the techniques that you can most easily fit a negative spin to.

I would wager that you don't turn the same critical eye on seduction techniques that work on men and for women.

You don't have an anthropologist's understanding of pickup, much less a PUA's. An eagerness to condemn something without understanding it is a sign of prejudice.... in fact, it's what the latin roots of the word mean.

How to unseduce a girl?

1 upvotes · 12 June 2012 · /r/seduction

So how how do I get out of this mess?

What mess?

She's the one who's having crazytime, not you. You don't have to do anything. In fact, just don't do anything, and eventually she'll go away, or do something stalkerish. If she does, have her arrested.

Do you respect guys like Roissy hiding behind a keyboard?

1 upvotes · 11 June 2012 · /r/seduction

So your actual name is "Binxstar", then?

To avoid counting civilian deaths, President Obama re-defined "militant" to mean "all military-age males in a strike zone".

1 upvotes · 30 May 2012 · /r/MensRights

No, that is what James Downey thinks. What do you think?

Having original thoughts is so important.

Nice guys don't finish last, boring guys do.

1 upvotes · 23 May 2012 · /r/seduction

The reasons why so many "assholes" get hot women is because they don't give a shit what people think of them and live a more exciting life.

Slight correction.

The reason so many "assholes" get hot women (and more women) is that they aren't really assholes at all. "Nice guys" just tell themselves that assertive guys are assholes, to make themselves feel better. They mistake assertive behaviour for aggressive behaviour, accidentally on purpose, because it feels better to tell themselves that they are too decent to be aggressive, than that they lack the nerve to be assertive.

Men and the perception that we only care about sex

1 upvotes · 22 May 2012 · /r/MensRights

I think this is why society thinks men are just sex crazed buffoons, because if a man grows up with sex all around him he won't know that there's more to life than just sex.

I think you have swallowed a lot of misandry, and need another red pill.

You are the one describing men who are interested in sex as "crazed buffoons" and "mouth-breathing, barbaric... morons".

You are participating in the demonization of the male sex drive. Stop it.

What do you all think of my take on feminists vs MRAs?

1 upvotes · 17 May 2012 · /r/MensRights

Your logical fallacy is: Middle ground fallacy.

Do women find intelligence attractive?

1 upvotes · 16 May 2012 · /r/seduction

... but once you've built in enough rapport, they can't get enough of you cramming it down their throat.

Question /MR/ - If men shouldn't be expected to pay for dates, how will I get a girlfriend?

1 upvotes · 12 May 2012 · /r/MensRights

Go start reading r/seduction.

Paying for dates actually makes you less attractive. You'll learn why, and what to do instead.

Regarding the Suppression of Men's Issues in Our Public Discourse

1 upvotes · 10 May 2012 · /r/MensRights

Fuck the GMP. Fuck everything about its limp-wristed, feminist-enabling drivel.

This cesspit is only starting to actually talk about men as anything but a means to an end because their feminist masters slapped them once too often.

But taking half a red pill, and having a website, does not make you a leading voice of the men's movement. It makes you some clueless guys who say vaguely man-related things on a website.

The people at GMP need to read articles about men's rights, not try to write them.

Daddy Justice reminds us that all a home invader has to do is find the list of who has restraining orders on them to find out who is not armed.

1 upvotes · 9 May 2012 · /r/MensRights

Not quite. You confuse levels of violence within different societies with target selection within a society with a given level of violence.

Being a Canadian may prevent you from owning a gun, but you seem to have concluded from this that not owning a gun makes you a Canadian.

Kacy Wilson, 28, rapes boy. Charged with "unlawful sexual activity." Article jokes about rape.

1 upvotes · 8 May 2012 · /r/MensRights

Well, I don't have any magic answers, but I would suggest we work from the double standard.

For years, there has been a sex panic about minors having sex with adults. And one reason this was held to be the worst thing in the world is that the adults were assumed to be always male. This led to the throw-away-the-key approach, and to notions that there are no degrees of this... age and maturity were irrelevant, consent was irrelevant.

But now that people are noticing that adult women do this, too. And when these standards are applied to someone they actually consider valuable by nature (a woman), they are shown to be ridiculous.

This gives us an in to point out that they are ridiculous when applied to men, too. If we demand that equal penalties be applied to men and women, then the penalties will have to be lightened, and made more appropriate to the individual incident... because no one can stand to see women treated like that.

Be careful what PUA information about yourself you give out to others. This guy has become an internet viral target now: "David Merkur, nerdy Lothario tracks online dates on a spreadsheet"

1 upvotes · 21 April 2012 · /r/seduction

No such thing as bad publicity.

Question about rape, thought I would come here as it seems most of you would be well informed:

1 upvotes · 14 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

The second example you gave, however, of the girl admitting to raping the underage boy and then claiming child support from him ... is fucking disgusting. What a heinous bitch.

Nope, that's not the disgusting part.

You see, blaming an individual woman for the actions of the court is ignoring or denying the misandry of the system.

Yes, she's a heinous bitch. But there will always be terrible people. That is not the problem. The problem is that the law will not defend a man from a terrible person who happens to be female. The problem is that the law will assist her in harming him instead.

If we focus on the bad acts of the woman, it's easily for feminists, conservatives, and other female supremacists to write it off as an individual bad act on the part of a crazy woman. We need to focus on the bias of the system.

Sisterofblackvisions confirms self as "troll" in /r/SubredditDrama

1 upvotes · 13 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

Oh, noes! Someone damaged the image of SRS with a false-flag post!!!

Pardon me while I laugh myself sick.

"SRS: The only subreddit with a death count."

1 upvotes · 12 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

Doesn't matter if it's true.

Why? Because... when has SRS ever waited for verification? They are on the receiving end of precisely what they dish out every day.

If it's true, it's a tragedy, and they are scum.

If it's false, they are getting a taste of their own ~~medicine~~poison, and they are still scum.

Feminists want all of the opportunities but none of the obligations? Discuss with me.

1 upvotes · 10 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

I don't know that every single feminist out there wants all of the opportunities. I do know that many of them want a great many opportunities.

I do know that I have never seen or heard a feminist demanding that a woman's obligations be increased or added to.

'Understanding Women:' A Book I'd Like To Destroy

1 upvotes · 10 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

Asking a woman for seduction advice is like asking a child for parenting advice.

Anti-MRA David Futrelle to Teach Coeds How to Have Good Sex

1 upvotes · 9 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

This is like letting your dog vacation at the taxidermist's.

The "This has nothing to do with Men's Rights!" phenomena from non-MRA's.

1 upvotes · 7 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

Because anything that happens to a woman happens to Women(tm), but anything that happens to a man is just... well, you know... stuff.

Basic female advice from a girl

1 upvotes · 7 April 2012 · /r/seduction

Would probably get deleted by a mod.

Some of the reddit mods are terrified of being associated with the men's rights movement.

I think I broke my brain with rage...

1 upvotes · 6 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

He was suggesting we should run someone down with our cars.

...

This came from another reddit thread. It's the kind of thing that makes me want to paint the walls with blood it gets me so mad.

How about we tone down the "replying without reading"?

female conservative columnists rails against feminists for wanting the government to take care of them. she also claims women are the smarter sex.

1 upvotes · 5 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

You're a fan of underhanded debating tactics?

'Two and a Half Men' Co-Creator "incensed industry colleagues by suggesting that there were too many television comedies focusing on women."

1 upvotes · 3 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

Would you care to defend the content to me?

No, I wouldn't. I don't care one way or the other. But regardless of the quality of the content, attacking the source is still a logical non sequitur.

This applies to both the article and the show.

Oh, wait... lemme guess, logic has a patriarchal bias?

So many things wrong with this. Where to begin?

1 upvotes · 3 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

Okay, I thought it would be evident, but I guess some explanation is required.

- I am saddened by the way many men just seem to collapse inward after divorce.
- I am disturbed by the way our culture makes it so difficult for men to sustain friendships.
- I am angered by the way the words "bromance" and "bromosexual" are used to shame men who actually have friends (while simultaneously slurring real homosexuals).
- I am appalled that men can actually be taught to shame themselves in this way.

Does that cover it?

I hate how women like this are considered rape victims, but society laughs in the face of any male who tries to say that he got raped.

1 upvotes · 1 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

Yes, but it isn't possible to be a rapist without knowing you are one. Mens rea is an element of a crime.

MensRights, we all want the same thing. Can we cut down on the adversarial nature of left vs right discourse in this subreddit?

1 upvotes · 27 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

That's not right--why should one side be able to say 'Murica--Fuck Yeah!' and the other side has to goose-step around like it's not in opposition?

I think you mean "tiptoe". "Goose-step" has connotations of "marching like a nazi soldier" which I do not think was the meaning you are going for.

If you want to say "liberals aren't so bad" then "I am a liberal, and I think blah blah blah" is appropriate.

But he said "can we tone down the debate" while... engaging in the debate. He's asking for the argument to be reduced while simultaneously adding to it.

Hey MRAs, I just thought you should know that SRS and SomethingAwful are about to redditbomb you in an attempt to have you shut down.

1 upvotes · 22 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

You miss the point. I am not inviting you to a debate over the merits of christianity (nor would I bother to, since you're using canards that six seconds of internet research would refute, such as trying to paint the holocaust as a non-christian phenomenon. Sorry, read Mein Kampf. That one's on you guys.)

The point is that I am explaining what motivates the subscribers of r/atheism.

I am somewhat puzzled that it bothers you this much, that atheists should say atheist things, in an atheist subreddit.

Feminism is not what you think it is. The real feminism is rational, prudent, and philosophical. It's about women having the ability to lead authentic, self-formed lives. We should all be feminists, but more importantly we should have these goals for both genders.

1 upvotes · 21 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

Could we have a sidebar link for all these times when yet another "moderate" feminist comes in here and tells us NAFALT like it's her first day on the internet and she thinks we've never heard this before?

Hey MRAs, I just thought you should know that SRS and SomethingAwful are about to redditbomb you in an attempt to have you shut down.

1 upvotes · 19 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

Okay, well, perhaps this neutral ground is a good place to explain what's going on.

The atheists of r/atheism say stuff about christianity for several reasons.

- We find christianity to be profoundly immoral. Now, I could write a book just about this, so I can't go into too much detail, but suffice to say that some of the things the bible says are repugnant, and some of the things the bible is used to justify... well, those too.
- We are surrounded by christians in our daily lives, and these christians either assume we share their beliefs, or are shocked that we don't, and say/assume horrible things about us.

- In nations where christians are the majority, they act as if they are the only people in existence, or at least that the rest of us don't count. They use their majority leverage to write religious slogans on our money, into the pledge of allegiance. They try to make prayer a public event, and to force our children to participate. They try to rearrange the curriculum in public schools so it doesn't contradict their personal religious beliefs.
- So we go to r/atheism to vent steam and support each other. And yes, this means saying negative things about christianity. But christianity is entitled to as much respect as it gives to others. That's almost always "very little" and usually "none". Christianity may be better behaved these days, and not go around torturing, murdering, and enslaving people like it did in the past, but that is because secularists pulled most of its teeth. So we're going to keep pulling.

Just an XX here to show support

1 upvotes · 12 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

The general tone is that women have some sort of power to keep their exes away from their children.

It's disingenuous in the extreme to be confronted with a very specific case, and argue about the "general tone".

This woman evidently does have the power to keep her ex-husband from seeing his children. Whether that is generally the case or not, as it often is, is not germane.

This is taken to heart by this sub, with out an explanation, such as why the courts have decided to not give him custody.

We've all seen statistics about how seldom custody is granted to fathers. Given that, we are faced with the inescapable conclusion that either all fathers everywhere are unfit parents, or the courts are biased.

It is impossible for me to refute anything said on that subject, so I avoided it completely.

And yet you found something irrelevant to say, arguing generalities in response to a specific case, trying, from total ignorance of the particulars, to argue with one of the principles.

And you wonder why I characterize you as a troll?

You enter into this tale, with a conclusion clutched tightly in your hands, and stock arguments prepared for it, before having seen anything relevant to indicate whether that conclusion might apply. I have never seen you agree with any submission in this subreddit, no matter how egregious the injustice it points out.

I cannot help but think that the very idea of a men's rights subreddit, or indeed the idea of men's rights, is repugnant to you, and you search for anything you might say that would seem to lend weight to your foregone conclusion.

While you may not actually be associated with SA/SRS, I cannot help but lump you into the same category mentally, since I have witnessed no differences in your respective behaviour.

Trans issues are part of men's rights

1 upvotes · 11 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

I'm still confused why it's offensive, so could you tell me why it is?

- It's othering.

- It's a term invented by someone who isn't us, for the purpose of saying things about us, and most of those things are negative.
- Just like "tranny", when you start to use something to say negative things, after a while a term becomes associated with all those negative things you said. Especially when no one, or almost no one, whom the term describes is included in the invention of the term.
- It's a term of exclusion. A term that means "not X", intended to imply that a default is an outgroup. Like "gaijin" for non-Japanese, or "Goyim" for non-Jew, or "mud person" for non-white, these terms very rapidly become laced with connotations of inferiority, ignorance, or enemy-ness. Hence, pejorative.

One of the key indicators of a pejorative term is if the people whom it describes don't use it. If black people don't call themselves "nigger", if transsexuals don't call themselves "trannies", if Mexican and central American immigrants don't call themselves "wetbacks"... well, you get the idea.

Just an XX here to show support

1 upvotes · 10 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

Good. We don't want you. The kinds of arguments you make are demagogic appeals to emotion and status quo. Having people make arguments like that for us would make our positions sound ill-considered.

I, for one, am happy to have you where you are, because you're doing us the most good by doing what you're doing.

Please continue adding weak troll comments to every submission. It shows the world that weak trolls are the only answer the haters have for us.

It's time to wake the A up in MRA-Let's sue the SPLC for libel

1 upvotes · 10 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

How about Conde Nast?

Do you think the old phrase "a man should never hit a woman" has any truth?

1 upvotes · 9 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

Redditor for a day.

This is your only post.

Ignores statements, responds to "tone" or "vibe".

You're a throwaway account, created to ask this question. A question you asked, not to get an answer, but to steer the dialogue away from "how problems do men face and what causes them?" and towards "are MRAs 'hateful'?"

You give me flashbacks to the invasion of Iraq, when the only thing the news discussed about the massive protests was whether or not they were "blocking traffic".

Trans issues are part of men's rights

1 upvotes · 6 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

"cis" is not a pejorative

Yes, it is, and it's not your call, because you aren't one.

Remember when you said:

tranny is a pejorative

?

Well, now you have two standards. You say "cis" is not pejorative because it doesn't have a negative literal meaning. Well, by that standard, neither is "tranny". Or "nigger" (which is just derived from a latin root for "black").

But you are willing to acknowledge that "tranny" (and probably "nigger") are pejorative because they were invented by people they don't describe, for the purpose of saying things about a group they aren't in, and most of those things are negative.

By that standard, "cisman" is pejorative.

Can't have it both ways. If you're allowed to say, "don't call us that, it's a slur", then so are we.

So I don't call you "tranny", and you don't call me "cisman" or "cisgendered". Otherwise, all bets are off.

Trans issues are part of men's rights

1 upvotes · 6 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

I don't know your religious views, but if you were atheist/Christian/Muslim/Buddhist, it would be pretty rude and ignorant of me to deny your religious identity because your views didn't match my views of what an a/C/M/B should be.

I'm not sure this analogy quite scans.

You see, atheist/Christian/Muslim/Buddhist are all groups people invented, and are defined by the people who join them. Male and female... well, not so much.

Now, people can argue all day about just what the definition of a female is, but femaleness is a thing. It's not a group that people got together one day and decided to form, and therefore the people whom it describes do not have a privileged opinion on what the definition of one is.

In other words, the opinions of Freemasons as to what a Freemason is are more valid than the opinions of non-Freemasons, but the opinions of birds as to what a bird is are not more correct than the opinions of non-birds.

And calling yourself a bird does not make you one. (However, it is arguable that it might be possible to make someone into a bird... and just what would be required depends on your definition of what a bird is.)

Trans issues are part of men's rights

1 upvotes · 6 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

I understand that some MRAs have a negative gut reaction to transpeople.

Most of those come from three things:

1. The use, by the trans community, of the pejorative term "cismen".
2. Insistence (often in this subreddit), by members of the trans community, that a sexual preference for people born to a particular gender is bigotry.
3. Insistence (often in this subreddit), by members of the trans community, that people (usually men) have no right to know if their sexual partner, or prospective sexual partner, is a transsexual. (I mean, holy fucking shit, what colour is the sky on your planet?)

If those three problems were fixed, I suspect the negative attitudes from the MRA side would dwindle.

Is anyone else sick to death of hearing Abortion being directly equated with contraception, vasectomies and Viagra

1 upvotes · 6 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

Men can be parents.

Often, they can be parents whether they want to or not.

This subreddit needs to shake off its anti-women reputation for the sake of these issues being taken seriously.

1 upvotes · 4 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

However, I can't join your subreddit because I feel personally attacked in a lot of these threads, purely for being XX.

Something our culture has forgotten is that facts are more important than feelings.

100 Dating Tips For Men From A PUA

1 upvotes · 28 February 2012 · /r/seduction

Sure. Wanted to make sure someone was listening, first. No sense talking to myself.

Let's start off by talking about the actual feminist agenda for "the sexual liberation of men":

<http://www.avoiceformen.com/feminism/government-tyranny/eric-holder-weaponizes-a-grey-goose/>

<http://www.avoiceformen.com/feminism/feminist-governance-feminism/the-war-on-college-men-at-saint-louis-university/>

A Man Wants a Wife, Not a "Co-Worker"

1 upvotes · 23 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Don't know, I got a weird feel from this guy.

I don't think the weird feel is coming from the guy... I think it's coming from inside you.

Look, when I buy a taco, or a computer desk, or a pair of jeans, I don't assume it was made by slave labour... unless I see some evidence that it was. I don't look for a label saying "Not made with slave labour", because I haven't been preconditioned to expect such a thing.

Vietnamese women, in general, are proud of their domestic skills. As well they should be. Why should we need to take special precautions to reassure ourselves they are not "chained to the stove"? We don't ask if engineers are "chained to the computer" or lawyers are "chained to the desk".

I think you, my friend, could use another red pill.

[FR] My first threesome, including structure (HB10+FB7)(xpost)

1 upvotes · 23 February 2012 · /r/seduction

So... learning how to make yourself pleasing to someone is the opposite of interacting as an equal, over there in SRS bizarro-universe.

I'll make a note of that.

[FR] My first threesome, including structure (HB10+FB7)(xpost)

1 upvotes · 23 February 2012 · /r/seduction

It may sound strange, but, yes, it is.

A lot of people who think "should" is more important than "is" would like us to believe otherwise, but those are not the sort of people it's healthy to listen to (because their "should" is almost always just coincidentally the same as their "I want").

All mammal species engage in mate selection. And in all of these species, behaviour is a factor. So, change behaviour, change mate selection outcomes. To refuse to understand this is to arrogantly insist that humans are somehow special, and thus the rules of animal behaviour do not apply to us.

[FR] My first threesome, including structure (HB10+FB7)(xpost)

1 upvotes · 23 February 2012 · /r/seduction

A civil answer from someone who refers to SRS as "we"? Excuse me while I check out my window for pigs on the wing...

Okay, done.

Anyway, I think all technical pursuits and subcultures use technical lingo and/or abbreviations, no? In addition to providing easy reference to concepts the audience is already familiar with, it provides a way to be opaque to outsiders.

And communities which are used to being judged harshly and unjustly by outsiders have good reason to be opaque. That how you get everything from cockney rhyming slang to ebonics to PUA lingo.

Now, this guy went a little overboard by using acronymic references to something that is not really considered a canonical or foundational text, but merely one person's set of methods. As such, several people in this very thread called him on being uselessly opaque.

But, to be brutally honest with ourselves, that not really what SRS is on about, is it? Your hostility is predetermined, predecided, and prejudged. Rather than responding to a reason, it merely seeks an excuse.

A Man Wants a Wife, Not a “Co-Worker”

1 upvotes · 22 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

http://www.reddit.com/r/MensRights/comments/pz25d/a_man_wants_a_wife_not_a_coworker/c3twmei

A Man Wants a Wife, Not a “Co-Worker”

1 upvotes · 22 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

I don't really think we need to lean over backwards worrying about that vibe.

She's an adult. She can make her own decisions, and the fact that she made them according to her priorities, not ours, does not mean she is somehow being coerced.

Look at it from her point of view. She gets to leave the third world and live in America, and when she gets here, she doesn't even have to get a job. It's all taken care of. She's probably proud of her cooking skills (and if she isn't, she should be), and it's a lot more pleasant to cook for just yourselves than to do it all day in a restaurant. Other stuff? Well, cleaning a home ain't so bad when it's your home. Taking care of kids is pretty damn rewarding when they're your kids.

It's only American women who consider doing all this stuff to be "beneath" them.

And listen to what he actually says about her (instead of to our preconceptions):

In fact, we had quite a bit of argument before she relented and allowed me to wash the dishes every night.

Like most Asians, she has a passion for food culture, but her enjoyment of cooking borders on art.

For me it is worth the reduced income to have a cheerful wife preparing great meals at home.

This doesn't paint, for me, the picture of a kitchen slave. It looks more like someone who is doing exactly what she wants to do, and is faintly puzzled that these crazy Americans think it's a bad deal.

Frankly, the only reason I selected an American woman as my SO is that we share certain tastes that one doesn't find abroad. Otherwise I would never have even considered looking anywhere but southeast Asia.

The women of those cultures are, by and large, cheerful, generous, and kind, with a real sense of responsibility. They are not slaves. They are not victims. They expect to receive, and they expect to give in return. The only reason anyone would think them "exploited" is that they are used to first-world women with a bloated sense of entitlement.

A Man Wants a Wife, Not a "Co-Worker"

1 upvotes · 22 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

The whole thing reads like he imported some slave woman from Vietnam and then chained her to his stove.

I think you may be reading into it the feminist stereotype of homemakers.

Let us remember that it is only in our rather twisted culture that caring for a home, for children, and for other people is somehow a dishonorable profession.

A Man Wants a Wife, Not a "Co-Worker"

1 upvotes · 22 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

And ForeignBride? glare

What's wrong with that? Are women from other cultures not good enough?

About patriarchy

1 upvotes · 22 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

I'm familiar with the technique (CS graduate and software engineer). However, using it in this case is a mistake. Because it yields on the issue of burden of proof.

Do you hate bigots but can't find a male friendly place to mock them and vent your frustration? Join us!

1 upvotes · 22 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

I clicked on 12 links and every single one linked back to the SRS domain.

Why are all these oyster fishermen in Maine? Why don't they go work in Nebraska?

Do you hate bigots but can't find a male friendly place to mock them and vent your frustration? Join us!

1 upvotes · 22 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

No need to mock bigots. They mock themselves.

It's come to my attention that r/ShitRedditSays trolls this sub and x-posts content to berate and bash in their little circlejerk. I pulled this from one of their threads and I think it explains why...

1 upvotes · 22 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Characterization is beneath us. We are not them.

About patriarchy

1 upvotes · 20 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

That's my point.

You don't explore the implications of a false statement, because a false statement has all implications. So it's a pointless exercise.

39 year old woman jailed for 40 years for sex with minor.

1 upvotes · 19 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Even for molesting a child, this is excessive. How could it possibly be worse than murder?

Barbara Kay: It takes two to raise a child

1 upvotes · 15 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

because they know that the child has a stronger bond with the mother and in a biological sense is more hers.

Annnnnnnnnnd you're condemned out of your own mouth as a bigot.

I wandered in here today and I'm a little hurt.

1 upvotes · 12 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

The women's space isn't the place to discuss these issues. The women's space isn't the place to discuss these issues. The women's space isn't the place to discuss these issues. The women's space isn't the place to discuss these issues.

Ooooooooooooooooookay.

I didn't walk into 2XC. This was cross-posted there. By. A. Self-Identified. Feminist. Do you understand? Or should I use smaller words?

Me use small word now. You read small word. Get idea.

Me not post to 2XC. Feminist post to 2XC. Me not bring issues to 2XC. Feminist do that. You look top of page. Read words.

I wandered in here today and I'm a little hurt.

1 upvotes · 11 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

I meant it more like "a label you can slap on someone so that they will be perceived as so evil that nothing they say can exonerate them".

Oh, so feminists don't call themselves feminists, then? Funny, I keep seeing these tshirts saying "This is what a feminist looks like". Guess I must have slapped that label on them.

Or do you just not want me to be able to speak about them as a group at all, so that I cannot criticize them?

2XC is not the place for discourse about men's issues.

The OP, a self-identified feminist (or did I "slap that label on her"?) was the one who cross-posted this there, not I. Of course, there are a fair amount of self-identified feminists on 2XC, so that's why she might have made this error. Probably should have crossposted to /feminisms instead, but she might have been concerned about being banned, so that's understandable.

In fact, there is no difference between a downvote and a deletion, except when a thread is downvoted, it is the community that believes a post does not add to the community, and when it is deleted, it is a mod who believes the post does not add to the community. They aren't qualitatively different. Either way, the message is ineffective at reaching the desired audience.

Wow. Just... wow.

I have no words to describe the confusion of mind from which such a statement might have preceded.

You don't walk into a church and complain that they don't talk enough about the troubles that atheists face.

This is getting tiresome. I didn't walk into 2XC. This was cross-posted there. By. A. Self-Identified. Feminist. Do you understand? Or should I use smaller words?

If you want to talk to women about men's issues, your concern should be with making this subreddit a place where people feel safe to have a dialogue.

I see. So the feminists have shut the doors against us, the women's space isn't the place to discuss these issues, so we should hide our legitimate anger so that the real people (women) will listen. I guess all 30.000 of us don't count. Maybe if we're polite enough, we can be allowed in the front of the bus eventually.

Notice how my last post was downvoted... Work on that, MR.

Okay, now fuck you.

This is our house. We won't kick you out, but don't come in here and try to rearrange the furniture. This is our territory. And you just crossed the line.

... the sheer, breathtaking hubris of someone who will elbow her way into a conversation about how feminists don't listen, and start telling us what to do... amazing.

Quit acting like a teenager. Not in our house.

Women Who Want Domesticity

1 upvotes · 9 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Yeah, these sort of statements always give me a vague frisson of unease.

It's the realization that these guys not only think of non-whites as somehow ritually unclean, but that (worse yet), they think of women as somehow cleaner, purer, more holy creatures than men, instead of squishy bags of organs just like the rest of us.

Or they desperately want them to be that way.

But idealizing women in this way is incompatible with treating them like, and expecting them to be, adults. Any sensible gender policy has to begin and end with the notion that men and women, while hardwired differently, are both animals evolved from apes, who have instinctive drives, and who have to meet demands to reconcile those drives with the realities of life in a civilized society.

Women are adults, which means they get to choose who and what they swear allegiance to. They can't "betray their race" if the never swore fealty to the "group of people who have white skin". Why should they acknowledge themselves as owing allegiance to all others who have white skin, and not to all others with whose second toe is longer than their big toe, or all others who have light-coloured eyes?

They're all, as Vonnegut would say, granfalloons.

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Minimal_group_paradigm

Something I'd like to whine about momentarily - I despise how anyone who disagrees with Feminism is an "MRA troll".

1 upvotes · 9 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Yes, it does affect our behaviour when we're constantly under the harshest of criticism in our own space. That's not the best thing for fostering productive discussions based on mutual respect, even between the people who are sincerely trying to grapple with issues.

However, once we start excluding people to create a "safe space", well... we've seen what that road did to feminist thinking. They abandoned the need to make their positions defensible because they had excluded anyone who didn't agree.

We don't need "safe spaces", because we're right, and we're strong enough to stand up for ourselves. I can be called a misogynist and a rape apologist and a neckbeard and whatever other emotional reaction they throw at me if I know that what I say makes sense.

The more shrill they get, the more we win.

Papua to Require Male Circumcision in AIDS Fight

1 upvotes · 8 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

This new learning amazes me, Sir Bedievere. Explain again how ~~sheep's bladders~~ genital mutilation may be used to prevent ~~earthquakes~~ HIV infection!

A two-year-old boy with "three parents" - his lesbian mother, her partner and a gay father - is at the centre of an Appeal Court test case on the status of "alternative" families.

1 upvotes · 7 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Can you provide a citation that he's against said separation?

Sure can. Not just a spoken quote, but in writing, published in his own newsletter.

Check out the part where he says the Constitution is "replete with references to god"... comedy gold.

"Men are boorish and lazy. Why won't they marry us?"

1 upvotes · 7 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

My point is generally though that a woman's sexual quality does not increase as her quantity of partners does.

It's not a linear relationship. A woman who has had one or three sexual partners is probably more sexually skilled than a virgin. To me, that's a good thing.

But if she's had 10, that doesn't add any additional value. And if she's had 100, then I'm going to at least consider the possibility that neurosis may be involved.

One can hone sexual skills without a massive quantity of partners. In fact I'd say that a lower number with more repeated sex would be better than a massive number of single flings.

You know, you're right. I like my partners to have had at least a few priors, but what I look for is a sex-positive attitude. That can be inferred from number of partners, but must then be separated out from evidence of poor judgement or impulse control, which can also be present.

The irony here is I actually expected people to get upset about "who affirmative-actioned their way through life"... but not a person even blinked at that part.

Because they know it's true, and hence don't wanna talk about it. Even radfems know that civilization was created and is sustained by males. That's why all their platforms include those sneaky little words "total automation".

Because they know that they cannot do without men until all male tasks are done by robots. (Robots which will, of course, have to be designed and built by...)

and not "slept around until they weren't wanted anymore"

This phrase admits of two interpretations.

I don't agree with you if the meaning is "slept around until no one wanted them because they were sluts" (I love sluts).

But I do oh so heartily agree if the meaning is "slept around until the day no one wanted them anymore, and then decided they were all about commitment".

It's Shit Like This That Makes Me Wanna Rape A Bitch

1 upvotes · 7 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

This man is no MRA, and no friend off mine.

My friends don't demonize my sexuality. They don't liken my sexual interest to being attacked and mauled by bears.

The reason that it's fucking okay for your daughter to go out dressed like a slut is that when men become interested as a result, and want to fuck her, that's a good thing. It's a fucking compliment. And only your twisted jealous vaguely incestuous interest in your daughter's sex life makes it otherwise.

My genitals belong to me, not to my parents. My children's genitals (had I any) would belong to them, not to me.

Sigh. We need to have a talk.

1 upvotes · 7 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

You make me tired.

Here, read this: <http://www.avoiceformen.com/mens-rights/false-rape-culture/rape-is-a-1970s-mood-ring/>

Sigh. We need to have a talk.

1 upvotes · 4 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

It's taking me longer and longer to respond to these, because I get more and more tired, pointing out the same things, again and again, to different people. Oh, well, not your fault. You didn't see my other comments on this exact topic.

There is a difference between what someone wants to do, and what someone consents to do.

If you don't like your job, and don't want to go to work on Monday morning, that does not make your employer guilty of kidnapping, or of trafficking in slaves.

So when you say:

All we need to know is: Did she want to? Did she convey this to the other party, in a way that a regular person could understand?

You're subtly wrong.

What we need to know is: Did she consent? Did he believe she consented? Was this belief reasonable?

Now, we know that she didn't want to. But we also know that she cooperated. Unless he deliberately used an unlawful form of coercion to secure that cooperation, he is not a rapist, because that implies consent.

Now, she says something to the effect of 'I was afraid he might be mad', and gives this as her reason.

This could mean one of two things:

1. "I was afraid he would be emotionally hurt." If this is what she meant, she consented. Stupid reason. Not something someone would do while sober. But still consent.
2. "I was afraid he would get mad and physically hurt me." Now, this can be rape. Cooperation is secured with the threat of something he isn't allowed to do (violence). But in order for it to be rape, one further thing must be established. Her belief that he might hurt her must be reasonable. If this threat exists only in her mind, he cannot be held responsible for it.

Given what I have read so far, I do not think she was afraid he would harm her. I do not believe that he intended her to believe that.

I think she was afraid he would be upset, and hurt, and she would lose a friend, etc, etc. I think that in her drunken state, hurting someone emotionally was somehow worse to her than sex she didn't want to have.

Obviously, this is very poor judgement, but it's precisely the kind of very poor judgement one sees from very drunk people.

Woman attacks all of the Manosphere

1 upvotes · 2 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Feminism is to some extent men's fault. At least, the men of a certain generation.

Let's face it, the baby boomer men not only allowed feminism to happen, but rolled over for a tummy rub, enthusiastically supporting it in the hopes of being rewarded by grateful feminists. Well, now, that they've seen how much gratitude a feminist is capable of, they may be starting to wake up, but fuck those late-to-the-party motherfuckers.

This, of course, is totally not what she is talking about, so I'm kind of quibbling and of-topic here. But I feel compelled to mention it anyway.

President Obama: "You can't beat daughters." (As in daughters are superior to sons)

1 upvotes · 2 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Shouldn't beat any of your children, really.

Hi r/MensRights, I am taking a Psychology course this semester and we are discussing whether or not men suffer depression as often as women.

1 upvotes · 2 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Okay, lemme spell it out for you then:

Males commit suicide more than females.

Females "attempt" suicide more than males.

So we must conclude that women succeed at killing themselves a lot less than men do. For someone to fail at suicide, one of three things must be true:

1. They lack the opportunity. (They are in a straitjacket in a padded cell.)
2. They lack the means. (They can't figure out how to kill a person, or they don't have the nerve to go through with it.)
3. They lack the motive. (They don't actually want to die.)

1 isn't relevant. 2 would mean that women are, as a class, less resourceful or less courageous than men. 3 would mean that men are more determined to die, and hence more depressed.

Hi r/MensRights, I am taking a Psychology course this semester and we are discussing whether or not men suffer depression as often as women.

1 upvotes · 2 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Heh. Heheheh heee heee.

Oh, wait, you're serious.

Let me laugh even harder.

Janet Howell, a Virginia State Senator, attached a amendment to a abortion bill to require men to have rectal exams before getting a Viagra prescription.

1 upvotes · 1 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

And she fails at logic. Even if all supporters of the bill are middle aged men who take viagra, that does not mean that all middle aged men who take viagra are supporters of the bill.

Hi r/MensRights, I am taking a Psychology course this semester and we are discussing whether or not men suffer depression as often as women.

1 upvotes · 1 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Men report depression less... but commit suicide more.

Is it concerning to anyone else that, sometimes, when trying to back up your argument with facts people ridicule you?

1 upvotes · 1 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Don't argue with feminists unless you have an audience. Feminism is an interest-based belief, rather than an evidence-based belief, so you're not going to change a feminist's mind with an appeal to evidence.

If you do have an audience, just present your case, and let the feminist self-refute by resorting to invective, accusations of misogyny, accusing you of being privileged, and other illogical irrelevancies.

You know why /r/mensrights is so pro-free speech...

1 upvotes · 1 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Apparently.

Future Male Birth Control May Zap Sperm With Sound Waves: "Two 15-minute tickles could be the future of male birth control. New research on rats indicates that currently available ultrasound machinery could be used to kill off sperm-growing cells, technology that could render males infertile."

1 upvotes · 1 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

You don't understand.

The more you stretch a rubber band, the harder it pulls back. If that doesn't make sense to you, just grab your penis and squeeze as hard as you can. And try to simultaneously maintain an erection.

Sigh. We need to have a talk.

1 upvotes · 31 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

When I clicked this link, I was half hoping for a description of how she was held down and forcibly penetrated, just so I could say "Yeah, okay, rape.", and put the question to bed. But I'm afraid that, reading this, I still... can't.

Each part is ambiguous, you see.

He pulled me back in his room, but I can accept that as a misunderstanding.

Does this mean, take an arm and pull to indicate that following is desired, or does this mean drag while she's kicking and holding onto furniture?

I told him I didn't want to have sex when I was drunk, but he continued to progress what we were doing

It's that word "we" that makes me wonder. Anyone who's been around the block a few times knows that a woman will frequently make resistive statements verbally, while reciprocating what a man is doing... for example, saying "We shouldn't do this", and then continuing to kiss him.

Now, I don't want to call this woman a liar, and say that she actually enjoyed it. But she seems to have reciprocated to some degree... probably, if I interpret her words correctly, because the fear that loomed largest in her drunken consciousness was the fear of hurting his feelings by rejecting him.

He didn't stop when he was hurting me, I actually started crying and I feel as a humaann you should stop doing what you're doing if you're making someone cry because you're physically hurting them

This is odd. It would definitely speak very poorly of his character if we were sure he could tell she was upset. But I'm not sure. Sex noises are often difficult to interpret, and if he was drunk...

But again, the real issue is consent, not pleasure, or wants, or feelings. Was she still going along with it? Did he think she was?

Unless we can give two clear and certain "no" answers to those questions, calling it rape is a stretch.

The way I read this whole situation is this. She didn't want to, but she went along with it halfheartedly because, in her addled state, she was more afraid of hurting someone's feelings and creating drama than anything else. He went through with it, because in his addled state, he couldn't tell the difference between the resistance of someone who doesn't want to, and the resistance of someone afraid of slut-shaming, or between reluctant compliance and succumbing to persuasion.

Certainly this is not the sort of thing I want to see happening, but I just can't justify holding him to a higher standard of legal or moral responsibility for foolish actions, when they were both equally drunk or close.

We can't establish that he had mens rea. Motive is not an element of a crime, but intent is. If he did not form the intent to rape her, he is not guilty. And if she did indeed cooperate with what he was doing, as she herself says she did, then she communicated consent.

Really, this would be best settled by a simple conversation while sober. Certainly the appropriate thing is for him to apologize for his inability to read her feelings, and for her to admit that she needs to communicate more clearly, and take responsibility for her own life.

And both of them should probably seriously consider their drinking habits. Drinking to the point of blackout, ever, is considered a possible warning sign of alcoholism.

Sigh. We need to have a talk.

1 upvotes · 27 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

Can you link, please?

I only read what she wrote to me, I didn't history-stalk her. I repeatedly asked if he had used any form of threat or physical force. No tale of either was forthcoming.

Instead, she specifically stated that she let him do it because she was afraid he'd be mad if she didn't... and that if she had been sober, she would have not cared if he'd be mad, and simply left the room.

From this, I understood that she was:

1. Aware of having made a conscious choice, even if it was for the very poor reason of appeasing the socially obnoxious.
2. At least under the impression that she had the physical power to leave... but was afraid of the social consequences.

Shit like this; this analogy could be used for a man who was raped as well

1 upvotes · 26 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

Here in strawman-land, we like to pretend that people blame women who are raped at gunpoint!

Let's play a little game: Reframe the person above you.

1 upvotes · 25 January 2012 · /r/seduction

Next time you try that one, say "no hablo Ingles"... otherwise, you're saying that I don't speak English. But hey, nice try.

New: You're so sensitive! (Used to frame you as unmasculine if you object to anything, or won't put up with rudeness)

Let's play a little game: Reframe the person above you.

1 upvotes · 25 January 2012 · /r/seduction

Whichever one I steal for the evening.

New: Why don't you answer any of my questions seriously?

Do we need to start /r/ShitShitRedditSaysSays? (User banned for calling out obvious SRS misandry)

1 upvotes · 24 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

Why bother? Who cares what they say?

Only them.

Has anyone encountered so-called "victim blaming" outside the realm of rape? (I have)

1 upvotes · 24 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

Areas of victim-blaming other than rape that I can think of in 30 seconds:

Female-on-male violence.

Female marital/relationship infidelity.

Unwanted paternity.

STDs (both genders).

Layoffs or other job loss (mostly males).

All this goodness is pissing me off

1 upvotes · 24 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

The man-hatred of a site like "the Good Men Project" is encoded in the very name. To speak of "Good Men" is to imply that, by default, men are something other than good.

It also suggests that unlike women, who have inherent value, men must be "good", by providing value to others.

Why does no one ever speak of "good women"? It is, of course, because women are considered to be an end unto themselves, while men are only a means for serving the ends of others.

Very sexually experienced woman, willing to answer ANY questions you have.

1 upvotes · 18 January 2012 · /r/seduction

Fair enough.

I don't think I can do this.

1 upvotes · 18 January 2012 · /r/seduction

I would like someone to kill this man.

You are not the nice person you think you are.

You are not the nice person you congratulate yourself on being.

Not only are you wishing death on someone who has never harmed you or (to your knowledge) anyone, you are passing judgement on everyone around you, including all of us, as if someone had died and made you god.

That, I suspect, is why you hate these techniques so much. Because to try them, you would have to give up your self-image of moral superiority, and admit that you are made of the same selfish goo as the rest of the human race. That's a hell of a thing to have to give up, especially if you have based your identity on it.

But I'll tell you a secret. Women are made out of the same selfish goo, also. Using seduction techniques on them is treating them as equals, because they do the same sorts of things... and are entirely justified in doing so. You, on the other hand, seem to want to have your way without having to get your hands dirty, or face the risk of looking like the bad guy.

Why do you think women like Mike better than they like you? Answer is, because he is actually treating them better than you do. He leaves it to them to decide what they want and why, and acts how he chooses to act. You give women what you have decided they should want, and to hell with their actual autonomy.

Alot of you guys have assumed that I am a weak sensitive nice guy.

I don't know if you're sensitive. I've explained that you aren't actually nice.

But no matter who you stand up to, Mike or anyone else, you will still be weak until you can face yourself, admit your own motivations, and face your own shortcomings.

So far you haven't even admitted the possibility that you might be wrong.

Of course women aren't going to be attracted to that. What woman is going to want someone who can't accept her as she is? Who tries to "protect" her from what she wants? Who says he "respects" her, but uses that as an excuse not to listen to her? Women are not dolls for you to idealize. They are people, and they don't need to burden of living up to your made-up ideals.

Dear MensRights

1 upvotes · 18 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

I would rather believe him than dismiss his problems on the off chance he's lying.

Didn't say he was. Don't think he was.

He falls under the second case.

Dear Men: Here's Why You Can't Get Laid

1 upvotes · 13 January 2012 · /r/seduction

You Think Way Too Highly of Yourself

You're An Attention Whore/Drama Queen

I think this wins the all-time unconscious irony award.

Forever Alone comes to reddit - Ask Us Anything

1 upvotes · 13 January 2012 · /r/seduction

Terms like "sociopath" sometimes have some legitimate clinical meaning, but often they are an attempt to pathologize the warrior personality.

In other societies in history, competitive, realist personalities who didn't feel a lot of guilt were very much appreciated, and held up as models of manly virtue. Men like Julius Caesar, Hernán Cortés, or Charles Martel may not have been nice people by modern standards, but they were certainly not insane.

Often, individuals with a hyperactive superego will go through life subconsciously afraid of a smack from mommy, unable to compete or assert themselves because they have been conditioned to believe that it is somehow bad, that if they were to shed their crippling burden of guilt, they would instantly turn into serial killers.

Nothing could be further from the truth. Even true sociopaths are more frequently beneficial to society than baneful to it, and more frequently inhabit positions of leadership rather than prison cells. Niceness and self-restraint are virtues, but they must be balanced against other things which are also virtues: courage, ambition, determination, tenacity, vision.

Too often people use an exaggerated claim of decency as an excuse for lacking these.

The seducer, like the leader or the warrior, does indeed attempt to shape the world rather than be shaped by it. He attempts to influence women rather than mold himself to their whims.

But to call him immoral for this is to call women a bunch of children who can't be trusted to decide what they prefer. In the end, women have spoken. They respond to seduction skills. They don't respond to gifts, bribes, placation, grovelling, or other fake niceness. They're not irrational for doing so.

Forever Alone comes to reddit - Ask Us Anything

1 upvotes · 11 January 2012 · /r/seduction

Sedditor

That's okay.

If you weren't suspicious, you would have already done it, and you and I would not be having this conversation. Suspicion is good. It protects you from being hurt or taken advantage of.

But like any good tool, it's powerful enough to hurt yourself with if you use it wrong.

Let me ask you two questions: Would you rather I was right, or wrong, when I say that you can change your life for the better? And what would it cost you to find out if I am?

8 Reasons Young Americans Don't Fight Back: How the US Crushed Youth Resistance

1 upvotes · 10 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

I'm not an expert on conditions in the UK, so I have no notion of how similar they might be, and cannot comment.

This is what I think of liberalism in the US.

8 Reasons Young Americans Don't Fight Back: How the US Crushed Youth Resistance

1 upvotes · 10 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

I direct you to read the title more carefully, that's how.

I have a big issue with remembering names and its hurting my game

1 upvotes · 7 January 2012 · /r/seduction

I use nicknames.

For example, one girl I'm dating is 4'11, so I call her "Funsized". Once they've done the whole "flirting by pretending to be outraged", and you've teased each other back and forth for a while, it's really hard to forget.

If a girl uses a toy to masturbate and this is considered normal, why does a guy using a fleshlight make him perverted or lonely? [Probably NSFW] [AskReddit XPost]

1 upvotes · 7 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

Hey, if you can attract them too, you can play with them, too. It's a brave new world out here. Come join the party.

Women can stop rape?: 59% of males who became rapists were sexually molested by females

1 upvotes · 4 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

I would be interested to see what percentage of victims of sexual molestation by females become rapists.

That's the other piece of information we would need for a complete picture.

It would also be nice to know what the relationship is between the actual level of trauma in that molestation, and rape/sexual assault offense rates later in life. I was "sexually abused" as a boy by a babysitter, but don't consider myself a real victim, as I was a precocious child who had no objections whatsoever to what was going on. I would tend to think that someone like wouldn't end up as an offender, while someone whose experience was abuse by the actual definition as well as the legal one would be more likely to.

Yet MORE proof that radical feminists are out to silence all but themselves, the "ladies" at radfem hub stating that transwomens voice's arent welcome in feminist spaces.

1 upvotes · 3 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

The problem is that "cis" is a label applied by people who ain't us, who suspect us of being bigots by default, and is used only by people who ain't us.

It's like calling a black person "nigger", and then saying "Well, there needs to be a term for you people, right?".

Yes, there does, but not that term.

I have no problem with being called "genetically male", or "born male", but if you call me a "cisman", well, like "nigger", them's fightin' words.

The Social Accessory – How to Be Valuable to Women

1 upvotes · 31 December 2011 · /r/seduction

When I see titles, and articles, like this, I just have to have myself a nice quiet laugh at those who still insist that the game community isn't pussy-centric and submissive.

Guys, we have a bigger problem than "we need self-improvement". Unless we realize that the real reason we need game is that society has become pussy-centric... well, then game itself is just going to turn into a new set of strategies for more effective vagina-worship.

What do you worship?

1 upvotes · 29 December 2011 · /r/seduction

Men have a tendency to seek out something in life to worship.

That sentence has so much fail in it that there is no need to read further.

I just realized that in the 17 years that I've been sexually active, not one woman respected my wishes when I declined sex.

1 upvotes · 27 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

Depends on your definition of equality.

If you mean the most narrow definition of equality, "The law doesn't prefer one person over another", then they probably do, and so do I.

If you mean the broadest, "Treat different people the same", then of course they don't, and I don't either.

The Penis Mom

1 upvotes · 27 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

This strikes me as a case of demanding credit for having the potential to do something, instead of demanding the opportunity to do something.

I spend a lot of time lifting heavy barbells, and I spend a lot of time talking (on r/fitness and elsewhere) with women who do the same. Not mention the time I spend encouraging women who don't to, well, give it a try.

And in my experience, there are women who can lift heavy things. And there are women who complain about not getting credit for being strong. But there are no women who are in both those groups.

Female lifters don't have a problem with people sometimes assuming they're weak because they are a woman. Because they know that most women are weak, and they know that they, in particular, are not. They don't need to persuade anyone they are strong, because they can just lift a heavy thing instead, and that will remove all doubt. And they don't need to persuade anyone that all women are strong, because that just isn't true. Which doesn't bother them, because they're the exception, they worked hard to be the exception, and they earned that condition of being the exception.

Women who complain about women not getting credit for the accomplishments of women, are all-too-often complaining about them not getting credit for the accomplishments of other women. Because, you know, they, theoretically could have put in all that work, too.

It always feels to me a bit like they are trying to cheat the women who actually can do it, who actually did put that work in, of their exclusive rights to the credit.

I just realized that in the 17 years that I've been sexually active, not one woman respected my wishes when I declined sex.

1 upvotes · 26 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

I do not appreciate your patronizing tone.

you are becoming the male version of SCUM.

So that's it, then. Because you feel patronized when I say "Women have been taught negative things about men. This must stop.", therefore I am the male equivalent of people who call for the extermination of men?

This is precisely the kind of misandry I am talking about. Not just negative stereotypes about men, but the way our value is held to be so low that we have no right to complain of any injury.

You are more worried about me than for me. You see me angry, and are more afraid of the consequences of my anger than its causes. You try to cite my anger as evidence of my incorrectness or even my insanity.

You didn't even stop to ask what I wanted. Surely if I were the male version of SCUM, it would be something horrific, like the genocide of all women, or that they be relegated to the status of property, or something.

You didn't try to ask any questions to see what I thought, or how I felt. You came out with a statement that I "came across as hateful", and tried to leave the onus on me to disprove that.

You're more afraid of me than for me. You see me as a source of problems, rather than somebody who might have been given a problem or two.

It is this reflexive suspicion and hostility that concerns me. Not SCUM. SCUM is visibly hateful. People can see the crazy. But people do not yet see the crazy in looking at a man and immediately thinking "What's he up to? Is he dangerous? What is he doing wrong, and how can we stop him?"

well its official boys now have less worth than animals , to avoid hurting animals a research facility is using donated foreskins instead (i dont know how a baby can donate part of its body but eh ..)

1 upvotes · 22 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

Thanks for your support for the men's rights movement.

But, while your intent is appreciated, acting as an agent provocateur really isn't the best weapon for this. There are enough actual man-haters out there for people to see.

FDA wants to penalize person-to-person sperm donation without a clinic. Only the male donor is the target of fine/jail, female participants aren't mentioned.

1 upvotes · 20 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

That's completely irrelevant.

I have not disclosed what I think the law "should" be, nor will I. It's not the point.

The point is that "it would be safer" is not a legal argument. "Safer" does not empower a state or federal government to pass any law it wants.

FDA wants to penalize person-to-person sperm donation without a clinic. Only the male donor is the target of fine/jail, female participants aren't mentioned.

1 upvotes · 20 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

It sounds like this is to keep everyone safe, including the potential baby.

"Safe" is not some kind of magic word that trumps justice or the rule of law.

What are men's rights, according to MRAs?

1 upvotes · 20 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

As a Jewish MRA, I vehemently disagree with this one.

I don't see what grounds you can possibly base this on. Religious freedom gives you the right to modify your own body how you see fit. It does not give you the right to do so to someone else's.

Court Upholds Termination Of Soldier's Parental Rights: Soldier/father is in Iraq. Wife has a boyfriend who harms his child. Father rushes home to care for his child. His parental rights are terminated anyway. His appeal is "without merit"

1 upvotes · 17 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

He was not an offender. The court had no authority to order him to do anything.

Court Upholds Termination Of Soldier's Parental Rights: Soldier/father is in Iraq. Wife has a boyfriend who harms his child. Father rushes home to care for his child. His parental rights are terminated anyway. His appeal is "without merit"

1 upvotes · 17 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

I do not dispute that Mr. Glover failed to jump through the various hoops that the trial court referred to as "services." I submit, however, that as a nonoffending parent, the trial court had no statutory authority to order him to do anything

Bravo, Josephine Hart.

Introduction to /r/FeminismHelpingMen

1 upvotes · 17 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

So how can you expect any self-identified feminist to care about men's rights

He doesn't. He just wants to give them an opportunity to show otherwise, so that the cricketcricketcricket sounds that ensue can reveal them for the liars they are.

Men are better than women, this guy says

1 upvotes · 14 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

Better at what?

The "Battered Woman's Defense" Its History and Future

1 upvotes · 13 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

Thank you for this prime example of the kind of nonsense you get when people aren't required to prove their claims.

For what other crime do we claim that society is an accomplice? For what other crime do we even test or consider that claim? What testable predictions does the hypothesis that society is an accomplice make? Why are they not true of other crimes?

Let's get this straight. Gender studies isn't about 'women good, men bad' | or is it? | The Guardian

1 upvotes · 13 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

The dominant ideas, approaches and insights of the vast majority of academic disciplines are produced by, for and about men.

I would love to see a coherent explanation for how physics, computer science, mathematics, electrical engineering, statistics, and biochemistry are "about men".

Anyone?

How does inequality hurt men, and how can we feminists help you men fight that inequality? Your thoughts are appreciated!

1 upvotes · 13 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

Part2: Rejecting the Patriarchy Hypothesis.

So how do we understand the history of gender roles and relations, if we reject the hypothesis that every society is patriarchal?

Any understanding of gender relations and roles must start with the idea of sexual dimorphism. The biological differences between males and females must, at the very least, encompass:

1. Sufficient visible distinction so that males and females can be told apart.
2. Different roles in reproduction.

If we start at the beginning of the species, when the differences between male and female hominids could not be culturally induced (due to the fact that culture hadn't come along yet), these two differences must have existed.

It is not hard to understand how a hominid troupe could survive the loss of most of its male members (if food were plentiful), and recover from this loss in a generation or so. However, a loss of a significant percentage of the females would be devastating. Thus, to pre-cultural humans, females were more valuable.

This forms the basis of our hypothesis. Human females were the more valuable gender, and males the more disposable gender.

When this idea becomes filtered through the development of culture, it translates to an imperative to protect women. Thus, women were seen as more entitled to safety and protection, both by themselves, and by the males to were taught to protect them.

But every adult knows that freedom and security are a tradeoff. Staying safe, or being kept safe, restricts the activities one can reasonably perform. And since the valuing and protection of women was about ensuring community survival (and not anyone's happiness, male or female), female autonomy became restricted to a greater extent than male autonomy.

Thus, both genders had slightly different rights and responsibilities.

Women were more entitled to protection and resources, and had a responsibility to curtail their behaviour and stay safe.

Men were more entitled to freedom and autonomy, and had a responsibility to take risks for the good of the community.

So this is a lens through which we can examine the gender-differentiated aspects of history. And indeed, it explains not only the lack of freedom that women have often historically faced, but simultaneously the adulation and protection that the same societies directed at them.

We cannot explain, using the Partriarchy hypothesis, why , for example, a Victorian/Edwardian society might simultaneously believe that women were too weak and unintelligent to accomplish many of society's tasks, but simultaneously hold them up as the more fair, virtuous, and praiseworthy sex, morally superior to nasty, brutish males with their unclean appetites.

But if we consider it as an example of protected/disposable sexual dimorphism, it makes perfect sense. One gender does the dirty work, the other is maintained in a state of childlike innocence.

To call this "Partriarchy", and cast it as a system for exploiting women, is to ignore, at the very least, the existence of any man who ever went down a coal mine.

Only by understanding how societies exploit each gender in different ways, and that these exploitations are at least partially programmed into our very genes, can we begin to have a discussion about how we might want to deal with the ways that men and women are different, and what we think the rights of each are.

So my gf stopped taking the pill 4-6 months ago, without telling me, and last week found out that she's 17 weeks pregnant.

1 upvotes · 30 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

I see you have chosen to repeat your original argument, rather than respond to anything I said.

That would be effective if I were totally stupid, and could be relied upon not to notice.

But as I said before, you are pulling a context switch. You speak of "the system we are stuck with", and then talk about what he "should" do, using the moral sense of the word "should".

But morals are a contract. You admit that society has torn up her half, and expect him to keep his. The thing about contracts is that when one side is broken, both are.

Then you quote yourself, where you speak as if raising a child were some sort of joyful privilege for everyone.

This, of course, is bullshit. There are no tangible returns to raising a child, only a considerable tangible cost. People raise children anyway for the same reason they eat, or have sex... in order to satisfy an innate drive to do so.

If he didn't choose to have a child, that means that he doesn't feel that need right now. Nothing to satisfy. No reward.

Expecting someone to enjoy raising a child he didn't want is like expecting someone to have an orgasm while being raped.

So my gf stopped taking the pill 4-6 months ago, without telling me, and last week found out that she's 17 weeks pregnant.

1 upvotes · 30 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

I expected these downvotes, but let me explain. I think we all can agree that we need to work to change the system, we KNOW the system is broken. It isn't right, but this is the situation he is in. We can talk all about hypotheticals and how things should be, but none of that is going to help him deal with the situation at hand. Even if a law passed tomorrow to change things, it's not going to be ex-post facto.

Okay, but if you agree that the system is broken, then why the hell are you talking about fairness to some hypothetical kid that may or may not be his?

What reason do men have to subscribe to a notion of "fairness" that is only a sword against them, and never a shield to protect them?

If you want to be realistic, then, fine, let's be realistic. Where's his incentive? What's in it for him? Echoing the same old saw of "man up and slave away for a system that gives you nothing in return" isn't going to fly when you just appealed to realpolitik.

Either we talk moral responsibilities and ideals, or we talk realities and incentives.

Pick one.

Stick to it.

Ok I am a cartoonist and I drew this Male Ballerina, but something tells me it's offensive. I didn't say I was against them. I just honestly don't understand. That, and the sheer leotard that exposes everything. Am I being a Female Pig/Bigot?

1 upvotes · 22 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

You've never met any male ballet dancers.

I have, in my capacity as a martial arts teacher. I don't much care for ballet, but I'll tell you something... these guys are fit as anyone, and tough as a box of roofing nails. They are some of the easiest students to work with, because 50% of my job is already done.

Can you lift a hundred and twenty-five pound woman over your head, hold her steady as a rock, while standing on one leg? Didn't think so.

You can say that ballet is pointless as a spectacle (I happen to agree), but don't judge these guys until you've met one or two.

Am I missing the point?

1 upvotes · 16 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

What I meant was that I see men lashing out towards feminism and women in general because they feel that they're manhood is being threatened.

It's still shaming language.

What you call "they're manhood" is really "their place in society", "their perceived value as human beings", and "their ability to gain love, respect, and honor".

And this is not so much "threatened" as "already under attack for quite some now".

Why can't I want masculinity to mean something other than aggression and machine-like lack of emotion?

And this negative spin is characteristic of the problem. People are being conditioned to see aggression as inherently bad. And to scorn the idea of getting the damn job done instead of worrying about your feelings.

People, like you, want to say that masculinity isn't bad. But they have been taught to abhor every single component of it. So what can they do but issue mealy-mouthed whinges for a "redefinition" of masculinity?

One without so much of all that nasty... maleness.

Of course masculinity isn't evil. Even the most hardcore modern feminists aren't arguing that.

You haven't been paying much attention, have you?

Florida judge sentenced a 26-yr-old with no criminal record, to life in prison for possessing child pornography: "Had Mr. Vilca actually molested a child," The NYTimes notes, "he might well have received a lighter sentence."

1 upvotes · 10 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

By this logic, all US citizens are responsible for the My Lai massacre.

Being the Man Does Not Automatically Make Everything Your Fault

1 upvotes · 10 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

Hi, I see you're here from the "Good Men Project". Have this blue arrow. Now go away.

Elam vs Frost: Part 6

1 upvotes · 8 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

Hoo, boy.

Well, we seem to be making progress, but both Frost and Elam seem to have also introduced some fresh crap that needs refuting.

Mr. Elam, it's good that you finally acknowledge that the men's movement has selfishly focused on the issues of most concern to the very assholes who brought us this crisis in the first place, those spoiled reverse-Midas brats, the Baby Boomers (how is it that the Greatest Generation gave birth to the worst?).

But to then turn around and accuse those young men of seeking solace for deeper hurts between the legs of young women simply reeks of hypocrisy. Sex is what young men want, in much the same way that older men want stability in their marriages and connection with their children.

Yet no one accuses older MRAs of seeking to staunch their wounded psyches by burying themselves in relationships with their progeny.

Everyone is driven by instinct, and the instinct of young men to fuck is in no way qualitatively different then the instinct of older men to raise families.

There are many questions that the men's movement must answer for young men, which it has yet to do. Yes, there are deep wounds left by the absence or emasculation of our fathers. Yes, our educational opportunities are grim. Yes, our careers are suffering. Yes, we are failing to thrive in every way.

But first of all, "How are young men to get laid?" is not a cover or smokescreen for anything else. It is a question in and of itself. A question which the men's rights movement, in laying out its future plans for gender relations, has utterly failed to address. We are all simply supposed to "go our own way", and somehow our sexual needs (and perhaps even our need for affection) will just magically be taken care of by hook or crook or somehow.

And second of all, since you've chosen to speak on behalf of your generation, how dare you?

How dare you call Game "pussy-centric" (even though it is), when the need for it never could have arisen without the Boomer men not only capitulating, but actively participating, in the rise of me-first-and-to-hell-with-everyone-else feminism? Your generation not only rolled over for a feminist tummyrub, you helped to club down any man who refused.

How much more pussy-centric can you get than that?

You guys gave us feminism simply because you couldn't be bothered to have an argument thirty years ago. And no, we're not going to trust you now.

Quit smirking, Frost. It's your turn now.

Game is not the key to male empowerment in anything. Game is just a slightly less obvious avenue of male capitulation. It only looks like power compared to the abject surrender of the Baby Boomer men.

A man who has learned to manipulate (or, to use a less loaded word, persuade) women is not an empowered man, any more than a candidate who wears a nice suit to a job interview is more "powerful" than the nervous guy with messy hair and untied shoelaces.

They are still petitioners to the person with the real power.

Men will not have power in relationships until women once again regard men in general, not just specific men with "game", as desirable, worthy, and admirable.

All you are doing is teaching a few guys how to use a broken system to their advantage. You have yet to show any plan, much less any actual progress, for fixing a damn thing.

And stop chanting this rubbish about how a man with game is "dominant". Despite all the hooting and hollering noises made about dominance and being the "alpha", game is still about catering to female tastes. Not being compliant, certainly, but being whatever it is that most attracts women.

Female response is still made the benchmark of success.

A dominant man isn't one who can make anything he does seem attractive. He's a man who doesn't need to be attractive all the time, because he doesn't have to cater to others to get what he wants. The only "power" a PUA has is granted to him by women, and can be taken away by women.

Until Game begins to help the guys who don't play it, it's not a movement, it's not a correction, it doesn't change the terrain. You're not a fix until you change the terrain. Until then, you're just more responsibility heaped on the back of the new generation of men.

How's game gonna change the terrain, Frost? What's your plan, there? Or is it just to sell strategies and get rich?

43-year-old O.C. mom accused of engaging in sex acts with a 12-year-old boy

1 upvotes · 7 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

Have they sent him to jail yet?

Are you all incredibly angry, delusional, hateful, depressed, violently upset, hate your wife (or hate women because you don't have one), support rape with false statistics, ... or is there some kind of smear campaign against r/mensrights?

1 upvotes · 7 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

Don't know exactly. But I find the idea of collaborating with you enticing. You have often inspired my writing to levels I would not, I think, otherwise have achieved.

Perhaps if the dead tree market is too ossified, some sort of web presentation could be imagined.

Elam vs Frost: Round 4

1 upvotes · 4 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

You may quote if you wish.

My point here is that both sides owe the other an apology.

MR activists need to acknowledge that the pickup/seduction skills community exists to address the growing lack of control that young men in this culture have over their own sex lives, that the men's right movement proper has failed to address this, and that this is a men's rights issue.

Men have a right to a level playing field in sexual interactions. The MRM has not stepped up to address this issue in the same way it has others. This is an act of cowardice, because it refuses to touch the issue of sex and men's sexual desires out of a fear of being labelled as shallow, childish, and self-indulgent.

But the very notion that sexual desires are shallow, or less important than emotional bonds, is a gynocentric viewpoint, valuing women's priorities over men's. By allowing this notion to reign unchecked, and by failing to address the sexual needs and lives of men, the MRM is failing us in one of the most critical areas of our lives.

The MRM needs to acknowledge that pickup teachers aren't just shallow little sex-obsessed twits. They are people who have taken up the MRM's slack in a very important area.

Pickup artists need to acknowledge that they are a response, not to the constant state of humanity, but to the specific way that our culture devalues men, and that, by regarding current female behaviour as normal and universal, they are making this problem worse for men as a whole, even as they help individual men here and there.

In a society where a good-quality male was regarded as a desirable thing, game would be useful, but not highly necessary. In our society, where the term "good-quality male" is regarded almost as a contradiction in terms, game is everything (when one is trying to get sexual satisfaction).

Instead of the cowardly act of regarding women as the terrain, fixed and immutable (out of fear of being labeled as complainers), pickup needs to acknowledge that its targets are not healthy women as they would be in a healthy society, but pathologically narcissistic women who have been taught from birth that they are valuable regardless of their accomplishments, that they have the right to whatever choices they want to make regardless of how that affects others, that they are better in every way than those whose contributions they take for granted.

To run about pretending that the MRM is right about divorce courts, criminal courts, paternity rights, economic issues, etc, etc... but the sexual playing field somehow manages to remain totally level... well, that's nothing but cowardly refusal to take a stand.

Should ladies nights really be illegal?

1 upvotes · 2 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

The problem isn't the small act of gender discrimination.

It's that it erodes the rule of law. The law is supposed to apply in much the same way to everyone. if you have laws that forbid discriminatory business practices, those laws need to apply in all situations, and to all demographics.

The Challenges Facing Fathers || Men's Rights

1 upvotes · 2 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

Your request has been blocked by @@@@ Information Security

@@@@ blocks Web sites which contain inappropriate content, those that contain malicious code, and those that provide services that may be unsafe to the @@@@ network and or its resources.

URL: <http://www.mensrights.com/index.php/Articles/The-Challenges-Facing-Fathers.html>

Categories: Discrimination, Profanity

The stupid, it burns!

Poker and Game: An analogy

1 upvotes · 1 November 2011 · /r/seduction

Oh, I see.

"Texas Hold'em" is one of those game varieties where there are a bunch of hidden cards that constitute the remainder of everyone's hand.

Not a bad analogy, then, since one is dealing with the hidden contents of someone else's mind.

Poker and Game: An analogy

1 upvotes · 1 November 2011 · /r/seduction

You are playing a game of Texas Hold'em.

You are dealt pocket aces (the best possible hand) five times in a row.

Each time you go all-in, and are called by weaker hands.

Each time, despite your massive statistical advantage, you lose.

Feels bad man.

Not a poker expert.

So explain to me like I'm a three-year-old how one loses with "the best possible hand".

Unwed mother? Blame feminism.

1 upvotes · 27 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

deinsentivizing male achievement

I've heard this argument.

I am unconvinced. The same rhetorical device could be applied to argue that sexual repression destroys societies by creating a revolutionary underclass of impoverished young men who cannot get laid.

Or I could just quote:

"Rome did not fall because they were decadent and had orgies. They were at the height of their power when they had the wildest orgies of all. It was only when they settled down and became Christians that their empire collapsed."

Frankly, I think the most sure indication of authoritarianism of any stripe is the repression of sex.

You see, tyrants always want to restrict sex because sex is a private good. It benefits no one but the participants. Tyrants are not interested in any private good; for them, every human motivation must be linked to some benefit to the state (or the tyrant personally, depending on the type of tyranny).

Totalitarians are not interested in human happiness other than their own. (Read Orwell's "1984", and pay particular attention to the sections about the party's research into eliminating the orgasm). This is why communist China, nazi Germany, and theocratic Saudi Arabia all display(ed) profound opposition to sexual freedom, despite their completely different political philosophies. The one thing they have(had) in common is tyranny.

Civilization exists for human happiness, not human happiness for civilization. Any civilization that cannot build and maintain itself, without using artificially imposed misery as its primary engine, doesn't deserve to exist.

Unwed mother? Blame feminism.

1 upvotes · 27 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

Feminism removed much of the stigma for promiscuous women (spelled S-L-U-T), but it didn't make you have sex with men you weren't married to.

I'm getting kind of sick of all these anti-sex traditionalists masquerading as MRAs.

Restriction of non-marital sex is one the world's oldest tools for the systematic exploitation of men. It is the use of their sexual needs as leverage to extract labor from them, by putting as high a price tag as possible on sex.

If women are not allowed to enjoy sex, and engage in it for pleasure or the fulfillment of inner needs, then men will have no options but to pay, or to rape.

The only difference between a traditionalist woman who refuses to have sex out of wedlock, and a prostitute, is the price.

Being called "Creepy" ostracizes people, usually men. If you're a creep shamer, fuck you!

1 upvotes · 26 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

Okay, sure. Good question.

But to talk about that, we need a more specific example. Let's take this as our text.

A man made an awkward pass at this woman, and she became uncomfortable, a feeling which made her describe him as "creepy".

But why was she uncomfortable? What exactly was the discomfort?

If I had to guess, I'd say that because he presented with an usually high level of visible desperation, she was afraid that he wouldn't go away when she failed to show interest in him. This would place in her in a dilemma between two needs, the need to appear as a nice, gentle, humane person (this is pretty important to most women), and the need to appear of high status and attractiveness (women are raised to gauge their social value by that of the men who make advances to them).

In other words, having him hang around would diminish her social value (not to mention that his company was just unpleasant), but driving him away would also diminish her social value by making her appear mean.

So she was afraid of losing face. And she made this out to be entirely his problem by calling him "creepy".

This is a bad idea for two reasons. First of all, he lacked the social skills to make himself attractive. But she lacked the social skills to dismiss him without appearing callous. Calling him "creepy" blames both lacks on him.

Second, it uses the same word to describe a man who made her afraid of social embarrassment that she would use to describe the fear of being raped and beaten to death with a tire iron. It's a form of crying wolf; it invokes the natural desire of men to protect her from harm, and does so unnecessarily... pull this particular fire alarm too much, and we won't be on hand to protect her when a real predator shows up.

So the proper terms in this case would be "awkward and unattractive". As in, "I met this really awkward and unattractive guy, and I couldn't get him to go away." If she wanted to be really precise, she could use the term "needy".

The benefits of this are several. First off, it tells everyone exactly what we are dealing with, i.e. a social annoyance, not a physical threat.

Second, it gives some insight into how she might avoid this in the future. She might say "I need to work on my brush-off skills".

Third, it gives him and others like him some idea of how to not be That Guy. He can say to himself, "Okay, appearing too needy makes her afraid she won't be able to socially extract herself if things go bad. I need to worry about outcome less, and just talk to women in a more relaxed fashion."

Fourth, it gets her off the appearance of hypocrisy. Because next week, when a well-dressed young man comes up to her table, makes just the right amount of eye contact, smiles, and says "Mind if I stalk you? Next Wednesday, if you're free. Looks at pocket organizer I think I have Wednesday open."... she might just laugh, and the conversation would start flowing. Because this guy wasn't needy. He was just making a joke.

See, making these kinds of fine distinction is win-win. Better for the man who's being called "creepy", and better for the woman who's using the word.

But it requires someone to be a mature, introspective adult who takes responsibility for her feelings, not a spoiled little girl who thinks her discomfort is everyone else's problem.

What the fucking fuck?! Woman fatally stabs a man from the backseat of the car he's driving. FOUND NOT GUILTY.

1 upvotes · 26 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

There's no need for BWS as a concept at all. We already have an appropriate legal justification for certain types of homicide. It's called "self-defense".

Being called "Creepy" ostracizes people, usually men. If you're a creep shamer, fuck you!

1 upvotes · 26 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

Are you slow, or something? I don't know much more clear I can make this.

"Creepy" is a general term, like "bad". What you need is a more specific term, like "frightening".

You keep saying "Bullshit"... and then agreeing with me. It's not the words he said. It's the something about the way he said them. What I'm saying is "figure out what it was about the way he said them".

Understand this. Understand what signals he was giving off, and what you read into them. Then you'll be able to say something more specific about this guy than "he was creepy".

And when you can do that, then you'll be able to help yourself (and people like him) to avoid ending up in these spine-tinglingly uncomfortable situations.

Welsh Government will consult on whether there should be a legal age of consent for piercings, including to ears. Why nothing similar for circumcision?

1 upvotes · 19 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

Personally, philosophically opposed?

Or would you support a ban on infant/child circumcision?

FBI to update archaic definition of rape (which currently excludes male victims)

1 upvotes · 19 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

I think Futrelle would agree that this is one area where MRA's have a right to complain.

Has he, yet? I think that default credit for basic human decency lasts until someone has the opportunity to explicitly demonstrate it.

If they don't take that opportunity...

Welsh Government will consult on whether there should be a legal age of consent for piercings, including to ears. Why nothing similar for circumcision?

1 upvotes · 19 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

Raped? I thought this was about circumcision... what page are you on? Are you opposed to male infants being circumcised?

In fact, let's give you a chance to go on record:

In your opinion, is the systematic circumcision of male infants an injustice? Is it an injustice they suffer because they are male? Is therefore a violation of the natural rights of (specifically) men?

Or not?

Welsh Government will consult on whether there should be a legal age of consent for piercings, including to ears. Why nothing similar for circumcision?

1 upvotes · 19 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

How am I supposed to know the difference? More to the point, what is the difference?

Blind Rage: Not Every Man Is Evil A story of healing and relationships.

1 upvotes · 17 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

If you want me to read this, post it somewhere else.

Just got a call with some bad news, it got me thinking and I had to write something .

1 upvotes · 14 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

You have both my sympathies and my envy... because you had him.

My grandfather, my father's father, died many, many years before I was born, on D-Day, coming up the beach into German machine gun fire, doing what men do.

Maybe it's selfish to say, when he gave his life for so many people who needed his help so much, but I needed him, too. I needed him to teach my father what it means to be a man, so he could pass those lessons on to me. My father was a man raised by a household of women, a man who despised physical labor, sports, competition... I never saw him with a tool in his hand, I never saw him break a sweat, I never saw him stand up to a woman, take a stand on principle, defend his loved ones, or admit a mistake and apologize. He never taught me how to fix a car, shoot a gun (or handle one safely), drive a nail straight, how to throw a football... or a punch.

I had to reinvent masculinity from scratch.

I wish sometimes that I could meet my grandfather, could talk to him, could tell him how important men are in the lives of not only those who love them, but of future generations they will never see.

I can't call him a deadbeat... he's the opposite. It was not selfishness, but duty and responsibility, devotion to justice, the highest of masculine ideals, that took him from me. But I still miss something in the empty spot where he should have been if he came home from the war.

I'm sorry... this got away from me. This was supposed to be a quick comment about how you were lucky to have such a good man, and you should remember to glad of about that even as he slips away from you. I didn't mean for it to be about me.

Everything he gave his children and grandchildren will last as long as his family does. Remember that and pay it forward.

I know a lot of people here don't think gay rights stuff belong here. Its shit like this that makes me think that you are wrong. This is discrimination against men.

1 upvotes · 14 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

Ann, I find this as repugnant as you do. I think that the way gay men are treated in this culture is shameful and disgusting.

But I think there is a distinction between bigotry these guys face because they are men, and bigotry that they face because they are homosexual. This is a place for discussing the former.

Similarly, if someone called a black man a "greasy nigger", and tried to kick him out of a public place, I would be enraged and disgusted. But this wouldn't be the subreddit for discussing that, either.

The fact that these issues aren't on-topic doesn't mean we don't think they are important.

"Want more women in open source? Try paying them." Oh feminists, if you want women to be equal you should probably stop suggesting they require spoon feeding.

1 upvotes · 12 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

So it's not a parody because it's a deliberate parody?

In my my opinion, there are few things more damning than when Poe's Law applies to you.

A new blog about sex and seduction, written from the perspective of a young female

1 upvotes · 6 October 2011 · /r/seduction

This woman doesn't know what the friendzone is.

A few nights later, we were back at my place. Clothes were coming off, things were getting really hot, mouths were wandering and hands were fully exploring. He told me he wants to fuck, but then it dawned on me that I actually didn't want to fuck him at all.

The friendzone doesn't mean that a woman doesn't feel like fucking right now. It means she has decided that a man is not sex-worthy.

If you're removing clothes, and things are "getting hot", that is not the friendzone.

Ragu says "dads can't cook." X-post from r/daddit

1 upvotes · 6 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

That's okay. Ragu can't cook either, so what would they know?

could you love a bipolar woman? (xpost)

1 upvotes · 5 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

And all the comments so far are very much blaming someone for something outside their control.

There's a difference between something being your fault and something being your responsibility. Her disease is not her fault, but she's still the one responsible for dealing with it. No one is morally obligated to be okay with it.

The operative phrase here is that a need in you does not create an obligation in me.

Congratulations for being arseholes.

Isn't that a little inconsistent? Maybe being arseholes "isn't their fault".

Default setting: Femicide [A feminist speaking about men]

1 upvotes · 2 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

...And yet the overwhelming majority of children who are killed by a parent are killed by their mother.

Male-assigned-at-birth people are conditioned from birth to be misogynists

1 upvotes · 1 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

You're equating "forcing people out" with "never allowing them to join."

There's a huge difference between not allowing someone to join your group, and forcing people out of the place that they've lived their entire life because they don't agree with the rules you've imposed on them against their will.

You've reminded me of that joke RFC where someone proposed to simplify firewall design by requiring that all packets coming from a host with ill intent should have the "evil" bit set in the IP header.

If it weren't for the fact that a powerful organization always ends up taking control, we wouldn't need anarchists.

We actually don't need anarchists.

What we need are libertarians.

/r/AskReddit: [The friendzone is] not even a real thing. It's just a scorned dude trying to blame a girl for not liking him, as if she's the one doing something wrong.

1 upvotes · 30 September 2011 · /r/seduction

The friendzone isn't about blame. It's about what to do next.

What friendzone means is that a woman has decided you are not sex-worthy, and so the maximum possible level of regard she could have for you is "friend".

It doesn't matter how you got there, or whose "fault" it is.

What matters, and what makes it an important concept is that when you are in it, you next her. That's why knowing if you're in the friendzone is important. It's the switch flip between {assume attraction and push through}/{next her and never call again}.

How feminist men emotionally disable women

1 upvotes · 29 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

My bad, I meant to ask what and how I should teach myself to do the math problems/models with a computer.

First, know how to do the math. Second, know how to write software.

What does the second imply for a physics student?

First of all, there's a guy. He's a grad student in a hard science. He needs to write a "simple program" for his research. He picks up a book on visual basic, and learns about variables, and the keywords "if", "for", and "while", and how to write a function. He says to himself, "Hey, this isn't so hard", and starts writing his code.

Six months later, he pays a CS undergrad $50 an hour to fix the mess he made.

Don't be that guy. That guy and all his friends paid off my student loans.

Take the CS undergrad intro course, and the data structures course. "But that'll take six months!" Yeah. Kind of like learning physics. Really, your professor would be better off hiring a software engineer and expecting him to learn diff. eqs. than hiring a physicist and expecting him to learn to program. But if you don't want to tell him that, you need to learn enough about how software is put together to get the job done.

How feminist men emotionally disable women

1 upvotes · 29 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

As a physics student I'm gonna have to learn that crap, and get pretty efficient at it. I'm going to try teaching myself, any suggestions?

Laplace transforms.

How feminist men emotionally disable women

1 upvotes · 29 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

Ya, I'm sure your insight is dead on but there's even more to the supposed controversy; the women in tech make more money than the men. I wonder if you've noticed the bias towards women in the tech industry.

There is a bias towards hiring women in the tech industry, mostly because of the rarity of qualified female candidates and the desire to avoid accusations of anti-female bias.

I know I wouldn't stand a chance against an equally-qualified female candidate. This isn't a problem, however, since I've never met one.

However, I'm not sure that women being paid more is evidence of bias. It could be just because only the most career-motivated of women make it into the field at all.

And just out of curiosity, do you guys normally take diff eq?

Absolutely. Along with calculus of multiple variables, discrete mathematics, and linear algebra.

Do you use that math in practice?

Depends what we're working on. Diff eqs in scientific apps and robot control, linear algebra when doing graphics, discrete math everywhere. If you aren't comfortable with discrete math, go study business administration.

But those aren't really the hard part. The hard part is complexity analysis, theory of computation, data structures, language theory (the pumping lemma, and so forth), fixed point theory, and understanding the internals of compilers and operating systems.

Those are the difference between a software engineer and a mere programmer.

Title Change for /r/Mensrights

1 upvotes · 28 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

Yes, but my point is that dismissing feminists at the doorstep is not the same as women at the doorstep. And anyone who reads "feminist" and thinks "woman" is not going to be an ally no matter what we say.

In support of LGBT month, I would like to pay tribute to Alan Turing, a man who helped win WW2, revolutionize computers. He was persecuted for being a homosexual and was chemically castrated.

1 upvotes · 28 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

They do that to any gay women?

Gawker mocks r/MensRights

1 upvotes · 28 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

Sure. No one said this process was inevitable. The point is that negative attention is an indication of fear.

After all, no one wastes energy hating the Flat-Earth Society.

Everyone disagrees with them, but no one fears them. So we don't waste our time mocking them... we just ignore them.

When someone becomes a threat, then we vocally disagree. First through mockery, then invective, then opposition on a policy level.

So this isn't evidence of inevitable victory. But it is evidence that we have become a threat.

Just Be Yourself: The Worst Dating Advice Known To Man

1 upvotes · 26 September 2011 · /r/seduction

Good points. However, to transform this statement this statement into what some, more sensible, people mean by it, you can say "transform yourself according to your own goals and values, not someone else's".

I agree that a lot of people who say this are part of the bullshit Cult of Self-Esteem, however.

The Fine Line Between Marriage and Divorce

1 upvotes · 26 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

Well, talk to him about it.

How do you deal with women who are making a conscious effort to avoid getting hurt?

1 upvotes · 26 September 2011 · /r/seduction

Consider the converse. How would women deal with a man who had been burned, and swore off commitment until after the 4th week of sex?

They would rightly point out that the treachery of others was not their fault, or their responsibility to make right.

Not a rape culture, just a PC one

1 upvotes · 22 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

What on earth are you talking about?

This is clear, concise, eloquent, and correct. A "rape culture" is a culture where rape is accepted. If something is accepted, people talk about it without fear.

If A implies B, and B implies C, then if you don't have any C, you must not have B, and hence no A.

"10 reasons feminism is good for men" -> Or, How to use incorrect data and stereotypes to try to convince people of a reality not supported by data/experience

1 upvotes · 21 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

Do you find atheists who believe in the fictitious patriarchy, but deny God?

I would imagine so. Spotting one lack of evidence doesn't mean spotting another. And the absence of god(s) is a lot more evident than the absence of a patriarchy, because the latter isn't impossible under any set of circumstances.

This is for the MGTOW

1 upvotes · 14 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

Some of them. Not really sure how many, though. I certainly wouldn't agree that MGTOW is unrealistic because all men can be expected to want children.

It's pretty simple for men to opt out of committed relationships with women, it doesn't cut off access to sex, and in my experience at least, it does tend to leave you with more spare cash.

The only thing it leaves you without is children, and frankly, I'm not really sure how many men are really that keen.

r/TransphobiaProject fights with r/feminisms. r/Mensrights emerges as the villain.

1 upvotes · 12 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

So, if you unilaterally decide someone is a bigot, they don't have the right of self-determination?

Can we have a list of the people who are allowed autonomy, according to the Great Prophet Barbadoslim? We'd just like to know.

r/TransphobiaProject fights with r/feminisms. r/Mensrights emerges as the villain.

1 upvotes · 12 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

It's not as egregious, perhaps, but there are degrees of rape, despite what certain people say.

The distinction between rape and sexual assault isn't severity, it's whether sex occurs.

I would be comfortable calling one twin who masqueraded as another to have sex with the wife of the first a "rapist", although rape by deception certainly calls for a less severe penalty than forcible rape.

r/TransphobiaProject fights with r/feminisms. r/Mensrights emerges as the villain.

1 upvotes · 12 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

NAFALT? You're going to tell me NAFALT?

No, NAFALT isn't going to fall on deaf ears. It's going fall on tired ones. There's a reason why we write NAFALT as an acronym around here. Somebody didn't read the FAQ.

NAFALT just makes me feel tired and cynical and disappointed in you.

Why? Because you self-styled "moderates" are always so eager to tell men that NAFALT, but never seem to waste much energy telling the Feminists that you are Not Like.

NAFALT seems to be something you trot out to prevent us from criticizing ridiculous behaviour. Because otherwise, you'd tell them, not us.

You say you're Not Like That. But that's something you say to us. When it comes time to stand up and be counted, you call yourselves "feminists", and make sure you're counted with them.

If you really cared about this sort of thing, you'd fight to reclaim the term "feminist" from the bigots, instead of fighting to shut up anyone who objects to what they've made it into.

Mote.

Beam.

Eye.

Is porn really affecting us?

1 upvotes · 9 September 2011 · /r/seduction

Well, I cannot talk about your personal experience. Maybe cutting it out works for you.

But this article is nonsense. It weaves a little story, pulls an analogy or two from nowhere, names a few neurotransmitters (whose functions are not really understood at all) to sound "scientific".

But nowhere does it cite a blind, controlled study showing that pornography or masturbation reduces sexual response.

Why not? Because there isn't one.

Oh, it's easy to find correlations here and there. I'm sure plenty of people masturbate less when they're getting laid more. But showing that masturbation causes sexual dysfunction? Never been accomplished. And not for lack of trying.

My answer to let's just be friends.

1 upvotes · 8 September 2011 · /r/seduction

The trick to dealing with LJBF is to figure out if she's serious, or it's a shit test. If it's a shit test, laugh it off. If it's serious, you LNEBF (Let's not even be friends) her.

Confessions of a "Woman-Owned Business" Owner: How I learned to love quotas.

1 upvotes · 8 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

I suppose it's not so different from the old days, when the incumbent supplier was apt to be the project manager's brother-in-law -- but it certainly isn't an improvement.

The old-time project manager wasn't forced to hire his brother-in-law, and he might even have had a chance of exercising some quality control over him. In this new, desperate rush to hire one-eyed Central Asians from south of the railroad tracks, price and quality necessarily weigh second at best.

Ask MR: My lesbian friend is having a women's only wedding ceremony (all guests are female). Should this annoy me?

1 upvotes · 26 August 2011 · /r/MensRights

Depends why.

Are all their friends female? Then it's a coincidence.

Are they making a special effort to exclude males? Then they're bigots, and annoyance is probably appropriate.

...but women were never GIVEN A CHANCE!

1 upvotes · 17 August 2011 · /r/MensRights

Patriarchy, routinely blamed for everything, produced the birth control pill, which did more to free contemporary women than feminism itself.

Also the dishwasher, the washing machine, the refrigerator, the vacuum cleaner, etc.

One of the reasons feminists saw being a homemaker as a trap rather than an honourable profession is that most of the job had been automated away, to the point where it was no longer a full time responsibility.

Tales of a sexually liberated woman: hypergamy, affairs, broken marriages, divorce, suicide, and kid in the psych ward. This story's got it all!

1 upvotes · 14 August 2011 · /r/MensRights

if the "price of sex" becomes too low, and men no longer have to work at intellectually cutting-edge jobs in order to be worthy of sex

So you favor the exploitation of men?

Ahem.

1 upvotes · 13 August 2011 · /r/MensRights

A valid point.

But what I see here is the elimination of spaces where men can speak without answering to women for the content of their speech. I see an attempt to shame people into silence, and that doesn't sit easy with me even when what they have to say is kind of stupid.

Why are women so against being seen as "sluts"?

1 upvotes · 12 August 2011 · /r/seduction

So you think there's something wrong with you? Something so bad that if a woman wants you right away, she has no class?

If you think about it, that's what you're really implying, there.

Crazy woman, stabs NFL player, doesn't get charged...SO fucking sick of this shit. The woman should be locked up, it's assault with a deadly weapon.

1 upvotes · 12 August 2011 · /r/MensRights

I do seem to recall that he was charged and brought to trial.

Female Masculinist on Self-Control

1 upvotes · 9 August 2011 · /r/MensRights

Killing a child is infanticide. Killing a fetus is abortion.

So it's a fetus when a woman wants to kill it, but gets promoted to "child" when a man wants to disown it?

I'm pretty "dissatisfied" with that. In fact, I'm "dissatisfied" with having no reproductive rights at all, and I'm "dissatisfied" with people like you who are a-ok with that, but resist any suggestion for improvement, holding up the threadbare excuse that we don't live in a perfect world.

And while we're at it, I'm "dissatisfied" with people who claim to be reasonable, but want to fix the last problem faced by women before the first problem faced by men.

Don't let the door hit you in the ass on way out.

Female Masculinist on Self-Control

1 upvotes · 9 August 2011 · /r/MensRights

letting men cut ties because they don't like the outcome of a scenario that they played a VERY active role in causing is...well...an insufficient answer to this problem

Aaaaaaaaand debate is over, you're a bigot.

You think that letting a man disown a child is going too far, when a woman can legally kill that same child... which you're okay with.

If you can't see your own incredible level of gender bias now, then I don't think there's anything that can be done for you.

My hot 17 year old neighbor wants to be FWB. I'm 26. Is this an awful or awesome idea?

1 upvotes · 4 August 2011 · /r/seduction

Morally, there's nothing wrong with it.

Legally, you could get in a lot of trouble, and she's not worth it.

Seduction strats dont work in my country, help.

1 upvotes · 2 August 2011 · /r/seduction

You're implying that all HB6s, 7s, 8s, and 9s are "cold, materialistic and racist"? That's like 40% of the population, dude.

Wait, what?

Are you assuming a uniform distribution, or something?

Feeling skeptical, some thoughts on Seduction

1 upvotes · 1 August 2011 · /r/seduction

it seems as if Seduction is based on a blueprint that no matter how much you study and follow it doesn't always work but maintains it's legitimacy by always having an explanation for your failure that consists of you failing to follow that blueprint Seduction isn't based on a blueprint. It's based on the anecdotal experiences of a bunch of twentysomethings with no scientific training.

Every once in a while one of them comes up with a hypothesis that he miscalls a "theory". But he has no ability to systematically test it. So he releases a book or video where he makes some rhetorical arguments to support it, and sounds very convincing indeed in the absence of contradiction.

But seduction information is just that. Information. Experiences. Stories. The unsystematic musings of experts who don't often understand their own skills.

There is much good information out there, but it is up to the student to filter it, integrate it, decide what's appropriate, and come up with something that works for him.

Sorry, but there's no clearly marked road.

So my ex, mother of my kids, who left me and I was just getting better from, txts me...

1 upvotes · 30 July 2011 · /r/seduction

She says, "I miss you". Then she sends another saying something about hurry before I cut myself.

Run.

a very nice guy told me something that i've never heard a guy say before:

1 upvotes · 26 July 2011 · /r/seduction

Ahahah!

Now I think I understand him. Our culture teaches guys that our sexuality is predatory and bad.

Sometimes younger guys will take this to heart, and have a hard time having sexual feelings for someone they really care about, because they care about her. This is sometimes referred as a Madonna/Whore complex.

You need to combine enthusiasm with patience. Experiencing his sexuality as a welcome, desired, positive thing may be something he has never felt before. Just the thing to undo years worth of damage wrought by feminism, but something it will take him a while to trust.

a very nice guy told me something that i've never heard a guy say before:

1 upvotes · 26 July 2011 · /r/seduction

No, you can take the initiative. In fact, you should. It will make him feel valued and appreciated.

But you will also need to make sure you are not pushing things too fast, because he can't enjoy himself if he's nervous.

So make your interest clear, and initiate, but do it gradually. Cuddle, play with his hair, rub his back before going for the kiss. At each stage, let him relax and enjoy himself before escalating.

Also, if he is a virgin, he will have performance anxiety. Guys are held responsible for sexual pleasure in a way that girls just aren't. He'll be worried that he'll bore you or turn you off by not knowing all the right moves. It will take some time for you to send the message that you like him for who he is, not what you expect him to live up to.

What do you think are the 10 biggest issues facing men?

1 upvotes · 21 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

I think there is only one:

Negative images and valuation of men in the "first world". Everything else is a symptom of that.

I am a man. [x/pics]

1 upvotes · 21 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

Not to mention the way that welfare subsidizes the breakup of black families.

And then insult is added to injury by the perpetrators suggesting that black men are somehow especially prone to abandon their children.

I am a man. [x/pics]

1 upvotes · 21 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

I'm sure OP was aware of that. He was drawing a parallel in a dramatically amusing way.

"Men and women play games with each other because men are operating under an irrational paradigm that says to men, 'you're not good enough for any woman, so you must pretend to be better than you are.'" - Johnny Soporno

1 upvotes · 19 July 2011 · /r/seduction

ThrowAwayPUA would probably ban me. He hates this stuff.

"Men and women play games with each other because men are operating under an irrational paradigm that says to men, 'you're not good enough for any woman, so you must pretend to be better than you are.'" - Johnny Soporno

1 upvotes · 16 July 2011 · /r/seduction

http://www.reddit.com/r/seduction/comments/iqgro/men_and_women_play_games_with_each_other_because/c261t6h

"Men and women play games with each other because men are operating under an irrational paradigm that says to men, 'you're not good enough for any woman, so you must pretend to be better than you are.'" - Johnny Soporno

1 upvotes · 16 July 2011 · /r/seduction

Copypasta.

I think the reason most women tend to not give so much fucks is because they have tons of attention and all the other shit that we men have to derive from nothing. We must create the force while they are able to just consume it without ever having to produce it.

Finally.

Finally, finally, finally someone here is starting to wake up.

r/seduction is half the puzzle.

The other half is r/mensrights.

Why do you think all this seduction crap is just being invented as of the last three decades? Do you seriously think that no one in the history of the world before now was capable of coming up with this shit?

NO!

The answer is they didn't need it. Good natural game was enough. The confidence you got from success in life was enough. The fact that women saw a good man as a desirable thing was enough.

People from earlier times didn't have sciences of how to game the system, because they didn't have to. The playing field was level. Women thought of men as having value already.

All this PUA stuff isn't some new, wonderful discovery. It's a reaction, where we are trying to correct the way our culture has failed us.

We are the first generations to do it, because we are the second generation to grow up in a post-feminist society, a society that has accepted as a basic creed the notion that men are shit.

That is the reason that you have to work so hard at learning to approach women. Because they, and you, have been taught from infancy that you are a walking, talking pile of shit. Not because of anything about you. But just because you are a man.

"Natural game", and learning it, means nothing more than reclaiming the notion that women are not better than you. Why is this so hard? Because we grew up swimming in feminist propaganda, that's why.

I don't need to give examples. We're all men here. We know the kind of shit they say about us in movies, on television, in universities, from every public forum in the country.

Our culture takes every contribution of men for granted, and then calls us worthless because every good thing about us has become invisible.

And yeah, we can learn seduction skills, we can learn inner game, we can create in little bubble around us that contradicts this shit, maintain it with sheer force of will, and walk around in it reaping the sexual rewards. But we have a greater responsibility than that.

We have a responsibility to fix our culture. To teach that men do have value. To remind men to stop undervaluing themselves, and to remind women to stop overvaluing themselves.

We need to stop just working on our own game, and start getting the message out, that we will not accept being viewed as inferiors any more.

"Men and women play games with each other because men are operating under an irrational paradigm that says to men, 'you're not good enough for any woman, so you must pretend to be better than you are.'" - Johnny Soporno

1 upvotes · 15 July 2011 · /r/seduction

Yeah, I crossposted to r/mensrights, and a mod threw a fit. I can still see it, but I guess others can't.

"Men and women play games with each other because men are operating under an irrational paradigm that says to men, 'you're not good enough for any woman, so you must pretend to be better than you are.'" - Johnny Soporno

1 upvotes · 15 July 2011 · /r/seduction

http://www.reddit.com/r/seduction/comments/ih3z/interesting_and_wellwritten_article_arguing/c2407qc http://www.reddit.com/r/seduction/comments/i8j1h/why_is_it_so_hard_to_see_the_benefits/c21rmf4

Why Women Think That 80% of Men are "Below Average"

1 upvotes · 15 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

I may write too long for the low attention-spans of today.

Stop patting yourself on the back.

What you refer to as a "low attention span" is the combination of the need to quickly screen a vast number of alternatives, combined with a greater tolerance for information density.

On the web, your readers are younger, smarter, more sophisticated, and think and absorb faster... so you need to increase your signal to noise ratio.

Female infidelity is not the same things as cuckolding

1 upvotes · 14 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

Female infidelity is not the same as paternity fraud. Don't know what the hell "cuckolding" is supposed to mean.

girl doesn't want to date but insists on being friends

1 upvotes · 13 July 2011 · /r/seduction

Not gonna read your textwall, don't need to read your textwall.

LJBF -> LNEBF.

That's all. That's the universal response. Don't need more details.

Let's.

Not.

Even.

Be.

Friends.

The Post-feminism Man (2010)

1 upvotes · 11 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

Except that sluts are less likely to do that. A slut doesn't marry a man for money, or stability, or whatever external consideration. A woman who marries for these is a whore. A slut marries a man if she wants to be married to him.

Hey r/mensrights, check your privilege [PDF]

1 upvotes · 11 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

Okay, gonna have to answer this one more explicitly.

Whoever wrote this list doesn't know what privilege means. It doesn't mean "advantage". It doesn't mean "thing you have that others don't".

And if we were just talking about advantages, we could simply say that everyone in this discussion was "privileged", since the vast majority of history's humans are dead.

But that's not what privilege means. It comes from the words for "private" and "law". A privilege is a private law. That is, a rule that applies to some and not others.

A privilege is not a circumstance that discriminates. All circumstances discriminate. A privilege is a rule that discriminates.

Now, in the US, we certainly have lots of law that explicit favour one gender. But guess which gender that is.

The Post-feminism Man (2010)

1 upvotes · 11 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

But your way is not superior to a man who laments traditionalism.

If traditionalism was without flaws, feminism never would never reared its ugly head in the first place.

wikipedia is holding a "deletion review" for Tom Ball's entry

1 upvotes · 11 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

If reliable sources cover the person only in the context of a single event, and if that person otherwise remains, and is likely to remain, a low-profile individual, we should generally avoid having an article on them.

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Th%C3%ADch_Qu%E1%BA%A3ng_%C4%90%E1%BB%A9c

Crashes

1 upvotes · 8 July 2011 · /r/seduction

When this happens to you:

1. Don't email, call or text any women. That's trying to prop yourself up with external validation. Besides, you're not anywhere near state.
2. Realize that this is a universal phenomenon, not you reverting to loserdom.
3. Go to sleep. You'll feel better in the morning.

Can you be banned from a subreddit without even posting in it? This must be a new record!

1 upvotes · 7 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

You ain't the only one. His disapprobation fills me with pride.

I am thinking about wearing a wedding ring to the next company I work for to help further my career.

1 upvotes · 7 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

I could see the argument that each of those categories isn't necessarily 20%, but at the same time, I think a relatively uniform distribution is a fair assumption.

No, it's not.

Your argument is crap. We can't make assumptions like that, we need to look at the numbers.

You're right to say that it's not so certain that single men are promoted less (and even if they were, it wouldn't necessarily indicate bias), but we need to look at the numbers, and the inputs.

Not screw around mistaking the cardinality of a set for its distribution.

I am thinking about wearing a wedding ring to the next company I work for to help further my career.

1 upvotes · 7 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

I could see the argument that each of those categories isn't necessarily 20%, but at the same time, I think a relatively uniform distribution is a fair assumption.

No, it's not.

Your argument is crap. We can't make assumptions like that, we need to look at the numbers.

You're right to say that it's not so certain that single men are promoted less (and even if they were, it wouldn't necessarily indicate bias), but we need to look at the numbers, and the inputs.

Not screw around mistaking the cardinality of a set for its distribution.

Don't MRAs and feminists both want gender equality? Where's the big disagreement?

1 upvotes · 5 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

Another good question.

To answer this, I think we first have to define "social engineering".

Obviously, the term must mean more than "any act that influences the mores of a culture"... because we do that a tiny bit every time we open our mouths.

So what is social engineering? Well, the term engineering suggests a deliberate, planned, organized effort.

So let us say that "social engineering", as we use the term, means a deliberate effort, on the part of a group, to change the mores of a culture which includes individuals not of that group, by cooperative action.

So, for example, a bunch of Irish farmers individually deciding to switch to growing potatoes because it appears to be a superior food source is not social engineering. No collective, cooperative action. It may lead to bad effects (potato blight and subsequent famine), but these are the result of an emergent property, not someone's specific fault.

A bunch of temperance leagues getting together and trying to abolish alcohol consumption from a country, by means both social and legislative, is social engineering. If it leads to disaster (rampant crime), then the groups in question are to blame (for their lack of foresight).

From these examples, we can see that not every act of social engineering is an attempt to extinguish a construct.

However, attempting to extinguish an alleged construct is usually an act of social engineering.

The reason I think one needs to be rigorous in making social engineering propositions has to do with my background as a software engineer.

In my experience:

1. The more complex a system is, the more dangerous it is to change it.
2. The less you understand a system, the more dangerous it is to change it.
3. The more people a system affects, the more dangerous it is to change it.
4. The more emergent a system is, the more dangerous it is to change it.

Culture is a system that is complex, poorly understood, effective upon many people, and emergent. In fact, it arguably the system that is most complex, least understood, effective upon the most people, and most emergent.

Thus changing it is very dangerous indeed. Should it never be done? No, there are dangers in stagnation and lack of change.

But when something is very dangerous to do, one must study carefully, plan carefully, predict well, and proceed cautiously.

Did feminism do this? Decidedly not.

There were few if any scientific studies done to support its hypotheses. Critics were treated as hostile agents rather than peer reviewers, or even humans with a valid point of view. Change was implemented as fast as could be forced against resistance, rather than at a pace where results could be observed and measured.

Feminism as an enterprise is largely blind to the damage it has caused, the people it has hurt, the consequences of its ill-considered actions. It is indifferent to the situation of men, and hostile to criticism.

When someone makes a mistake, you give them feedback, they can stop themselves. But when someone is immune to feedback, they must be stopped by others.

Don't MRAs and feminists both want gender equality? Where's the big disagreement?

1 upvotes · 5 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

The argument doesn't stop at "Gender is a construct". The idea is that gender is in many ways a harmful construct.

Well, since gender is not a construct, it cannot be a harmful construct. End of argument.

But you do raise the issue that constructs can be helpful or harmful, and that's a good point. When we decide we want to do some social engineering, we need to go through a two-stage process.

First, we need to determine if something is a construct. This is a scientific process. Only controlled studies allowed.

If {whatever} is not a construct, stop.

Second, if it is, we need to have a long discussion, one that includes everyone (not just feminists, or even just women), about who it helps, who it harms, and in what proportion. When a consensus is reached, then something can be done.

Is r/seddit for real?

1 upvotes · 4 July 2011 · /r/seduction

I'm not entirely comfortable with the 'seduction' tag, as it almost seems predatory.

That's only if you see male sexuality as negative and an imposition.

If you do, then the first step is to fix that attitude.

Feminists still think men should offer to pay for dates

1 upvotes · 4 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

I wonder what it truly is behind each individual girls mind that makes them want this.

Instinct.

Males pursuing females is natural behaviour for humans. That's why it occurs across different cultures.

Feminists, like any other person, feel acute distress when someone tries to socially engineer them against their instincts. What they do not understand is that they are inflicting this same distress on others with their own pet issues.

im so depressed

1 upvotes · 2 July 2011 · /r/seduction

You crashed.

This is normal. You were emotionally invested in succeeding that night, you had a bad night, your mood crashed.

This is normal. It's hard to give yourself permission to feel good, to feel worthy, when external validation has been withdrawn. You live in a culture that doesn't do much to make you feel valued, and it's not always easy to fill in the gaps with sheer willpower.

But you can learn to recognize the crashes. You can learn to say "this is temporary".

And you can learn to realize that you are not your success with women. A woman's momentary whims of attraction are not the measure of you. They view you entirely too casually, and too briefly, to be any sort of worthwhile yardstick.

No, I'd say this is the tip of the iceberg regarding that is wrong with Rights4Men movement.

1 upvotes · 1 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

I agree that this guy seems to be a rather unpleasant variety of bigot, but I also don't really think there's any sort of overlap between the lgbt movement and the men's rights movement.

Just not the same issues.

I support both, but I do so as an individual. I don't think there is anything inherently pro-lgbt about men's rights (or vice versa).

This stupid shit doesn't make a man; it makes an emasculated "nice guy" [aka vapid high school girl shit]

1 upvotes · 1 July 2011 · /r/seduction

Yeah, I could certainly deal with the whole "being a prince" thing. Sign me up for that.

This stupid shit doesn't make a man; it makes an emasculated "nice guy" [aka vapid high school girl shit]

1 upvotes · 1 July 2011 · /r/seduction

Do not go after girls, go after women. Do not be a boy, be a man.

Sure, and we are in complete agreement there.

I think, however, that the four hundred and some-odd upvotes that this got in some ways reflects the frustration men feel at just how many girls (rather than women) there are out there, and just how it is demanded of them that they not be men.

The recent "discovery" of all these "pickup artist" techniques wasn't some scientific breakthrough that lay waiting 100,000 years for somebody to be smart enough to invent it.

It is a response to living a culture where our model of relationships is broken (and has only recently become so).

[Sociology] Shyness: Evolutionary Tactic? (more in comments)

1 upvotes · 26 June 2011 · /r/seduction

Can you point to any psychological research that bears this out?

Blueprint 05: Living in reaction vs. living in touch with your values

1 upvotes · 23 June 2011 · /r/seduction

"Be yourself" from a woman is still useless and incorrect advice.

Everything is about context, remember? It can be good advice when it comes from someone who provides context and assistance, and wrong otherwise.

If you were to ask me "Whisper, how do I get strong?", "Whisper, how do I win a fight?", "Whisper, how do I program a computer?", I could say "Lift heavy things", "Hit them until they fall down", and "Type in the right commands at the keyboard", and these would be wrong answers.

But I could talk about strength training programs, teach you karate and C++, and these answers would become useful.

"Just be yourself" from a woman means "Be an attractive person naturally." That's a dumb thing to say. "Be yourself" from a seduction instructor means "Become an attractive person naturally. And here's how."

The real lesson here, whether he meant it or not, is "Be strong. Have integrity. Live as you wish to live, not as others wish you to. Have principles, and stick to them."

Just getting into the community. What is Seddit's view on glasses?

1 upvotes · 18 June 2011 · /r/seduction

Glasses don't matter at all. I can't think why you would imagine they do.

Look, for every thing about you, there will be one girl in ten who hates it, eight who couldn't care less either way, and one for whom it is a secret fetish.

Never mind about trivial details like that. Run your game. If your glasses are a problem with a girl, next her.

All that being said, when you can afford the 5k, get surgery. Get for reasons that have nothing to do with girls. Get it for yourself. It is awesome.

Am I being sexist toward my own gender?

1 upvotes · 17 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

Yes, you are being sexist.

Against both genders.

You are calling her current priorities a "rebellious period" and assuming that you know what is good for her, or what she wants, better than she does. If she wants to get drunk and fuck a lot of dudes, then that choice belongs to her and the dudes. You don't get veto power just because you're older.

You are stereotyping male sexual attention as undesirable, unwelcome, and predatory. This hurts men everywhere.

That wouldn't be necessarily fueled by jealousy or protectionism

That's exactly what it is fueled by. The fact that you brought it up means you know it, too.

You either don't want her having sex because:

1. The unlikely negative consequences might spill over onto you, but the inevitable positive consequences benefit only her and her partner(s). This is why parents don't want their teens to have sex. It's entirely selfish.
2. Because it wouldn't be with you. Let's face it, we are often attracted to socially inappropriate people, whether too young, or whatever. We have to either admit to ourselves, and control our behaviour, or decide the social appropriateness isn't so bad, act on it, and laugh at anyone who gets puritanical at us. Either way, expecting someone else to be celibate is unfair. Either step up or step back.

You need to get your head straight. You are trying to rationalize some very dangerous attitudes in order to avoid having an honest, adult, and possibly very uncomfortable discussion about sex. Your brain needs a spring cleaning.

Young people are going to get drunk and fuck. That is natural, good, and healthy. It's time we leveled with that.

Rob Judge is Here in this thread to ANSWER YOUR QUESTIONS! Q&A TIME!

1 upvotes · 15 June 2011 · /r/seduction

What exercises would you suggest for someone who has rejection anxiety instead of approach anxiety?

In other words, what if you're confident enough to approach, but rejection stings so much that you're off your game for the night (and it prevents practicing at a high rate)?

[FR]What you do before an approach.

1 upvotes · 13 June 2011 · /r/seduction

I am in no way disagreeing here, in fact I may praise the calibrated smirk even higher than you have if I can. But the uncalibrated smile isn't going to do this. It's probably not going to hurt, but it won't have that "give HER the AA" effect.

Nope. This one was especially susceptible. Musta liked other stuff about me.

What the immediate eye contact + smile does isn't turn them into putty in your hands. Instead, it starts the interaction. I was specifically trying to push it for people who have trouble with AA.

Something I've noticed about r/MensRights...

1 upvotes · 12 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

What I am suggesting is that we change the way society sees gender, aka the second option.

There are lots of ways to change your view of something; in fact, there are as many as there are views to change to.

I'm not sure, however, that the kind of change most people who say this are endorsing has anything to do with making those views more accurate. In fact, that suspicion is confirmed when you say:

Gender differences exist, but they are certainly not as large as society would have us believe.

This is not only wrong, but reductionist, since there are multiple differences, and hence they can be both larger and smaller simultaneously.

The reason enlightened men fight so hard to protect the notion of gender difference is that they have come to realize that men everywhere are being hurt by lack of acknowledgment of real, significant, and inherent differences between the genders.

When society accepts the largely unspoken feminist premise that gender is a construct, and thus insignificant, then men are regarded largely as a defective version of a woman, rather than as a distinct entity with their own worldview, values, and strengths. That society then seeks to "correct" the ways in which he is not like a woman... with social pressure, with legal punishments, with Ritalin.

If men are be treated and acknowledged as full human beings in our culture again, this must come with the admission that:

1. There are significant differences between the genders.
2. These differences are not merely physical, but also psychological and behavioural.
3. Attempting to suppress these differences is harmful to health, happiness, and well-being.
4. Therefore treating both genders fairly means not treating them precisely the same in all cases. (Not that we achieve even that flawed and broken standard of fairness.)

When you say:

Sure, women aren't as physically strong as men,

... it makes me suspect that you have yet to reach these realizations. Differences in physical strength and agility are the one difference that feminists will typically acknowledge, both because they are so obvious that denial would be ridiculous, and because they are the least significant of all the differences between the genders, and thus do not impact the feminist agenda.

If that is the first, or the only, example of significant gender difference you come up with, then you have been well and truly indoctrinated. You may go so far as to believe that such a worldview is somehow "enlightened". The problem is that these beliefs are not empirical. They are not evidence-based. Every time someone does some actual research, they find male and female behaviour to be very different indeed.

And yet acknowledging this in any territory outside the pages of scientific journal has become somehow viewed as regressive, rather indicative of the progress of understanding.

Why Feminists don't understand the Men's Rights Movement.

1 upvotes · 12 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

It's simpler than that. They do not understand because they do not want to understand.

Never underestimate the ability of people to not know what it personally benefits them to not know.

As a man, this is how I demonstrate the insanity of 'blaming' and 'slut shaming' rape victims!

1 upvotes · 11 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

Are you going to respond to anything I said? Or just talk about how rape is bad?

Let me ask you a modified form of a question that I ask "pro-life" activists:

Is it more important to punish anyone who commits rape as harshly as possible? Or is it more important to reduce the total number of rapes that occur?

Bitchslap: A Column About Women and Fighting.

1 upvotes · 10 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

Some day I would like to see what it would be like if someone introduced me like they introduce feminists:

"Whisper is a 200 pound bodybuilder with a black belt in karate, and he could crush your skull like a grape."

... sounds really weird, threatening, and creepy when you say it about someone with a penis, doesn't it?

As a man, this is how I demonstrate the insanity of 'blaming' and 'slut shaming' rape victims!

1 upvotes · 10 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

What women often don't understand is that rape (except for the extreme, assault-by-total-stranger kind) is usually a matter of frustration and mixed signals.

Men like it when a women dresses like a slut. We like it when a woman is a slut. Men like sluts just fine (it's only other women who hate or look down on them).

But a woman who dresses and acts like a slut is sending a signal that she wants sex. Obviously, not any kind with anyone; sluts, like everyone else, have standards and preferences.

Men are then placed in the position of having to figure out what she's up for. And sometimes, where there's a miscommunication, "rape" or something like it, can occur, either through a total misunderstanding, or through man's reaction to disappointment and frustration.

A man who doesn't read women well, or doesn't handle frustration well, can be responsible for this. But so, to some degree, can a woman who is hard to read (deliberately or otherwise).

One avoids getting something one doesn't want by making sure people know you don't want it.

The message here isn't "don't dress like a slut". It's "send signals that are consistent with what you want". Your little "fuck-me shoes" may look cute, but the very fact you're calling them that means something about the signal they send. So wear them... if you're looking for a fuck. Otherwise, don't.

The easier women make it for a man to distinguish between women looking for sex and women not looking for sex, the less rapes there will be.

Will Smith is the biggest value giver ever

1 upvotes · 6 June 2011 · /r/seduction

Came here to say this.

Went away happy.

Is wealth really a workable solution?

1 upvotes · 5 June 2011 · /r/seduction

To be fair, there is a certain point of wealthy at which it no longer makes sense to pick up women with skills unless you're looking to get married.

$500-$5000 a night is literally worth less to some people than the time they would have to spend.

[FR] Wrecked!

1 upvotes · 5 June 2011 · /r/seduction

Drugs can sometimes help, but my opinion is that you should assume they will hurt unless you know specifically otherwise.

A South Florida woman will serve three years of probation for holding a steak knife to her husband's throat and demanding that he sign divorce papers and give her the deed to their house.

1 upvotes · 3 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

A stranger who did this would have served at least three years in prison.

Ladies we'd prefer if you didn't fake it...

1 upvotes · 2 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

Ah, the old excuse for not sharing control: "Only a weak man wants a woman to ever give up any control!"

I know we're supposed to defend men's rights but do you really believe these two ex-cops?

1 upvotes · 1 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

I believe in the presumption of innocence. Don't you?

23 women charged for child pornography

1 upvotes · 31 May 2011 · /r/MensRights

Yeah, he hates the way it's misspelled.

RFC: REALLY Frustrated Chump seeks help from you all!

1 upvotes · 26 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Much better. But lose the necklace, comb that hair.

Your frame isn't bad, but some weight training would make it better still.

The smile looks good, very natural. Use it.

RFC: REALLY Frustrated Chump seeks help from you all!

1 upvotes · 26 May 2011 · /r/seduction

No kino, no close. Kino is the one essential aspect of all game. If you do not kino, you get nothing.

Kudos to Seddit

1 upvotes · 26 May 2011 · /r/seduction

As for women not being in touch with their subconscious process, this really isn't something that can be attributed to women.

The subconscious is defined as "those thought processes which one is not aware of".

The real statement is here is not that "women have a subconscious". It's that "attraction, in women, belongs to the subconscious". In this respect, they tend to differ from men, who usually understand very well what attracts them (although getting them to be honest about it in mixed company is quite another matter).

Kudos to Seddit

1 upvotes · 26 May 2011 · /r/seduction

It is kind of a basic theory of pickup and seduction that women are "unreliable witnesses" to how they have been seduced, so their general pickup advice is unreliable. This could be due to women not being in touch with their inner motivations (and most of us are blind to our own subconscious processes) or it could be due to women being unable to express it to men in terms we can understand.

Well, I like to say that asking a woman for seduction advice is like asking a child for parenting advice...

But to discuss the subject on a more serious note, I like to think of it as if I were doing scientific research. In other words, female opinions are not "unreliable conclusions", they are "reliable data". Just as no responsible psychologist doing research would take subjects at their word instead of measuring and observing their behaviour, no sedditor trying to understand female attraction should take women's comments at face value, rather than observing them as another type of behaviour which requires analysis to understand.

When a woman says something, that tells us that it is something that she says. This can yield valuable information about her state of mind, and habits of thought. But taking it at face value would be assuming she understood herself absolutely, and was totally honest with strangers about that understanding.

My girlfriend isn't physically attracted to me. Any advice?

1 upvotes · 24 May 2011 · /r/seduction

What did you expect? 20somethings barely know where to find the thing.

What is he playing at? Will I be getting laid tomorrow night?

1 upvotes · 20 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Oookay.

Not what I expected to see on seddit. But it's really good that you're asking.

Okay, first of all, all the PUA material you read on here, it's about women. None of it is going to be much help with men. We are wired differently.

However, we are a bunch of guys who understand ourselves very well. So we can tell you how men work.

You must decide what you want. Do you want some sort of emotional relationship with this guy, or do you want a regular, good, hard fucking? Because there are differences to how you go about each.

One thing you must not do either way is cling to him, or act like he owes you something. Men, unlike women, are not turned on by disinterest, but we are driven away by clingy behaviour. Don't make him think "if she's this demanding now, what will she be like after round two?"

The next thing you need to realize is that sex is ultra-important to guys. Not just because we are constantly horny, but because it's what makes us feel appreciated. And, reading in between the lines of what you are saying, you're probably bad at sex.

This can sometimes drive guys away faster than it needs to, because we are often used to running into women who do not think that it is even possible for them to be bad at sex, because they think that showing up and being a woman is enough.

This means that women who are bad at sex often will not improve. He may be thinking he doesn't want to repeat a mediocre experience ad infinitum.

Fatties need not apply?

1 upvotes · 20 May 2011 · /r/seduction

NO.

Value is not a fixed quality. Value is whatever people perceive value to be.

Sometimes value is being fit and trim and attractive. Sometimes it's being super confident and witty and filling a room with your personality. Sometimes it's being successful, well-dressed, powerful, and sophisticated.

It's whatever value you can find to demonstrate.

Your problem is less that you are fat, than that you are kicking your own ass about it. You have to find other value, and demonstrate it.

And keep losing that lard for the sake of your heart and lifespan.

[FR] 2nd date k-close and 3rd date no k-close with HB7

1 upvotes · 17 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Mistake number four could have been that I paid for brunch. She pouted a little, and then put away her wallet.

I like to deal with this by saying "We'll take it in turns. You pay next time" (and then holding her to that).

This breaks you out of the frame of a provider (because she's paying her share) without making you look cheap by splitting a cheque, and also shows confidence because you assume there will be a next time.

[FR] Simple F-Close

1 upvotes · 17 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Years ago, I started rejecting women who weren't meeting me halfway, or refusing to chase those who were throwing IOIs left and right, then waiting to be chased.

Ended up rejecting a lot of women.

What I want now is to make them chase me, instead of having to just toss them if they don't do it on their own.

What can I do to prove consent?

1 upvotes · 17 May 2011 · /r/MensRights

To lighten the mood, here is a relevant clip.

But does it come equipped with Big Jim Slade?

Brazil votes to criminalize homophobia. Political correctness threatens freedom of expression & research. Religious parties and churches oppose the law, because priests preaching against homosexuality would face arrest for the crime of homophobia.

1 upvotes · 17 May 2011 · /r/MensRights

First of all, I presume you agree that such pornography shouldn't be allowed.

You presume too much.

If you do believe it should be allowed, then I suspect we aren't going to find any common ground.

Indeed we will not.

Anyway, assuming you believe it shouldn't be allowed, then you have conceded that free speech isn't an absolute. You have conceded that there are things that are more important than free speech.

And you have yet to provide one.

It is not relevant to argue whether there are things more important than free expression. Because even if I were to stipulate that, which I do not, you would still have all your work ahead of you. You would still have to establish that this was one of them.

And then you would have to establish that you could eradicate words from the lips of men. And then you would have to establish that eradicating words could eradicate thoughts.

And then you would have to answer the question "who decides?".

I have little patience for those who have decided that they are so certain of what others must think, that they feel they can end debates with force rather than rhetoric.

This is where "AFCs" come from.

1 upvotes · 16 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Interesting.

So do you think these guys have actually lost their sex drive? Or have they just given up?

Amanda Marcotte: Liberal Head, Bigoted Heart

1 upvotes · 16 May 2011 · /r/MensRights

The idea that the guys on the front cover of Men's Health... are being extremely masculine? Meh. They don't seem very masculine to me. They seem like they're preening, and in our culture, preening is a femme behavior.

Exactly. The other charge, along with being "gay", that is used to discourage masculinity is "self-absorption" or "vanity".

The idea that trying to present an attractive appearance is feminine echoes the unspoken assumption that it is based on, that attractiveness is femininity, and only women can be attractive.

Feminists don't want men to be attractive, because then they might have to give up some power over sexuality and the act of mating. Shaming every man who tries to look good serves a purpose in western society that is not unlike that of the hijab in the Arab world.

Amanda Marcotte: Liberal Head, Bigoted Heart

1 upvotes · 16 May 2011 · /r/MensRights

Maybe what scans to us as The Gentleman Doth Protest Too Much is, in fact, normal guy behavior.

I don't know if Aaron Schock doth protest too much. I don't know the man, and I don't care to.

But what really gets me is this cultural push to eradicate the differences, visual or otherwise, between the genders. That's only motive that feminists have for calling muscular men, and pictures of muscular men, "gay". Because it's an accusation that only bothers straight men.

If it were true, it would be totally irrelevant. It's only worth saying if it's false. That's how we know it's not a sincere opinion, but simply an attempt to shame us into being less masculine.

Well, sorry, but I like being masculine, lifting heavy things, and having big muscles. And if that makes me gay, then a lot of women are going to be very surprised indeed.

[FR] Simple F-Close

1 upvotes · 16 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Because there's a lot more guidance out there on approaching than there is on defusing LMR?

Mystery smokes cigarettes = smoking is never really a deal breaker?

1 upvotes · 16 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Depends on what kind of social group you're in.

In lower socioeconomic classes, smoking is almost the norm, and while some may dislike it, they're probably not going to object too hard. Among the richer set, smoking is much more rare, and may be a dealbreaker for many targets.

Mystery speaks about IOIs

1 upvotes · 16 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Not quite the point I was trying to make.

Obviously, what he said was a deception, but he wasn't just saying it, he was running game. As such, I was remarking on it as a well-told deception, which used the literal truth to tell a lie.

It reminded me of how one writes resumes... take something you did once, in a month, and make it sound like years of doing many things, by being suitably vague.

If there had been only males present, I suspect he might have been more willing to simply talk about how to DHV, rather than mixing talking about it with doing it.

How to deal with being wealthy?

1 upvotes · 14 May 2011 · /r/seduction

You know what... fuck that.

Can't blame you for saying it, because I brought up the idea, but I was wrong. Hiding is a stupid, weak thing to do.

The proper thing to do is not care. If she can't tell the difference between someone who offers her money because he thinks less of himself, and someone who simply has money because he kicks ass at his career, then fuck her.

Hey Seddit, suffering anxiety and depression? Need help getting started on PUA material? Information Is Beautiful just updated their Snake Oil Supplements page. Guess what scored up top?

1 upvotes · 14 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Bear in mind that this is much more the case if you have dark skin. Light-skinned people are seldom D-deficient if they get any sun at all.

Sex Advice

1 upvotes · 14 May 2011 · /r/seduction

<http://www.amazon.com/Wahl-4120-200-All-Body-Massager/dp/B000PD18JY>

This is your bestest friend. Keep one in your room, near your bed. It's fun for the uninhibited ones, and it's a surefire rescue if you find yourself stuck with one who's slow to orgasm. Even the ones who are prudish about toys will change their attitude real quick once you use it on them.

A girl I like tried playing a joke on me with the assistance of two others in my class. The joke didn't affect me and the girl gave me a good 2 minute long hug. Do I talk to her more on Monday or just ignore it?

1 upvotes · 14 May 2011 · /r/seduction

This is an IOI.

Playful aggression is often a safe way for girls to initiate kino.

[FR] TokyoSeddit Lords Over Shibuya & Seduces Model (Value of Social Proof and more - with pics!)

1 upvotes · 14 May 2011 · /r/seduction

If a shy, reserved girl like this one is at the point where she's sitting in my lap, kissing me, holding my hand, dancing on me in a bar where there is no dance floor and no one else is dancing, and all the rest, then yes if she ends up going home at midnight it's because I did something wrong.

Hmmmm... yeah, gonna have to agree with you on that one. I kinda skimmed the first part of the FR, sorry.

But your mistake, in that case, was turning the temperature that high before isolating.

If you can't isolate, sometimes it's better to keep them at a simmer until you can.

This is fascinating. I am a AFM turned RA FM as of now.

1 upvotes · 13 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Christian girls are just as easy to tap as anyone else. They have a lot of pent up sexual urges.

Kino, kino, kino, and they'll get carried away and just do it.

Here's what works for me:

1. You must work slow. It'll take weeks or even months to fclose. So be working several at once.
2. Easiest kino escalation with them is backrubs to cuddling to sex.
3. NEVER verbally acknowledge what is going on between you. Always indirect. I've screwed up one or two of these that I had invested a lot of time in and gotten all the way up the brink of fclose... just by opening my stupid fucking mouth.

[FR] TokyoSeddit Lords Over Shibuya & Seduces Model (Value of Social Proof and more - with pics!)

1 upvotes · 13 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Oh man, I was not happy when those two girls went home. If there was ever a perfect setup for taking a girl home, that was it.

I don't know that it's such a good idea to regard something as a failure because you didn't fclose.

Sometimes you need a little luck to get the right frame/venue, and you just didn't have it. Friends are often a hard-to-break cockblock.

But like anything that involves both skill and luck, you just work your skills and keep creating opportunities for the luck part to happen. The more you roll the dice, the more often you get sixes.

How to deal with being wealthy?

1 upvotes · 13 May 2011 · /r/seduction

No, that's not what I meant. I'm not concerned about picking up golddiggers. They aren't hard to spot.

I'm concerned about non-golddiggers being less attracted to me because they see me as a provider.

I'm starting the DJ Forums Pickup Bootcamp this week. 8 weeks of self-guided exercises assembled in a PDF by one of the forum's members.

1 upvotes · 12 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Now that sounds like a good practice contest... "What's the most outrageous thing you can make non-creepy? May the best [FR] win!"

Just had a mental breakthrough.

1 upvotes · 12 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Not sure I quite understand how that's compatible with point number 3.

As the mod of mensrights, I openly argue for the rights of anyone 'who presently has, used to have, or desires to have a penis.'

1 upvotes · 10 May 2011 · /r/MensRights

No.

I'm not going to let you ignore the forest by hiding in a detailed discussion of each tree.

I've made my point: There are some things that it is completely out of line to keep from one's sexual partners, or proposed sexual partners.

You have now admitted that, though you started this discussion by implying the reverse.

The only thing that remains to establish that having had major surgery to completely remodel your genitalia (and identity) is one of those things.

I would say that just by virtue of the fact that so many people expect disclosure of it, it is. (And if it weren't, it still would be for other reasons.)

Alpha Male role models

1 upvotes · 9 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Dick Feynman.

Seriously, he showed that anyone could do it. Just destroyed the myth of the "nerd who can't get laid".

Should a 'Trans-girl' let you know that she used to be a man before sex? Not according to the folk of /r/transphobiaproject.

1 upvotes · 8 May 2011 · /r/MensRights

are you then, totally okay with feminists defining all men (or hell, all MRAs) as violently repressive misogynists

What on earth does that have to do with self-identification?

I love how even within the very definition of the "Charge of Superficiality" itself is a counter-accusation of the superficiality of women

Wow, you really have a problem with reading comprehension, don't you?

If both men and women include physical characteristics as a criterion for attraction, and only men are called "shallow" for this, then it means that "shallowness" is not the point.

"Shallow" is nothing but a construct designed to disguise "I want you to value these things, and not those others" as "your problem" instead of "my problem".

Why is it praiseworthy to be attracted to certain genetic characteristics, and "bad" to be attracted to others?

And where on earth do people get the hubris to believe they can get away with judging someone else's taste in mates?

Should a 'Trans-girl' let you know that she used to be a man before sex? Not according to the folk of /r/transphobiaproject.

1 upvotes · 8 May 2011 · /r/MensRights

Eh, you probably shouldn't have gone into greater detail--a man who sleeps with a transwoman sleeps with a woman. If she happens to be a reptilian alien inside, yet she still self-identifies as a woman, she is a woman.

See, now you're trying to make decisions for all men, everywhere, as to how they must define womanhood, and what they must and must not be okay with.

People may self-identify as whatever they wish, but no one else is under any obligation to agree with that assessment.

I'd like to think that men aren't so shallow as all that...

Code gold.

[FR] Kino: It's the same in every language, and it works!

1 upvotes · 8 May 2011 · /r/seduction

I don't kino total strangers. I know I should, but I'm still struggling with some situational AA... I'm very confident one on one, but get a lot of AA in public places, especially when it's crowded or noisy. So I usually only kino once I've established some social rapport. This makes it a little more workable.

The trick is to make it as natural as possible, just convey the impression that it's totally normal, and you would be slightly puzzled if she demurred. I like it because it gets her thinking about her appearance. This makes her more desirous of positive input about her appearance, which makes her want me to show attraction to her.

Should a 'Trans-girl' let you know that she used to be a man before sex? Not according to the folk of /r/transphobiaproject.

1 upvotes · 8 May 2011 · /r/MensRights

When you're in a hole, stop digging.

<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Analogy>

Old Post from TofuTofu

1 upvotes · 7 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Oh, don't get me wrong. I definitely didn't assume that you were just swallowing this stuff verbatim.

What I do think is that pretty much anything women say about what they want is related to how they wish to see themselves, or to what they want others to think they feel, not to what they respond to. Of course, that means that this stuff is still very useful data, because it tells us how they wish to think of themselves, and for others to think of them.

Update > Need advice: she does not have a couch ... (what do i answer?)

1 upvotes · 7 May 2011 · /r/seduction

If "cheeky" works well on her, but overtly sexual isn't gonna work (usually doesn't, in text), then you might try something like:

"Well, I guess you'll have to sleep on the floor, then :)"

Old Post from TofuTofu

1 upvotes · 7 May 2011 · /r/seduction

While this is good data, I think it may be be a mistake to take it at face value without subjecting it to some analysis first.

There certainly can be a great yawning chasm between what women say they like, and what they actually respond to.

not my story but a typical case os the ds

0 upvotes · 10 March 2022 · /r/AntiFeminists

I doubt that's how you meant it.

Hmm, perhaps you should consult some sort of expert on how I think. I wonder who that would be.

But i'll accept it.

Imagine my relief.

not my story but a typical case os the ds

0 upvotes · 10 March 2022 · /r/AntiFeminists

These are contradictory statements

Wrong. Read them again.

something i found in the wild

0 upvotes · 14 February 2022 · /r/AntiFeminists

I wonder how lesbians would feel about that.

Is crying a turnoff for you?

0 upvotes · 13 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There's no such thing as emotional intelligence. Once you control for IQ and the five-factor personality model, all testable consequences ascribed it to vanish entirely.

Also, I don't actually know why you consider masculinity to be toxic, but don't bother explaining, because I also don't actually care.

What are opinions you hold that would get you shamed or lambasted by The Red Pill or Blue Pill or FDS?

0 upvotes · 10 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Test tubes, petri dishes, microscopes, particle accelerators...

I'm tellin' ya, the girl likes to experiment.

The rise in obesity and decline of testosterone is a good thing for men

0 upvotes · 23 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

By this argument, "95% of men getting wiped out by a sex-selective plague" would be "good for men", because the remaining 5% would "face less competition".

OP, have you considered getting some psychological testing to see if you are a sociopath?

TRP or FDS: Which side deals in absolutes more often and has the most bitter followers?

0 upvotes · 19 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

shitty communities full of bitter dickheads

That's kinda the point. If your community is for teaching people how to stop being a loser, then it better have some losers in it, or you are failing at the mission.

The critical question is whether people who follow the advice eventually stop being losers, or just stay that way.

Is a woman who approaches men low value?

0 upvotes · 8 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why would she be?

Can vetting go wrong?

0 upvotes · 8 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No, you won't.

Can vetting go wrong?

0 upvotes · 8 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

said that vetting can go wrong. I found this to be surprise

So... up until he told you that, you thought you were an infallible judge of character who could never be mistaken about anyone?

PUAs or just those who have "game" what's your go-to tactic to picking up a woman in a bar or party setting?

0 upvotes · 2 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Well, you're not looking pick up women, yeah?

Seriously, tho... the understanding of women you get from being one, and the understanding you need in order to attract one are not... quite... the same.

You don't ask a fish how to catch a fish... you ask a fisherman.

Objectively, does red pill have real life relevance? Does it "work"?

0 upvotes · 2 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

.

Objectively, does red pill have real life relevance? Does it "work"?

0 upvotes · 2 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I know what standard TRP beliefs are. I wrote them.

What I want to know is where the hell you got this:

So you believe all women are the same and 80% of men will never experience mutual attraction?

Objectively, does red pill have real life relevance? Does it "work"?

0 upvotes · 1 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP is indeed about accommodating the female imperative.

Accommodating the female imperative requires misogyny.

Still not official after four months - any advice appreciated!

0 upvotes · 4 October 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

What's official?

Is there a registry?

[Q4All] What is your opinion on monogamy?

0 upvotes · 4 September 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"No, thanks. I'm good."

[Q4All] What are your thoughts on The animosity between sex workers and their clients?

0 upvotes · 1 September 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's projected self-loathing.

There is nothing wrong, in principle, with selling sex, or buying it. No one is ashamed to pay for a professional massage, even if their girlfriend will give them one for free.

But our culture's sex industry is broken, and only psychologically damaged women are selling sex. They are ashamed of selling sex, and they take it out on their customers. And the customers respond in kind.

Based on the RedPill philosophy, shouldn't men who desire monogamous long term relationships be considered as "beta males"?

0 upvotes · 25 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Incorrect.

Hypergamy is an inevitable result of women being more naturally monogamous than men.

How can there be one standard of attractiveness that applies to all people?

0 upvotes · 25 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yes, and the reason I asked is to help me understand why you would pose this strangely binary question, and what sorts of answers you might be able to understand.

META: Is anyone else feeling extremely stressed being in the "neutral" space that is the purple-pill on the red-pill and blue-pill spectrum?

0 upvotes · 19 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I am a guy, and RP will tell me AWALT and that I will eventually get screwed by a divorce

Incorrect. TRP does not say anything of the sort.

Not all marriages end in divorce, and not all marriages are unhappy. This is obvious, so saying you will get screwed would be obviously stupid.

What TRP does is advise you not to get married. Why? Because it is an additional risk for no reward.

There is no benefit in the legal status of marriage for men. Any benefit a man gets from marriage, he gets from cohabiting without it.

So you don't get married for the same that you do wear your seat belt. Because risks only make sense if there is a proportional reward.

There is something seriously wrong with society if people in their youth and most child bearing ages are involving in casual sex rather than building a family with a partner.

0 upvotes · 18 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Precisely.

It wasn't feminism that killed marriage. It was technology and state-sponsored education. Feminism is just molesting the corpse.

If it's fine for hot guys to settle on ugly girls for sex, then it should be fine for girls to settle on ugly guys for relationships.

0 upvotes · 12 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Fine for whom?

MGTOW and women who say "they'll never settle", what do you plan on doing after 45?

0 upvotes · 12 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I am over 45, going my own way, and unmarried. I live with two girls, both of whom I am in a relationship with, both of whom are about 15-20 years younger than me, so they will probably last longer than I do.

Why do i always go through the same cycle?

0 upvotes · 10 August 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

The common element in all of your failed relationships is you.

What are your thoughts on Promising Young Woman?

0 upvotes · 10 August 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

Never heard of it. Don't care to.

Why are uneducated men threatened by educated women?

0 upvotes · 23 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Doesn't mean they are threatened by them in particular.

There are plenty of other reasons for not dating one. In fact, it's usually a bad idea to date a woman who's more educated than you.

But that's not because they are somehow dangerous. Educated women are no more dangerous than the female baseline.

They're just a bad deal.

Women yearn for the return of chaperones

0 upvotes · 6 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I am impressed by your one-handed typing skills.

I'm confused- what makes women's standards unreasonable?

0 upvotes · 30 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You miss the point.

Why did you answer the question? If you are off the market, your answer is irrelevant.

Does a woman being funny change her value in relationships at all?

0 upvotes · 25 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I have no idea, because in my life, I have met or seen only one woman who is funny.

Dads dont want their daughters to be housewives/submissive women

0 upvotes · 22 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

And?

What exactly do tradcons want? Would you describe RP as tradcon?

0 upvotes · 19 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Well, let's see... did I, or did I not, write an article called "The Great Trad Con, and How Not to Get Conned"?

How do I "care less"?

0 upvotes · 20 April 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

You are assuming that men are just differently shaped women.

Men do not stop caring because women "care too much". If men are acting indifferent to you, it is for some other reason.

Yes, because every boy from age 3 to 18 do this on purpose to assert "dominance". I can't believe this sub has been able to spread misinformation for this long.

0 upvotes · 16 April 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

Calling sexual attraction to teenagers "pedophilia" doesn't protect teenagers. It just normalizes pedophilia.

Are Misandry and Mysogyny becoming more common?

0 upvotes · 13 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

On the one hand, feminism has turned into a massive kill-all-men shitshow

Always was.

If your man watches porn because he has limited to no access to sex with you, there is a 0% chance that you can pity yourself for the situation you got into.

0 upvotes · 13 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

In my experience, even the most privileged and pampered of people can manage to pity themselves over even the most trivial of inconveniences.

She wants to bring an ugly friend over

0 upvotes · 8 April 2021 · /r/askTRP

Nah... hold onto your hat, I think this one is actually sincere.

Do you honestly believe that men want younger women predominantly because he can't get women his own age as opposed to young adult women just being more attractive?

0 upvotes · 1 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So, basically, your plan is as follows:

Women who a man is less attracted to, who are not having sex with him, are going to stop him from continuing to have sex with a woman he is more attracted to, who is having sex with him, by withholding their approval.

Good plan.

I have one small question, though. Are you entirely sure that men want sexless approval from old women more than they want sex and approval from young ones?

Do you honestly believe that men want younger women predominantly because he can't get women his own age as opposed to young adult women just being more attractive?

0 upvotes · 1 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I didn't ask whether they should. I asked why they would.

A man trying to get laid doesn't need every woman to approve of him. He just needs a few to approve of him a lot.

If you hold that women are hypergamous, can you explain in detail what do you mean by that? What exact traits women as a group are seeking to what degree in men that makes them hypergamous? How is what men do is different than that?

0 upvotes · 1 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you hold that women are hypergamous, can you explain in detail what do you mean by that?

Yes.

How important is make-up, nails, hair and clothes when it comes to dating?

0 upvotes · 25 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Just never felt that those were needed, also I'd rather spend my time doing more productive things

If pleasing him wasn't fulfilling to you, maybe you weren't that into him.

Instead of looking an undemanding man, try finding a rewarding one.

The Sexual Revolution Was a Complete Failure

0 upvotes · 21 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Did I say anything about America?

Girl Game, what's your move when you're around HVM?

0 upvotes · 11 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

At least you have the power to make me laugh.

How to choose a wife according to the Red Pill?

0 upvotes · 10 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Is this idea a reincarnation of the old "Redpill methods only work on sluts" rationalization? That one was discredited years ago.

Ask Whisper: How to use intermittent fasting to lose weight?

0 upvotes · 12 February 2021 · /r/askTRP

Ketosis is needed for IF, but it is an inevitable result of IF. You don't need to go on a ketogenic diet, because you will enter ketosis while you are fasting.

Personally, if I'm doing a heavy cut, I like to cut back on the carbs as well, to maximize results. But this is not required.

One of the reasons you may love these things so much is that if you haven't been in ketosis for some time, and have chronically elevated insulin, then you're going to crave carbohydrate-rich food.

You might start to want different things as you lose fat.

But the only two things you must avoid to make IF work would probably be "sugar" (fructose) and alcohol (which is basically fermented fructose).

One of the best weight loss results I ever saw was a friend of mine who went from over 400lbs to 200 in slightly less than a year by combining IF with a keto diet. Dude ate nothing but meat for months. Ended up looking like a totally different person.

How can we make sure women and men are giving real consent?

0 upvotes · 14 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

How common is it for you to notice a woman experiencing "post-coital blues"?

Never seen it.

How do you think we can better communicate about consent so that men aren't falsely accused or themselves sexually abused?

Doesn't matter how you can. You won't.

A lot of the things women demonize men for in the dating world are things they themselves are most guilty of

0 upvotes · 11 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

One of the seeds that TRP grew from was, in the earliest days of the internet, sitting around with my mixed-sex group of friends, browsing through hotornot.com and having the men rate female pictures and vice versa.

I immediately noticed that, on a scale of 1-10, men used the range from 4 to 9, while women used the range from 2 to 6.

How to deal with insults?

0 upvotes · 9 January 2021 · /r/askTRP

Is this something that everyone is doing to each other, or are you being singled out?

Seeing FDS girls spend thousands of dollars on a meaningless ring does not make me angry, it makes me laugh

0 upvotes · 5 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yeah.

I never really liked the "red pill" metaphor. That was pk_atheist's idea, not mine, although I didn't try to talk him out of it too hard, 'cause Archwinger and SoftHarem the others were on board with it. Then by the time RPS and most of the others showed up, it was kind of a done deal.

There should be a reality TV show where FDS members are paired up with PPD/RP members and are forced to go on 3 dates. CMV

0 upvotes · 4 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Could?

Perhaps.

But would he?

It might be more "challenging" to charm a hostile, hateful, belligerent woman... but it is more rewarding to charm one who is already nice.

TRP encourages the "men are wonderful" narrative

0 upvotes · 4 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate advocate for your rights

What?

Oh.

I see.

You've literally never read TRP, just heard about it here, and perhaps skimmed the titles on the front page once or twice.

In that case, nevermind. Carry on with whatever it was you were talking about.

What do y'all think of polyamory?

0 upvotes · 2 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What do you suggest i do?

This is the first wise thing you have said to me.

Not because you have suddenly decided to slavishly follow my advice (you haven't), but because for the first time you are wondering about the intent behind the words you are seeing... instead of just reacting to them as your emotional needs dictate.

What I recommend for you is not that you do this or that, but that you take a hard look at what is going on around you, and try to perceive it instead of simply judging it.

When you look at the world and say to yourself, "Things should not be this way. My life should not be this way.", what really means is "I want". You want your life to be different.

That's good. It's good to want things. If we didn't want things, we would sit in a stupor until we died of self-neglect.

But what's more difficult is knowing what you really want and how to get it.

You are unhappy with where you are and even with who you are. But you don't really have a concrete idea of what you want instead, beyond "other people being nicer to me", and "I should have more stuff". And you don't have a concrete plan to get it, other than "the People™ will rise up and create a world that's nicer to me and will give me more stuff (I hope)".

When I put it like that, can you understand how it looks to me? Can you understand why I might just think it won't work out so well for you?

You know you're dissatisfied... but what comes next? You don't know what you are going to do to change your life, because you don't know why your life is the way it is. Because you're asking the wrong questions. You're asking "Why am I poor? Why am I unhappy? Why do others treat me in ways I don't like?" You cannot get the right answers to those questions because they are the wrong questions.

They carry a mistaken assumption: the assumption that it is natural for you, or anyone, to be otherwise.

The default state of every living organism is poverty, unhappiness, struggle, and conflict. The question to be asking is "What creates conditions other than than poverty, unhappiness, struggle, and conflict?". And the next question "How do I get some of that?".

Believing that you would naturally have something, and that something has been taken away from you, leads you to look for the culprit. And then you wind up confused because there is no culprit. Which makes you invent vague ones like "society", or "rich people", or "culture", or something... and then you spend your days being angry at a nebulous concept.

Which makes you stuck, because you aren't acting. You're just reacting.

My life is obviously far better than your life, which is why we have a whole subreddit dedicated to "Whisper's advice", and another one dedicated to "please don't listen to Whisper's advice, 'cuz we don't like it", and still another one right here dedicated to "debating" the merits of my ramblings. And I could write entire books (in fact, by this point, I kinda have), about what actions I took to get there.

But whether you agree or not with what I did, you have no choice but to agree that I did something. I didn't just say "this is bad and I don't like it", I said "what am I, personally, right here, right now, going to do to change things?"

This is how I help young men. Once they can say to themselves:

- I don't like this.
- I want something different.
- And that means I have to get it myself.

- Regardless of whether or not it was my fault in the first place.

... then I can help, because, frankly, the rest is just details.

The people I can't help are the ones who can't get past the first two, and keep crying about "society" is supposed to save them. Because I can give advice for how to act, but if they won't say to themselves, "I must act", then there's nothing I can do.

Mouth too small for blow jobs

0 upvotes · 20 December 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

Okay, let's be real. Unless you are a literal midget, this is probably not a physical impossibility, just a matter of technique.

I am freakishly large, and my under-five-foot girlfriend has very little problem with this (although deep-throating is out, and some use of hands is necessary). So, while you may have to learn to do things differently, I do not think you will find yourself truly unable.

Try asking in /r/bigdickproblems. The men (and women) there might prove surprisingly helpful.

Dick don't work. I have no libido. I don't care about my diet or lifting anymore. I've completely given up hope and started smoking again. No idea what to do.

0 upvotes · 9 November 2020 · /r/askTRP

You most likely have a physical health problem. Many chronic diseases and disorders can be 80% of the way to killing you before you show any noticeable symptoms.

See a doctor, get blood tests for everything known to man. Sex hormones, thyroid, the hemoglobin A1c, the works.

Question: I am a bisexual woman, but I also love the values here at RPW

0 upvotes · 26 October 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

I don't know if being bisexual means I can't abide by the values held here?

There's nothing to "abide by".

RPW does not endorse a moral stance. We discuss the elements of girl game not as behaviors that are right, or good, or morally superior, but as tactical behaviors that work to help us achieve our goals. We come from all different walks of life, so on RPW you will find harmonious and productive discussions between very religious traditional conservative women and hardcore BDSM submissives and everyone in between. What we all share is not a lifestyle, a set of values, or a worldview, but a way of relating to men.

Do not be beholden to your parents after you marry your husband!

0 upvotes · 6 October 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

Huh?

r/Femaledatingstrategy in a nutshell

0 upvotes · 26 September 2020 · /r/AntiFeminists

Why would this bother you? It's just foolish words from powerless people. You neither asked for, nor need, their approval. The only power they have is what you give them by letting them upset you.

The only time that dogs barking need to bother you is if you have to listen to them.

I love my SO of 5 months, but I just discovered he is a compulsive kleptomaniac. Have no idea what to make of it..

0 upvotes · 23 September 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

How long have you been dating him?

My LTR (7 years) Just Moved Out

0 upvotes · 16 September 2020 · /r/askTRP

Hi, welcome to TRP. Please read the sidebar.

Money talks baby ??

0 upvotes · 4 September 2020 · /r/AntiFeminists

Fussing about how women like status and power is just as empty as fussing about how men like pretty faces and hourglass bodies. Both of these things are hardwired in.

Potential LTR wanting new to unfollow ex on Instagram

0 upvotes · 26 August 2020 · /r/askTRP

Why are you following people on Instagram? Why are you on Instagram at all?

What is a RPW way to deal with an adulterous husband?

0 upvotes · 24 August 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

No moralizing. RPW is for actionable advice.

Telling her her husband is "bad" does not help her. It's not something she can do.

"I don't see a future in this" is actionable. Means start getting out.

What is a RPW way to deal with an adulterous husband?

0 upvotes · 24 August 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

The RPW way is not to have your husband cheat on you.

But let's look at how this happened:

He's got a background in military intelligence and working undercover, and I think he only admitted to other affairs out of a moment of shock and weakness that I literally caught him in the act of having sex with another women.

This sets the stage for him to cheat.

- He has to spend extended periods of time away from you.
- He is accustomed to thinking of deception as normal.
- He has to keep a lot of parts of his life secret from you.

Our lack of sex contributed, too, he said, though this is complicated by some physiological limitations when I started treatment for stage IV breast cancer 14 months ago. (I have a good prognosis after 38 rounds of chemo, and am likely to live another 10-30 years, though will require treatment indefinitely. I can begin procedures to address my physical issues in a few weeks, until then, p-in-v intercourse is not possible.)

And now his needs aren't being taken care of.

Two people in a HEALTHY marriage, in this situation, would have dealt with this situation by sitting down and discussing his sexual needs vs. your health and capabilities, and coming to some sort of agreement that they monitored going forward.

But your marriage isn't healthy and never was:

I'm also working on my doctorate. He resents this, as he says it takes time away from helping him grow his business. I began grad school part time before we met, and have been working on it part time. He thinks my idea of working in academia as a professor is also Satanic, because universities are liberal and filled with SJW nonsense...

As I have not agreed to either a polyamorous marriage or to be a lifestyle submissive (in a D/s and/or BDSM way) are things he says undermine his masculinity, also contributing to the affairs... His assessment of things is that he is how he is, and is not geared towards monogamy, even if I was his sexual submissive, and did everything he wanted...

He seems to be focused on the verses in the Bible that discuss ancient Israelites having multiple wives as his justification, and the big problem is that I won't agree to let him marry another woman, too.

You are fundamentally incompatible in your sexual desires and never should have married.

He's kinky, you're not.

And you have been unfair to each other all along by marrying someone who wasn't what you wanted and trying to turn them into the person you wanted.

I don't see a future in this. Not because "hurr durr bad man cheat on totally innocent woman", but because your needs are incompatible and you can't compromise.

How is their gender relevant at all to this?

0 upvotes · 20 August 2020 · /r/MensRights

Because it's a great accomplishment to do ordinary shit while in possession of a vagina.

I recently found myself in a dangerous situation and am now agonizing about carrying a gun. Do any of you ladies conceal carry?

0 upvotes · 16 August 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

So I will have to do some research and then I will come back and reread this when it makes some sense to me. I know nothing about handguns.

Fortunately, youtube is absolutely full of white men with beards and big forearms who absolutely LOVE to talk about them. In detail that would make your head spin.

I tried the pistol once and even with both hands I was too shaky to fire it into the target because it seemed so heavy. All I know is the gun is a 9 millimetre. There is no kick, but it is loud.

There's proper ways to hold it that help with all that. It seems hard as first, but it is actually a matter of experience rather than strength.

I teach this stuff. PM me an email address and I'll send you some links, notes, resources, etc.

What is your advice to a femcel?

0 upvotes · 11 August 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

If men "only want you for sex", your behaviour is your problem, not your looks.

If you were nice, but ugly, they would be friendzoning you instead.

How widespread is the notion of shaming women and girls for their femininity?

0 upvotes · 3 August 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

"Young females of the Kanyawara chimpanzee community in Kibale National Park, Uganda, use sticks as rudimentary dolls and care for them like the group's mother chimps tend to their real offspring. The behavior, which was very rarely observed in males, has been witnessed more than a hundred times over 14 years of study."

Interesting, but not the experiment I was referring to.

This is still a learned behavior from watching their mothers, apes are incredibly intelligent and social. The only way to test this correctly would be incredibly cruel. That would involve taking young orphans who had never had parents to learn from and watch their interactions with toys. It's the only way to study this subject is with a control group that hasn't experienced social influence so it is hard to say.

What you are implying here is "you can't prove me wrong without hurting someone, therefore I am right".

This fails not only the laugh test, and the burden of proof test, but the Occam's Razor test. There is no reason to suppose that genetics only works from the neck down, unless we have some psychological need to tweak our theories about what is to appease our sensibilities about what ought to be.

Also the argument of "it's natural" therefore it must be good is an entirely flawed argument. Remember rape and murder are quite natural.

Read the sidebar:

RPW does not endorse a moral stance. We discuss the elements of girl game not as behaviors that are right, or good, or morally superior, but as tactical behaviors that work to help us achieve our goals.

Given everything that was discussed here in PPD or TRP subs, would you switch your gender if there was a magic button?

0 upvotes · 21 July 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Okay, now that we've had our laugh, the quote points out that there's no real distinction between what you are and who you are. It's just an artefact of language.

So, there's no sense in the question "What if you were a woman?"... because that wouldn't be "you". It would be someone else.

The question is meaningless. It simply appears meaningful because of design flaws in the English language.

Given everything that was discussed here in PPD or TRP subs, would you switch your gender if there was a magic button?

0 upvotes · 21 July 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I couldn't find an appropriate quote involving single-celled organisms that grow in stagnant ponds. Sorry.

Are men really the gatekeepers of relationships?

0 upvotes · 21 July 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Where did this idea that men are the gatekeepers of relationships come from

Hi.

and do you think it's true?

Yeah.

The question is not how easy or hard it is, it's who decides.

Do you see polygyny as a viable alternative to monogamy (a man with multiple wives)?

0 upvotes · 21 July 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's working out pretty well for me.

But for entire societies, it can lead to problems unless there is a high male mortality rate.

Sometimes I speculate that human mating behaviour seems to have evolved with the assumption of a high male mortality rate.

Addressing an elephant in the room.

0 upvotes · 11 July 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

I like how r/RPChristians tends to reconcile the two by pointing out that if you are NOT attracted to them, then you shouldn't marry them, but if you're "burning with lust" for one another, then you are HEAVILY RECOMMENDED (due to Scripture) to marry

With the exception of the emphasis on marriage, this is my exact advice.

If you're dating a man, he tries to initiate sex, and you're not into it, reject him and move on to the next man... not for "trying to initiate sex", but for failing to get you into it.

Just as inspiring commitment is a woman's responsibility, inspiring desire is a man's.

What is your take/opinion on the idea that men are not actually attracted to women, but to the idea of action or harm?

0 upvotes · 3 May 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't really care enough to get into detailed theory.

I don't recommend hanging around me, then. This is my idea of fun.

What is your take/opinion on the idea that men are not actually attracted to women, but to the idea of action or harm?

0 upvotes · 3 May 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Prolly somewhat solipsistic... like I said, Ms. Heavy At Any Size thinks men are repulsed by women rather than her personally.

As far as producing interesting discussion I don't know why it would. There's no point arguing about that which can't be tested. And when something can be tested, it's better to test than to argue.

So what I would do is ask, "how would we test this hypothesis?".

Should I leave my LTR with a unicorn?

0 upvotes · 5 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

Using your language, she requires monogamy and if I don't like that I have a choice to make.

You've already made it. If you were satisfied, you would never have written this post.

Men who can get sex super easy, what do you think is the main reason you can get sex so easy?

0 upvotes · 18 March 2020 · /r/askTRP

We wrote it all down for you already.

We call it /r/TheRedPill

What're you guys doing to stay in-shape during this "lockdown"?

0 upvotes · 17 March 2020 · /r/askTRP

Lifting weights. Hitting the heavy bag.

Should I message him?

0 upvotes · 10 March 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

This information could/should be clearly posted

This is linked from the sidebar. I believe the last paragraph may be of interest to you.

I'm aware that it is not reddit custom to read the sidebar before jumping into a group feed first, but there's not much I can do about that. Information, to be posted, has to be posted somewhere.

However, I do have some thoughts about your ideas on structuring speech, and how that relates to the mission of the subreddit. When I'm less pressed for time, I shall put those in a separate reply.

Why is hypergamy viewed as worse than polygyny?

0 upvotes · 19 February 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Hypergamy is monogamy.

FDS Endorsed by the Wall Street Journal

0 upvotes · 12 February 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You don't do it to protect yourself from white people, either.

[Q4ALL] Let's talk about something that TRP and FDS never talk about. Shall we? What do you think about LOVE? Do you believe in it? Are you looking for it? Why is it that FDS never mention it?

0 upvotes · 28 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You think TRP never talks about love?

Why haven't women evolved to be ok with men's polygyny (sharing an alpha)?

0 upvotes · 28 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Not really. It's actually very simple.

It's not a 24-7 porn movie though. People only want so much sex.

What is the natural, pre-civilization state of the SMP? Harems or rape?

0 upvotes · 27 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

there is no "SMP" before the sexual revolution so much as a marriage marketplace

I'm not so sure I buy this one. If we are reading about historical cultures in their own words, we need to take those words with a grain of salt.

Or a gain of slut, as the case may be.

How can the sexual marketplace be “regulated” without basically forcing people to be intimate with those they don't desire?

0 upvotes · 26 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Theoretically, yes. In practice no.

This is because women do not regard men as interchangeable. Since they are the gatekeepers of sex, they are genetically programmed to be picky.

What "hypergamy" really means is that a girl, in general, is only capable of being really attracted to one man at a time. Thus, if a man presents as high value (in her eyes), then he's already close to having a monopoly position, because none of his rival males will be considered acceptable substitutes.

Sure, there's some wiggle room here, but you'd be surprised how well aloofness works.

How can the sexual marketplace be “regulated” without basically forcing people to be intimate with those they don't desire?

0 upvotes · 26 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

And women want to be sex slaves... but only when they see a man who absolutely knocks their socks off. Then they suddenly realize they want to be his sex slave.

Incels could have sex slaves, if they were to stop blaming others, start blaming themselves, and work with great diligence on becoming that guy.

But in order to play the game, you have to stop whining about the rules. Not only is it a pointless distraction, there's also no one to whine to. The rules were set by evolution, which doesn't have a consciousness, much less a complaints department.

Men: do you feel in any way connected/bonded to the women you sleep with?

0 upvotes · 24 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Some men do, some don't.

But for the ones that do, this is not a consequence of sex in particular.

Alpha Males Don't Have High Standards for Sex

0 upvotes · 24 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP is wrong about what they consider alpha males.

You are wrong about what TRP thinks.

CMV: Current divorce laws in the US are generally fair.

0 upvotes · 24 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Fair" is subjective. Arguing about what is 'fair' is like arguing about "whether horsies are pretty".

Because most people are hardwired to be more sympathetic to women than men, most people's idea of fairness will place greater emphasis on women's benefit than men's.

Redpill and marriage??

0 upvotes · 24 January 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

Men who read TRP and women who read RPW are not necessarily each other's target demographic, because mating success for men and women often looks very different.

Our goals are to get what we want out of the opposite sex, whether that looks like a porn flick or a romance novel.

I tell men how to seduce scores of women while avoiding marriage at all costs. And then I come over here and tell you how to ensnare men who didn't listen to me. Because I am not responsible for the welfare of men who won't listen to me.

So you pursue your fantasies, and men will pursue theirs.

Are there really men who don't cheat or who strive not to?

0 upvotes · 14 January 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

Stop looking for ways to blame men. Whatever is men's fault must be irrelevant to you, because you can't change it. Look instead for the bits that are your fault, because you can change those.

Both men tended to put me on a pedestal at first due to my career achievements then slowly changed their attitude towards me when they found out in a relationship I'm more submissive and less independent

There's the part that's your fault. You are a submissive woman. Stop dating submissive men.

My boyfriend (24m) says some concerning things and It's hurting me (19f)

0 upvotes · 5 January 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

He says men can cheat but can still completely love their wife, but says that this is not the case for women, and that if a woman strays from her man and cheats, it's over, she chooses the other man over her current boyfriend and no longer loves him.

I don't agree with this at all. If a man truly loves his wife, he won't cheat.

He is correct, and you are incorrect. That's okay, no expects 19 year old you to understand how men work. Just stop deceiving yourself into thinking that you do.

Your problem here is not that he is wrong or has a bad attitude... he's simply telling the truth. Your problem is that he either lacks the social skills to realize that you want to be lied to, or he has such good social skills that he has made you completely head over heels for him, and he knows it, and he knows he can say whatever he wants. You either want him, or fidelity from some man with a lot less chutzpah. And I won't say "you have to decide", because your choice is already made. You don't have enough self-control or self-determination to sit down and make it based on pros and cons... it's simply a matter of figuring out how you feel.

One of three things will happen here:

1. You don't love him, and will dump him now, because you were only with him out of feeling obliged to be loyal.
2. You do love him, and you will stay with him for five years or so, until he either gets tired of your jealousy and dumps you, or you catch him cheating, throw a fit, and dump him.
3. You love him so much that you decide that his sexual fidelity is less important than your relationship, and you learn to like threesomes.

I have little actionable advice for you. I can't tell you how to turn the steering wheel because you are not holding it. I can only advise you to study these alternatives, figure out which you have already decided on, then use the foreknowledge of what will happen to help you make your peace with it.

Frankly, my money would be on option #2.

What do you do when your man says he prefers sweatpants/hair tied/no makeup?

0 upvotes · 27 December 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Don't listen to what men say. Watch what they do.

How do I suppress my desire for wanting to have children?

0 upvotes · 27 December 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Anyway, I don't want to pressure the person I'm with now with the idea of having children

...

I refuse to have sex unless I'm planning on getting pregnant.

Discussion about (why we generally don't recommend dating) red pill men?

0 upvotes · 1 December 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

The simplest answer would be "I don't know". Of course, by this time, we have some ideas. But we reached this conclusion by observation, not reason.

Since I've become self-amused, people have been asking me if I'm on weed

0 upvotes · 26 October 2019 · /r/askTRP

A man who pokes at others to get a reaction is telling them he needs one.

I'm a Woman in her early twenties who has never ridden the infamous "Cock Carousel" nor do I plan on it. AMA

0 upvotes · 19 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Most of us don't have this kind of power

What power do you mean?

Why is anything that involves telling your partner they're wrong, so frowned upon in Red Pill Women?

0 upvotes · 14 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Please stop licking my window. You don't know where it's been.

LTR lied about fucking a guy in the past. Broke up with her. Did I do the right thing?

0 upvotes · 14 October 2019 · /r/askTRP

For lies about sexual history, I recommend an immediate hard next. It's not a big jump from lying about sexual past to lying about sexual present.

Discussion; What brings you to Purple Pill ? How does that affect what counts as evidence and what is important?

0 upvotes · 12 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

When I say modern discourse, I mean as opposed to postmodern discourse.

Modern discourse is the debate, which is actually designed as a cooperative process. All participants advance allegations, but share the goal of getting at the truth. That's why it has rules like "no ad hominem". Such things are off limits in modern discourse because they are irrelevant. It's about truth, and the goal is to not to discredit the opposition, but to prove them wrong.

Postmodern discourse has the goal of discrediting the opposition. So anything that makes someone who disagrees with you look bad is not only fair game... it's the whole point of the game. Postmodern discourse can take the form of character assassination, censorship, doxxing, grabbing someone's MAGA hat and throwing it in the garbage, etc.

TRP is characterized by modern discourse. It makes allegations of fact and seeks to test them to see whether or not they are true. However, the weakness of modern discourse is that it can only convince someone who is playing by the rules... who is willing to be convinced if they lose the argument and the other person has a better case. We deal with this weakness by accepting that no one will be convinced who didn't come to us, of their own volition, asking for advice, or at least open-mindedly seeking to understand that we have to say, for the purpose of understanding it, not for the purpose of refuting it.

TBP (the subreddit, not the societal phenomenon) is characterized by postmodern discourse. That's why there's so much irrelevant blithering about how we are "rapists" or "meanies" or whatever, which is utterly beside the point. It's because that sort of nonsense is their point. They don't want to prove us wrong... hell, they don't even care if we are wrong. They want us to shut up.

Hell, I've had any number of them try to dox me, catfish me (seriously), send death threats (those have mostly died down now), dredge through old comments for character assassination material, etc, etc, etc.

So these people have no interest in playing the debate game, or in possibly being convinced that the world isn't quite the way they thought it was.

No, I articulate my ideas here for practice articulating my ideas. That way, when someone who wants to understand happens along, I am prepared to give a clear and convincing explanation. There is a reason my column on <http://trp.red> is called "The Parables of the Sower". Seed only grows in fertile soil.

LTR and trip to vegas. First red flag in 1.5 years

0 upvotes · 11 October 2019 · /r/askTRP

There must be a lot of things you don't see.

Water takes the shape of the vessel you pour it into.

Wouldn't you just end up with dead-beadrooms, if you force women into relationships with unattractive men

0 upvotes · 9 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Wait, you're saying that removing welfare would force women into relationships?

Why don't we just let them be strong independent women and get jobs and support themselves? Then they wouldn't need no man.

CMV: There Is Possibly No Greater Red Flag For A Woman In This Age Than A Man Obsessed With N-Count, Or Her Being A Virgin

0 upvotes · 8 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The women for the most part seem to have seen enough to agree

If you want to understand women, don't listen to what they say, watch what they do.

I don't care, it's irrelevant.

If the only thing you want to talk about isn't "why do men care about this?", but "men who care about this are icky!", then there's nothing to discuss. De gustibus non est disputandum. You might as well argue about whether or not "horsies" are "pretty".

If you can't come up with an allegation of fact, or a question about facts, then this isn't really for PurplePillDebate any more, is it?

What are the attributes of a blue pill man?

0 upvotes · 7 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

/r/TheBluePill doesn't define "blue pill". The latter is simply a metaphor for those who accept the words of their neighbors over the evidence of their eyes.

What should men's strategy be with women, once they are fully red pillled and aware of female sexual strategy?

0 upvotes · 4 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I know you haven't done enough, because you are acting the role of what I call a "Help Resistant Complainer".

These people will complain bitterly of some perceived injustice, then when presented with advice for how to rectify it, will vehemently reject every suggestion as unworkable.

The reason they do this is that a resolution to the problem is not generally what they seek (often because they do not believe that such a thing is possible). They are looking to wallow in self-pity, receive pity from others, or perhaps to be absolved of responsibility for failing, or the expectation to continue to try.

Saying that you work out, aren't fat, dress reasonably well and don't have a bad haircut.... that's like advertising a film by saying "All the actors in this film are clearly visible, and speak understandable English". That's nice, but it doesn't sell tickets.

Physical presentation is necessary, but not sufficient, because most of male attractiveness is behavioural.

You have to learn how to talk and act in an attractive way.

Are PUA's really that Red-Pilled?

0 upvotes · 4 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The "idea" as a whole came from a bad science fiction movie, and it's been used in a variety of contexts. It's just a metaphor for not accepting "popular" as "true".

What TRP refers to by using that metaphor doesn't predate /r/theredpill in any meaningful way, because it was developed there. While a lot of PUA material made its way in unchanged, much was added that doesn't fall under PUA at all.

Does one gender need the other more then the reverse?

0 upvotes · 2 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women need men to survive. Men want women to they can be happy.

Humanity as a whole needs women in order to exist, and men so the women can survive long enough to create humanity.

Women are not less empathetic and more solipsistic than men. Research shows that women are generally more empathetic, nicer and more generous than men

0 upvotes · 30 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So you can't provide criteria? That's okay, it's an impossible task. I didn't expect you to complete it, only to realize that you were unable to.

Since your lack of response admits that, we're good.

But perhaps you can explain what you mean by "real" reward. Are there other rewards that are not real?

Are intangible rewards, such as social rewards, unreal? Are internal rewards unreal? If we go much further down this path, we're going to have to deal with the question of whether altruism exists at all.

Does a narcissism epidemic exist in modern western societies?

0 upvotes · 19 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Clinical narcissism is poorly understood, even by clinicians themselves.

Narcissistic Personality Disorder DSM-5 301.81 (F60.81):

- A grandiose logic of self-importance
- A fixation with fantasies of infinite success, control, brilliance, beauty, or idyllic love
- A credence that he or she is extraordinary and exceptional and can only be understood by, or should connect with, other extraordinary or important people or institutions
- A desire for unwarranted admiration
- A sense of entitlement
- Interpersonally oppressive behavior
- No form of empathy
- Resentment of others or a conviction that others are resentful of him or her
- A display of egotistical and conceited behaviors or attitudes

All of these measure how patients with NPD present, not what's going on with them.

NPD is actually based on feelings of inadequacy... because what it actually consists of is the persistent delusion that one is inherently unlovable. The way that it leads to some of all of these symptoms is via the construction of a false public persona. The patient, believing she is inherently unlovable, will try to pretend to be an idealized version of herself whom she believes will attract love. But her understanding of what attracts love is rudimentary and profoundly flawed (surprised?).

In short, narcissists don't believe they are perfect. They believe they have to be. So they pretend to be.

And, of course, trying very hard to pretend to be perfect is frequently quite obnoxious, and can backfire in other ways as well.

So what causes this? Here, I'm on less explored ground, but my model is that, in the patient's early childhood, one or both parents displayed few or no visible signs of sincere affection towards the child. Just as an abused child comes to believe they are "bad" and deserve the abuse (because this is less threatening than the realization that mommy is crazy), so an unloved child will come to believe they do not deserve to be loved (because this is less threatening than the realization that mommy is incapable of love, or resents them for reasons beyond their control).

I don't think Instabook selfie culture is symptomatic of this sort of thing. It's just ordinary social competition in a new medium and paradigm, where the social mores have not yet settled into a consensus.

Do you lose respect for a woman if she is a "forever girlfriend"?

0 upvotes · 19 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I assume she didn't want a princess party.

Relationships are about the relationship, not ceremonies.

Does a narcissism epidemic exist in modern western societies?

0 upvotes · 19 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Do you mean narcissism in the clinical, or the colloquial, sense?

As mentioned in a similar sub: Why is women's hypergamy shamed but men's polygamy praised?

0 upvotes · 18 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

A key that opens many locks is useful. A lock that is opened by many keys, not so much.

Q4M: If You Were A Straight Woman, Would You Date Yourself?

0 upvotes · 18 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"But it was pointless, it was stupid; he thought about thoughtless things. If I were a seabird . . . but how could you be a seabird? If you were a seabird your brain would be tiny and stupid and you would love half-rotted fish guts and tweaking the eyes out of little grazing animals; you would know no poetry and you could never appreciate flying as fully as the human on the ground yearning to be you.

If you wanted to be a seabird you deserved to be one."

— Iain M. Banks, Use of Weapons

Regardless of partners, if a women struggles to achieve orgasm is she 'bad at sex'?

0 upvotes · 18 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's worth noting that if a woman doesn't reach orgasm then the man is seen as having failed to satisfy her. And if he loses arousal or doesn't reach orgasm he is seen as having failed to "perform".

This is not so much due to the huge amount of anti-male bias out there, as it is due to the acknowledgement that the male is the active player in sex, while the woman is a passive object who is acted upon.

He's held responsible for both parties because he's in charge, and if he isn't, that's because he failed to be in charge.

In reality, both sexes can fail to get off nice and hard for three categories of reasons:

1. They are psychologically not into it.
2. Something up with their physical health.
3. They like a particular type of stimulation which their partner isn't doing, or isn't doing right.

But whenever this happens to either partner, the man must fix it if it's going to be fixed. Because one thing that nearly all women with orgasm troubles have in common is that they would rather complain endlessly about how hubby couldn't find the clitoris with a road map, than take five minutes to provide him with some driving directions and maybe a landmark or two.

This is not because women are feeble-minded or anything like that. It's because they inhabit a social universe more than a physical one. A man's first response to having a problem is to try to solve it. A woman's first response is to ask for help.

Both of those responses are perfectly sane and rational. Men know that others don't give a crap about their problems. Women know that others do. And everyone knows, whether they admit it or not, that this is not cultural or some sort of correctable "injustice" brought on by feminism or christianity or any other mental disease... it's hardwired into the human genome.

Human females are extraordinarily helpless (as compared to, say, cat females, or horse females), because human infants are extraordinarily helpless (it's the giant heads, you see). So in order for the species to survive, human males had to be wired to be more protective of human females than males of any other species you could name without talking to some biologist for examples of the bizarre extremes of the animal kingdom.

This means it doesn't matter why a woman doesn't have an orgasm, or whose fault it is... because she's either going to meet a man who can figure out how to fix it for her, without her guidance, or it's not going to get fixed.

Agreeing to a polygamous marriage with a high value man is a viable strategy for certain exceptionally submissive/agreeable women

0 upvotes · 18 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

When someone calls women in polygynous relationships "losers", I always smell just a whiff of the sickly-sweet odor of... fear.

Girls know perfectly well that the vast majority of men would do this if they were only badass enough to get away with it, and they don't want the men getting ideas:

"Women who don't insist on having you all to themselves are losers. You don't wanna date a loooooosssser, do you?"

... they forget that men don't really want a macho successful alpha woman. Men want a nice, warm hearted, cheerful woman, whether she's successful or not. Men want to be winners, not date winners.

And being so attractive that women are willing to share just to have access to you is one of the biggest wins there is in a normally monogynous society.

It's well known on TRP that women would rather share a winner than have exclusive access to a loser... BUT... mostly this takes the form of what we call a "soft" harem, which means a bunch of women jumping on the same man's dick and not acknowledging, or even trying to be aware of, the other women who are doing the same.

The thing that really freaks other women out is the "hard" harem, where women sharing a man explicitly tolerate each other, and may even socialize and be friendly. So it's typically engaged in by women who care much more about being with the man in question than they care about what other women think.

would social pressure stop you from dating a pretty 18-19 year old...

0 upvotes · 17 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Hasn't so far.

Men should not allow sex to influence their actions.

0 upvotes · 17 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Should" is just a one word synonym for "I want".

Universe doesn't care what you want.

Why are attractive women honored and idolized for male achievements?

0 upvotes · 3 August 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

People like pretty things.

In fact, "pretty" just means "what people like to look at", so this should be self-evident to anyone who gives it some thought.

Shutting down sex while vetting

0 upvotes · 31 July 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Okay, hard to say no is good.

But let's talk about vetting. Vetting is a very general term, and doesn't really describe anything specific. That's not so good. Many women will tell you to vet, vet, vet, vet, because they hate the idea of being "easy", but there's not a lot of thought given to exactly what you are accomplishing.

So, let's try to be more specific. What exactly would have to happen before you would be ready for sex? And what are you doing right now to make that happen?

Chad, Dylan, and the Myth of "the Bad Man"

0 upvotes · 25 July 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Ya know, it's almost as if you've known me personally for 16 years. Spooky.

I'll leave to Ruby and GuyWithAGirlWithABike to duel over whether I am disgusted at Dylan or defending him.

I'm just going to keep talking about goal alignment for those who want to hear about that.

Does CBD help with relieving anxiety and thus help with game?

0 upvotes · 22 July 2019 · /r/askTRP

Ah-hah.

Stop trying so hard.

Stop thinking you're supposed to entertain her, and start thinking she is supposed to entertain you. Women love confidence in men above all else. If you think you are amazing, and simply tease her a little, and talk about mundane shit, she will find it fascinating.

You're not supposed to be an amazing conversationalist. You're supposed to be an okay conversationalist... but with game.

(Although I actually meant "what have you tried for joint inflammation?")

Is a man who approaches by being sexual worth pursuing?

0 upvotes · 11 July 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Only if he is smooth enough to make you say yes.... Instead of getting on RPW and asking.

Woman wants to open marriage to "explore her sexuality", then gets mad if husband gets laid.

0 upvotes · 5 July 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

If I meant to tell you how awesome I am, it would take a lot longer than this paltry conversation.

Point is, why should you practice sexual fidelity just because you want it from your women?

You don't have to do so to get it, which means they don't actually demand it.

Strategy for beating dopamine addicton

0 upvotes · 6 June 2019 · /r/askTRP

If you think dopamine has one single effect on your psychology, and you can spot it, you are going hard broscience, and I have nothing to say to you.

[Discussion] "Men will date a nice lower class woman"

0 upvotes · 19 May 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Men are FAR more attracted to women that come from UMC backgrounds.

This is true, but it's behavioural.

Men do not give a shit about wealth, but hood bitches be trashy.

What is the secret of ugly or broke men that get laid?

0 upvotes · 1 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

And to answer your other question, of course I am an attractive man.

Because of how I act.

Male attractiveness is almost entirely behavioral. My muscles are just a force multiplier. I could spend a day in your body and still pull just fine. Because I practiced and learned what to do.

Our behavior defines us. We are what we repeatedly do.

Unfair expectations

0 upvotes · 18 April 2019 · /r/MensRights

This is because male attractiveness is almost entirely behavioural. Women can't see behaviour in a personal ad.

Question for RPs: What's the point of working out if you aren't fat?

0 upvotes · 9 April 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You think working out means looking like those small, weak men who lift and starve themselves so they'll be super cut.

Of course they look like nothing special with their shirts on. Because they are nothing special. Just small and weak with low body fat.

If you are actually strong, everyone can see it even with your shirt on.

comparing The Redpill against an actual blue pill alternative: Queer Eye vs TRP

0 upvotes · 9 April 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

We let GLO rant about Marx and Engels purely for the entertainment value.

How to grapple with Hypergamy vs. Commitment?

0 upvotes · 7 April 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Hypergamy is monogamy.

Q4M: Are any of the users here 8/10 or higher (very attractive) ? If so, what is your sex life like?

0 upvotes · 6 April 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

All of them.

Social media is what destroyed the dating market

0 upvotes · 6 April 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The fact that it is self report suggests that it is more than 30% not less.

How much more? And what was the real number before?

Also you can't have anything better than self reported stats in these topics.

Bad data is worse than no data.

Social media is what destroyed the dating market

0 upvotes · 6 April 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Oh, so it was a self-report study?

In that case, you have zero points, not one.

Social media is what destroyed the dating market

0 upvotes · 6 April 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You haven't established that the dating market is "destroyed".

Men who "take the red pill" generally progress from "how do we fix this problem?" to "what problem?".

There has been no sea change here, and in a sense, there never really has... only different permutations of how basic female and male nature interact with technological and economic conditions. The people who learn to navigate that, get good outcomes, and are happy. The people who don't are forever asking others to launch a great crusade to fix "the problem".

Q4M: Are any of the users here 8/10 or higher (very attractive) ? If so, what is your sex life like?

0 upvotes · 6 April 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Hey now I'm just trying to give you some advice about how to run your site.

Did I ask for it?

Women that have an open and seductive personality will have an easier time getting men than women who are simply beautiful

0 upvotes · 5 April 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What's "getting" a man?

Any woman can catch a dick. The trick is to reach the endzone without fumbling it.

How to explain basic RP principles to a youngster?

0 upvotes · 4 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

Don't help anyone who hasn't asked.

Older dudes: what is it like with parents/older role models having passed? What happens when there is no to support you/for you to look up toward?

0 upvotes · 4 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

Nah, that's when some clam tells that she loves you very much, so much that she wants to adopt a pair of howler monkeys together.

She will, of course, expect you to place all of your goals in life behind keeping the howler monkeys happy, and take second place in her affections to the howler monkeys.

Then you either capitulate, or say 'whatever' and go run some day game or get on tinder or something.

How to avoid a college age guy leading you back to his place.

0 upvotes · 16 March 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

I'm so disheartened by this culture at school where sex is the bidding offer, not any sort of prize.

If sex is a bidding offer or a prize, then don't date him. Using sex to buy affection is repugnant to you. Using affection to buy sex is repugnant to him.

Only sleep with men who can make you want it urgently.

LTR Giving me the ultimatum

0 upvotes · 1 March 2019 · /r/askTRP

They do because they are looking out for themselves too. If I was a chick I'd do the same. I think this is just human nature man.

How does that make it good for him?

Let's talk about actually finding someone right for you.

0 upvotes · 22 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So it's all facial genetics, eh?

Yeah, that's a hypothesis I've heard before. I just have one question...

... how do plan to test it?

Anger Phase

0 upvotes · 15 February 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

You may be correct about this.

The anger phase in men is provoked by the realization that women's real desires and inclinations are totally different than men thought they were, or wanted them to be.

Similarly, men's sexual nature is also far different than what is idealized by women. All of us are attracted (physically, at least) to teenage girls. All of us are sexually attracted to multiple women at the same, even when we are in relationships. All of us have a strong sexual desire for variety, often to the point where we are strongly attracted to a woman who is less objectively attractive than our usual mate, simply because she is a contrast.

I would be rather surprised if at least some women did not experience anger upon learning this.

The anger phase, however, while necessary, is ultimately unproductive. The nature of both men and women is the "terrain" that we must navigate, not something we can change, and therefore judging it is pointless.

You getting angry at me for dating a pair of 20 year olds at the age of 43 would be as pointless as me being angry at you for losing attraction to your boyfriend after seeing him cry.

Men have emotions. Men are humans

0 upvotes · 14 February 2019 · /r/MensRights

OP, you are well-intentioned, but you have the wrong tack, here.

Everyone knows men have emotions. It's that no one who doesn't know that man personally gives a shit.

This is not some sort of special "sexism" in our culture, either. It's the simple fact that human beings (of both sexes) are biologically hardwired to think differently about men and women.

Attempting to persuade humans out of their instincts isn't going to work. Find an alternative strategy.

Anyone use protein powder here? If so, any recommended brands?

0 upvotes · 14 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

I use "food".

Staring to feel unattractive because of his disinterest. What's a girl to do?

0 upvotes · 5 October 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Porn is the symptom, not the problem.

Pictures or videos are not alluring enough to present a real alternative to an available, attractive, caring partner with whom a man gets along well.

However, when problems manifest, porn usually becomes an outlet for urges that aren't being met through regular means. When excessive porn use is there, it's a sign that there's a problem to look for.

Once upon a time

0 upvotes · 4 October 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

I had also asked to be in a domestic discipline style relationship. He was trying to discipline me

I'm definitely in favour of that sort of thing, but drunken face slapping doesn't quite fit the bill.

There's a couple important aspects to good corporal discipline:

- She should be told what she's being punished for.
- She should be told what behaviour is expected in the future.
- He should be in control of himself. He can be mad, but he needs to be in control of it.
- Strokes should be applied in a measured and deliberate fashion.
- In a place where the marks won't show in public.
- Intensity should be appropriate to the offense.
- He shouldn't be mad afterwards. If he's still mad, he needs to punish a little more harshly until he isn't.
- He should follow up with a hug.
- Unless they're kinky. If so, replace hug with rough sex, then cuddling.

That's not to say that a slap is never appropriate, but it's usually only for interrupting full-on hysterics. And be careful around the face.

If you were a woman, how would you live your life? Or, how would you instruct a daughter to live?

0 upvotes · 15 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What do you mean "analogous"?

Here in the midwest, we are having serious problems with women swooping down and tweaking the eyes out of small grazing animals. It's gotten pretty bad. We may have to start culling them.

The women, I mean. Not the small grazing animals.

I would never hurt a small grazing animal.

Q4 anyone over 40 or better over 50: What was hitting the wall like for you?

0 upvotes · 15 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Interesting thought. And I like the idea of using consumption of products to extend life vs. products to increase attraction as a way to measure this.

Yes. But not just consumption, R&D, too.

A lot of things become much clearer once we realize that money was invented to serve as a unit of "fucks given".

I don't know if we can know how much people tell the truth. On reddit there seems to be no reason not to nor a reason to tell the truth.

Doesn't really matter what it "seems" like. Self-report data is notoriously unreliable.

I tend to tell the truth as I have not reason not to here on reddit.

Of course you do.

Do you yourself just make stuff up?

Yep. I'm actually a 25 year old blonde girl with a massive rack and a misogynist fetish. That's why I created TRP in the first place.

Oooopsie, did I say that out loud?

Q4 anyone over 40 or better over 50: What was hitting the wall like for you?

0 upvotes · 15 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Do you really think that people care more about their mortality than about losing attractiveness?

If want to understand people, don't ask them about their motivations. Because one thing they aren't motivated to do is tell the truth, and another thing they aren't motivated to do is be honest with themselves.

I wonder what the absolute dollar amounts are which are spent on things intended to extend the lifespan vs. things intended to increase attractiveness. Not only consumer dollars, but research and development dollars.

Q4 anyone over 40 or better over 50: What was hitting the wall like for you?

0 upvotes · 15 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I had rather thought the implication was obvious: a woman's experience of the wall depends upon her level of effort.

Red Pill is Just As Useless For Isolated Men As Feminism

0 upvotes · 12 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Then how come it keeps working?

If guys suddenly stopped asking women out, would women begin chasing men?

0 upvotes · 15 August 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

+1

(/u/SlyGradient /u/Halitenina)

Do you see tattoos on a woman as a red flag/indicator of promiscuity and a low quality woman?

0 upvotes · 2 August 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Tattoos are a slut tell unless they say "Property of {husband's name}".

Whether that is attractive or repellent depends on the guy. Thirsty guys, and/or guys who like ONS, tend to like slut tells. Guys with abundance, and/or guys who want plates or girlfriends, tend to like them smelling faintly of innocence. And soap.

[Q4ALL] How do you save your relationship when your partner resents you?

0 upvotes · 1 August 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Was he giving too much?

...

Guy does EVERYTHING for her. Cooking, cleaning, sleeping on the floor so she has more room.

.

The true meaning behind "Beta" and "Alpha" polarity.

0 upvotes · 25 July 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

To loosen a bolt that it fixed in place with thread locker, heat it with a propane torch before attempting to turn it.

Oops, I just moralized!

Laura Doyle's Views on Verbal Abuse in Marriage...True or Not?

0 upvotes · 9 July 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

So your question was more about what you could learn from this?

Why even Bother?

0 upvotes · 9 July 2018 · /r/askTRP

What exactly is this happy horseshit?

Symbols have "meaning". Relationships are not symbols. They are patterns of interactions. They do not signify. They are.

Anyone know a good t shirt brand that really shows your muscles?

0 upvotes · 1 July 2018 · /r/askTRP

The reason you are worrying about shirt selection is that you're not eating enough.

Put on some mass so you'll have some muscles to show. Then any tight tshirt will do. But first you have to eat something, lose your damn abs for a while, and get strong.

Get a 300 lb bench press, and a 400 lb squat.

Then worry about cutting.

A Beginners Guide To Using Steroids Safely

0 upvotes · 21 June 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

And what data, prey tell, did you base that number on?

A Beginners Guide To Using Steroids Safely

0 upvotes · 21 June 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Your general sentiment is correct. Pulling numbers out of your ass does not add value.

A Beginners Guide To Using Steroids Safely

0 upvotes · 21 June 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

This is useless FUD instead of specific information, dressed up in science-ism.

Bf revealed his n-count to me and it has gotten me worried.

0 upvotes · 5 June 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Male n-counts do not matter.

Need help. Currently dating a PERFECT match but there's only one issue....

0 upvotes · 5 April 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

In fact, she lives in a safe country because of men like him. And their guns.

Q4ALL: What do you make of this woman's explanation for why she was attracted to Donald Trump and why she had an affair with him in 2006?

0 upvotes · 23 March 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't know whether the particular charisma that he displayed in that particular political context in 2016 translates to a sexual charisma that allows you to sleep with hot women.

One of the key components of charisma is the ability to adapt how one presents oneself to what the situation calls for.

Where do unattractive women fit into the Red Pill worldview?

0 upvotes · 20 March 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The Baseline

Elements that male and female strategy have in common

1. Understand the sexual realpolitik that occurs between men and women. Always act according to it, rather than what people think you "should" do.
2. Play the hand you are dealt to the best of your ability. You don't get another playthrough, so folding makes no sense.
3. Understand the other sex's fantasy ideals as the image of yourself you wish to create.
4. Do whatever works, leave no option unexplored if it will help you. Steroids, pushup bras, whores, lies, dread game, fake preselection, plastic surgery. Whether others consider it "cheating" has no relationship with whether it works.
5. Recognize that men and women have different goals. Work towards yours.
6. Never try to negotiate attraction, lust, love, or commitment. It cannot be done.
7. Focus on what you can improve in yourself, and regard the opposite sex as the terrain. Do not attempt to achieve success by making others change.
8. Lift.

[Q] how come its fine if a guy had sex and have high n count but if women have a high n count they got shame about it?

0 upvotes · 18 March 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Not really sure what you're asking here.

For a set of step-by-step instructions, like those Indian programmers who wander into askTRP and want a concise set of instructions for "getting" a tall blonde white woman (apparently that's a thing for them) so they can go back to playing world of warcraft?

There is no concise set of instructions apart from "understand the dynamics, then work out what to do based on your situation".

You've asked me twice to "cut to the chase". This is the chase.

If you read the last part carefully, the implications should be obvious.

If you had a magic crystal ball that would tell you exactly who your future husband was going to be, this would be super easy to navigate. Just don't let any other man get to first base, and with him, go for it. The reason this is at all difficult is that you don't know, so you simultaneously have to vet.

This is why the analogy of steering between Scylla (having sex with too many men who end up leaving) and Charybdis (alienating the right man by being less passionate about him than you were about other men, or than other women were about him).

Q4RP: What are the side effects of TRP?

0 upvotes · 3 March 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Words are hard.

F (26) How to not be damaged goods

0 upvotes · 26 February 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

The first thing to keep in mind is that whether you are a good prospective partner is very different from whether you are a (morally) good person.

Obviously, rape isn't the victim's fault. But it still effects her desirability to other men... and it should be clear why. Post traumatic complications, trust issues, etc.

It's not a man's responsibility to "fix" you or "make it up to you". None of what happened to you was in any way his fault. So if there are things he has to deal with to be with you, then you have to first realize that this is a gift, not something you are owed, and then find ways to make it up to him. Because if your past makes you a worse partner overall... what incentive would he have to put up with that?

Once you get past this realization, there are some things you can do to deal with emotional instability. The most important of these is putting him in charge. A man will find it a lot easier to deal with your emotional outbursts if he can tell you how a situation is going to be handled, rather than trying to reason with or persuade someone who is currently out of control and not thinking clearly.

Why are feminists so obsessed with 'nice guys' when the men in relationships (and thus committing abuse and whatnot) are anything but?

0 upvotes · 19 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why are you trying to reason with feminists?

If you could reason with feminists, there would be no feminists.

Q4RP: How are "All Women Like That"?

0 upvotes · 18 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You say with one breath that you don't know what it means, and then with the next you say it's laughably wrong?

Sounds like what you are struggling with is that you find the concept emotionally repugnant.

Is a guy a jerk if he leaves his wife/girlfriend after becoming more successful?

0 upvotes · 16 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Indeed they are not.

Marriage is a status symbol for women.

Observation about girls and lifting

0 upvotes · 4 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

The body is either in an anabolic state or a catabolic one. Get to 1200, then get abs. Do it the other way round, it'll take twice as long. If you ever get there.

Observation about girls and lifting

0 upvotes · 4 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

Stop talking to me like a bitch, and eat more.

No one whose bench, squat and deadlift don't total at least 1000 lbs (preferably 1200) has any business walking around with abs. Abs are a fad. Abs don't mean you're strong. I've seen eight year old girls with abs. Abs just mean you aren't carrying much extra fuel.

I am heartily sick of anorexic men.

Can a man fall in love with a woman he hasn't had sex with?

0 upvotes · 8 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Most bits of the brain don't know the difference between fantasy and reality.

Martial art instead of lifting

0 upvotes · 26 December 2017 · /r/askTRP

80 year old grandmas can lift, too.

man and woman homeless experiment. the woman got food the man was told to die.

0 upvotes · 12 December 2017 · /r/MensRights

This experiment shows what's wrong with MRAs and their plans.

Not that the conclusion isn't completely true. Yes, everyone is more sympathetic to women. Duh.

But MRAs, despite the fact that you despise feminists for all the man-hating, seem to determined to emulate them by following the same course of trying to change biological realities with social persuasion.

The preference for women over men is not cultural. It is hardwired in. You can't change it. People of both sexes will always voluntarily give women more attention, time, sympathy, resources, and care than men. This is because eggs are expensive and sperm is cheap.

Therefore equality is female supremacy. Fight for "equality", and you are fighting for a world where everyone is equal and women are more equal.

This is why men are so disadvantaged today. Equality created that, and your solution is "more equality!"?

You are putting out fire with gasoline.

is giving your 1 year LTR a love letter beta?

0 upvotes · 31 October 2017 · /r/askTRP

A mix tape + a love letter + wine and dine seems like too much for all at once.

Also the wrong things.

Reward good behaviour. But don't do it like a beta herb.

'Attention-seeking' woman who falsely accused 15 men of rape and sexual assault after claiming she was a lesbian 'and would never have sex with a man' is jailed for 10 years.

0 upvotes · 26 August 2017 · /r/MensRights

You're gonna be complaining about feelings still when this sub gets banned, are ya?

Read that sentence a few times, and really think about it. Think about what you are advocating, and why.

Are you really okay with that?

How to cure not getting it up without viagra?

0 upvotes · 18 February 2017 · /r/askTRP

I really don't see how the stored in my fat is gonna fuck with me getting a boner.

That's because you don't have all the pieces of the puzzle yet.

Here are a few more facts:

1. THC is a depressant.
2. Depressants inhibit sexual arousal.
3. One of the fattiest organs in the body is the brain.

How to cure not getting it up without viagra?

0 upvotes · 18 February 2017 · /r/askTRP

THC is fat-soluble. It stays in the body for about 60 days.

Let's Talk about Trump

0 upvotes · 10 October 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

See, that's why this bothered some women.

Because women take everything personally. You talk about groupies, she hears you, she thinks you're calling her a groupie.

Women don't give a crap about famous men banging groupies. They just don't want anyone talking about it in public.

Why do TRP men constantly belittle women?

0 upvotes · 4 October 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Speak about them like they are nothing but objects to please a man's sexual desires.

Because everything else is your responsibility, not mine.

If you want me to stop looking at your tits, show me that something interesting is happening above the shoulders.

How do I get out of the trap of a minimum wage job? I am 27 with no education and I feel stuck.

0 upvotes · 22 August 2016 · /r/askTRP

Learn to do something other people give a fuck about.

The unit of "fucks given" is the dollar.

Why marry a RPer?

0 upvotes · 22 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No one asked you to.

How come more women aren't into "polyamory"?

0 upvotes · 2 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I wish we could somehow measure.

It's almost impossible.

Female jealousy is cultural (since there's no such thing as "maternity fraud"), which means that different women will have different levels of it, both culturally and individually.

However, since women are more likely to gain access to a higher-SMV man by sharing, and since the competition for high SMV men is fiercer, this means that the choice between share a higher-SMV man and exclusive access to a lower-SMV man is always a calculus of two factors... the jealousy of the woman, and the SMV of the man.

More on Dented Can Theory and the SMP

0 upvotes · 22 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Dents aren't external to SMV. They are part of it.

Am I a sociopath, or just an asshole?

0 upvotes · 25 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

Neither. You're an idiot.

Why are men allowed here? You can't learn to catch fish from a fish.

0 upvotes · 1 May 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

This sub isn't here to exploit men and get what we can get.

I'd like to amplify this.

Some people might ask the question "Why the hell not? Sexual strategy is amoral, right?" Playing hardball with men isn't an RPW strategy, not because it's "immoral", but because it's a bad strategy that doesn't work.

Why?

- Men aren't stupid. You may get what you want in the short term, but men notice and become resentful.
- Men aren't disposable. Sure they are to society, but if your goals include a long-term relationship with a man, and most women's do, then you cannot just throw one away and start again, the way men can when they are pursuing sex.

So whatever an RPW does to "win" at life, it cannot be a victory over her man, but must be compatible with his long-term happiness. A win for her has to be a win for him, too. Because her win condition involves not just his permanent presence, but his enthusiastic participation.

This is why RPW strategy is very easy to mistake for capitulation.

Because it's supposed to look that way to him. RPW strategy capitalizes on two strong male instincts:

- Reciprocity (the impulse to repay kindnesses).
- Protectiveness (the impulse to sympathize with and protect women).

The trick is how to make the sacrifices that invoke the maximum reciprocity and protectiveness while incurring the minimum actual risk, effort, and loss.

It's very easy for anyone who wants women to play hardball to look at these strategies and scream "doormat", "stepford wife", "oppressed", "self-loathing", "plate", whatever. Because looking like you are diving on a grenade isn't just a side effect, it's an essential feature of the strategy. So if that's all someone wants to see, that's all they are going to see.

Slight Rule Change Regarding Red Pill Woman

0 upvotes · 24 April 2016 · /r/MarriedRedPill

nobody will be happy with the final arrangement.

I am. People can read what they want. Nobody gets to shut anyone else up.

Dick Health

0 upvotes · 18 April 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Well written, but....

pineapple juice

No, no, no, no.

Do not drink fruit juice of any kind. It is a heinous poison straight from Satan's asscrack, and it will destroy your metabolism and make you fat.

Who/what are Red Pill women?

0 upvotes · 28 March 2016 · /r/askTRP

Men build edifices. Women show up when edifices are built, asking, "where's my share?".

RPW is actually a tradcon (traditional conservative) group. They want the deal women had in previous centuries. And they believe they can have it in the modern world, by treating Marriage 2.0 like Marriage 1.0 and pretending real hard.

But marriage 2.0 isn't a different thing from the word go. Marriage 2.0 is marriage + Divorce 2.0.

Every girl pretends she's sweet and would never do that... until she decides she doesn't love you anymore, therefore she never did, therefore it's Divorce 2.0 time. Now, maybe she will never decide that. But if she would never decide that, why does she want to get married?

If you would never, ever, ever pull the trigger under any circumstances, why would you even want a gun to point at someone's head?

Just lost my virginity thanks to red pill principles

0 upvotes · 28 March 2016 · /r/askTRP

Are you advocating rape?

GTFO my subreddit, asshole.

The clearest proof we live in the worst rape culture ever in history

0 upvotes · 26 March 2016 · /r/MensRights

Because feminism isn't about justice. It's about power. Third-world men don't have much, so there's nothing to be gained by employing rhetorical weapons like "rape culture" against them.

That's why everything a white christian man does is rape, and nothing a brown muslim man does can ever be rape. It's all about who's on the target list.

Male porn stars should be paid the same as female porn stars

0 upvotes · 22 March 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

They're not "hard-rigged" in the sense that someone pre-arranges to take a dive.

They're soft-rigged in the sense that managers duck fights they aren't certain their fighter will win, they pad fighters' records early in their careers by setting up fights with guys who are more like sparring partners, and lose fights for a living.

Boxing is as much about the metagame of arranging matches as it is about what happens in the ring.

Gender Equality in the USMC

0 upvotes · 20 March 2016 · /r/PussyPassDenied

Where is there an indication that she was expecting to be let off easy or something?

She's wearing a uniform.

"My son's life is not worth food stamps" - father furious after the woman who killed his son avoids jail despite a man receiving 5 years in prison for stealing food stamps that same day

0 upvotes · 8 January 2016 · /r/MensRights

- Young? Check.
- Cute face? Check.
- White? Check.
- Blond? Check.

This is human nature in action. We are hardwired to judge people by their perceived value, not their misdeeds. And women, unlike men, have inherent value as sexual beings.

That's why women had the legal status of minors in ages past. Because the defining characteristic of a minor is that they cannot be held legally responsible for their actions.

Women are not held fully legally responsible for their actions until they are no longer young and sexy. And they never will be. It's human nature.

This is why "equality" is a lie and a sham. Give them the same legal status as you have, and they will be your masters. Because courts will always favour them.

Can we agree that the female alternative to incel is 'involuntarily single'?

0 upvotes · 19 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I absolutely agree that invsing women are the equivalent of incel men. Even Amy Schummer can catch a dick.

Here's where you go wrong:

And then, the majority of the ones that DO LTR such women make it very clear to her that they wish she were someone else and/or are only with her because they can't do better. Sure, they may still have sex with her, some frequently, others occasionally, but as I said, the woman is most often well aware that he's only doing so because he has zero other options.

That's a horrible existence,

There you go again, doing that thing where you take something that happens to everyone and pretend it only happens to women.

What to do if you're a sociopath

0 upvotes · 19 December 2015 · /r/askTRP

First of all, don't use the word "sociopath"... especially not when referring to yourself.

"Sociopath" is a slur used to character assassinate a whole set of individuals, many of whom are not only useful to society, but vitally necessary.

The current version of the DSM classifies the "Antisocial Personality Disorder":

1. Since the age of fifteen there has been a disregard for and violation of the rights of others, those rights considered normal by the local culture, as indicated by at least three of the following: A. Repeated acts that could lead to arrest. B. Conning for pleasure or profit, repeated lying, or the use of aliases. C. Failure to plan ahead or being impulsive. D. Repeated assaults on others. E. Reckless when it comes to their or others safety. F. Poor work behavior or failure to honor financial obligations. G. Rationalizing the pain they inflict on others.
2. At least eighteen years in age.
3. Evidence of a Conduct Disorder, with its onset before the age of fifteen.
4. Symptoms not due to another mental disorder.

Obviously, this is a "catch-all" category for certain types of disruptive behaviour, not specific criteria pointing to a fundamental condition.

What people are trying to get at when they say "sociopath" is that we know there is a subset of society that has a diminished-to-absent capacity for guilt, shame, remorse, or empathy. We know this to be true. But what we cannot demonstrate is that these individuals are any worse to have around than anyone else, since our diagnostic criteria are set up so that we only notice them when they cause problems.

Western society has pathologized the warrior personality.

Should you ever admit you're a virgin?

0 upvotes · 5 December 2015 · /r/askTRP

I'm sure I'm not the only kid who ever got it on with the 'sitter.

New to sub. Saw something on r/TheRedPill that concerned me.

0 upvotes · 5 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Have you ever heard of something called the "Socratic Method"?

If feminism is about equality, why have feminists done NOTHING about the plight of the incel?

0 upvotes · 25 September 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Excuse me, have we met before?

Because I'm not exactly sure who you are trying to have a conversation with... me, or some sort of amalgamation of your feeling about /r/TheRedPill .

You are absolutely right in one respect... you are indeed acting the interfering bully towards /u/BornToBeIncel, and the tantrum-throwing child in your interactions with me.

But if you don't wish to be perceived that way, try acting differently. I promise you that it will not kill you to try questions instead of accusations and invective. Try soliciting information instead of waiting to be spoon-fed. Even if it looks like the answers are going to taste bad. Because this tiresome "here comes the airplane" routine just demeans you and wastes everyone's time.

Let's try an example:

A man is complaining about how he cannot get sex, and it's consuming his life. Do you:

A: Find something he said that might be interpreted as "entitled", immediately pounce on it like a starving cat on a rodent, and beat him about the head and neck with it.

B: Tell him sex is not a big deal, and that he doesn't have any real problems.

C: Ask him more about what's going on. Why is lack of sex upsetting to him? What has he tried that hasn't worked?

D: Gently explain to him that, while his needs are important, sexual desire is not voluntary, and women cannot simply decide to feel it for him because he needs them to.

If feminism is about equality, why have feminists done NOTHING about the plight of the incel?

0 upvotes · 25 September 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you say so.

I would much prefer, however, that you stopped praising me and took a long hard look in the mirror, leading you to realize that:

- You don't have any idea what it's like to be /u/BornToBeIncel
- You don't understand what he is experiencing.
- You therefore don't know why he says what he says.
- Criticizing what you don't understand is childish.
- Both he, and you, would be better served if you asked questions and tried to understand, before dispensing ignorant advice and unhelpful criticism.
- This would, in fact, be the kind and empathetic thing to do... even if you think he is doing something bad.

You understand men as little as he understands women. But he is actually better off than you are, because at least he has noticed own ignorance.

He is incompetent and aware of it. You are incompetent and unaware of it.

He is unable to get sex because he doesn't know how to display masculine virtues. You get into unnecessary squabbles because you don't even know that you should be displaying feminine ones.

There are so many ways that you could have called out his mistakes in a kind, empathetic, and encouraging manner, which would have actually encouraged him to change. Would you like me to give you an example?

6 Short Questions about Women

0 upvotes · 25 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

Sounds like you're a woman with short blue hair who wants a threesome with me and my gf. Send pics and we'll see.

CMV: the fact that TheRedPill is right is what makes people so uncomfortable

0 upvotes · 13 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP works because it's abuse

So, abuse works? When did this start?

Why should a high-value man ever enter a LTR?

0 upvotes · 2 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you don't care about anything more than getting your dick hard then no, women don't have much to offer you aside from their bodies. But their lack of ability to offer you anything is more a result of things on your end than things on their end.

Is it? Have you asked him what he wants? Do you have any idea what it might be?

My girlfriend of 6 months is out of town for work...

0 upvotes · 13 July 2015 · /r/askTRP

Soooo... her work is more important to her than you.

I think we're done here.

LTR trying to dominate. How to put a stop to this?

0 upvotes · 9 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

"Sorry I passed out last night, ill see you when you get off."

"Nah, busy."

Then soft next.

[all pills] Are your rules male and female infidelity the same? If a husband or wife cheats, is it the cheater's fault, or the spouse's fault for driving the cheater to it?

0 upvotes · 2 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Are your rules male and female infidelity the same?

No.

Female infidelity is unacceptable, male infidelity is not.

"On men, women and r/TheRedPill"

0 upvotes · 27 May 2015 · /r/MensRights

/u/Whisper in the stickied thread warned me that if I was seen to be associating with TRP, I could lose influence with MRAs and others. Maybe he was right.

And you pointed out that you weren't about to start letting other people tell you who to make friends with. And I started thinking maybe you were right.

If I can maintain friendships with men with widely diverse viewpoints, why can't men with different viewpoints get along with each other?

Because, as you said, men tend to do what men have always done... throw that other group of men over there under the bus for the sake of more credibility with women. I think perhaps it's hard for you to understand the motivation behind this impulse, because, while you've studied men's experiences closely, you haven't lived them. Many difficult problems can seem simple from the standpoint of an observer.

Credibility with women is power, especially in the modern first-world political climate. In our culture, the word "problem" pretty much means "thing that harms women or makes them upset". If a man wishes to have traction, in the personal or political sense, he has to get women listening and agreeing. This means that MRAs are presented with an almost irresistible temptation to respond to charges of "misogyny" by throwing TRP under the bus. "We're not like those bad men over there." (Sound familiar?)

What they fail to realize is that TRP is basically a collection of men who said "Enough. Your rules for what I have to do to NOT be called a misogynist amount to a total surrender of happiness, autonomy, and dignity. It's not worth it. So I'm going to do what I need to do and LET you call me a misogynist. In fact, I'm going to play it up and rub your nose in it, because it's functionally a shit test, and the textbook way to handle shit tests is to agree and amplify."

Most of red pill long term game is dependent on money/social status. Considering the economy right now what's the plan if you have none of those?

0 upvotes · 23 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Most of red pill long term game is dependent on money/social status.

No, it isn't.

Next question?

Fork Use 102: Building Muscle

0 upvotes · 20 May 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Please, in the future, make an effort to read the things you cite. It will save you some embarrassment.

Your first link is the twenty-first century equivalent of "Reefer Madness". It's a single case study (n=1) where someone who appears to have inhaled an entire pharmacy has all his problems blamed on injections of testosterone which he been taking for three (3) months.

Oh, and prolonged opiate use is bad (no shit, sherlock).

So tell me, if testosterone injections cause hypercalcemia in three months, where are all the dead bodybuilders? Where are all the dead teenage boys?

Your second link tells me that oral anabolics are bad for my liver (really? I'll file that under shit I already know).

If this thin broth is what you serve me for soup, I suspect your kitchen is low on ingredients. Or, to abandon metaphor, that you simply spent five minutes googling "steroid health hazards", scrolled down the list until you found something that looked kinda-sorta scholarly, and cypasted.

That's not how science works. Science doesn't say "here's our view, what evidence can we find that supports it?". It says "here's the evidence, what view does it support?".

The view that the preponderance of evidence supports is that some individual fringe PEDs are quite dangerous, but actually intramuscular AAS can be used quite safely if one does so with common sense and knowledge.

Is your pill the only way to a happy relationship?

0 upvotes · 19 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Would you personally be happy in the opposites pill ideal relationship?

No, absolutely not. Being dominant in the bedroom is a core component of my sexuality. I cannot imagine forcing myself to ask for and obtain verbal consent every time I want to get sexy with my partner.

Do you think anyone can be happy in the opposite pills relationship.

Depends how happy you mean by happy.

I think that equalist relationships can limp along in a state that most people call "happiness" because they've never seen or experienced a superior alternative. But what they call happiness, I call "contentment" or "satisfaction".

By the same token, you can survive eating fast food, and if you've never had healthy fare, you might experience it as tasting good.

it's very important to be clear on what exactly we are talking about. When you think of a red pill or blue pill relationship what exactly do you picture?

Blue pill relationship:

- Attempts to share power equally, and make major decisions jointly. Ends up being female-led because the human species has an asymmetry in inherent sexual value.
- Partners are selected based on notions of compatibility and similarity.
- Does not have strict sex roles and division of responsibility. Partners do not have clear duties and responsibilities.
- Does not have a clear set of guidelines for attracting, and sustaining attraction in, the opposite sex.

Red pill relationship:

- Male partner is the leader, and has the final say in all decisions involving the partnership; he has both the perquisites and responsibilities of leadership. Female partner must abide by his decisions, and is responsible for giving open and honest reports of her needs and concerns; she is allowed to express her emotions as she feels them, and can show weakness and seek comfort freely.
- Partners are selected based on attraction and fitness for relationship duties.
- Strict sex roles and division of labour, each partner has a duty to the other to carry out their sex's responsibilities. Double standards exist wherever they are called for by biological differences.
- Each partner is aware of what the opposite sex instinctively finds attractive, and knows how to go about creating those conditions, each person is acknowledged to share their sex's instinctive drives and does not reject notions of appealing to the other's drives as "not treating them like a person".

What is a happy, healthy relationship?

No conflicts or arguments, ever. The other person is a means of dissipating stress, not a source of it. Each person knows what their responsibilities to the other are, and knows how to fulfill them. Each person is responsible for keeping the other's attraction to them high; if any personal need they have conflicts with this, it must give way

(and be taken to an alternate source outside the relationship if necessary).

I'm an ugly beta loser who just found the red pill. I want to make a change in my life but I don't know where to start.

0 upvotes · 17 May 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

She is what you guys would call an "Alpha Female".

No, she isn't. There is no such thing. There are pleasant women who are fun to be around, and there are bitches.

Why don't men hate men instead of women?

0 upvotes · 14 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yes, I'm cranky because of the callous comments about girls who've been raped in war I just read in this forum.

Yep, much worse than all the males getting killed in wars. Ha. Women are much, much safer from violence than men, in every part of the world.

See what your brain is doing? You only notice bad things happening to women, because bad things happening to men is business as usual. This mode of thinking is hardwired into you, and most of humanity. That's why the news does it, too. You can easily find a whole bunch of news stories about bad things being done to women, because when bad things are done to men, it doesn't make the news.

See, I don't develop an understanding of the world by watching the Fox Evening News and having a reaction with my feels.

I develop an understanding of the world by watching the world around me, and the behaviour of people in it.

What's wrong with actually viewing people as individuals?

0 upvotes · 8 April 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think the problem with TRP

What, the whole group?

Why aren't you viewing them as people? Why can't you accept that they are all individuals?

The Red Pill Hamster, part Two.

0 upvotes · 27 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

I only argue that your advice shows that you have a disregard for discipline.

I would respond to this, but I'm too fat to sit up and type for very long, and I don't want to get cheeto dust all over the keyboard.

However, when you are done shit-testing me (and I do suggest you stop, since I don't find you attractive, and you'd look very silly in a skirt), we could talk about this idea that cheating is about impatience.

It is true that impatience causes cheating. But to suggest that cheating therefore implies impatience is to invert a syllogism, which is a logical fallacy.

To cheat, in this context, means to leverage unusual means to get ahead, specifically means where effort produces maximal opportunity.

Let's take steroids (and we all should) as an example. If I work some amount at lifting, let's call it X, and I can apply additional effort in some small amount, n, then there is a certain point at which $\text{lifting}(X + n) < \text{lifting}(X) + \text{procuring steroids}(n)$

Science has shown this point is the region beginning when $X = 0$. That's right, lifting is inferior to taking steroids and sitting on your butt.

But there is another point, where $\text{steroids}(Y) = \text{steroids}(Y + n)$ and therefore n should be added to lifting, not steroids.

So there is some optimal point

$\text{lifting}(X) + \text{steroids}(Y)$

where long term-growth is maximized. We must solve for X and Y. But science has told us, for free, that $Y > 0$.

For every endeavour, at every level of effort, for every person, there is some path that produces the greatest marginal utility. That's what I mean by "cheat".

He who travels fastest and longest, travels furthest.

Women are fake. Beauty is in the bones.

0 upvotes · 24 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

It'll still cure you.

I cannot look at that bitch anymore without seeing him.

American Men Are Wising Up

0 upvotes · 10 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Why would I care whether she thinks that or not?

Red pillers, do you have any stats or evidence showing that men are most attractive in their 30s and 40s?

0 upvotes · 1 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Men are most attractive when they have power, status, and confidence. Whatever age that is for them.

Need to vent. Work with two women on a 3 person staff.

0 upvotes · 27 February 2015 · /r/MensRights

Hmmm, oops. Thought I was on /r/theredpill. That was probably a little raw for you guys.

True, but raw.

Do BPers unknowingly measure men by the same scale as TRPers?

0 upvotes · 23 February 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You are very confused. Try re-reading.

Do BPers unknowingly measure men by the same scale as TRPers?

0 upvotes · 23 February 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/2wl9i4/psa_selfpity_raceage_whineposts_banhammer/

Why RedPillers will simultaneously say it's easier to be a woman and that they wouldn't wave a magic wand and be a woman.

0 upvotes · 20 February 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because... I wouldn't wave a magic wand and make it easier.

Thread over.

There's an advice thread in TRP right now that is terribly awful. Really, it's bad advice. Here's my reaction to each "Setup"

0 upvotes · 20 February 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Rule 7.

Just because you admit you're breaking the rules, doesn't give you a pass. Reported.

How does TRP approach fetishes?

0 upvotes · 18 February 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Finally, a question which is actually not a thinly veiled accusation.

However, you don't understand what TRP, the group, is. It's a discussion group, and we concern ourselves with what is... not what should be.

What we care about in terms of kink is not "what we approve of", it's "how common is x or y?", "how does it affect our lives?", "are we going to be expected to participate in this?", "is this common if we like it?"

And so on.

If TRP doesn't work, what's your method?

0 upvotes · 18 February 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You're making the basic mistake of assuming that TBP cares, or could possibly care, about any problem you have.

If they caught themselves caring about your problem, they would immediately take steps to correct their thinking.

Their answer, insofar as I can discern it, is that if you want to get laid, ever, or if you want to have a wife someday who won't divorce you, or children someday who won't be taken from you, then that is your problem, and you figure it out for yourself, there, buddy.

Which is essentially what TRP is.

TBP does not care if men are happy or unhappy, healthy or unhealthy, wealthy or poor, fulfilled or unfulfilled. It cares only that men be moral, according to its definition thereof, and if they are not moral, then they must be made so with the stick, never the carrot, and if they are moral, then why give them anything more than what they already have?

You don't ask Le Marquis what the peasants should do about the shortage of bread. He doesn't care. He only cares that they not riot and smash his fine new coach.

Was "taught not to rape" in sociology class today (rant)

0 upvotes · 13 February 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

violent hateful religion

That's a bit redundant, isn't it? It's a religion, what did you expect?

Frankly, it's one of the best religions in the world today, because it does most effectively what religions are designed to do: cement a community around a core of cultural values, and effectively motivate competition against outsiders.

In a time when christianity seems to hell-bent on acting as a force for the cultural suicide of White/European/AngloSaxon civilization, the muslim Arabs and Persians are actually strengthened by their religion.

Yeah, they're still the underdogs against the might of the west (strengthened by our history of a cultural tradition of pragmatism, empiricism, and meritocracy, and the wealth and power that brings), but without fanatical islam, they'd be out of this fight altogether, a conquered population of modern day serfs.

Of course, where islam giveth, islam taketh away. It carries some strong anti-scientific and anti-meritocratic sentiments with it, which is why strong secular Arab nationalism was a much greater threat to us.

Why do you think we took out Mossadeq and later Hussein?

Seriously, have a red pill. You're supposed to dispense the Kool-Aid, not drink it yourself.

Woman tries to cut off penis, cops arrest him. 11 Months later she murders him.

0 upvotes · 6 February 2015 · /r/MensRights

I'm surprised they didn't arrest him again.

Is the pursuit of 9's and 10's for an LTR is a horribly bad idea?

0 upvotes · 29 January 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Nonsense. Any woman you have sex with is a plate until she's an LTR. Unless you are in the habit of making long term commitments to women before you have sex with them.

"Dating Your Intellectual Equal"

0 upvotes · 18 January 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Please no belligerence.

No. Fuck you. You're going to get the medicine how I choose to give it to you. I'm not going to coat with sugar for you. Because fuck that.

Stop treating your woman like your friend. She is not your friend. She is your woman.

You do not need to have the same level of intelligence. You do not need to have the same hobbies. You do not need to be "compatible". Compatibility is a lie. Relationships do not work based on compatibility or shared interests. They work based on mutual attraction and shared values.

If you want to have an intellectual conversation, make some intellectual friends. Women are not for intellectual stimulation. They are for emotional connection. They are childlike for a reason. It's not a flaw. It is their greatest asset. It helps you lighten the fuck up and have some fucking fun.

In any good relationship with a woman, you're going to be at least as much of a father as you are a lover.

The idea that your woman is supposed to your equal in maturity is dumb idea. It's not how attraction works and it never has been. It was a lie you have been sold, and you need to unlearn it. You experience her immaturity as infuriating because you are too timid or lazy to take charge. Do fathers get angry that their little girls are immature and won't share responsibility?

If she wants to buy a dog, tell her no. If she wants to go fly kites, go fly kites with her. That's what "immaturity" is for. All maturity and no nonsense make life not worth living.

Stop expecting women to be men. Having a relationship with another man would not be fun even if you could somehow "decide" to be gay.

Feminist says DNA paternity tests are "anti-feminist application of science," believes men refusing to raise children they didn't father is immoral.

0 upvotes · 18 January 2015 · /r/MensRights

"Offended"?

Caring about feelings is a contract. If you do not care about my feelings, I do not care about yours.

"Okay"?

Moral standards are a contract. If you do not care about how I am spoken to, I do not care how you are spoken to.

If you truly are a sociopath, then moral standards and empathy are not the language you speak. You are only speaking them to me, and others like me, because you have learned they are something we talk about. You're like an inner-city black youth in a run-down high school who doesn't really know what a racist looks or sounds like, but he's learned that it's a word that will make white adults feel vague guilt, and be more compliant.

Now, I do not labour under the misapprehension that sociopaths are "monsters" in the sense that most people would mean the word. Not of all them are in prison. Some are executives. Stockbrokers. Engineers. Surgeons. And doing a very good job of it. Without murdering anyone.

I'm perfectly aware that empathy and conscience don't actually make people behave morally. Self-interest and social pressure do that. Empathy and conscience just make people feel bad when they inevitably do misbehave. You're only different in that you don't.

I'm okay with that.

But let me give you some advice, son. Just because empathy seems foolish to you, does not mean that those who possess it are fools. You're not going to fool all of us. Particularly not the ones who are paying attention. If you try to fool people, they will believe that what you are hiding is worse than it is.

Don't play for pity. You neither deserve nor need it. What you have is not a disability. It's less of a difference than most people think.

Does men's rights = no gender roles?

0 upvotes · 26 December 2014 · /r/MensRights

No, men's rights = rights for men.

Why get angry and frustrated if a woman doesn't present herself the way you want her to?

0 upvotes · 25 November 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why get angry and frustrated if a woman doesn't present herself the way you want her to?

I don't.

I get frustrated when she presents herself in a way I don't find attractive, and then angrily demands that I find it attractive.

Since I have no conscious control over what I find attractive, this demand is impossible. To be angrily presented with impossible demands is frustrating.

Addressing the common BP question "what can women do to avoid criticism?"

0 upvotes · 17 October 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Prove it.

Addressing the common BP question "what can women do to avoid criticism?"

0 upvotes · 17 October 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP dogma dictates women are predetermined to be submissive from an evolutionary biology perspective.

It's kinda cute when people who don't understand a theory try to explain it.

The actual observation you are searching for is that women gravitate to socially dominant men. Does this mean that they tend to end up submissive to those men? Yes. Does that mean this trend does not apply to women who want to be sexually dominant? No.

Pearl there would probably rather spank a film star, pro athlete, or CEO than the guy who works at the hardware store.

Hypocrisy, TBP vs TRP

0 upvotes · 13 October 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Please read sources before citing them.

The first link is unsourced. However, it does make one correct claim (amid a lot of unsourced nonsense), to wit:

World history and literature are filled with male leaders who cried publicly. Tears meant that a man lived by a code of values and cared enough to show emotion when things went wrong. Medieval warriors and Japanese samurai cried during times of epic tragedy.

In other words, epic tragedies could be seen as epic because they were enough to make even manly men cry.

By the same token, in this culture, men are allowed to cry over the pain of others (a display of values, investment, and integrity), just not over their own (a show of weakness). It is not tears literally, but weakness that men are not allowed to display.

You must forgive me for using the words "whining and crying" to mean that. I had foolishly assumed that I wasn't speaking to anyone with an especially pedantic case of autism.

Your second link is irrelevant, because in quoting it, you don't seem to understand the difference between attraction and arousal. Most men are not sexually aroused by crying women, because they are not sadists. Crying women activate a protective instinct, not a sexual one.

The critical questions are "does seeing a woman cry make a man less likely to choose her as a mate?", and "does seeing a man cry make a woman less likely to choose him as a mate?".

No, and yes, respectively.

This is a double standard that is built into the human genome. Weakness is unattractive in men, and not in women, just as promiscuity is unattractive in women, and not in men. There's nothing anyone can do about this.

Hypocrisy, TBP vs TRP

0 upvotes · 11 October 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You completely ignored my question.

Your question was syntactically correct, but semantically meaningless.

"How high is green?"... is a correctly formed question in English grammar. But it cannot be answered because the words do not mean anything when combined in that way.

"What makes this acceptable?" implies that "this" could somehow be unacceptable. But "this" is inevitable. It's out of our hands. It happens whether we like it or not. Is 9.8 meters per second squared an "acceptable" falling acceleration? Is it acceptable for pi to be an irrational number?

The question you should have asked, if you want a meaningful answer, is "How to the differences between men and women lead to these built-in double standards?"

The answer is that each one has its own explanation.

However, most of them trace back to the simple fact that eggs are expensive and sperm is cheap. Women are born with all the eggs they will ever have, and those tick away at a certain rate. Men manufacture all the sperm they need, continuously.

Eggs are a scarce, non-renewable resource. Sperm is a common, renewable resource. This had evolutionary consequences which are now adapted to by human mating instincts.

Some examples:

- Women lose attractiveness faster with age, because an aged woman's fertility is reduced dramatically. An aged man's fertility reduces very little. ("the Wall")
- Women are attractive by default, men must achieve attractiveness. A woman has female fertility (eggs), a scarce resource. Men must demonstrate that their sperm is of high quality, otherwise it is only a common resource. (the "80/20 rule")
- Promiscuous women are less attractive... they are giving away a scarce resource in trade for a common one. Promiscuous men are more attractive... they are amassing a scarce resource by trading a common one. ("slut" vs "stud")
- A woman in trouble is sympathetic, so long as she is young and not totally unattractive. She still has inherent value (her fertility), so it is worthwhile to rescue her from whatever trouble she has. A man in trouble is contemptible. His sperm has no inherent value, and his state of needing help or rescue shows that he has no achieved value. He is therefore valueless and not worth saving. (the "sympathy gap")
- A woman must choose to trade her eggs for resources, or for high quality sperm, in some combination. This is a tradeoff. The higher the sperm quality, the less money she can extract, because there are more women who want that sperm to compete with. The more money she extracts, the lower the sperm quality she will have to accept ("alpha fucks, beta pays")

Hypocrisy, TBP vs TRP

0 upvotes · 10 October 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The TBP thread highlights hypocrisy at the core of TRP. Certain behaviors in women are labeled "toxic" while those same behaviors in men are encouraged.

Where's the hypocrisy? TRP explicitly endorses double standards for men and women, because men and women are fundamentally different.

Men are allowed to do things women aren't (bang everything in sight). Women are allowed to do things men aren't (cry in front of others, need help, etc).

Does it work out exactly "fair"? I dunno. But who cares? Nature isn't asking us what's "fair" before going ahead with a plan, now, is it?

GF has to go on a 1 month family trip to South America this winter. Should I be worried?

0 upvotes · 12 August 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Do you think this is a cheating risk?

Any time you ask this question, the answer is yes.

If a woman was to take the red pill, what do you think her attitude towards sexual strategy would be?

0 upvotes · 7 July 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This is an idea I've read in TRP for LTR's: You can't just be 100% alpha, otherwise you lose the woman eventually, you have to have SOME beta traits to keep her around. This exact mix of alpha and beta is dependent on the woman. From a woman's point of view, a man with both traits is both sexually attractive and dependable/loving.

The reason you think this way is that you're thinking of Alpha and Beta as traits, which is a mistake.

(Yes, I know people in TRP do this all the time. It's just people talking imprecisely because they are being lazy.)

Alpha and Beta are behaviour patterns, and everyone has the capacity to use both. Alpha is the behaviour pattern evolved for capitalizing on a socially dominant position. Beta is the behaviour pattern for not getting your head stomped by the "alpha male" when you are in a subordinate position.

Both are useful. However, the reason TRP heaps scorn on "Beta behaviour" is that, in our culture, it is inappropriately glorified, and inappropriately overused, especially by men towards women, and worse yet, it is often taught as appropriate behaviour for males trying to attract a mate (which doesn't work at all).

Why Certain Groups Hate TRP

0 upvotes · 2 May 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

DARVO.

Deny.

Attack.

Reverse Victim and Offender.

The Evo Psych/Red Pill narrative of "wife gets beta husband provider, pops out baby, will seek alpha male/seed to cuckold subsequent children" just doesn't happen in real life. These pictures are proof that no self-respecting alpha male will fuck a mom. Stop with the cuckold fears red pillers.

0 upvotes · 22 April 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I think you're confused about where male investment occurs.

Many men with high SMV will bang average-looking or even unattractive women, because there's no cost to it.

If I have an opportunity to date a 5 and an 9, I'll date the 9. Only the guy who can't do better will date the 5... because dating implies some degree of investment.

If I have an opportunity to bang a 5 and a 9, I won't just bang the 9. I'll bang both of them. Why not? Sperm is cheap. Unless a woman is so ugly in looks or horrible in personality that sex with her is a bad experience, then why not bang her?

Just because I can afford steak and lobster doesn't mean I don't occasionally grab something from the taco truck.

The Red Pill, women, and wieght

0 upvotes · 20 April 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

800-1200 is kinda low. Those are "weight loss numbers".

1700-2000 is quite high. Those are "gradually become fat" numbers.

Most women in America should be eating 1000-1200 calories a day, however. That's because most women in America are fat and should be running a deficit.

What's good for maintaining ideal weight depends a lot on exercise level. Suffice to say that if you're under 5'4 and a woman, you should weigh less than 100 lbs unless you have a lot of muscle (and in that case, you're still gonna look like you weigh less than 100 lbs.).

Old school Badasses compare TRP to a woman's magazine

0 upvotes · 10 April 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

My grandfather was the first to speak and he said "Your generation likes to complain a lot but not do a lot and you're all quick to place blame but not take responsibility. Boys have everything they want in front of them and they're complaining? Maybe they forgot or are too dumb to realize it but a lot of us had to get married in order to get laid."

As is common with old people, your grandfather still believes that he is living in the world of his youth. In his world, it was hard to get NSA sex, but easy to get married to a good woman who would treat you right and stick by you for life. Now the reverse is true.

I couldn't argue with him but, it was what my uncle, a former womanizer, said that left me thinking. He said "That group is like one of those girl magazines. It's filled with a bunch of articles showing you how to be pretty by implying that your not. The minute you buy into it you're saying you're no good. And all that crying. Are they crying that they can't get any girls but calling them evil whores? That makes no sense. Times change you either roll with it or you get left behind."

Reading the manual isn't cheating.

So PPD do you think it's possible that the TRP may, inadvertently, be making men feel worse about themselves by implying men aren't good enough?

I feel good now, but I certainly hope that I never feel "good enough". If I felt "good enough" I would stop working to be better.

You can separate people into two categories.... people who think they should be accepted as they are, and people who believe in self-improvement. Which group would you rather belong to? Which group would you rather date from?

I had a realization today: MRA and TRP understand the same concepts, but MRA are the Jedi's and TRP is the Dark Side

0 upvotes · 30 March 2014 · /r/AlreadyRed

The new "MRA" is a bunch of egalitarians who don't understand the differences between men and women. Instead, they "should" be equal and as such they ignore real differences.

That's what they say, but I think it's mostly powertalk. I think most MRAs are very aware of the vast differences between men and women. They're just pretending we can treat people "equally" so that they can use feminism's own canard as a weapon against it, and as a shield against charges of misogyny.

Tattoos are for trash

0 upvotes · 7 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Obviously there are outliers, but I don't think this effect should be outright ignored.

The two categories of outliers are "single tasteful and obviously very expensive art piece in a tasteful location", and "small tasteful piece in discrete location, symbolic of commitment to husband".

We are not this!

0 upvotes · 5 March 2014 · /r/MensRights

We are not writers of effective satire?

Is it possible for either side to describe the red pill accurately in 300 words?

0 upvotes · 5 March 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

http://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/1zks2h/what_is_the_red_pill_an_explanation_accessible_to/

Cisgender? What's going here?

0 upvotes · 19 February 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

The term "cisgender":

1. Is applied to a large demographic group.
2. Was invented by people not a part of the that demographic group.
3. Is typically applied by people not part of that demographic group.
4. Does not have a derogatory linguistic root.
5. Is generally used to say derogatory things about the group it is applied to.

The term "nigger":

1. Is applied to a large demographic group.
2. Was invented by people not a part of the that demographic group.
3. Is typically applied by people not part of that demographic group.
4. Does not have a derogatory linguistic root.
5. Is generally used to say derogatory things about the group it is applied to.

Conflicts over "Hypergamy"... or "Why IDGAF about hypergamy"

0 upvotes · 3 February 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"If you can say that something is not a square circle, then you can say something is a square circle."

Ontological fallacy.

Marrying The Red Pill and Feminism

0 upvotes · 22 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

giving women the right to vote, make medical decisions about their own bodies, own property, divorce abusive husbands, inherit money, be treated as something other than property and encourage the equal treatment of humans in general?

Feminists do so love taking credit for other people's accomplishments.

Hostility to Submissive women. Is it acceptable?

0 upvotes · 21 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

When something has the potential to be harmful, that's when I look into it. I don't agree that a non-submissive relationship (simply by virtue of being non-submissive) is potentially harmful to either party.

So this means you either think that a submissive person is potentially harmed simply by virtue of being submissive, or that you think equalist relationships contain no potential for harm.

Puzzling.

I was just providing my thoughts/opinion on the subject.

You were misrepresenting the opposing position.

You said:

RP states that women should be lead because they aren't as capable, so I oppose that.

This sentence makes two statements, and contains two misrepresentations. Either you're trying to cunningly craft the easiest possible position to argue against (postmodern discourse, not interested in getting at truth), or you're ignorant of the position you are attempting to oppose, and your opinion can thus be disregarded on those grounds.

But, in the interests of making things clear, let's assume the second.

So, first error:

RP states that women should be lead

No. TRP is a sexual strategy forum, not a cultural crusade. It is not a prescription for society at large, or for a society, but a recipe for how individual men (and, to, a lesser extent, couples) can have good, abundant sex, and successful relationships if they want them.

Therefore, anytime we use the word "should" it doesn't mean "morally, everyone must". It means "do this, it works". It also means this is instructions for the individual, not for "society".

So the correct phrasing is:

RP states that you should lead your woman

Let's look at the second error:

because they aren't as capable

First of all, what does this even mean? You haven't specified "capable at what".

But more importantly, you've missed the point. TRP is a sexual strategy forum, not a cultural crusade. If we were about leading women "because they were less capable", who would that benefit? Us? No. Society... in some vague, nebulous, unspecified way.

We're not about "society". We're about relationships (whether those be a quick screw against the back wall of a nightclub, marriage, or anything in between). So all of all advice is for individuals. The correct phrasing is because women respond positively (especially sexually) to being led.

So we can see that you took "Take the lead with women, it'll get you laid", and turned it into "women are idiots, and should not be allowed to make decisions".

And I can see why. Arguing against the first statement is hopeless.

If you don't agree with TRP you don't understand TRP

0 upvotes · 14 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Here's how I put it:

I, personally, have yet to run into someone who both disagrees with TRP, and demonstrates a clear understanding of it.

Perhaps such a thing is possible, but I haven't run into it yet.

Feminist admits that women-on-women violence and harassment happens way more than men-on-women in the workplace. "I once spent a week in a courtroom covering the sentencing of a serial killer where th

0 upvotes · 12 January 2014 · /r/MensRights

"My 5-year-old, the other day, one of her toys broke, and she demanded that I break her sister's toy to make it fair,"

Wow. Just summed up the political Left in one joke.

So, the BPers have spoken, so I'll ask the opposite question - RPer, how was your sex life with people who were non-RP and how did it differ from your RP partners?

0 upvotes · 11 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Well, being male and heterosexual, the distinction is a little bit different. It's women who are attracted or repelled by "alpha" or "beta" behaviours, not really men in the sense you mean.

So I'll answer the question I think you meant to ask:

How did my sex life differ when I acted in a "beta" manner, and when I acted in an "alpha" manner?

{okay, that's a book. I'm gonna leave this here as a placeholder, and finish when I have more time, and less injured fingers (ow)}

Calls for radical violence upvoted (+37, +48). Calls for marginally less radical violence downvoted (-3). Will the RedPill Revolution be violent (redux)?

0 upvotes · 10 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Try to frame your questions with neutral language. "How do you think dogs should be trained?" is a much better way to start a conversation than "Why do you kick puppies?". Give your views in the comments--don't start the thread out by attacking people. Posts that don't strictly adhere to these guidelines will be removed, and could result in the user being banned.

Reported.

TIL: Cesar Millan's wife (The Dog Whisperer) filed for divorce in March 2010. She ended up receiving a single payment of $400,000, monthly spousal payment of $23,000 (that's $276,000 a year), AND $120,000 a year in monthly child support. Cesar Millan then attempted suicide.

0 upvotes · 8 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I wonder how long it will take people to finally understand that all of life is inherently about beating someone at something: breeding.

I wonder how long it will take for you to understand that life isn't inherently "about" anything.

No one planned life. No one designed it. It wasn't put here for a purpose. It's here by accident. Life has no meaning, no purpose, and no goal. Life's tendency to breed and reproduce itself is an emergent property, not goal-oriented behaviour.

Life. Has. No. Purpose.

That means your purpose is whatever you decide it is. Same for me.

You wanna breed, fine. But the only thing that gets you, personally, is the feeling of knowing that your kids will outlast you, and the experience of being around your kids. After you're dead, and I'm dead, we'll still both be dead, and we won't experience anything.

So feeling gives you satisfaction, whatever. But you're only chasing a feeling. Not some ultimate meaning of life.

Don't confuse evolution's "goals" (which aren't actually goals at all) with yours. They don't align unless you want them to.

Yet another food thread...

0 upvotes · 7 January 2014 · /r/RedPillWomen

You won't be happy to know, then, that vegetarian diets kill more animals than carnivorous ones... combine harvesters, you see.

Beware of Straw Red Pills

0 upvotes · 6 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

You don't think all modern democracy has its roots in the early Jacobins?

No, I do not. The French revolution was inspired by the American revolution, not the reverse. And the American revolution was not a Jacobin phenomenon.

Instead, it has its roots in English common law. The English have always differed from other systems of monarchy in that, quite early on, they disposed of the notion of the absolute right of kings. This tradition is exemplified by the magna carta, but certainly does not begin with it.

While the magna carta did nothing whatsoever for the vast majority of Englishmen, protecting, as it in practice did, only the nobility, it established the legal and social precedent that subjects had rights which kings might be taken to task for violating, by someone other than an eternally absent and eternally silent god.

It is this precedent which was vital to how the American revolution was both conceived and sold. While this revolution was certainly less idealistic than you and I were taught in elementary school (it was largely an effort on the part of the wealthiest Americans to avoid being bankrupted by the crown), it nonetheless relied upon and strengthened the principle that one might depose, or sever oneself from, a leader who fails to advance one's interests along with his own.

So where did this tradition come from, if the magna carta was the expression of it and not the origin? I would say its true father is Ivar the Boneless, the son of Ragnar Loðbrók. In the establishment of the Danelagh, he brought many traditions of Scandinavian culture to the British isles, including such traditions as the Thing (from which, yes, the modern word "thing" is derived).

So much is made of William the Conqueror and the Norman conquest that most casual students of history forget, or never know, that there was no pre-existing unified Saxon "England" for William to conquer. Such a thing is entirely fiction from the pages of Sir Walter Scott's "Ivanhoe", not history. In reality, the island was divided into a set of small kingdoms ruled alternatively by Saxons or Norsemen, with a population consisting of both.

Modern democracy is neither the brainchild of the come-lately Jacobins, nor the Greeks (who love to take credit for everything), but was invented and brought to England by Vikings.

(I shall answer your second question in a separate response, as the answer will be lengthy.)

Beware of Straw Red Pills

0 upvotes · 6 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Interesting link. But it contains a glaring logical flaw.

None of us are supporters of feudal monarchism; we're all the inheritors of the early Jacobins.

Extraordinary bullshit.

This is the logical fallacy of the false dichotomy... "The Jacobins opposed the monarchists. We are none of us monarchists. Therefore we inherited our political culture from the Jacobins."

Even if this were true, even if the American Revolution had not preceded the French, and the signing of the Magna Carta had not preceded both, and the Althing had not preceded all three, we would still be "descendants of the Jacobins" in the same way that humans are descendents of fish... taxinomically yes, but it does not meaningfully inform our swimming skills or habits.

Further, the fact that the revolution of 1789 managed to cough forth history's few examples of books bound in human leather (an offense which eclipses the monarchy's previous thousand years only in shock value, but not in human misery) is stunningly irrelevant both to the advisability of its values and the truth of its beliefs.

We toy here with the dark enlightenment that humans are not created equal, but we must also grasp that this inequality has not been captured or understood by any system yet created for attempting to measure merit. Some people are superior to others, but only the random hand of fate, and not any human system, managed or emergent, can test which is which.

In other words, those who look to the tyrannies of the past as for antidote to the tyrannies of the present will merely exchange Harrison Bergeron's chains for those of the medieval serf.

Do gendered derogatory terms exist? What are some examples? Are derogatory terms ever damaging to use? When?

0 upvotes · 6 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

George Orwell defined "doublethink" as "the act of sustaining two contradictory ideas by not thinking about both of them at the same time".

Of course bluepillers admit men and women are different. They just only do so when we aren't discussing what people can do about it. So long as we are discussing the physiology of the brain, or some other abstract topic, they're fine with this idea.

It's only when someone says, "men and women are different, and therefore... " that they suddenly forget what they just admitted, because that fact has implications, and it's the implications, not the fact, that they don't like.

You can point at a tree, and get them to admit it's a tree. You can do this ten thousand different times for ten thousand different trees. You just can't get them to admit there is any such thing as a "forest".

Radical Feminist claims all PIV sex is Rape. Prepare to facepalm. How would you answer her?

0 upvotes · 2 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Any personal failings he may or may not exhibit have little to do with the principle.

Point is, if you're qualified and reasonably adult, it's not a good idea to argue with obvious loonies, because you have nothing to gain and everything to lose.

Is TRP ready to divorce itself from RoK?

0 upvotes · 30 December 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I see where the disconnect is.

Being, as you are, a TBP reader, you are most likely accustomed to the tradition of postmodern discourse, and you analyzed that comment from that standpoint. But the comment was made in the tradition of modern discourse, and thus had a totally different meaning and intent.

So what are postmodern and modern discourse?

Well, here's an article about it.

But, in brief:

Modern discourse is characterized by:

- Detachment between debaters and subjects. A discussion is assumed to be between two or more parties who share the goal of getting at the truth.
- Emphasis on correctness over points of view. Modern discourse proceeds from the idea that there is such a thing as truth, and that it is not affected by who you are or what you believe.
- Intent to construct a case by defending it against all criticism. Criticism of an idea is seen as legitimate and value-adding. Participants are expected to criticize all ideas with any criticism they notice, including ideas they agree with, and even their own ideas.

The goal of modern discourse is to illuminate the subject of the discussion.

Postmodern discourse is characterized by:

- Emphasis on feelings and personal experience.
- Attachment between a speaker and the issue he supports.

- Intent to establish the moral ascendancy of a particular view or position. Concern with what is right or wrong, as opposed to with what is or isn't.

The goal of postmodern discourse is for the speaker to get his way by winning the debate.

Thus, to read

This article on Return of Kings says something irrelevant and kinda spiteful.

creates different interpretations depending on which debating tradition you come from.

A modernist hears:

This article had a structural weakness, which I am pointing out so that future arguments can be improved, to better illuminate the truth.

A postmodernist hears:

This article committed a moral wrong, and the speaker should suffer a loss of moral ascendancy.

How do I know if I'm dealing with a player?

0 upvotes · 23 December 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Wrong.

The issues people have with TRP

0 upvotes · 19 December 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Wiser doesn't happen automatically with age. It happens with learning from your own mistakes, and, even better, from the mistakes of others.

If you do nothing and learn from no one, and wait until you are older and wiser to act, you just end up older and no wiser at all.

The kind of oppressive comments that get you banned from r/OffMyChest these days

0 upvotes · 19 December 2013 · /r/MensRights

So the humanities are no longer academia by that definition. That pretty much agrees with my observations of them.

Simon pegg as an alpha

0 upvotes · 18 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I view it as the second line of defense against shit tests, the first being {witty frame-controlling response}. But the fact that it's such a good second line of defense really takes the pressure off and frees you up to let the witty frame control come when it comes, naturally and easily, instead of trying to force it.

Makes it all kind of fun, like a creativity exercise.

For example:

Shittest: "Do these pants make my ass look fat?"

AgreeNAmplify: "Yep." (Second-line response. Works like a charm gets the job done.)

FirstLineWitty: "Nope, it's all the cheesecake."

FirstLineFrameControl: "If you want me to look at your ass, you don't need an excuse. Just wear something sexy and bend over."

Getting divorced turns men into slaves

0 upvotes · 18 December 2013 · /r/MensRights

Hello, feminist agent provocateur. If you want to make us look bad, you're going to have to be less obvious.

New Warning: Morning-After Pill Doesn't Work for Women Over 176 Pounds | Mother Jones

0 upvotes · 25 November 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I once knew (and trained martial arts with) a six-foot woman. She wasn't fat at all, in fact she would have been quite attractive if she wasn't so tall. She weighed in at 180 pounds in athletic shape.

So, unless you're a genetic freak like her, 176 pounds on a woman pretty much means a hambeast.

a discrepancy on redpillers

0 upvotes · 15 November 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why is it that RP's say that women are incapable of traits such as honour fidelity etc etc

Some of us put it that way. Others of us say that honour and fidelity are male ideas in the first place, and asking whether women have honour is like asking if submarines can swim.

yet find it totally acceptable to hit on married women.

Fidelity is a contract between two people. I am not either of those people. Therefore I have no moral obligation to enforce that contract.

It seems like that alone is displaying some very shallow characteristics

Useless editorializing.

In general, monogamy isn't a moral obligation. The only moral obligation in monogamy is keeping your word. If you haven't given your word in the first place, you cannot break it.

"A Message to All Women" - You Are Precious Little Princesses

0 upvotes · 11 October 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Is anyone going to say any of these things to men?

Looks like this again.

Ex-wife fights to keep disappeared husband as "legally dead" so she can continue to loot Social Security and not pay back Social Security, in spite of her ex-husband being alive and well.

0 upvotes · 10 October 2013 · /r/MensRights

This about the law, stop troubling us with your silly facts.

Blue Pillars, What is a strong woman?

0 upvotes · 8 October 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm afraid you're sort of... fractally wrong, here.

Both your answers consisted of a rundown of a lot of faulty premises about men, women, and how our culture deals with them... and then leaving me to pencil in for myself just whatever it is your argument is supposed to be?

And I cannot do it. I honestly don't know what the hell you are trying to say?

That we should praise women more for being "strong" or "independent" than we do for men, because it's harder for them? That it takes great strength and independence for women to dress themselves, feed themselves, get a job, and balance their checkbook?

Your whole argument makes me think of this, insofar as I even think I can figure out what your point might be.

Honestly, for my part, when I hear the phrase "strong and independent woman", I just kind of turn my ears off... because not only is it generally emerging from the mouth of some leftoid who just got done assuring us that there's no such thing as independence, it also means one of two things:

1. "Bitch" with a positive spin. We all know a woman or two like this; so strong and independent that no one can stand to be around her, including other strong and independent women.
2. Woman who feeds herself, dresses herself, has a job, pays her bills, balances her checkbook, gets to work on time, etc... all the expectations of basic functioning as an adult in our society. We all know a bunch of women like this. What we don't understand is why certain elements of our culture insist that this basic level of function deserves a standing ovation.

To me, the phrase "strong and independent woman" is a thought-terminating cliché. Its only common meaning is "don't criticize this person, or we will loudly and repeatedly say that you hate all women".

Blue Pillars, What is a strong woman?

0 upvotes · 8 October 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So we are to call women "strong" if they manage to dress themselves and function as adults? Is that the threshold for praise? Is that how low we have set the bar in our drive to make women nod?

Red Pill Movies!

0 upvotes · 17 September 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Because the core principle of the red pill, where all the sexual strategy stuff comes from, is "Look at the world. See what's there. Not what you're told is there, or what you want to see."

Michael Clayton is a prime example of a man who does just that.

Cyanide & Happiness takes on sexism against men

0 upvotes · 12 September 2013 · /r/MensRights

No one said you can't.

You just don't want to. Sex roles are biologically enforced, but they aren't enforced by force. They're enforced by hardwired preference. The way evolution makes women take care of babies, and men perform feats of strength and risk-taking isn't by socially pressuring people.

It's by hardwiring men to enjoy adrenaline rushes, and women to adore cute babies.

You will move furniture if you have to, as best you can, if there isn't a man around to lift it, just as an man who finds an abandoned baby will pick it up, see if it's okay, and do the best he can for it until he can find the nearest woman to deal with the situation.

Thank a Feminist! I'm sure we can think of many things to thank them for.

0 upvotes · 11 September 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

As funny as you think you're being, the 'no true scotsman' fallacy is about assigning non-definitive traits as a condition for membership to a group.

No. The 'no true Scotsman' fallacy is the fallacy of modifying a definition post hoc to exclude counterexamples, without reference to an objective rule. It is not a fallacy in its own right, but is instead a special case of "argument by special pleading" (also known as "begging the question").

You don't get to define a christian as a "follower of christ" because that is not an objective rule. No one can agree on what a "following christ" means, even if they could agree, which they can't, on whether christ exists, once existed, or never existed. Every christian group has its own definition of what "following christ" means.

Just as a feminist is engaging in special pleading when she points out that feminists cannot be anti-male because feminist is defined in the dictionary as "a person who advocates equal rights for women", the christian is engaging in special pleading when he claims only "followers of christ" are christians when his particular group has a unique idea of what that means, which doesn't agree with any other group's definition.

Those late-era romans would certainly assert that they were followers of christ, and there is nothing to privilege your opinion over theirs.

One more point:

We are a society with Christian laws

This is ridiculous. Which of the ten commandments are incorporated into English common law, which are not a part of every legal tradition?

Thou shalt have no other gods before me.

Nope.

Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth.

Emphatically no.

Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain

No.

Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy.

No.

Honour thy father and thy mother

No.

Thou shalt not kill.

Yes, but common to all legal traditions.

Thou shalt not commit adultery.

Nope.

Thou shalt not steal.

Yes, common to all legal traditions.

Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour.

Yes. Other legal traditions also include prohibitions against perjury.

Thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's wife, nor his manservant, nor his maidservant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor any thing that is thy neighbour's.

Emphatically no. We do not persecute people for thoughtcrime.

... Well, that's hardly an impressive score.

Why Sluts Make Bad Wives

0 upvotes · 23 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Expating is a viable strategy for fixing this problem, if your career/income source is mobile, yes.

Porn. And how it makes lesser men.

0 upvotes · 21 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

What does TRP think about stuff like /r/pornfree[3] and /r/nofap[4] ?

~~They're based on crap science.~~ No, scratch that. They are based on crap interpretation of science. I read the actual studies.

Regular masturbation does not lead to lower testosterone. What the research actually shows is that testosterone levels spike after seven days with no ejaculation of any kind.

So, you wanna have higher testosterone levels through perpetual celibacy? Be my guest.

Me, I'll lift weights, and keep having sex.

PS: The whole "Your brain on porn" thing is the brainchild of these characters. Here is a list of their articles on "The Good Men Project".

This one is entertaining. It's part GMP's "sex week" articles. Others include "Male Self-Pleasure Myths" by Hugo Schwyzer, "What Women Don't Tell You", by Amanda Marcotte, and "Why I Hate My Giant Dong" by Charles Allen.

tl;dr: OP has just published a feminist talking point, by some of the whackier known feminists, as red pill material.

Women need to realize the Imaginary Disney Boyfriend is impossible

0 upvotes · 19 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Two are animals

I remember one of my girlfriends watching the end of Beauty and the Beast and saying, half to herself "No. No. Hell no. Turn him back!"

I teased her about it and she said she'd rather have something raw and animalistic over a prettyboy any day.

Some women are a little more tuned into their feminine nature.

Rape, females, and the politically incorrect "biotruth."

0 upvotes · 18 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Well, there's rape as in "stranger jumps out of the bushes with a stungun" rape, and there's "date is kinda hot, but won't take no for an answer" rape.

I think that women seldom (close to never as makes no odds) enjoy the former, and often enjoy the latter. So much so that they fantasize about it (/r/Askmen gets these about once or twice a month).

I think that when a man rapes strangers, a woman perceives him as unable to attract female attention, thus a genetic/social defective, thus unattractive, thus her "NO" to that scenario is strong, firm, and determined.

I think that when a man rapes a woman who is already in a social environment with, and somewhat attracted to, him ("date rape"), she perceives him as not defective (because he's already shown he can get attraction going), but simply dominant over women, which is attractive. Thus, her refusal, or attempt thereat, is a lot more conflicted.

Ordinary women who react to news about violent rape by a stranger with repugnance are being completely honest in that reaction... it is, after all, women's genetic duty to keep defective men out of the gene pool.

Feminist-oriented women who launch crusades against "date rape", or other expanded definitions of rape, are often reacting in fear of their own attraction to the idea of sexy men who don't ask permission before tearing off their clothes.

One of the reasons that feminists are so concerned with stamping out any vestiges of female submission to males is that they find it both threatening... and alluring. Which is scary to them.

How are red pill women able to balance their self-worth with red pill philosophies?

0 upvotes · 13 August 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

the aspects of red pill philosophy that seem from the outside to negate your worth or agency

The simple answer is "they don't".

What you are are operating under is a single premise, taught to you, not so much by feminism and the women's movement per se, as by its secondary influences on society, that being a follower rather than a leader, a cooperater rather than a competitor, a mother rather than a Human Resources Representative, etc... is, well, bad.

Unpleasant. Demeaning.

You've been taught to think that anyone who isn't independent is going to taken advantage of, because all leaders, especially male ones, are malevolent.

And so you think of any woman who would voluntarily act feminine as some sort of scary Stepford wife figure.

But what if it wasn't so?

Oooh, something else to add to "victim blaming"

0 upvotes · 2 August 2013 · /r/MensRights

I'm not sure I was talking about abortion per se

Okay, that makes sense, then.

FBI Analyst Sues FBI For Gender Discrimination, Saying Fitness Test Biased Against Men

0 upvotes · 27 July 2013 · /r/MensRights

Brad Garrett, ABC News consultant and former FBI agent, said there are reasons for different minimum scores for men and women.

"Women do not have the upper body strength that men do," he said. A "different number of pull-ups have been in place for a number of years."

Is that level of upper body strength required to do the job, or not?

Woman gets life sentence for making 13-year-old boy touch her breasts; Lawyer cries, says the law was never intended for people like her

0 upvotes · 19 July 2013 · /r/MensRights

What is wrong with you?

I point out a lack of sympathy for men, and you call that "petty and vindictive"?

I'll tell you what petty and vindictive. A law that is actually intended to throw men in prison for life for fooling around with a consenting high school girl. Not having sex with (that charge would be statutory rape). Certainly not coercing her into sex (that charge would be just plain rape).

Heavy petting.

If the law "wasn't intended for cases like this", what was it intended for? Cases just like this, except where the accused was a man. That's what. And no one bats an eyelash until it happens to a woman.

And you have the nerve to call me petty and vindictive? Incredible. Your chutzpah is on the level of a man who kills both his parents and then asks the court for clemency because he is an orphan.

Currency exchange

0 upvotes · 7 June 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

More generally, a thing is worth no more than the effort you had to expend to get it.

Sir Patrick Stewart: it is never the woman's fault in domestic violence

0 upvotes · 31 May 2013 · /r/MensRights

Really guys? You are ripping on Patrick Stewart for saying that victims of domestic violence aren't to blame for their abuse?

Really, guy? You are pretending that the woman is always the victim in cases of domestic violence?

From a woman's perspective

0 upvotes · 13 May 2013 · /r/seduction

By original, I mean, "not news".

This is a self-post by someone with no pickup experience, offering tips, some of which are old news and others which are just plain wrong. Wouldn't you, in most cases, be a little more critical of the relevance of such a post?

Well, what's different about this one?

Jodi Arias verdict: GUILTY of 1st Degree Murder

0 upvotes · 9 May 2013 · /r/MensRights

We should take up a collection.

Women who say they are "waiting" ?

0 upvotes · 8 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I do not agree that this raises their value, because I don't agree with most men here that female SMV is lowered by having lots of partners.

I think, instead, that having lots of partners is caused by low SMV.

A woman with who has had sex a lot with many different men has been pumped and dumped a lot. She is known to be of low SMV, because if her SMV were higher, she wouldn't have had the "dump" part happen so much (which would result in probably as many sex acts, but with fewer overall partners).

A woman who has had sex a lot, but with a few different men (or one) has a higher SMV. Men who fucked her wanted to keep her. Odds are you will, too.

A woman with no sexual experience is an unknown quality. She has never been pumped and dumped, but she has never been committed to, either. Her SMV is harder to judge.

Okay, you can judge certain things. Beauty. Some aspects of behaviour. But you don't know how she behaves in a relationship, and neither does she.

In my personal opinion, I would rather have a woman with a couple or three LTRs in her past, than a virgin. Sure, if she's 18-19, those LTRs haven't had time to happen, and virginity is okay. But if she's 26 and has absolutely no track record, I'm going to wonder why.

I'm ok with you being a slut

0 upvotes · 6 May 2013 · /r/MensRights

Your analysis is somewhat off, because you're not unpacking "promiscuous man". Let's look at that. What determines whether or not a man or a woman is promiscuous?

It requires two things... desire and capability. Obviously, promiscuous women are distinguished by their desire to be so. Most women could be promiscuous if they wanted to. But promiscuous men are a different breed. For men, the limiting factor is not desire, but ability.

A promiscuous man is by definition attractive, because if he wasn't, he couldn't be a promiscuous man.

And these desirable men, because they are desirable, are able to offer women a worse deal. A one night stand. Friends with benefits. Pump and dump.

Think of it this way. Danny Brown is willing to let that girl suck his dick on stage. Would he marry her? But do you think she would be willing to marry him?

That's the piece of the puzzle you're missing. A man isn't "promiscuous" or "not promiscuous" as a primary trait. He's attractive or not attractive. Promiscuous is just a behaviour he engages in because he can, because the bottleneck is his ability, not his desire. If every man who wanted to be promiscuous and would if he could were magically painted blue, you could walk around any major city for a long time before seeing a man of any other colour.

So when you say:

But... somehow... these women are going to start desiring promiscuous men just when promiscuous men want to settle down?

... you are failing to understand that a promiscuous man who is willing to get married isn't a promiscuous man anymore. He's just an attractive man offering the commitment package.

Our sexual history doesn't reflect on our character and foresight the way women's does, so it doesn't stick to us in any meaningful way.

Yes, that is a huuuuge double standard, but it reflects nature's double standard, we didn't just pluck it out of the air.

So why do:

women who either do not desire promiscuous men or can resist that desire are higher status than those who do. Or rather they are more desirable mates.

... then?

Well, it's because "sleeping with a promiscuous man" means, as we said, getting pumped and dumped. The higher a woman's sexual market value, the less likely she is to get pumped and dumped. She didn't even necessarily resist the promiscuous guy. Maybe she slept with him, and then turned him into a boyfriend or husband. And the higher a woman's SMV, the less likely she is to be cheated on.

This is why I say that a high partner count in a woman is an symptom of low SMV, not a cause of it. It means her SMV was too low to turn sex with each new partner into a long-term relationship.

Each time a man penetrates a woman, that an attractiveness success for him.

Each time a woman is penetrated by a new man, and he does not stay, that is an attractiveness failure for her.

I'm ok with you being a slut

0 upvotes · 6 May 2013 · /r/MensRights

If lots of women like a man, I probably won't.

Most women are more attracted to a man if other women like him.

And all of this is irrelevant anyway. I had one sexual partner and I married him. The older I get the more grateful I am for this.

That's precisely why this is relevant.

Because we cannot expect most women to do what you did. Because they find men like me attractive. That's why I am on about this.

We could expect women to stay chaste until marriage, resisting temptations like me, when there was no reliable birth control and the consequences could be disastrous. But we cannot reasonably expect them to do so when they know that the bad consequences are abstract and social.

New technologies change the moral landscape. If we do not make allowances for that, then we won't be in touch with reality.

Should there be a double standard for promiscuity for men and women? Yes. So long as women serve as the gatekeepers of sex, a promiscuous man is a desirable, high-quality man, while a promiscuous woman is just one who said "yes" a lot.

But we cannot expect women to defend those gates as zealously now that birth control pills, plan B, and abortions are all things. Women want sex, too. They want it a lot. It was a struggle to resist temptation when that temptation could ruin them. When giving in to it just means that men will not want to marry them ten years later? That's too abstract a deterrent for a 20 year old girl.

So what do we do? Men don't want to marry 30 year old sluts who have just hit the wall, and I don't blame them. I wouldn't either. Women don't want to keep their legs shut throughout their 20s, and I wouldn't, either.

I think the solution is that we have to regard female sexual promiscuity not as a cause of low value as a relationship partner, but as a symptom of it.

How TRP handles girlfriends demanding to go on dates with their male friends?

0 upvotes · 27 April 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Raising offspring in this political climate is a bad move.

Can we put together a list of potential red and green flags when meeting/dating women?

0 upvotes · 2 April 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

A masculine digit ratio is not a problem, it's a symptom of problems.

A ring finger that is long compared to the index finger indicates prenatal exposure to high levels of testosterone.
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Digit_ratio

It's correlated with assertive, dominant, and masculine behaviour.

Any thoughts on GirlWritesWhat?

0 upvotes · 1 April 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Live and let live, don't take everything the other group is doing as a personal attack and don't cast yourself as the victim of the other group.

All those things are nice, but they have nothing to do with any known meaning of the word "equality".

Guy dates fatass, feels guilty when he can't get it up for her, /r/fitness white knights are all up in arms

0 upvotes · 20 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

She might have been telling the truth. There are women who love a good smacking around.

But what's in it for you? Why take that risk? Especially with someone so untrustworthy that she tries to manipulate you into spanking her instead of just asking?

Guy dates fatass, feels guilty when he can't get it up for her, /r/fitness white knights are all up in arms

0 upvotes · 20 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Except that the only reason that one needs a lawyer is other lawyers.

Ya'll don't get many virtue points for being an antidote to the problem of, well... you.

"One in seven women aged 15-22 in the US admits to hitting their partner, compared to just one in twenty men."

0 upvotes · 18 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

The key word here is "admits". There may be many more men hitting their partners than 1 in 20, since hitting a woman is heavily condemned, both legally and socially. The total may even be as high as 1 in 7.

Of course, there is little likelihood that a significant portion of the 1 in 7 women are lying... there's no incentive to. And this number may well be higher as well.

10 Responses to the Phrase "Man Up" (Spoken-Word)

0 upvotes · 16 March 2013 · /r/MensRights

It's like SRS wrote some poetry.

This is not a rejection of manipulation via the masculine image. This is a rejection of masculinity itself, crammed with declarations of fealty to the ultra left wing gender-constructivist philosophy of feminism.

Fuck everything about this.

Sex as a weapon...losing interest

0 upvotes · 20 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I disagree. Biologically, women have always used hypoagency to effect their survival.

We don't actually know what women have, biologically, always done. Red pill is about evidence, not about what we heard from others, or want to be true.

I personally find it difficult to believe, however, that natural selection favors a species half-composed of useless dead weight. I think that in societies where there is such a thing as women's work, and women are held responsible for doing it, they can live up to that.

We have allowed our women to run wild instead of spanking them when they misbehave. As a result, we have spoiled women. I don't propose to let us get away with shifting blame by claiming spoiled women are a universal phenomenon.

Women can kid themselves that they are not promiscuous so long as they only have sex with one man at a time. And since "at a time" can mean as small a slice of time as they like, they pretty much have to have a threesome with two guys before they are forced to admit they're not just sifting for husband material.

A woman can go through her twenties and rack up a total of, say, 40 guys, all of whom were "boyfriends", "prospective boyfriends", or "finacees".

I almost want to say that women just aren't wired that way, and any that would want that for their whole lives are anomalies... But I don't have any statistics to back that up, only anecdotal evidence, which means just about nothing.

There are plenty of women who want to be promiscuous. The problem is that they can't admit it, because other women will ostracize them for being "sluts".

How do I know this? Because I have met sooooooooooooo many women who behave promiscuously and hamsterize that they are monogamous. The hamster lies. But actions always tell the truth.

What is the red pill opinion on nofap?

0 upvotes · 11 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Nofap is based on "Your Brain on Porn" series of books. Dig a little deeper and you will find that the authors are a couple with a feminist agenda.

What advice would you give to a woman who wants to be happy?

0 upvotes · 3 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Let's say that I'm a 20 year old woman of healthy weight and average looks. I've been living with my parents while I did community college. I'm about to move out and go to university. I've had two boyfriends; had sex with them of course. But that's it. I've been single for about a year.

What would you advise me to do if my goal is to be happy at 30. What would you advise me to do so that I'll be happy at 40?

You must decide right now if you ever want children. Because there are two paths to happiness, and they hinge on this decision, and they diverge right now.

"But it's not fair, I'm not ready to make this decision!"

Too bad. Life doesn't care. Ready or not, time is now.

Path 1: "I want kids."

Marry a 35-40 year old man. Come to his bed a virgin if you can, but at the very least don't be a trashy whore. He probably cares a lot less about old-fashioned notions of "purity" than about being seen committing to someone lots of other men have had for the price of a night out. Once you are in his bed, do all the dirty stuff trashy whores, do, though... just only with him. He'll show you how, and you'll discover it's mind-bendingly pleasurable.

Make sure he's well established and has a steady income. It's okay to pick the most attractive one you can draw, but make sure he's more stable than exciting. Also, make sure he's trustworthy, and that you trust him, because he's gonna be in charge. For the next 20 years, be a housewife. If you wanna work part time sometimes, it's okay, but your real job is taking care of your husband and your children (in that order).

When you're 40, and your children no longer need you on a daily, or even weekly, basis, you may go to college and start a career. If your 60 year old husband is cool with it (his sexual desire may be starting to flag by this point), you may fuck some toothsome young guys you meet there.

Have a short career between 40 and retirement. Your husband will die long before you, but widows usually hold up pretty well, especially if they have kids, with kids of their own, and they have lots of friends.

Path 2: "No kids."

Go to college. Have a career. Ride a train of alpha male cock.

But do so knowing in advance that the cock quality will diminish as you age, and that your prince will never come. Your career is your source of satisfaction. Your relationships will be temporary and sex is for fun.

Pay for your own shit, take responsibility for yourself, and act like an adult. Never let a man buy you anything, even if they are willing to. Why? Because on this path, the men don't stay. If you allow yourself to become dependent on them, they will disappoint you, and you will be bitter.

Be a slut.

Remember, men do not hate sluts. Men do not think less of sluts. Slut is not an insult in the mouth of a man. But men do not marry sluts. And they are right to do this, because after riding the cock carousel, women do not make good, or happy, wives.

But, if you are willing to give up on being a wife and mother, a slut and career woman can be a good thing to be.

Build a good, tight network of friends, both male and female. This is uber-important, because you are going to be a childless old woman. You'll be allowed to say whatever you want, and makes scandalous jokes at parties, but you have to make sure you still have people to invite you there. You will also be able to get along with much younger people, because your "wild" past will enable you to understand them.

Top Comment in Blue Pill World: "Talk to Her Like an Adult"

0 upvotes · 3 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Red pill edit:

Talk to her as if you expect her to be an adult. Impose boundaries, standards, and consequences.

"The End of Men and the Rise of Women." This is not gender equality! This is sexism!

0 upvotes · 30 December 2012 · /r/MensRights

I would love to see some of these women who are loudly proclaiming the "end of men", and asking "what good are men", experience an actual week without men.

When they were ankle-deep in muddy water trying to get the power back on, they'd realize that men are far from obsolete.

against the grain in /r/funny

0 upvotes · 29 December 2012 · /r/MensRights

To be a killjoy, you must kill something that is in some tiny respect joyful.

My Son's Mother "Canceled" His Christmas With Me, Is Denying Visitation and Telephone Visitation... and I Am Getting Revenge!

0 upvotes · 25 December 2012 · /r/MensRights

Yes. To have children is to sacrifice for the good of others.

A man who makes a sacrifice that is appreciated and honored is a hero. A man who makes sacrifice that is not is a sucker.

Until men are honored and appreciated, we must withhold our sacrifices. That means no children, no marriage, no giving money to women, no careers that sacrifice our well-being for that of others.

I've come to a realization about the "nice guy syndrome"

0 upvotes · 5 December 2012 · /r/seduction

Definition of hope - A feeling of expectation and desire for a certain thing to happen (type in hope definition into Google, and it's on the very top)

Definition of expectations - A strong belief that something will happen or be the case in the future (same way as above)

I think we are at risk of descending into a semantic argument here.

In order to avoid this, I shall stop using words like hope, expect, and so forth, and we'll define a series of numbers with the concepts we want. Like this:

1. The condition of wanting something, irrespective of whether one feels entitled to it, or thinks one will get it.
2. The condition of believing there is a chance, not necessarily a good one, but a chance, that one will get the thing one wants.
3. The condition of expecting one will get something, not in the sense of feeling entitled to it, but simply of believing it will probably happen.
4. The condition of uninvolved entitlement. Believing that one is worthy of something, deserves it, and should receive it, and that if someone feels otherwise, they must be confused or not have good taste, and it's their loss, one will just go elsewhere and get it from someone else.
5. The condition of involved entitlement, Believing that one is worthy of something, deserves it, and should receive it, and that if someone feels otherwise, one has been wronged, and that someone owes restitution.
6. Holding someone in contempt.
7. Hating someone and feeling they are scum.

So now that we have seven conditions, designated by unambiguous numbers, we can talk about this without arguing about what words imply to us.

OP thinks nice-guys are assholes because they have 5, and this is what turns women off. Nice guys don't have 5. They have 1, 2, and sometimes, through wishful thinking and self-deception, 3. PUAs/guys with game are successful because they have 4, which is also known as "abundance mentality".

Sometimes nice-guys do appear to suddenly turn into assholes by suddenly displaying 7 towards women they were orbiting. But this doesn't mean they had 5. People with 5 turn bitter (7) when they don't get what they 1. Nice-guy orbiters are constantly not getting what they 1, so that can't be the trigger. Nice guys will vanish when they no longer have 2, but that doesn't make them an asshole to anyone who doesn't have 5 towards them.

No, nice-guys turn 7 when they discover that the women they orbit have 5 and 6 to them.

What causes the 6 is not their own condition of 5 to the women. They don't have 5, and even if they did, people don't react to 5 with 6. No, 6 is caused by the NG's neediness and weakness, while 5 is caused by getting used to the orbiting behaviour, coupled with some narcissism on the part of the woman.

Women with NG orbiters are clearly bigger assholes than NGs or PUAs, because they are the ones with 5. NGs only have 1, 2, and 3. And PUAs only add 4, and somewhat less 1, to this list, not 5.

I've come to a realization about the "nice guy syndrome"

0 upvotes · 4 December 2012 · /r/seduction

Compassion and attentiveness are not unattractive, neediness and manipulation are. And that's exactly what "nice guys" are doing when they think they are being nice. What's the difference: expectations.

Nope.

Sorry, that's just not true. You've done a good job of spinning this positively, but let's bring this back to reality... the truth is considerably darker.

It isn't "expectations" that make "nice guys" unattractive, because nice guys don't have expectations. If they did, they wouldn't work so hard to please the women they are orbiting. People don't work hard for what they feel entitled to.

No, nice guys don't have expectations, they have hopes.

Nice guys aren't unattractive because they are selfish. They are unattractive because they are weak.

Weak people are untrustworthy because, while they might do whatever you want, and say whatever they think you want to hear, they are incapable of sticking to a course... they are loyal to whoever bullied them last.

A woman knows that a man who won't stand up to her, won't stand up for her. But more importantly, he is an undesirable mate because he doesn't win inter-male competition. Women rely on male strength, and they will always forgive a jerk for his caddishness long before they forgive an orbiter for his weakness.

All Sex is now called Human Trafficking

0 upvotes · 7 November 2012 · /r/MensRights

These are their neighbors, their friends, their family—whether they know it or not—and many are women: trans- and cisgender women, poor and working class women, and disproportionately, they are women of color.

Oh, no! Real humans, you know, ones with vaginas, might get hurt!

Who here in the STEM fields was ever 'encouraged' to pursue their fields?

0 upvotes · 22 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

Not me.

If your talent and enthusiasm needs coddling to grow, then is it weak and doesn't deserve to live.

In the VP debate, Paul Ryan said they'd make abortion illegal, except in cases of rape. Wouldn't that result in women, who are no longer able to get an abortion otherwise, falsely accusing men of raping them?

0 upvotes · 12 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

1. The Republicans have no interest in doing anything of the sort. They don't hate sex, they don't hate gays, they don't hate abortion. Hell, some of them are secretly gay. They just pretend to be stuck in the 18th century on social issues to court the christian fundamentalist vote... the fundamentalists are the useful idiots of the Republican party, who can be counted to vote for them forever despite never getting what they want.

2. If you really believe that abortion is murder, why on earth would you make an exception in cases of rape? Surely your unborn daughter is innocent of her parents' crimes?
3. No one really gives a crap about the rights of the unborn... they can't speak for themselves, and don't vote. Any real opposition to abortion is motivated by a desire to punish sex. Otherwise, they'd be preventing abortion by giving out birth control devices.

A handy quotation by Noam Chomsky for those who call you a misogynist for speaking out for the issues of men

0 upvotes · 10 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

Res ipsa loquitur.

I don't want as many women as I can handle. I just want one. Someone I can love and treasure until I die. How many other redditors are looking for monogamy?

0 upvotes · 6 October 2012 · /r/seduction

Off-topic.

This group is about seduction skills, not relationship goals.

I'm 23 and have never had a girlfriend, had sex, or even held a girls hand. How do I snap out of my loser mentality and ruminating about the past?

0 upvotes · 14 August 2012 · /r/seduction

Step one: You are not a loser. Women are not the measure of your success or your manhood.

Think about it. Most women your age are interested in themselves, gossip, and shoes. Does that sound like someone who's qualified to judge your value as a human being?

No, I don't, either.

Pickup is because you want sex, not because it makes you a "real man" or proves anything worthwhile about you. So the first thing to remember, when you're talking to a woman, is that her opinion of you is so much hot air, and it's only relevant to whether or not you'll be getting laid. Not to how you should feel about yourself.

I want to apologize to you guys

0 upvotes · 15 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

creepy undercurrent of sexual perversity

The 1950s called while you were out. They want their attitude back.

Most people have the impression that Mens Rights equals Anti Womens Rights

0 upvotes · 5 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

Terrible idea.

Does the Jewish Defense League have "we don't kick Palestinian women in the spine!" as its motto?

Don't repeat the propaganda of the opposition.

Don't Be a Dick: The False Virtues of the Classic Alpha Male

0 upvotes · 3 July 2012 · /r/seduction

Definitely be Bill Clinton. That man has some game.

Just don't marry a man-hater like him.

So exactly, how willing are most women to having sex the same night?

0 upvotes · 30 June 2012 · /r/seduction

Well, after they took me to the vet and had me "fixed", it scarcely matters.

Before that, my sexual experience was limited to dry-humping the little girl's stuffed animals, and a brief tryst with the leg of a very surprised postman.

So exactly, how willing are most women to having sex the same night?

0 upvotes · 30 June 2012 · /r/seduction

How do you sneak around if you're erect? Aren't you too stiff to move?

Did this really just fucking pop up on my news feed?

0 upvotes · 29 June 2012 · /r/MensRights

I'll bet the 5% of men who are murdered by their wives or girlfriends number more than the 30% of women... a lot more men are murdered than women.

We need divorce reform.

0 upvotes · 17 May 2012 · /r/MensRights

Yep. Why else would women be the primary slut-shamers? Why else would women use the adjective "cheap" when criticizing sluts?

Women hate sluts because they lower the price.

Why are there not more feminists here?

0 upvotes · 5 May 2012 · /r/MensRights

Because feminists don't like to argue anywhere that they cannot ban dissenters.

Whats a good reply for "Do you have a gf?"

0 upvotes · 28 April 2012 · /r/seduction

"What do you mean, 'a' girlfriend?"

Sedit, I need help with an HB10 who doesn't drink. It's not oneitis, it's a unicorn.

0 upvotes · 24 April 2012 · /r/seduction

If you can't kclose a woman without relying on the bar environment, then you don't really have kclose skills.

You are just using bars as a crutch. Make a commitment to yourself to get your next ten kcloses without ever taking her to a bar, or getting any alcohol in her, or drinking any yourself.

It sounds like you have all the right stuff going. You have kino going (with her initiating kino), you've built comfort, you've got stuff rolling.

But you don't know how to kclose except in a bar.

At this point, were I in your shoes, I'd be looking to go back to her apartment after going somewhere, and then kclose, deal with LMR if it manifests, and then fclose.

Because once she tells her friends about you, especially once she tells you she told her friends about you, you are in.

You've already done all the hard work.

She is waiting for you to kiss her. She wants you to kiss her. You don't need an elaborate plan. You don't need the right environment. You just need to sack up and fucking do it.

Do it.

Do it the moment you walk up to her, the next time you meet her somewhere. Restaurant, bowling alley, middle of the fucking street. Walk up, embrace, hand behind head, kiss.

She wants you to do it.

Fuck everything about this.

0 upvotes · 9 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

I want the woman who wrote this to refuse to date me. Please.

More bullshit things. 3 men worked in the blazing sun for 3 hours while 7 women stood around and laughed at us.

0 upvotes · 6 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

When I help friends move, I have a rule. It goes like this: I am a man, I lift heavy things. I do not deal with little fiddly stuff, I do not pack or unpack boxes. I do not clean things. I do not arrange things. I lift heavy stuff. When the heavy lifting is done, I will sit on my ass and watch the women unpack the books and dishes.

New Law Stops Injustice of "Alimony Without End".

0 upvotes · 10 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

We must all secretly resent women and that's why we're focusing on trivia like eternal alimony, prison rape, and the male suicide rate!

It might be time to reconsider such lax moderation.

0 upvotes · 9 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

This comment reads like something written by Rosa Parks or Adolf Hitler.

Is anyone else sick to death of hearing Abortion being directly equated with contraception, vasectomies and Viagra

0 upvotes · 6 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

Are you really that obtuse, or are you doing this on purpose?

The first amendment protects the act of publishing and expressing ideas, not the act of ignoring laws you don't like.

Saying "Nuns should be set on fire" is protected speech. Setting fire to nuns is not.

Is anyone else sick to death of hearing Abortion being directly equated with contraception, vasectomies and Viagra

0 upvotes · 6 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

Catholics firmly believe that BC pills can cause abortions.

Nonsense. This is a scientific position, not a religious one. Therefore, the fact that they are catholics does not inform them on this issue one bit.

What nonsense it would be to say "Tennis players believe that BC pills cause abortions", or "Puerto Ricans believe that BC pills cause abortions".

Man shocked by arrest after daughter draws picture of gun at school | "How do you recognize a criminal from a father?"

0 upvotes · 26 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Yes, but it's not all paved. There are still patches of, like, open dirt. With plants and things in it. He might stumble and break a nail.

Man shocked by arrest after daughter draws picture of gun at school | "How do you recognize a criminal from a father?"

0 upvotes · 26 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

He wouldn't do that. No one has paved it yet. And there probably aren't even any cappuccino machines. And there might be...like... animals and stuff.

I got banned, without warning, from OneY for talking about the feminization of men in modern society.

0 upvotes · 21 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Yeah, how dare he express an unacceptable opinion?

Only proper, pre-approved opinions will be spoken here, thank you very much!

It seems to me that pick-up gets easier after turning 21, at least when going out solo.

0 upvotes · 6 February 2012 · /r/seduction

All of reddit is babies!

Yes, it gets easier after 21. Also, after 25. In fact, everything does.

"A runaway slave is the worst kind of slave - one that absolutely refuses to serve his massa. My reasons were simple... if the state forces me not to be a father than I will not pretend to be one. I will certainly not pay 75% of my take home pay to someone who hates me"

0 upvotes · 5 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Yeah, because all crazy people are color-coded for your convenience.

Jackass.

You know why /r/mensrights is so pro-free speech...

0 upvotes · 31 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

Except the second one is worse because its effects cannot be repaired.

Forever Alone comes to seddit - Ask Us Anything

0 upvotes · 11 January 2012 · /r/seduction

Sedditor

Because advertisements motivate people, and, in this arena, motivation is what you need to succeed.

Difference is, most advertisements are there to take your money, and couldn't give less of a fuck about you. But redditors want to help you get laid.

Why? What's in it for us? Well, attraction isn't a zero sum game. Helping you helps me. It increases my confidence and improves my game. Also, the more hot guys there are out there, the more attractive and valuable girls see guys in general as, and the more of a sexual playground our world becomes.

13 year old girl explains why slut shaming is wrong. This is pretty insightful.

0 upvotes · 11 January 2012 · /r/seduction

Yeah, this needs to be posted to 2X, not here. It's women who hate sluts, not men.

So I just got banned from r/ShitRedditSays for having the nerve to say we shouldn't generalize all of r/seduction has emotional insecure men who have rapey tendencies

0 upvotes · 9 January 2012 · /r/seduction

SRS was created to whine about r/mensrights and anyone else who refuses to apologize for having balls.

Not worth arguing with.

Feminist I was debating slapped me with this study. Any thoughts?

0 upvotes · 29 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

self-reported rape proclivity

What the hell is this? What are the units of measure? Has it been conclusively shown to correlate to incidence of rape?

Or are we just making up a test, and correlating it to another test we made up?

Women's activists pat each other on the back for closing a fraternity -- over misconduct apparently limited to one frat brother

0 upvotes · 20 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

How is this even misconduct? Offensive speech is still protected speech.

Women's activists pat each other on the back for closing a fraternity -- over misconduct apparently limited to one frat brother

0 upvotes · 20 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

I think the phrase you are looking for is "may as well be hanged for a sheep as a lamb".

Does misogyny even exist?

0 upvotes · 10 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

Not gonna read that without paragraph breaks.

Rule Update: Links to Anti-MRA subreddits are now considered spam.

0 upvotes · 10 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

We're not against the rights of men.

Name one.

Am I missing the point?

0 upvotes · 9 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

What I see in this subreddit is mostly anti-feminist sentiment and people who feel threatened by the feminist movement.

You've been infected with anti-male language.

"Feel threatened" is a phrase frequently used in the attempt to suggest that men are cowards for opposing something. In this case, you are appealing to the very traditional masculine virtues that feminism is undermining, in the attempt to get us to stop opposing feminism.

Doesn't that strike you as slightly ironic?

There also appears to be a lot of attention paid to examples of women doing horrible things to men

When someone doesn't believe a thing exists, what you do is find examples of it.

Our society thinks that women can do no wrong.

I don't see conversations and debates about masculinity, society and what it means to be a man.

I would like to see more of this myself. But the first thing we need to establish about masculinity is that it is "not inherently evil". So far, most of our efforts have been devoted to getting that point across.

Discussions about real problems men face and the pressures our culture puts on them.

Here you are viewing our movement through the lens that feminism ground and mounted for you. It was a feminist goal to be free of all external pressures and therefore free to whatever the hell they wanted.

As men, we are better than that. We are not spoiled children demanding free candy by twisting the meaning of the words "fair" and "equal". What we want is for masculine virtues and sacrifices to once again be honoured and rewarded. (Although possibly within a slightly different framework.)

In any society that works, there are roles for everyone, and all people have at least some duties. The desire to throw that off altogether, as feminists have expressed, is the desire to pull down and kick over the civilization we have spent thousands of years building (and then presumably to sit about in the ruins whining that they isn't any heat, clean water, organic produce, or yoga classes). Civilization came about, and continues to exist, because of the sacrifices made by men, and the burdens we carry. We do not desire to set them down... that way lies nothing. Instead, we desire to be rewarded and appreciated for carrying them.

The difference between a hero and a slave is what he receives for his efforts.

Woman whines how she already has lost her husband and children after getting caught repeatedly sexually assaulting a 14-year-old boy - what she thought she would get, a medal from her family? (in addition to her 7 years in jail)

0 upvotes · 9 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

You know, when I see stuff like this, I cannot help but think we are going in the wrong direction.

She had sex with a consenting teenager. After they become acquainted socially. She didn't use her position of authority to rape someone.

And we're all on fire to apply the same draconian penalties to her as would apply to a man... when the real injustice is that the penalties applied to a man are draconian.

I understand that it's much easier and more popular to lynch women who fuck teenage boys, than it is to stand up for fair treatment of men who fuck teenage girls. But let us not replace "no justice for men" with "no justice for anyone".

I made a suggestion in r/ideasfortheadmins for a way we can fix the sockpuppet issue. I'm cross-posting this to anti-MR subs as well since they constantly accuse us of sockpuppetry and this negates that issue.

0 upvotes · 3 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

No. Absolutely not. The major difference between r/mr and those who hate us is that we censor no one.

Putting up with trolls and sockpuppets is a small price for the ability to demonstrate just how it is that we hold the moral high ground.

Are you all incredibly angry, delusional, hateful, depressed, violently upset, hate your wife (or hate women because you don't have one), support rape with false statistics, ... or is there some kind of smear campaign against r/mensrights?

0 upvotes · 3 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

Perhaps some of us could collaborate on a collection of essays? I would be willing to contribute this:

http://www.reddit.com/r/science/comments/7x78v/what_do_modern_men_want_in_women/c07omtc

Unwed mother? Blame feminism.

0 upvotes · 28 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

Using that standard, no civilization deserves to exist. There has been no civilization which advanced without the imposed roles prescribed by patriarchy.

Nonsense. While every civilization has roles (since there is no civilization without specialization), the idea of roles does not in any way imply the suppression of sexual behaviour.

Sexual repression has to some degree been necessary in the past due to the unavailability of effective contraception... but this is distinct from authoritarian sexual repression and is no longer relevant in most cases.

You seem to be contending that no advanced civilization can survive while allowing free expression of the sexual impulse. How would you contend with the counterexample of Rome?

This is why many cultures switched from polygamy to monogamy once sufficient numbers of young men were not dying to war each generation.

Marital polygamy is distinct from sexual freedom.

Not this shit again... SRS belittles men's rights and claims that if the girl doesn't remember consenting to sex due to voluntary alcohol consumption, it is rape. They just want guys to never have sex with girls who are even a little tipsy.

0 upvotes · 6 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

So now something can become a rape because of something that happens after it occurs.

EEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEinteresting.

could you love a bipolar woman? (xpost)

0 upvotes · 5 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

Just so everyone has a complete set of facts, here:

Bipolar patients are not just who have mood swings. They are frequently delusional, recklessly irresponsible (drugs, gambling, ludicrous levels of promiscuity), or abusive and violent during one part of their cycle, and needy, manipulative, or emotional unavailable during the rest.

In particular, we also need to be aware of the dangerous idea that we have no right to defend ourselves against bad behaviour unless it's voluntary.

A person earns trust by behaving in a trustworthy fashion. Whether they "need" or want trust is irrelevant, only whether they have earned it.

Being mentally sound (and/or male) does make us divine beings with the power to control reality, and the special responsibility to make sure the universe is fair to everyone.

Like everyone else, we get to pick partners based on our preferences, not according to a system of vague and poorly thought out "fairness" which is designed for the benefit of people who aren't us.

Side Effects of Patriarchy May Include PIV

0 upvotes · 3 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

Some species go so far as to develop asexual reproduction, but this is the final evolutionary development for those species as all future offspring will be an exact genetic copy of the single parent. The inability to evolve with the environment around it, means it is only a matter of time before such a species is wiped out.

Errr, you don't quite understand evolution, do you?

Variation occurs through mutation, not sexual gene-swapping.

How feminist men emotionally disable women

0 upvotes · 28 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

http://www.reddit.com/r/MensRights/comments/ku141/how_feminist_men_emotionally_disable_women/c2nc9ib

How feminist men emotionally disable women

0 upvotes · 28 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

I always love how if a woman doesn't make it to the very top, or get that promotion because a man got it instead, often, the very first excuse she'll seize on is discrimination. She won't look at hours put in, job performance, productivity, seniority, ability, number of sick days, leadership skills, etc. Nope. It's the "old boys' club", time for a lawsuit.

What's interesting is that often, when a man is discriminated against, and he acknowledges it, he still interprets it on a personal rather than a demographic level. Rather than saying "I didn't get the promotion because I am a man", he will say "I didn't get the promotion because the management doesn't like me."

How feminist men emotionally disable women

0 upvotes · 28 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

Well said indeed, but to condense it a little:

Power and responsibility go together.

If everything is men's fault, and their responsibility, then you can't change or fix anything except by complaining to men in the hopes that they will change their behaviour.

If your behaviour is your own responsibility, then you have the power to change it.

I saw this and had to share.

0 upvotes · 22 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

Common Sense finally gave up the will to live, after a woman failed to realize that a steaming cup of coffee was hot. She spilled a little in her lap, and was promptly awarded a huge settlement.

This one always gets to me.

Common sense dictates educating yourself before opening your mouth.

The lawsuit wasn't about spilling hot coffee on yourself. It was about how hot it was... not ordinary hot-coffee hot, but deliberately-kept-scalding-so-you'll-drink-less hot.

The point wasn't the inevitable spill... it was the consequences of handing someone a cup of boiling water through a car window when they expect the ordinary hot drink.

But that's the thing about common sense. Half of it isn't common, and the other half isn't sense. It's just a term that casual thinkers use as an excuse for not being diligent, a kind of mythical earthy wisdom supposedly possessed by the bone-ignorant.

A new space to discuss men's rights - r/masculism

0 upvotes · 22 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

Not interested.

Time and time again in this comments section you have been asked what you intend to do differently, yet you refuse to provide a clear response.

The only concrete goal you have articulated is a bad one. Focusing on outreach is not how you gain acceptance. People don't accept radical new ideas because someone soft-sold them. They accept radical new ideas because the people who do accept them stood up and were counted.

Watering down our reactions to injustices is not only cowardly, it's counterproductive.

r/TransphobiaProject fights with r/feminisms. r/Mensrights emerges as the villain.

0 upvotes · 12 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

it's not an opinion

You keep saying that. Yet you provide no evidence to back it up. No citation of double-blind, controlled studies that support your point of view. After all, if it's a fact, then it is can be backed up with measurable quantitative evidence, right?

They have every right to sleep with whomever they want.

Do they have the right to not sleep with whom they don't want?

There is no lying or deceiving at all. A trans girl who presents as a female is not deceiving anyone.

You keep making this assertion, which you insist is a fact, but you don't back it up with anything but repeated assertion.

Not everyone agrees on the definition of gender. You're arguing for the use of deception to coerce others into using your definition, in a way that affects them deeply and personally. Why on earth would anyone, straight, gay, male, female, whatever, want to sleep with someone who had so little consideration for their feelings as to hide who they were?

I tell people who are against gay marriage this: "No one is forcing you to do anything. If you are against homosexual marriage, don't marry a homosexual."

But what does one tell people who don't think trans "girls" are girls? "No is forcing you to have sex with..."

Oh, wait, they are.

The only position you can take to justify this is to say "Your opinion doesn't matter, mine is the correct one, and yours can't even be allowed to run how you live your own life."

The hubris of this, the sheer smug arrogance, is positively breathtaking. And in that light, I feel compelled to mention the word "sociopath" again.

Tales of a sexually liberated woman: hypergamy, affairs, broken marriages, divorce, suicide, and kid in the psych ward. This story's got it all!

0 upvotes · 14 August 2011 · /r/MensRights

deviant sex

Clearly, you have a problem with this. It distracts from your point.

Feminist moderators have made /r/anarchism a laughing stock on Reddit. These are the same people who founded /r/againstmensrights.

0 upvotes · 1 August 2011 · /r/MensRights

But if only everyone did just what the anarchists told them to, then authoritarianism would vanish forever!

Women are attracted to older men: the science

0 upvotes · 31 July 2011 · /r/seduction

I've always thought that dating/sex/relationships/marriage would work a lot better if older men hooked up with younger women, and younger men hooked up with older women.

Throwaway account, long time lurker and closet-convert to the MRM and have some thoughts to share that I've been working on for a long time (anonymously though, GF has a reddit account and I'm not ready to open that bag of worms yet).

0 upvotes · 26 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

OMG! Hitler ate sandwiches! Ban the sandwich!

How would you open Katy Perry?

0 upvotes · 26 July 2011 · /r/seduction

Just like anyone else, because I wouldn't recognize her. And I'm not entirely clear on who she is.

But in general, I've known celebrities. Many of them are sick of empty praise, sick of hangers-on, and sick of hearing about how awesome they are. (And the ones who aren't like that, get the hell away from as fast as possible.)

Tell them about you. About your life. About your awesome adventures. Preferably in some area that has nothing to do with what they are famous for.

Why are women so against being seen as "sluts"?

0 upvotes · 13 July 2011 · /r/seduction

If you don't ever see guys slut-shaming then you live in a cave.

Or outside the Bible Belt (where apparently they do not approve of them-thar new-fangled Yankee contraptions like "cayvz", "fahr", and "stown axis").

The only time time you see guys using the word "slut" as a pejorative is when somebody cheats on them. But then they're just using the wrong word, because someone who uses sex as a weapon isn't a slut, she's a whore.

Randall Munroe (XKCD) on requiring gender to be shown in a public Google+ profile

0 upvotes · 9 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

Sure. But the point isn't that he is "forever alone". The point is that he has "pedestal issues", as another commenter put it.

Can you be banned from a subreddit without even posting in it? This must be a new record!

0 upvotes · 7 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

I didn't know they lacked rights...

Oh, they do. But that's on account of being men, not on account of being straight men in particular.

I am thinking about wearing a wedding ring to the next company I work for to help further my career.

0 upvotes · 7 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

Wombats + Kangaroos + Polar Bears = 3

Insects = 1

Total = 4

25% of animals are insects! The rest are polar bears, kangaroos, and wombats!

Trans Women Disclosing - Hypotheticals vs Reality

0 upvotes · 10 May 2011 · /r/MensRights

We don't typically believe it is anyone's right to know because any "harm" suffered as a result of discovering they have had sex with a trans person is rooted in their belief that trans women are actually men, and that sex with one is homosexual sex. We don't accept that premise.

Not your business to decide that premise for someone else.

How do you avoid resenting women?

0 upvotes · 9 May 2011 · /r/seduction

I have always respected them very much

There's your problem.

Stop that. Stop respecting them.

You don't respect guys until they, as individuals, earn your respect. But you talk like you give women a blanket "pass".

That's not a healthy attitude. And, just to "become a psychologist" for a minute, here's why:

"My dad is a very respectable man who treated my mother with the utmost of love and respect. I have seen them fight ONCE in my entire life."

... that's not natural. People who have healthy relationships fight and resolve their differences. They don't treat each other (especially one particular gender of other) like special magic statues made of blown glass.

It seems like one of the reasons that you resent women is that you expect them to be superior, and then are repeatedly disappointed when they turn out to be made of the same selfish goo as the rest of us.

But that's what they are. They're just people, and they can't be expected to behave well out of some inherent sense of fairness, because that's not how people work. People learn to behave themselves because others draw boundaries for them.

And when feminism put a stop to people drawing boundaries for women, or having expectations of them, then women started behaving... well, badly. Just like anyone would.

So just stop it. Stop expecting women to be superior, and start drawing boundaries for her. If she does something selfish or crazy, don't sit there silently resenting her for not being a magic superior being made of sugar and spice and everything nice.

Call her on it. Dress her the fuck down just like you would a guy. It works.

[FR] Kino: It's the same in every language, and it works!

0 upvotes · 8 May 2011 · /r/seduction

What, no face/hair?

My favorite kino opener is to brush back those couple of strands of hair that are out of place.

Someone calls a woman cheating “sexual freedom” and says you must be right winged if you don’t respect that

-1 upvotes · 16 February 2022 · /r/AntiFeminists

Good to know.

UK: Female who stalked male college worker, 42, is slapped with a restraining order. She smashed up his sports car, followed him to Benidorm and spray painted 'nce' on his fence OP: He lost his job and she was still not jailed

-1 upvotes · 14 January 2022 · /r/MensRights

So, be celebrate or gay?

Is there a category beyond alpha and beta for men?

-1 upvotes · 8 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Every time I see the alpha/beta dichotomy discussed, it seems as if those are the only two categories a man can fall into - they're either a simp with no self-respect, or an asshole with no respect for women.

So you're prone to dichotomous thinking?

Is it really that uncommon for a man to treat himself AND women with respect?

Define respect.

Does he fall into the "alpha" category even if he's not trying to manipulate women?

"Manipulate" is a snarl word for "persuasion I don't like".

how much of an age gap is too much?

-1 upvotes · 5 October 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Men can father healthy children up the point they die.

How to get over the fact that your guy has casually hooked up with other people before you?

-1 upvotes · 28 August 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Yes.

And women will devastate their happy family, and make their kids grow up in a divorce home because their man gave some other woman a tablespoon of replaceable sperm, and their oh-so-important feelings are hurt.

These two things are one and the same.

Don't you get it?

It's not logical. It's not reasoned. Humans are wired how we are because of the conditions that we evolved under. Whatever made more copies of our genes.

That's all it is.

You can say that's immoral, pretending very hard not to notice that your definition of moral, and what you happen to want, are exactly the same. But that gets you nowhere. It's just a whine. You don't like it. Well, so fucking what?

The only question is what you are going to do about it, when you are done fussing. You can either adapt to the universe, or wait for the universe to adapt to you.

Do you like to send selfies while in the dating phase?

-1 upvotes · 31 July 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

I think there is something I am not understanding here.

You show your face to every stranger you pass on the street. What is different about showing it to him?

What have you learned from PPD that has actually improved your life?

-1 upvotes · 24 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

How to phrase TRP ideas so that people who aren't very intelligent will understand them.

CMV: social media and online dating have completely destroyed the dating market, it cannot be repaired

-1 upvotes · 9 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No.

They are symptoms of the destruction of the family structure and the social network. The causes of this were technological and economic.

Seriously, I'm done holding doors and making space in the walk aisle.

-1 upvotes · 31 March 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

Are you a woman?

No?

Then stop trying to be his mother.

TRP and asexuality

-1 upvotes · 11 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This post is so disordered that I cannot even tell what you are asking for. Advice? Sympathy?

How to choose a wife according to the Red Pill?

-1 upvotes · 9 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

most quality women

There are few things I find more vacuous than airy speculation about what a "quality woman" would do, in the absence, not only of any evidence to back the claim, but indeed of any definition of "quality".

Second, in Europe you would have limited rights protection regarding your children compared to married fathers

In Europe, you have limited rights protection period. This is one of the inherent drawbacks of the welfare state.

Careerist women are the exception, not the rule, so why are guys here focusing so much on them?

-1 upvotes · 19 February 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Men who focus on careerist women are the exception, not the rule. So why are you focusing on them?

Are older men actually attractive?

-1 upvotes · 23 January 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

We're not here to discuss abstract philosophy. If you don't find older men attractive, don't date them.

Problem solved.

New Rule: "Leave Him" is never the 1st option.

-1 upvotes · 19 September 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

I'm sorry you went through that, and you were definitely right to leave him.

But, speaking for myself, I can't tell the difference between a low-functioning psychopath, and a normal person, based on their angry girlfriend's story about them on the internet. I have to ask a lot of questions before I can tell what's really going on, if I ever can.

I'm not so sanguine about saying "dump him" based on a paragraph of text, especially when I know that a woman who is over thirty and has been off the dating market for years has little chance of finding another partner who isn't a loser or just looking for a hookup before he marries someone much younger.

We're not the police, social workers, or psychotherapists. In certain cases, we're a lot better qualified than they are, but what we aren't is in a position to effectively intervene.

Our role is to suggest strategies for healing or improving relationships that can work, not responding over the internet to Jerry Springer level situations.

I'm stuck trying to figure out if I should stay in or leave my marriage and would appreciate the RPW perspective

-1 upvotes · 26 June 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

I'm trying to be logical and value my husband, who is a fundamentally good and hardworking person with an amazing family that I love.

You don't love him.

You know how I know that? It's what you didn't say. You didn't talk about how you feel about him. You would have if you loved him.

No, you're with him because you think life is duty, and you're "supposed" to appreciate his "good character" (whatever that might mean). But your taste in men has nothing to do with their character.

Men are attracted to beautiful and feminine women, not women of "good character". And women aren't attracted to "good character" either. Don't fall prey to the self-flattering female delusion that your vaginal tingles are a flawless barometer for virtue. If you stay with this man, you will cheat on him. You will white knuckle your way through years of unfulfilling marriage, and then, one day, temptation will present itself, and you will cheat.

The time to leave men you're not into is as early as possible, ideally right after "hello".

Failing that, there's no time like the present.

Making my move makes me feel cringe/awkward

-1 upvotes · 27 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

So what?

Relationship question

-1 upvotes · 12 April 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

Ignore the pearl-clutchers who are telling you he's a horrible person. They don't know him, they have no way of knowing that, and it's just a knee-jerk reaction.

However, with that said, those who correct others on every last detail are often those who were overmuch corrected themselves in childhood, and this might not make the best partner for you.

Throwing away a multi-year relationship when you are a woman over 30 is a risky move, so it's not the first thing I would recommend that you try. However, you are going to have to do something to get a little breathing room, or the relationship will not go well.

In what ways have you tried communicating the needs you describe here to your man?

Curious to hear people's strategies in responding to pushy/ forward attempts at sexual escalation?

-1 upvotes · 14 March 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

You are dating men with poor social skills.

You see, every man wants sex on the first date. But that takes a level of social skill to pull off. So, depending on a man's level of ability, one of three things is going to happen.

- He has very high social skills, and is able to seduce you quickly. Sex happens on the first date, but, well, okay, you were into it.
- He doesn't have quite that level of skill, but he does have the social skills to tell that you're not down for that yet. He initiates a little bit of physical contact, but backs off and plays a longer game.
- He can't even tell whether you're ready or not, and when you demur, he tries to talk you into it, thinking that attraction can be negotiated (it can't).

So, the next question is, okay, that's nice to know, but how does it become actionable advice?

Well, here's what you can do:

- Be aware of what I described above.
- Realize that getting you to want sex is entirely his responsibility, just as getting him to want a relationship is entirely yours.
- Hold out for men with better social skills. If he seems a little clueless, don't go on a date with him.
- Don't date men just to date men. Date men you think you might want to be with.
- Know the difference between fake and real resistance, and be sure you are projecting signs of the latter.

Why to avoid the Female Dating Strategy sub

-1 upvotes · 30 October 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

The difference is that women don't need to be psyched up, because they don't pedestalize men, or have a protective instinct towards them.

TRP is, and I've been quite open about this, a long con that me and some of my friends are playing on men in general... for their benefit.

What we do is we tell the truth about the nasty petty selfish bullshit that women are capable of, but we tell that truth selectively. We focus on the worst women are capable of, and we target men who are angry already about their lack of romantic success and about being jerked around.

What this does is create someone who is angrily misogynistic enough that he becomes, for the first time in his life, capable of suppressing his protective instinct towards women. Then we teach him some techniques for being attractive... basic shit like playing hard to get (this works on women), presenting a bold and outgoing appearance, crush shit tests, etc.

At first, he's too visibly angry for this stuff to work well... he looks butthurt and whiny and gives too many fucks. But with a little practice, he becomes more calibrated, and starts to attract, for the first time in his life, female interest, then attraction, then lust, then adoration.

Once that happens, we work towards the TRP endgame... as he gains power, he gets what he wants, and the anger begins to fade, but the pedestal is gone forever. He no longer believes, even unconsciously, what his culture tells him about women being morally, cultural, and intellectually more refined than him. He is capable of laughing at their foibles and not taking them seriously.

He can even begin to re-engage that protective instinct, selectively, towards individual women who have proven themselves worthy of his time, attention, and care... women who respect and obey him, rather than treating him as a means to an end.

He has stopped seeing women as a aggregate social force in control of society, which he must fight against like a rebel, and started seeing them as individuals, just as lost and confused as he once was, and equally in need of guidance from the sort of person who he is now becoming ready to be.

Why would a woman like this not lie about her past?

-1 upvotes · 10 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That's just ipse dixit.

But we also don't need to infer state. Internal state is irrelevant... only external behaviour matters. It is our actions that define us.

The only reason that we infer state, or that there is such a thing as state, is that human behaviour is consistent enough over time that Occam's Razor demands we do so. (It is more parsimonious to assume state than it is to explain behavioural consistency without it.)

It doesn't matter why a woman switched partners a lot in the past. It only matters that past behaviour predicts future behaviour.

This means that advice if you are a slut, and advice if you're dealing with a slut, are radically different.

If you are one, your best course is to increase your value and change your behaviour, and hopefully inspire men to take a risk on you despite your past.

If you're dealing with one, the smart move is to stay away, unless something radically changes the risk equation.

Are you familiar with the mathematical concept of "expected value"?

Q4Men: Do you embrace the same traditionalism for your own daughter?

-1 upvotes · 30 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If this is true, then I say manospherians who preach to women that they should chose traditional gender roles but tell their daughters to do the opposite are also hypocrites.

Off topic. This is a debate sub about TRP, and TRP isn't traditionalist.

How does a girlfriend behave differently than a wife in a relationship with a man, and how can a girlfriend be of value to him without giving away too much too soon?

-1 upvotes · 29 July 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Are you?

Scott Adams is 31 years older than his girl friend. She isn't some gold digger but successful. How does this work?

-1 upvotes · 19 May 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Don't young beautiful women find old men creepy?

No.

Unattractive old men are creepier than unattractive young men.

Attractive old men are more attractive than attractive young men.

Share your skin care routine and products.

-1 upvotes · 4 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

When it's dirty, I clean it off with water and a substance I call "soap".

CMV: The constant rationalization, political ideology, and roleplaying vocabulary of TRP is unnecessary and only ruins their credibility.

-1 upvotes · 6 April 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why can't we just have a sub that's like "you know as shitty as it might be, ignoring girls works sometimes. Try it instead of spamming that girl because she didn't reply to you within the last hour."

Handwringing adds no value except to make you feel better.

That's not really an item on our priority list.

The old school pickup community was so much better about this.

This is precisely why they failed so hard in the end.

[Nsfw] having a serious talk about sex without criticizing?

-1 upvotes · 15 March 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Had to wade through quite a bit of verbiage to get to the real issue.

But compared to the amount of times he's able to finish vs me, it's extremely infrequent.

...

In the past his girlfriends would cum really easily and frequently, which tanked my self esteem to hear.

You are slow to orgasm, and he's frustrated that his efforts often fall flat. Effort often tapers off if it's not rewarded by success. It's understandable that he doesn't wanna perform 45+ minutes of oral sex and get nowhere.

So this needs to be looked at as an orgasm problem, not a "lazy-selfish-man" problem, which you have fallen into the temptation of doing. Stop looking to have your resentment of him approved of, and focus on the problem.

When someone has trouble reaching orgasm, the solution isn't "micromanage". That makes the problem worse.

Orgasm problems are almost always about either:

1. Mindset.
2. Unaddressed kinks.
3. Need for a particular style of physical stimulation (NOT a lot of it, NOT great effort, just the RIGHT KIND).

First off, are you able to reach orgasm from masturbation? Easily, with difficulty, or not at all?

'Lady' by Roosh V - Opinions?

-1 upvotes · 18 February 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

In what way do you think pickup artist material is "in error"? It demonstrably works. It benefits the young men who use it.

Do you think that there is some way that it is harmful to them, or do you merely think it is harmful to you, and are projecting that into some moral obligation on them?

Is there something like "lifting weights" for your soul?

-1 upvotes · 30 January 2019 · /r/askTRP

What's a soul?

The Truth About Single Moms Who Bring Young Children To The Dating Market

-1 upvotes · 6 December 2018 · /r/WhereAreAllTheGoodMen

So?

You can invent a word for anything. You can claim that picking up chicks is dominating them, and controlling their little minds, or you can claim that it's orbiting them, and allowing their preferences to determine your actions.

And you can spit anywhere, and claim where it landed is the center of the universe. No one can prove you wrong.

"Loser" will always be subjective, because no one can agree on what the game is. All objectives are self-chosen.

What's not so subjective is whether "MGTOW" (in the recent sense, meaning "avoids women altogether") are voluntary or involuntary celibates.

They claim they are avoiding women because the juice isn't worth the squeeze. /u/mallardcove claims they are just unable to produce results, and have stopped trying.

Personally, I wonder why I have never seen any man skilled enough to spin plates ever abandon this activity for celibacy. Relationship, yes, celibacy no. If it was really a matter of all women everywhere not being worth having sex with, you'd think that some of the men who game them the hardest and best would get tired and burn out.

Yet they never do. Why?

Red Pill is Just As Useless For Isolated Men As Feminism

-1 upvotes · 12 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

[citation needed]

What would be a proper trp response to this conversation with a tinder chick?

-1 upvotes · 6 September 2018 · /r/askTRP

"Ah, a kinky girl. Shall I bring some handcuffs?"

Question for Red Pillers: Should a wife disobey her husband if disobedience is in his best interest?

-1 upvotes · 2 August 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Should" is just a one-word homonym for "I want".

Since I give zero fucks about either this fatty or his presumably fat wife, I don't care what they do.

Guy Talk

-1 upvotes · 13 March 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

As for the sexy stuff, I don't want to police his attraction or get too close to the line where I tell him how to act.

Then don't.

Observation about girls and lifting

-1 upvotes · 4 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

Yes.

You can pack huge amounts of muscle onto a short frame just fine. And you will look like a fucking brick wall.

You just have to go heavily anabolic to do this. Which means giving up on having abs or being cut for a while.

The reality is that anytime you lose fat, you also lose some muscle, and anytime you gain muscle, you also gain some fat. Anabolic or catabolic states are systemic, not local. So the only thing you can do is mess with the ratios. If you try to never gain fat, you are severely inhibiting your strength gains.

That doesn't mean you can't do cut phases once you are strong, but that's not you yet. I recommend going to 15-18% body fat and just concentrating on being as strong as you can. This will not only make you stronger faster, it will make it easier to cut when the time comes, because you have more lean mass, and it will make you look better with your clothes on, which is how you actually have to attract women. (You don't get naked with them until you succeed.)

Giant chest, shoulders, and thighs first, abs later.

Man becomes homeless, article focuses entirely on the welfare of the dog he had to give up to a dogs trust thus showing that mens welfare ranks below animals

-1 upvotes · 4 January 2018 · /r/MensRights

Of course it does, you silly MRAs. It always has and it always will.

Puppies are cute. Men are not.

But what, exactly is "cute"? It's our word for a particular configuration that activates hardwired protective instincts and neurological internal rewards.

When you understand that, you understand that men are disposable, not because our society has somehow gone off the rails in a changeable, fixable fashion, but because that's how human beings are put together.

You despise feminism, but in some sort of bizarre stockholm loop, you are attempting to emulate it, trying to get a fair deal by eliminating sexism. But feminism is fundamentally different, because what it does it exploit this hardwiring, instead of acting in opposition to it. Feminism is nothing but one big sob story told by women in order to get cookies.

It isn't a philosophy, it's a tactic. And it is one which will never work for you.

You need a new game plan.

[Discussion] Why does TBP not present an alternative to TRP?

-1 upvotes · 10 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The telltale sign of a hypocrite is that he spends more energy on condemning a problem than fixing it.

If the Jesus freaks really cared about preventing the murder of unborn children, they would pass out condoms and teach sex-education classes. Because that actually prevents unwanted pregnancies.

And if you really cared about stopping TRP, you'd give these poor hapless misguided young men alternative advice that worked, before their minds were warped by my evil cult.

But then you would be left without a means of virtue signalling, or that warm feeling of moral superiority.

Fitness experts and Ripped Redpill lifters, please answer my fitness questions! I NEED HELP, I DONT WANNA BE FAT ANY MORE.

-1 upvotes · 31 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/4gkqec/goldilocks_and_the_three_metabolic_pumps_trigger/

8 Months in, still can't cope with alot of things regarding hate towards women, could really use advice on ONS, I'm just really fucking angry.

-1 upvotes · 10 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

You are mourning something that never existed.

There are no good women. There are only well-led women. The only thing that keeps women from being bitches or whores is patriarchy.

You are angry because you still expect women to be adults. They are not adults. Not one of them.

Women are children. If they fuck up, it's the babysitter's fault.

Stop respecting women, and you will stop being angry at them.

/r/theredpill is SUBREDDIT OF THE DAY!

-1 upvotes · 25 April 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Not just. It also works with immigration, which I believe is what you are thinking of.

The trick is to maintain a balance.

If you open the floodgates (as the socialists of the left wing would have us do), you lose your culture, because newcomers are surrounded by other newcomers, rather than natives, and they don't have to assimilate. Pretty soon, you are living in their country. And their country was probably a shithole... otherwise they wouldn't have left.

If you let no one in (as the fascists of the right wing would have us do), you stagnate. Cultures and societies are made strong, rich, and vibrant by the influx of foreign ideas which can be stolen and used by the locals. Without new blood, you are soon living in an echo chamber which is rapidly being surpassed by other societies.

Dick Health

-1 upvotes · 18 April 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

No, I mean fruit juice period.

Sugar in soda, juice with sugar added, HFCS in soda, natural fruit juice, it's all equal.

All equal. All bad. All poison.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dBnniua6-oM> <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ceFyF9px20Y>

Is marriage really that bad, if you get a solid pre nup?

-1 upvotes · 16 March 2016 · /r/askTRP

When you drive a car, do you wear your seatbelt?

GF is arrested for domestic abuse. BF posts her mugshot on FB. Hamstering ensues.

-1 upvotes · 12 February 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

And if you don't stick your dick in crazy, you are gay or celebrate.

Time for a brief refresher on kink

-1 upvotes · 30 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There, you vented. Now do you feel better?

40+ TRP'ers, squatting and body fat %

-1 upvotes · 2 September 2015 · /r/askTRP

If you're over forty and you're not "juicing" or on TRT, you are doing it wrong.

Are all women bisexual?

-1 upvotes · 4 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No.

But on a hell of a lot of bell curves, women show a bigger peak in the center, and less thickness out at the edges, than men do.

Net worth. Income. Education. IQ. And, yes, the Kinsey scale.

Why does it seem like virtually every transgender person is male-to-female? Is there a red/blue/purple pill take on this?

-1 upvotes · 8 December 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Well, transsexuals are pretty much viewed as a "counterfeit" member of the sex they're trying to move to. Which is actually kind of correct, in a way.

Now, if someone wants to become a "counterfeit man", this is no big deal. Because we are programmed to see men as having no inherent value, only achieved value. A fake man, therefore, is just as valuable as a real one, if he achieves value in the same way.

But a woman is seen as having inherent value... value she has just because she is a woman, without having to do anything at all. Therefore, a "fake woman" angers people... because someone is trying to "fake" their way into the privileges that all women have just for being women.

Our species gives this extra valuation to women because they can bear children... and under conditions of privation, this makes sense. A tribe that loses half its men can restore its numbers and survive by doing nothing more than ditching monogamy if they had it to begin with. A tribe that loses half its women is in trouble for many generations, and likely to not survive at all.

This is why human beings, both male and female, are programmed to give more sympathy, protection, and care to women. We are biologically programmed to make women into a privileged class, and our societal bias towards women simply reflects that biological programming.

So a man who dresses as, or tries to become, a woman, is seen as trying to usurp a privilege which does not rightly belong to him. This also holds true for men who cry or show weakness ("stop acting like a girl"), don't work to pull their weight on a team ("suck it up, ladies!"), or otherwise act in a self-preserving or self-valuing, rather than a self-sacrificing, manner.

Woman raped 14yo boy - pedophilic Guardian describes it as "starting a sexual relationship". She also brutalized children, but portrayed as victim. The crimes committed by men? Well that was "abuse" n

-1 upvotes · 5 December 2014 · /r/MensRights

But, but, the evil mans made her do it!

Hypocrisy, TBP vs TRP

-1 upvotes · 13 October 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Do you have a source that dread game wouldn't work this way?

Personal experience. Observation. Women who tried dread game on me got nexted. Women who try dread game on betas get initial compliance, followed by passive aggression.

I can't link you to any studies on this, because they're not being done. They're not being done because telling the truth about men, women, and human mating rituals is a "career-limiting move".

A woman who says "you're a puppet that I control, and I've been doing it on purpose for laughs" is socially stunted, and will spread her damage to those around her.

So is a guy that uses dread game.

No, you silly person. She literally said that. To him. That's not dread game. That's going full retard.

Hypocrisy, TBP vs TRP

-1 upvotes · 11 October 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

When did I ever say it was toxic for women to use dread game?

I might agree, but I'm wondering where you got this thesis from.

No matter what you do to support women you will always be a chauvinistic pig.

-1 upvotes · 18 September 2014 · /r/MensRights

Time for me, once again, to put on my black armor and become Downvoted Man, the hero reddit needs, but not the one reddit deserves.

Your are being treated this way precisely because you ARE so supportive.

Feminist women reserve their most savage attacks for feminist men. They don't say shit to pump-'em-and-dump-'em, selfish "misogynist" jerks like me.

Why?

Because feminism is a power grab, plain and simple, and its weapon is the whine. The plea for sympathy. Feminists are five year olds whining to daddy that "it's not faaaaaaaaaaaaaaaair", even when it is, because little girl has learned that "fair" is a magic word that sometimes makes adults give her what she wants.

Because feminism is a power grab, it benefits by wielding its weapon as much as possible. Because that weapon is a plea, it makes the most sense to wield it against the softest target. The most susceptible target.

That's you.

By being supportive, saying feminist things, respecting women (gag!), and so forth, all you have done is mark yourself out as a soft touch for the feminist con game. No matter how much you give them, it will never be enough. Give them an inch, and they'll take a mile. And your testicles.

The battle for breast cancer has many brave women on the front lines. Some lose their lives and others become permanently disfigured. Women are the true heroes in this war, but behind the front lines stands an army of men supporting these women. An army of men that have seen their share of blood and guts.

Grow the fuck up, and man the fuck up. Stop saying stupid bullshit just because it makes women nod.

Women with cancer aren't the heroes. They aren't even the soldiers. They're just the victims of misfortune.

The heroes are the ones who volunteered for this fight. That's medical researchers and surgical oncologists. They're working insane hours to actually fight the problem, and save some damn lives.

Yeah, having cancer is an ordeal, but it doesn't make you a damn hero, and any decent cancer patient with an ounce of character will agree. Heroes are people who choose hardship in order to help, not people who have it dropped on them from a great height, and have to survive, for themselves.

When you say stupid shit like this about the most disproportionally overfunded form of cancer out there, you're just telling feminists "I can be manipulated with shame and guilt". Then you'll be swimming in it.

Stick by a cancer patient if you choose. But never put her, or any woman, on a pedestal. Because a woman on a pedestal will always look down on you.

Feminism: the movement of peace and personal accountability

-1 upvotes · 9 January 2014 · /r/MensRights

That's okay, she hits like a girl.

TIL: Cesar Millan's wife (The Dog Whisperer) filed for divorce in March 2010. She ended up receiving a single payment of $400,000, monthly spousal payment of $23,000 (that's $276,000 a year), AND $120,000 a year in monthly child support. Cesar Millan then attempted suicide.

-1 upvotes · 8 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

we need more marriages in the Western world

Who's this "we"?

I don't need to get married. I don't need other people to get married. I don't need you to get married.

Do you need me to get married? Does someone else?

If so, then the need for me to get married is that person's problem, not mine, and it will remain not my problem until whoever it is figures out how to incentivize marriage for me.

And telling me "you'll save Western civilization!" cuts no ice.

Because Western civilization hasn't shown me that it's worth saving, or that it's worth it to me to save it, or even that it wants to be saved. The West is a sinking ship, whose captains have shown all too willing to throw me and my fellow members of the penis owners' club over the side if it means they get to ride a little higher in the water for a while. And now you want me to bail until I go down with the ship?

No, thanks. It's the lifeboats for me, and if I can't get one, then it's party time on the topmost deck until the inevitable end.

Because you can't save civilization by working harder and sacrificing more. That's how we got into this mess in the first place... with men doing what was good for everyone, and women doing what was good for themselves. Women's ability to take, consume, devour, and use up finally outstripped men's ability to produce, build, fix, and invent, because women, no longer satisfied with consuming the product of men's roles, began to covet the roles themselves.

They wanted into our companies so they could play career. And, like a child who was no longer content to play race car driver with her little red wagon, they demanded daddy's car to play with. And we, insanely, gave it to them. Now daddy can't drive to work, the little girl can't get a job and replace his earnings because she's just a little girl and doesn't even want to drive to work for real, and no one eats.

You think you're gonna save civilization by working harder and raising more hard workers? Nah. Feminist-enlightened women and their leftoid ideological colleagues are just gonna take everything you build, and everything your children build and make it vanish with a giant slurping sound.

And then they're gonna say "Where's the rest?"

These people are incapable of moderating themselves. They do not understand scarcity, and they are not going to sit still for you to explain it to them. They do not realize or care that government money isn't free mana from heaven, and they don't know that the economy is an engine, not a cornucopia, and they don't care about the people down in the bilges doing the bailing.

You can never produce as fast as they can consume, because they demand not only what you produce, but the means of production. They don't just want the house you built for free. They want you to give them your saw and hammer and nails so they can play carpenter. And once you give them your saw and hammer and nails, they want another house.

The only way to get rid of these people is to starve them out. To give them nothing until they either perish or learn to produce. You have to give them as little as you can of what you produce, and keep as much as you can for yourself.

What exactly is a Red Pill Woman?

-1 upvotes · 30 December 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Oh, that?

Nah, don't fret yourself about that. That's a badge of honour. Not to mention perfectly accurate. I am indeed a spinner of plates, and precisely the sort of man mothers used to warn their girls about.

Nah, the flare I was talking about was "Condescending Troll", when it should have read "BDSMer: Young, confused, and somewhat defensive."

Can anyone here explain why your partner passing out during sex would piss someone off? Also, is it ever wrong to have sex with your unconscious partner?

-1 upvotes · 3 December 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Can anyone here explain why your partner passing out during sex would piss someone off?

Because the person who passes out/falls asleep is not a very good partner. Boring, and a lousy lay.

Also, is it ever wrong to have sex with your unconscious partner?

Sure, but it isn't always wrong, either.

Adults (as opposed childish SJW idealists) acknowledge that humans are a socially complex species with nuanced communications. This means that consent can be implied as well as explicitly stated. In fact, consent is far more often implied than explicitly stated.

(Demanding that social interactions which are generally implicit be moved into the realm of the explicit is often the hallmark of a 'sperg. And no one wants to have sex with spergs unless they either are so outrageously hot that we put up with their behaviour for a while, or they have learned how to not act like a sperg.)

If someone has had sex with you, and and not followed that up with a huge fight where they threw you out, this implies consent to have sex again. And it's pretty acceptable to initiate sex with such a person if they are asleep, or drunk off their ass. If for some reason they really insist that you stop, they'll let you know, either at the time or later.

The Difference Between Dominance and Abuse

-1 upvotes · 10 October 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

The difference between discipline and battery, both when we're talking about wives/girlfriends and about children, is how it happens.

Lose your shit and start swinging? Battery.

Sit them down, explain what rule they broke, explain why it's a rule, calmly apply the prescribed punishment, and then hug them because it's over with? Discipline.

When dealing with people who are in your power, it's your responsibility to make sure they know what's expected of them, and to keep your own cool and control yourself.

Men who spank their women are doing it right. Men who express their emotions with their fists need to be stopped.

(X-POST /TIL) TIL that in Jamaica sex between men is punishable with up to ten years imprisonment. Girl-on-girl action is allowed though.

-1 upvotes · 24 June 2013 · /r/MensRights

The English also don't have this insane culture that normalises the murder, torture, and rape

Wait, what? You're saying this about the greatest mass murders in history? The nation that conquered half the globe and slaughtered their native populations? The folks who made the nazis look like amateurs? Those English?

Yes, I know I cut that sentence off halfway, and you were talking about hatred of gay men. But I just can't stomach hearing the English held up as civilized and disinclined to murder, torture, and rape, as compared to... well, anyone, really.

"I feel like you're only allowed to be vulnerable up to a small point if you want to be with a women, and that vulnerability is preferably expressed via anger." (x-post /r/OneY)

-1 upvotes · 29 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

You disappoint me very much. I thought you understood men better than this.

I think it's a perfect example of what OP is talking about.

The article addresses itself to men who are suspicious of women's motives, and devotes most of its energy not to empathizing with their concerns or validating their needs or fixing their problems, but to defending women from their critical views, shaming them for having those critical views in the first place, and then telling them that they are doing it wrong, and that the problem is, once again, them, just as they have always been told that every single problem they have is them.

There is not a single sentence in that article that validates men's concerns or empathizes with their feelings. Go on, find one. You can't. It's one big shame-fest from beginning to end, finished with a hefty serving of "now go out and be more vulnerable". Yeah, right. After you shame guys for being vulnerable "the wrong way", and for not being vulnerable at all?

Not bloody likely.

Our culture seems obsessed with offering what masquerades as "tough love" to men, but it's all toughness and the love is theoretical.

It's just another take on our culture's one-page playbook for getting what it wants out of men. Shame, shame, and shame some more. But that strategy has reached a point of diminishing returns, because we are reaching the saturation point where we no longer care about securing the good opinions of people who do not stop to acknowledge us as rational actors, or our concerns as valid.

I don't care if "Mark Manson" thinks I am not vulnerable enough. Or that, if I choose to be "vulnerable", I am doing it wrong, or with the wrong women, or whatever. I am not interested in vulnerability. I am interested in respect. I will listen to people who show me some. Otherwise, I don't care. I am not interested in "postmasculinity", because masculinity isn't obsolete, and it isn't going anywhere. Or at least it better not be, because if it does, kiss civilization goodbye.

Mark Manson wants me to trust women more. But he doesn't get what he wants, until he goes and explains to women that trust is inspired, not given or even earned. And gets them, somehow, against all odds, to listen and learn.

Trust is not a virtue. Being trusting does not make you a good person. Characterizing distrust as a personality problem is a standard con man's trick.

Which is pretty much what I think Mark Manson is.

My bitter taste of the Red Pill

-1 upvotes · 6 April 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Not that it's easy to turn a bj down...

Of course it is. Just say "no", and put your jeans on.

Now, there are plenty of guys out there who won't do that because blowjobs are a scarce thing for them. Usually, this is because they are relating to a utopian ideal of women, not women as they actually are.

8 Misconceptions of the "Alpha Male"

-1 upvotes · 15 March 2013 · /r/seduction

My name's Nick and I'm a dating coach who focuses on honesty and respect. I teach men how to be gentlemen and still get the girl. No tricks, no games, just genuine, lasting confidence. Please ask me anything!

I'm a white knight/manboob who doesn't like empirical results because they interfere with me pedestalizing an entire sex. I'm focused primarily on reinforcing my own preconceptions about what's moral, and only secondarily on results.

Here, watch me beat this strawman for a while.

The Red Pill for Women

-1 upvotes · 12 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I bristled pretty hard against the idea of not getting exclusivity with a guy while dating, but I realize that the dating market isn't what it once was a decade ago

And what it once was, was a temporary condition anyway. If you look further back, that kind of restriction on male sexual adventurousness isn't really that old. Women were expected to throw jealous rages if he was "two-timing" her, but that was on her. Society in general seems to have taken the attitude that men will be men.

Upon further reflection, I think you're right, a girl just needs to up her game and be able to recognize what she wants and what the odds are of her getting it. It's still sort of an icky thought for me though.

That's the bottle of red pills for you. They taste awful sometimes, because they cut through the pretty lies that told us the universe was nice, but they often make us happier in the long run, because when we deal with the universe as it is, we get results, and we never have sit around wondering why things didn't seem to happen "the way they were supposed to".

Plastic surgery, eww. I live in an area where that's fairly common, and I see enough botches that I'd only recommend that if there's some sort of severe problem.

Selection bias. You only see the botches, because the good jobs look natural. I live in a wealthy area of Orange county, and practically everyone past a certain age has had work done. The only reason I haven't had any is that I'm lucky enough not to need it. Well, I did have my teeth straightened. I think that counts.

And plastic surgery does not age well.

No. Why do you think movie actors and actresses age so well? Good genes?

I cannot agree that cheating doesn't matter in marriage.

Some kinds of cheating matter, some kinds don't. I'll go into this more later.

I admit I have a moral bias against it in terms of my religion

Your religion, and pretty much all religions, are nothing but a giant blue pill. Remember that a blue pill is nothing but an attempt to impose a "should" on an "is". The idea behind the notion of a red pill is not just "rejecting feminism", or "questioning gender roles", it's the decision to confront reality as described by whatever evidence we can find, rather than believe cultural myths.

The red pill is a conscious decision to choose "true" over "nice" or "socially acceptable".

This means that we must reject the myths of traditional conservatism as well as those of feminism. And one of those myths is the idea that the universe is an artefact of conscious design, that it was built by some sort of invisible super-wizard, and that this wizard cares deeply about the mating rituals of a bunch of hairless apes.

I mean, let's stop bullshitting each other. This is Santa Claus for adults.

You can't tell a woman not to be jealous of her husband, sorry, I just don't think that's possible for most women.

And yet it was very possible for women of other cultures. Were they biologically different?

If her husband goes out and gets another woman pregnant (if the other woman pokes holes in the condom, or saves the condom to impregnate herself later, or some other sinister crap, or if the condom breaks, or if the husband is just plain stupid), as a mother she's going to lose a big chunk of the resources for her family to the other woman's child, in child support and the father's time.

This is the artifact of a blue-pill society which gives women the "right to choose", and men no right to choose.

That's not even getting into the many, many cases of affair that end in divorce because the man gets so heavy into the affair fog that he "falls out of love" with his wife and starts thinking the grass is greener in the other side.

If he does this, one of two things is true.

Either:

- He had the affair because he wanted out, rather than wanting out because he had the affair.
- He is the beta-est of betas, that rare pussywhipped creature who is actually unable to have, or even want, sex with one woman while "in love with" another.

Here's another red pill (I'm going to have to start my own blog, aren't I?):

"Falling in love" lasts two years, tops. It's a chemical drip of endorphins, and it's probably evolved to make beta males stick around until the kid can walk.

"Being in love with" someone, and "loving someone" are two totally different mechanisms, and we wouldn't be stupid enough to mistake them for each if our language didn't retardedly use the same word for both. Because that's all they have in common.

A wife can reasonably expect that her husband will love her, at least in a culture like ours that doesn't have a lot of support for more businesslike pairings. The relationship will probably last better if he does.

It's nice and fun, but in no way necessary, that husband and wife "fall in love" for the first part of their relationship. That's a luxury. And in cases where it is purchased at the expense of long-term good outcomes, it is a frivolous luxury and a bad choice.

But the idea of being in love for a lifetime is the bluest of pills, dished out in shovelfuls by Meg Ryan movies and the Disney corporation.

And only betas who swallow those blue pills are going to leave their wife if they find another woman they enjoy fucking. Because fucking the woman you like the best is still beta. Alpha is fucking ALL the women you like, up to the limits of your desire, endurance, seduction skills, and time.

You see, the prize for a red-pill woman who has chosen the "wife and mother plan" (as opposed to the "career and cocktrain plan", or other plans) isn't to be the only woman he fucks. It's to be the woman he comes home to.

Tiger Woods's wife is a damn idiot. If your husband can bang models all day long and still not leave you, you are a big fucking winner in the game of life. (Nevermind the fact that Tiger beta-ed out when he got caught, let himself be the victim of domestic violence, and then stood up on TV and apologized like a little bitch. He was still doing the right thing beforehand. In fact, that marriage failed not because he cheated, which a woman can forgive if a man has game and makes her vagina tingle, but because he beta-ed out and let her dominate him afterwards. And he's still screwing up.)

Female cheating weakens the marriage bond, but male cheating, done properly, actually strengthens it. A man who can cheat is an attractive man, a man who other women want, and nothing makes a vagina tingle more than a man who makes other vaginas tingle. Bonus points for not apologizing. Bonus points for not even bothering to hide it.

Yes, the first time this happens, the woman will go through a brief hell of jealousy. And if he treats it like a big deal, that pain can last for years and destroy the relationship. But if he's smart, and shrugs it off, then it slowly starts to dawn on her that she isn't a soul mate who has been horribly betrayed.

She is chief wife to the King. The Man. The Big Dawg. The giant throbbing cock all the girls want to ride.

It's well known that women would rather have part of an alpha than all of a beta. And if she's the one he's coming home to, then she gets the biggest part.

Jealousy isn't about love, you see. It's about fear of loss.

I am Roosh. AMA!

-1 upvotes · 5 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Sounds like your take is "This is an abstract philosophical concern at best.", then.

So you want to stop men from getting raped in prison? Then RACIALLY SEGREGATE PRISONS.

-1 upvotes · 27 December 2012 · /r/MensRights

I'm not talking about what the OP said. I don't entirely buy it myself.

But you said that the prison rapes he was talking about (B) could not be caused by racial strife (A) because B can occur without A (prison rapes can occur without racial strife).

But when A implies B, that means you can't have A without B (contrapositive). Not that you can't have B without A (inverse).

This is not really open to interpretation. You made a formal logic error, in the same way that you might make a math error.

$(A \rightarrow B) \rightarrow (\neg A \rightarrow \neg B)$ is an erroneous statement in symbolic logic. It's just plain false.

This doesn't mean that it's true that $A \rightarrow B$. That has yet to be shown, if it can be. And even then, removing A might not get rid of B. So what's to be done is another issue entirely.

But you said that there exists B without A, therefore $\neg(A \rightarrow B)$. This is logically equivalent to $(A \rightarrow B) \rightarrow (\neg A \rightarrow \neg B)$, which is just plain false in the same way that $2+2=7$ is false.

To show that $\neg(A \rightarrow B)$, you would have to show that there exists A without B, not B without A.

So you want to stop men from getting raped in prison? Then RACIALLY SEGREGATE PRISONS.

-1 upvotes · 27 December 2012 · /r/MensRights

You have made a logic error. A statement implies its contrapositive, not its inverse:

"The smoke alarm is going off because the house is on fire."

"Nonsense, the house cannot possibly be on fire. If burning houses caused smoke alarms to go off, they would never go off if the house wasn't on fire."

(If A causes B, then absence of B means absence of A. Not the other way round.)

In symbolic logic, $(A \rightarrow B) \rightarrow (\neg B \rightarrow \neg A)$ but not $(A \rightarrow B) \rightarrow (\neg A \rightarrow \neg B)$.

Hey seddit guys. If a girl is so attracted to you that she immediately ends up sleeping with you, do you lose respect for her?

-1 upvotes · 15 December 2012 · /r/seduction

The question you are asking has no answer, because the word "respect" means different things to men and women.

Exhibit A in why I as a gay dude do NOT support feminists and increasingly identify with the MRM. These hateful FEMEN idiots don't give a fuck about gay rights, they're just appropriating our cause for their sick anti-male attention whoring purposes.

-1 upvotes · 20 November 2012 · /r/MensRights

Not all feminists are misandrists and idiots like this group.

I would take the people who say this more seriously if they spent less time telling this to us, and more time telling it to the "idiots like this group".

What, in your opinion, is Feminism's ultimate goal? When do you think they'll consider their job "done?"

-1 upvotes · 9 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

And you are criticizing me for being naive? Holy crap. I said "The Patriarchy", not "a patriarchy".

But, since you seem unused to thinking in depth about your assumptions (at least, this particular set), let me give you some hints to help you think about it.

- Why do people want power? What is power for?
- Who has power? Those who implement it? Those who direct it? Or those on whose behalf it is exercised?
- What does it mean for a group to have power? That those who have power belong to that group? That those who belong to that group have power? That power is exercised to benefit that group?
- What is the definition of the entity feminists call "the Patriarchy"? What features must it have in order to be defined as such? How can it be shown to exist?

What, in your opinion, is Feminism's ultimate goal? When do you think they'll consider their job "done?"

-1 upvotes · 9 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

You're absolutely right, I don't.

But it's not naivety which makes me think so, it's sophistication. One has to look beyond the simplistic "errrr, most of our leaders are male!" kind of analysis that is generally used to reach this foregone conclusion.

Let us start, then, from the definition. How would you define the words "the Patriarchy"? (That's with a capital P, the feminist term, not "a patriarchy", with a small p, the anthropological term.)

What, in your opinion, is Feminism's ultimate goal? When do you think they'll consider their job "done?"

-1 upvotes · 9 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

So, the end of something which is a fiction that never existed in the first place, and the end of something based on genetics which are immune to persuasion.

Good luck with that.

If You Call Yourself an "alpha", You're Most Likely Just an Idiot.

-1 upvotes · 3 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

Whereas the height of virtue is demonstrated by hyperbole-filled lectures on how people who aren't like you are "arrogant douchenozzles".

Ookaaay.

Can we stop accusing everyone of being a troll?

-1 upvotes · 1 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

Words don't hurt, people.

Post your email address here. Turn off your spam filters. Wait six months.

See if you still have this opinion.

"Men should be offended" (x-post from r/feminisms) I whole-heartedly agree.

-1 upvotes · 6 September 2012 · /r/MensRights

The factors that turn a normal person into a rapist are probably related to trauma, personality disorder, mental health problems etc.

A girl wearing a short skirt doesn't make a man into a rapist.

Agreed. Agreed absolutely, enthusiastically, and vigorously.

I think it's also important to distinguish between what makes a "rapist" (in the feminist definition of a male who gets a little too pushy about sex) and what makes a rapist (in the real definition of someone of either sex who uses force, fear, or blackmail to have sex with people who don't consent).

The former can simply be a case of lack of social skills, boorishness, or frustration.

The latter is seriously disturbed.

Why so much hate for r/seduction?

-1 upvotes · 1 August 2012 · /r/seduction

I am going to give you an honest, feminist response

Civil war.

Jumbo shrimp.

Military intelligence.

I want to apologize to you guys

-1 upvotes · 14 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

I'd go easy on using the term "feminist". I understand that you mean something different by it, but the majority of men here (and most everywhere else), have experienced the term "feminist" as the label used to self-identify by all the vicious bigots who hate them.

It's like calling yourself "white pride". It may not be overtly defined as "racist", but it's what the racists call themselves.

Don't Be a Dick: The False Virtues of the Classic Alpha Male

-1 upvotes · 3 July 2012 · /r/seduction

Don't be Barack Obama, either.

A thoughtful deconstruction of the movie "Bully": "Yes, the majority of bullies are straight males. But the majority of bullying victims are also straight males. This, in a nutshell, is why identity politics is not the solution to every problem."

-1 upvotes · 16 May 2012 · /r/MensRights

bullies bullied girls and boys growing up, but that girls mostly only bullied other girls

Sooo... in your universe, only boys can be bullies?

There ought to be a law against this.

-1 upvotes · 9 May 2012 · /r/MensRights

Deadmau5? Yeah, there should be. But will we target him specifically, or all crappy music?

About patriarchy

-1 upvotes · 20 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

IF patriarchy does indeed exist

IF $2 + 2 = 5$, then I am the Pope.

$2 + 2 = 5$

$2 = 5 - 2$

$2 = 3$

$2 - 1 = 3 - 1$

$1 = 2$

Construct the set that contains me and the Pope.

This set contains 2 entities.

Therefore this set contains one entity.

Therefore I am the Pope.

Anything follows from a false premise.

Nothing new, but I'm sick to death of being called a man simply because I support Men's Rights

-1 upvotes · 18 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Or cherry-picking quotes from a few spiteful retards to create a false picture of how you're a mistreated, self-loathing dupe.

Not that we've ever seen that happen. Nope.

Dear MensRights

-1 upvotes · 18 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

If you look through my posts I'm no troll

Reread carefully. I didn't say you were:

http://www.reddit.com/r/MensRights/comments/okho8/dear_mensrights/c3i0nky

Women's activists pat each other on the back for closing a fraternity -- over misconduct apparently limited to one frat brother

-1 upvotes · 20 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

This fraternity is known for its seediness.

What on earth is wrong with you? Do you have no notion of the standards of evidence?

"if men behaved like women, the courts would be idle and the prisons empty." Seriously?

-1 upvotes · 27 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

If men behaved like women, there would be no courts, no prisons, no buildings of any kind. No running water, no internal combustion engine, no steel, no electricity, no roads, no cities, no agriculture, no fire, no tools.

No civilization.

"Evil Patriarchy" oppresses women who only want to MURDER BABY BOYS!

-1 upvotes · 31 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

I don't always complain about punctuation and grammar, but when I do, it's so bad I don't know what the person is trying to say.

So I got in this argument about aether or not the father should be consulted when a women wants to have an abortion.....

-1 upvotes · 19 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

First off, abortion isn't the murder

Please read what I wrote. I said kill. Not murder.

Secondly the woman is choosing to not have some thing live and grow inside her body

Please read what I wrote. That's the first choice. The second choice is whether or not to be a parent.

In our society, a woman gets both choices. A man may not need the first, but he does need the second. And he doesn't get it.

Why do you deserve to know if the woman you're fucking is trans?

-1 upvotes · 12 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

"Would you force a gay man to explain why he likes men, the obese couple at Wal-Mart how they are attracted to each other, or a dominatrix why she requires certain things for orgasm? It's preposterous." but its perfectly reasonable to ask a trans person, after years of anxiety dealing with the fact that they don't fit into their gender role and cant identify with anyone, to disclose all of this really personal information about themselves and their gender?

Irrelevant.

No one is asking why they choose to do what they did. That's their business. What they are morally obligated to disclose to prospective sexual partners is what, not why.

The only type of consent that has any meaning is informed consent.

ok after seeing some of the comments in the Bi Polar thread its maybe time we revisit the fact that mental health is not a joke and it is something that is a MAJOR issue for Men .

-1 upvotes · 6 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

You fail at reading comprehension.

Yep, they hate the first amendment. Feminist argues for r/anarchism like rule on oppressive speech IRL. Bonus: Bill O'Rilley should be held responsible for pro-life terrorism.

-1 upvotes · 22 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

"Acceptable" is a weasel word. You're concatenating "I don't like this" with "we must punish whoever says this with the full weight and majesty of the law".

r/TransphobiaProject fights with r/feminisms. r/Mensrights emerges as the villain.

-1 upvotes · 14 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

You keep making this assertion, which you insist is a fact, but you don't back it up with anything but repeated assertion.

And yet, you offer up no proof of your own as to how trans girls are deceiving.

You: Horsies are pretty!

Me: That's a matter of opinion.

You: NO, it's fact that horsies are pretty!

Me: Well, if it's a fact, you should be able to prove it, right? To supply objective evidence that horsies are measurably, provably "pretty".

You: You can't prove they're not!

Me: ... because it's a matter of opinion. Hello? Anyone home?

r/TransphobiaProject fights with r/feminisms. r/Mensrights emerges as the villain.

-1 upvotes · 12 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

intentional deception of a serious nature, serious enough that it is likely sexual assault.

Arguably it's rape.

r/TransphobiaProject fights with r/feminisms. r/Mensrights emerges as the villain.

-1 upvotes · 11 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

It's still true that it's wrong for a transexual person not to disclose it before engaging in sexual contact. This is not "transphobia".

Sounds like you are bigoted against lying, manipulative sociopaths. How dare you!?!?

Changing the subtitle of the subreddit?

-1 upvotes · 31 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

My concern troll alarm went off until I noticed it was you.

I still disagree, though. While feminism is not the only form of misandry, it is the most powerful and dangerous one. Using a more general term feels to me like taking our eye off the ball.

Why is talking about sexual strategy much more inflammatory than practicing it in real life?

-2 upvotes · 7 July 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Spite comes from anger.

Anger comes from hate.

Hate comes from fear.

Are you willing to happily sacrifice your career in order to support your more successful wife?

-2 upvotes · 12 December 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Wait, which of my wives is the more successful one?

Any of you guys have long hair? did short hair work better for you?

-2 upvotes · 11 September 2020 · /r/askTRP

Are you retarded?

Durr... which is moar alfalpa? Long or short hair, bro? Somebody tell me what to do!

Imagine an idealized "alpha" male. Would he ask a question like this?

What is a RPW way to deal with an adulterous husband?

-2 upvotes · 24 August 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

It's still in the form of an "ought".

My take on it is, "make your wish list as detailed as you want, but be up front about it".

Looks like neither of them were. Either that or they were both so dimwitted that they actually thought they could work around this.

Some things on a wish list are negotiable. Others aren't.

Ladies, you cannot shape a man's sexual desires with negotiation. If you are not compatible with him in bed, DO NOT MARRY HIM.

Hobbies make you sexy

-2 upvotes · 25 March 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

What exactly are you basing this notion on?

Tired of trying to red pill my blue pilld Christian brothers

-2 upvotes · 19 June 2019 · /r/askTRP

I am a Christian and I believe the Bible is as red pilld as it gets.

You are a delusional fruitcake.

There are multiple blue pills. Jesus is one of them.

Slight Rule Change Regarding Red Pill Woman

-2 upvotes · 24 April 2016 · /r/MarriedRedPill

I think I can answer that.

The rationale is that the "red pill" for women is traditional conservative (tradcon) values, and that any other opinion is not only off-topic, but dangerous... dissenters are not only wrong, they are the devil, who dispenses evil advice in a seductive package, leading the sheep astray.

But most of the tradcon types weren't around when we came up with the red pill. They came later. And while we have some things in common, we were building an forum for lots of opinions, not a throne and a scepter for theirs, and theirs alone.

We are not the alt right. We are not the altar of traditional values. We are not the temple of Jesus. We are not white nationalists. We are not Trump for President. We are not pickup gurus with a special offer of $495 for a two-weekend seminar course in how to pull more hot babes. We are definitely not the "save civilization" movement.

We are a bunch of people spitballing ideas.

Slight Rule Change Regarding Red Pill Woman

-2 upvotes · 23 April 2016 · /r/MarriedRedPill

Nope. That one happened after.

The issue the old mod team had was that I have a consistent message to women that they didn't like. Goes like this:

- The old contract is broken, and women broke it. Probably not you personally, but it's still gonna blow back on you. Life isn't fair.
- This means that holding out for the traditional deal isn't going to work out for you. High-option men won't go for that.
- Sex is no longer hard to get, so you cannot extract commitment by withholding it.
- You're going to have to work your way up. This means that you have to have something else in your arsenal besides sex, and you have to assume some of the risk.

Naturally, traditional conservatives don't want to hear this sort of thing. I didn't really care when they banned me from RPW for saying it, but when they devised a scheme to ban me from askTRP, the whole mod team was furious, and told them they had to behave themselves.

They decided to take their ball and leave.

The group has suffered no visible reduction in subscribers, so we'll see where this whole thing goes.

The Warrior's Journey, or The Beta as Narcissist

-2 upvotes · 6 March 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

What an astonishing piece of lint. What a wondrous place your navel must be.

I'm totally going to see Mad Max, who's with me?

-2 upvotes · 15 May 2015 · /r/MensRights

Yeah, you sure showed them.

Tool.

The most important two videos you will ever watch.

-2 upvotes · 15 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Listen to yourselves. You're arguing about my tone.

Don't you understand yet? The whole reason we need a red pill group in the first place is that everywhere else, arguments about delivery choke off attention to the actual information. Politeness has become more important than truth.

Yes, delivery matters, but not to the point that we allow ourselves to take our eye off the ball.

I don't care if you think I'm an asshole, just so long as you learn all this stuff about metabolism, and apply it to your own life.

The next one of you assholes to post some shit about this or that movie was redpill, bluepill, whatever... gets permabanned.

-2 upvotes · 27 February 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

You don't get it.

The term "red pill" is just a metaphor for opening one's eyes. Frankly, the movie was pretty stupid. But the metaphor works. So long as people don't reify it.

Judge rules that women have right to keep father out of delivery room

-2 upvotes · 13 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

"It would create practical concerns where the father's unwelcomed presence could cause additional stress on the mother and child. Moreover, such a finding would also lead to a slippery slope where the mother's interest could be subjugated to that of the father's."

So, to be clear... the father's presence is presumed to create stress on the child. And it is unacceptable for the mother's interests to ever be subject to the father's.

Our culture has moved from bilaterallineal to matrilineal. Children are now no longer children of both their biological parents, but of the their mother alone. Even if his parents are married, a boy's father is becoming just his mother's live-in boyfriend. While it lasts.

This transformation hasn't completed yet, but that's where we are headed.

This actually doesn't hurt men who are already adults, so long as we manage to get Legal Paternal Surrender and viable male birth control tech.

But who it really hurts is boys. Boys need fathers. Just look what happened to the black community when we started subsidizing the breakup of black families.

Hostility to Submissive women. Is it acceptable?

-2 upvotes · 20 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I understand that some people can take issue to the a Dominant/Submissive relationship if there is little awareness around the subject but there were some pretty hostile comments reverting to name calling things like "sock puppet" "fragile egos" "no self respect" "poor self esteem"

You forgot "doormat" and "stepford {something}", both feminist favourites when engaging in a healthy, invigorating bout of sub-shaming.

I would just like to ask the people whom oppose it so fervently do they offer the same sort of hostility to other couples who choose to live a different lifestyle are you homophobic as well, for instance?

Don't be silly. Feminists, SJWs, cultural Marxists, and other leftoids aren't in favour of tolerance in general. They're in favour of tolerance for choices and groups they like, not for anyone they disapprove of.

This is why, to them, fat people, homosexuals, blacks, and independent or dominant women must all be shielded from any criticism...

... but fit people, heterosexuals, whites, submissive women, well-off people, etc, etc. are all fair game.

The rather threadbare argument is that the second categories are somehow "privileged" and always doing okay, but the first are weak and in need of special protection.

But the reality is that they are really a-okay with having a culture that loves some groups more than others. They just want to decide which groups.

What exactly is a Red Pill Woman?

-2 upvotes · 30 December 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

sub-humanity

Behave yourself. Tagging people with insulting flare? Calling them subhumans?

Disagree with someone or not, this is hardly the model of feminine virtue. Frankly, it's the sort of queen-bee, dogmatic, cliquish behaviour that makes me think femininity is dead in this country. I hadn't thought to find it here, but I suppose people are the same no matter where you go.

My 40YO bf has started talking about marriage. And I wanna say yes. I'm 20.

-2 upvotes · 9 December 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

You obviously like older men. That's pretty common.

Statistically speaking, marriages are most stable when there is a 10+ year male-older age gap. YMMV.

Heather Koon, Daycare worker, accused of raping infants. In cases of daycare molestation, more than 60% of children who were molested, were molested by women.

-2 upvotes · 9 October 2013 · /r/MensRights

Indeed, but that could also be because males who happen to be pedophiles have a heavy incentive to seek employment in child-care.

VICE's Kitty Pryde insists Danny Brown was raped when a fan began performing oral sex on him on stage without consent

-2 upvotes · 2 May 2013 · /r/MensRights

That's not what I think mens rea means.

Is it not "awareness of the law", it is "consciousness of guilt"... that is to say, an understanding of the nature of the act one is committing.

A woman who has sexual intercourse with whom she believes is a consenting man is not a rapist, not because she is unaware she is breaking the law, but because she is unaware she is having sex with a non-consenting person, which is the nature of the act of rape.

It's also worth noting that at least in the US, there is no requirement that laws have a mens rea element. e.g., in many states statutory rape is a strict liability crime.

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Strict_liability_%28criminal%29#United_States

Hagakure

-2 upvotes · 26 April 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Nope. He reads what the fuck he pleases.

Personally, I don't put much a stock in a book that says I should be willing to die at any moment to please my social superiors.

pro-tip: learn how to take off a bra with one hand

-2 upvotes · 23 April 2013 · /r/seduction

Feminism is a collective shit test. You just failed.

Man asks do I know you. Says No I dont. Walks away. Files police report

-2 upvotes · 26 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

Yes, taught.

Why are women so negative about the "picking up women" school of thought?

-2 upvotes · 2 October 2012 · /r/seduction

Interesting that you should use the words "confirm" and "bias" like that. Makes my job easy.

You see, incredulity is not an argument.

If I ask why an adult cannot take criticism, and you act horribly shocked and clutch your pearls and threaten to faint, that doesn't actually make the question go away.

Explain to me if you can why a "neg" (criticism, not an insult), is more acceptable than a bitch shield (a barrier composed of insults), or a shit test (the practice of deliberately making trouble for someone).

Then explain to me why negs work, if they are so horrible.

Then explain why a theoretical "she" (who never reacted negatively, because she doesn't exist) needs you to protect her from a hypothetical insult.

Police cowardice in Vancouver BC

-2 upvotes · 2 September 2012 · /r/MensRights

In America, we have constitutional rights. In Canada, your social customs may be more cooperative, and courteous, but when that fails, you're fucked.

Your best comebacks to, "Do you like me?"

-2 upvotes · 22 April 2012 · /r/seduction

"Don't know, haven't sampled you yet."

"SRS: The only subreddit with a death count."

-2 upvotes · 12 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

No, my point is that SRS doesn't come well out of it either way.

If accusing an entire group of people of horrifying wickedness based on an unverified internet post is valid, then SRS is guilty of horrifying wickedness.

If it's invalid, then SRS has no reason for existence, because that's pretty much what SRS does.

It matters a lot, from my point of view, whether this story is true or not, because I would rather read a lie than learn that one more man has killed himself.

But it doesn't matter from SRSs point of view, because they are revealed as morally bankrupt either way.

I hate how women like this are considered rape victims, but society laughs in the face of any male who tries to say that he got raped.

-2 upvotes · 1 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

You do not understand what is meant by mens rea.

You are confusing it with animus nocendi.

One of my (rather extreme-feministic) friends has been "liking" things like this, flooding my Facebook wall. Thoughts?

-2 upvotes · 8 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

How amusing it is that the government already does all those things, and she doesn't notice.

What does r/mensrights think about this? Popped up on my wall.

-2 upvotes · 7 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

Ignorance of the law is no excuse.

That's not what mens rea means.

It is the intent to commit a particular criminal act, not the knowledge that this act is against the law. Intent is an element of the crime, and prosecutors must show evidence of intent in order to make a case.

If I purchased goods which I know to be stolen, then I formed to intent to purchase stolen goods, whether I knew it was illegal or not. If I purchased goods which were stolen, but I didn't know it, then I never formed the intent to purchase stolen goods.

IAmA feminist who has been financially supporting her husband and his family since he has decided to change careers. AMA.

-2 upvotes · 7 February 2012 · /r/MensRights misconceptions floating around in this subreddit about feminism and women in general.

Code Black

If I can provide a ray of hope about women to at least one of you guys, that would be awesome.

Code Maroon

Some of the responses though were regrettably, set in their views and unwilling to even respond in an entirely civil manner.

Code Red

Here's an example of how and why many people believe that rape is everywhere... because their definition of rape includes every sexual misadventure.

-2 upvotes · 25 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

Unfortunately for her, the process of becoming an adult does involve weathering some criticism when one says foolish things, and learning from that criticism.

It would be mean-spirited to pick on her as a bigot, because she is merely ignorant and naive. But it's important for us to understand what we are up against... some small part of it is man-hatred, but vastly more is simple ignorance.

Very sexually experienced woman, willing to answer ANY questions you have.

-2 upvotes · 18 January 2012 · /r/seduction

How much experience do have seducing women as a man?

None? It is "none", right?

Given that this is the case, I am honestly quite confused as to what on-topic advice you can offer.

Feminism's Harm to Innocent Regular Women.

-2 upvotes · 16 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

Interesting. But I find this one strange:

Feminists have oversexualized society much to the dismay of modest women.

In my experience, most feminist thinkers display a restrictive, puritanical, anti-sexual attitude.

Why is /r/Anarchism so feminist oriented?

-2 upvotes · 12 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

http://www.reddit.com/r/Anarchism/comments/draxt/%0Aformalized_modding_process_for_ranarchism/

http://www.reddit.com/r/Anarchism/comments/draxt/formalized_modding_process_for_ranarchism/c12dv01

Bwahahaahaahahah!

What is it about happy couples on social media that trigger some in the manosphere?

-3 upvotes · 10 September 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So what's going on here?

You're posting nonsense, that's what's going on.

When a handful of us founded TRP about nine years ago, people didn't like it. TBP was founded to criticize and disagree with us. We also got death threats.

But we didn't pretend TBP was the source of those threats because we are not a bunch of disingenuous liars who pretend that everyone who dislikes us is the same person.

How not to be fat.

-3 upvotes · 12 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Have you been tested for Type 1 diabetes?

Type 1 diabetes is underproduction of insulin, often due to the immune system destroying the beta cells in the pancreas which produce it. This is genetic and can onset at any time. Your physician should be able to detect it with blood tests.

T1D leads to unavoidable fat loss because, no matter how much you eat, you cannot produce insulin to stimulate uptake of glucose in adipose cells. T1D is typically treated with administration of insulin by injection, although there may be some recent breakthroughs I am unaware of.

If you have an intact ability to produce insulin, then something you might try is eating in such a way as to stimulate prolonged high insulin levels. This would be the reverse of some of the advice I give above.

I would still avoid table sugar/high fructose corn syrup/fruit juice/soda, and so on. All of these contain a five-membered carbon ring sugar called fructose which is horrible for you in ways it would take pages to explain. Yes, you'd gain weight... but at a cost of doing various horrible things to your liver. Not a good trade.

Instead, what you would want is high carbohydrate foods, eaten every few hours. Avoid grocery store bread, it's full of sugar. White rice or pasta, perhaps. The idea is to bump insulin levels up and keep them high. Then you will start storing what you eat. Starches both give you something to store as fat, and the insulin to make you store it.

Bear in mind that if you have T1D this will not work. If your body is unable to produce insulin properly, you will need medical help.

That's one of the reasons we know that the "calories in, calories out" people are wrong. Because if they weren't, type 1 diabetics could gain weight just by eating enough. They can't. If fat storage biochemistry doesn't work for you, you can't gain fat no matter how much you eat.

Get tested.

How to choose a wife according to the Red Pill?

-3 upvotes · 9 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I was unaware that sperm don't work without a church ceremony and contract with the government.

Girlfriend weight gain problem

-3 upvotes · 21 November 2017 · /r/askTRP

Sperg-like typing detected.

Would appreciate help trying to reconcile my bias towards female sluts opposed to male sluts

-3 upvotes · 12 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

Men aren't sluts, ever.

A key that opens many locks is a master key. A lock that is opened by many keys is a crappy lock.

Are steroids worth it?

-3 upvotes · 1 February 2016 · /r/askTRP

I don't think I need steroids yet.

So, let me this straight.

You haven't ever used steroids, and you're going to tell people all about the pros and cons?

Go home.

You aren't for real.

Shy girl has multitude of orbiters

-3 upvotes · 27 December 2015 · /r/askTRP

Women with orbiters should never be promoted above "plate".

Why does PPD believe that most TRP 'field reports' are exaggerated/fake?

-3 upvotes · 22 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Now they are saying you are the only one.

If I posted pics, they would say that you and I were the only ones.

If 5000 of us posted pics, they would say the other 130K were obviously shrimpy losers.

This is because they console themselves for sucking at life by telling themselves everyone else must suck, too.

Why should a high-value man ever enter a LTR?

-3 upvotes · 2 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This is a very strange piece of thinking.

You speak of "things women have to offer" as if they should be counted, rather than named.

You speak as if it is his responsibility to find something he likes about women, so he can have relationships with them, rather than women's responsibility to offer something he likes, if they want a relationship with him.

He does not owe women relationships. It is not his responsibility to mold his desires to suit their offerings.

Which brings us to the real point. He needs to ask what he wants, not what women have to offer. Once he figures out what he wants, it's up to women to offer those things or not.

Need to vent. Work with two women on a 3 person staff.

-3 upvotes · 27 February 2015 · /r/MensRights

Let's see what you have done with your life:

I have a growing family outside of work. one on the way

- You got married. Strike one.
- You got a woman pregnant. Strike two.

and a soon-to-be 5 year old step son.

- You married a single mother. Strike three.

I work in a field dominated by social justice, feminists and other ideologies

- You surround yourself with leftoids. Strike four.

I want to work in this field because it's the only one that gives me access to the young men and women that I want to help in life.

- You make life decisions with the benefit of others, rather than yourself, in mind. Strike five.

I never gain merit with the leader of the small staff [a woman]

- You work for a woman. Strike six.
- You try to get ahead by pleasing the leader instead of acquiring leverage and value. Strike seven.

You are an idiot, and there is no useful advice I can give you. If you had jumped off a cliff ten seconds ago, I also wouldn't have any useful advice for you as you fell past me. There's a certain point at which the only thing I can say is "you shouldn't have done that".

Baboons mate with the "nice guy" who befriends them over the alpha baboon.

-3 upvotes · 21 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Except that the question "what animal are we like" is very simply answered. Chimps, a lot. Bonobos, less so, but still a lot. Monkeys, not so much. Fish, birds, and spiders not at all.

This very cute series of photographs was picked to illustrate diversity in mating habits in the animal kingdom. Thus, the most diverse species were picked.

It's cute, and interesting, but when advanced in a discussion of human sexuality, it's the biological version of the Chewbacca Defense.

So, the BPers have spoken, so I'll ask the opposite question - RPer, how was your sex life with people who were non-RP and how did it differ from your RP partners?

-3 upvotes · 10 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Call it what you wish, but debating over whether it's a lifestyle or not is useless semantics.

When you deal with a nuanced subject like human sexuality, nuance is important.

I'm trying to make a clear distinction between "The Red Pill", which is information, and contains no "shoulds", and the advice that TRPers typically give each other, which is a bunch of "shoulds" based on that information. The distinction is important, because people can opt out of the second, but not the first.

Men are called "beta" (although that's strictly inaccurate, beta is a trait of particular actions, not people), are people who don't follow that advice, and usually do the opposite.

So, given those distinctions, what exactly would you like to ask me?

Feminism is the butt of an ironic joke it has played on itself. Thanks to liberation, smart women don't have kids and because of this future generations of women will get progressively dumber and less capable as natural selection pushes for greater sexual dimorphism in intelligence.

-3 upvotes · 8 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Also braver, more assertive men are declining to have children.

I am Roosh. AMA!

-3 upvotes · 4 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

What would you say to/about the contention that game is pussy-centric and thus bluepill, because it measures success and even manhood by the behaviour/approval of women?

Announcing FeMRA, the /r/ainbow of /r/ladymra. Moderated (lightly) by our resident video FeMRAs, GirlWritesWhat and TyphonBlue

-3 upvotes · 27 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

whenever I see fem males irl or online they just seem so submissive, I'd hate for mras to have their own equivalent

I think you may not realize you're white-knighting here.

First of all, who are you to tell women they can't be submissive if they wanna?

Second of all, if they are being more submissive than they wanna, it's their own responsibility to just fucking stop.

We don't get to decide exactly how submissive women should or shouldn't be, and calibrate how behaviour to promote that. It is up to each individual woman to decide how submissively she wants to act, and to deal with the consequences of that.

Commentary on "Why do they hate us" article about Arab men hating Arab women. Thoughts?

-3 upvotes · 26 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

I don't agree with the quote, because there is no patriarchy. Not here, and not in Saudi Arabia. Feminism is a toxic ideology, and it's not good to have it here, in Saudi Arabia, or anywhere.

What Saudi Arabia needs is a great deal of women's rights activism (this is a different thing from feminism).

Provocative Female Attire is an Assault Against Men

-3 upvotes · 1 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

Cat calls and random advances, however, are another matter, and should be done tactfully if at all.

Oh, hell no.

Look, if a woman is allowed to dress however she wants, because it's her body, then a man is allowed to say whatever he wants because they're his vocal chords.

Or, if men should be considerate about how what they say affects others, then women should be considerate about how the way they dress affects others.

I'm okay with either option, but pick one and stick to it.

A Comment from TwoXChromosomes: "The wage gap is a myth....We don't need feminism anymore."

-3 upvotes · 5 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

"Sex" is two people fucking. "Gender" is which set of chromosomes you were born with.

How not to be fat.

-4 upvotes · 12 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

You keep alluding to the existence of scientific evidence to back up your claims. The word "evidence", however, means "that which is seen". And you haven't shown us any. Do so now.

Provide either an explanation, on a biochemical level, of why chronically elevated insulin levels do not increase adiposity, or a link to a citation showing they don't.

Let me provide an example of these, regarding my claim that pentose sugars, such as fructose, are toxic.

Here is a citation of Dr. Robert Lustig explaining how fructose is toxic:

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=jpNU72dny2s>. Robert H. Lustig, M.D., M.S.L. is Professor emeritus of Pediatrics, Division of Endocrinology at the University of California, San Francisco (UCSF). He specialises in the field of neuroendocrinology, with an emphasis on the regulation of energy balance by the central nervous system.

Here is me providing an explanation of how fructose is toxic, by breaking down the exact mechanism whereby it causes hepatic dyslipidemia:

Fructose/sucrose and alcohol. These really fall under the category of "rebuilt food", but they are so bad that I wish to call them out separately. These not only turn directly into fat

Okay, so let's add more detail.

There is a chain of events that starts with you drinking a soda, and ends with up with those same actual carbon atoms that are in the fructose almost entirely residing in new fat cells in your liver, specifically.

The first thing that happens is that sucrase cuts the glucose-fructose bond in a microsecond, leaving you with one glucose and one fructose. This happens in the small intestine before it even hits your blood.

This is why Coke keeps saying that HFCS and "sugar" are the same thing. It's true. They are pretty much equal. Equally bad. Equally deadly. Equally poison.

The next thing that happens is that a very small amount of that fructose is phosphorylated via ketohexokinase in the boundary cells of the small intestine, to yield fructose-1-phosphate.

<https://pubmed.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/29414685/>

(We're going to skip over the rest of the fructolysis pathway here, because we're going to talk about it later, in the liver.)

This is what happens when you eat vegetables and certain fruits... and it's how your body is evolved to deal with natural fructose. Although I suspect (but do not know and cannot prove) that modern strains of some fruits may be so fructose-heavy that they overwhelm this mechanism, and pass a lot of fructose into the bloodstream.

... Which is just what happens when you eat sugar or drink soda, fruit juice, etc.

At which point it gets picked up by the liver, which is the only other organ in the body capable of significant fructolysis. So now we get to look at the whole pathway.

I'm going to copy and paste this directly from the Wikipedia article you should have read:

The first step in the metabolism of fructose is the phosphorylation of fructose to fructose 1-phosphate by fructokinase ($K_m = 0.5 \text{ mM}$, $\approx 9 \text{ mg/100 ml}$), thus trapping fructose for metabolism in the liver. Hexokinase IV (Glucokinase), also occurs in the liver and would be capable of phosphorylating fructose to fructose 6-phosphate (an intermediate in the gluconeogenic pathway); however, it has a relatively high K_m (12 mM) for fructose and, therefore, essentially all of the fructose is converted to fructose-1-phosphate in the human liver.

Fructose-1-phosphate then undergoes hydrolysis by fructose-1-phosphate aldolase (aldolase B) to form dihydroxyacetone phosphate (DHAP) and glyceraldehyde; DHAP can either be isomerized to glyceraldehyde 3-phosphate by triosephosphate isomerase or undergo reduction to glycerol 3-phosphate by glycerol 3-phosphate dehydrogenase. The glyceraldehyde produced may also be converted to glyceraldehyde 3-phosphate by glyceraldehyde kinase or converted to glycerol 3-phosphate by glyceraldehyde 3-phosphate dehydrogenase. The metabolism of fructose at this point yields intermediates in gluconeogenic pathway leading to glycogen synthesis, or can be oxidized to pyruvate and reduced to lactate, or be decarboxylated to acetyl CoA in the mitochondria and directed toward the synthesis of free fatty acid, resulting finally in TG synthesis.

If all of that looks like gibberish to you, that's okay, all that means is that you didn't suffer through Biochem 110A, B, and C like I did. And even now I have to read it twice, because it's been years.

What important to know is that there are two things your liver can do with fructose. Both of them have the same first step, which is conversion of fructose-1-phosphate to dihydroxyacetone phosphate and glyceraldehyde-3-phosphate, in equilibrium.

https://upload.wikimedia.org/wikipedia/commons/e/eb/Fructose_to_trioses.jpg

From there, the pathway bifurcates. One path is glycogenesis, and this is, in fact, the preferred pathway:

Increased concentrations of DHAP and glyceraldehyde-3-phosphate in the liver drive the gluconeogenic pathway toward glucose-6-phosphate, glucose-1-phosphate and glycogen formation. It appears that fructose is a better substrate for glycogen synthesis than glucose and that glycogen replenishment takes precedence over triglyceride formation.

That's why Gatorade actually did what it was supposed to do. It repletes the glycogen in the liver a lot faster than glucose, which is why sugary drinks are actually good for athletic performance... but, as we will see in a moment, they are still very, very bad for the athletes, who are at significant risk for non-alcoholic fatty liver disease, type 2 diabetes, and/or metabolic syndrome later in life.

Ask me how I know.

The problem pathway is the second one, which is not preferred over glycogenesis, but becomes so when glycogen is depleted. It's made up of two subpaths, one from DHAP, one from GA-3-P, which both wind up in triglycerides and de novo lipogenesis.

GA-3-P is converted to pyruvate (I'm summarizing here because I'm bored of typing, and bored of stopping every thirty seconds to look stuff up because I don't remember how to spell all these names), then into the whole Krebs cycle thing, which I am not going to fucking explain:

https://upload.wikimedia.org/wikipedia/commons/0/0b/Citric_acid_cycle_with_aconitate_2.svg.

... at which point a metric fuckton of citrate boards the citrate shuttle. (Now leaving: mitochondria. Next stop: hepatic cytoplasm.) Hence acetyl coenzyme A, hence fatty acid synthesis.

Mercifully, the second subpath is easier to summarize. DHAP to glycerol-3-phosphate by reduction via glycerol-3-phosphate dehydrogenase, and there's your fatty acid right there.

So fatty acids from both these sources are esterized into triglycerides, and we're done. (Thank fuck, because I'm having flashbacks.)

So there you have it. New fat. In your liver. That's bad. It gives you metabolic syndrome. It gives you type 2 diabetes. It kills you.

It gives us all sky-prices on insulin, and commie idiots demanding socialized medicine because they don't understand the meaning of the word "shortage".

And why? Because you stupid fuckers (Note: this was originally written for TRP) keep drinking HFCS and thinking it's okay because you work out real hard and aren't visibly fat. The fat you can see is subcutaneous fat. It's bad for your sex life, but not for your health. It's fine. Irony of ironies, some people actually are "healthy at any size", while others are totally jacked, but have fatty livers and are gonna get very sick and die.

What the UN is distributing in Africa.

-4 upvotes · 25 March 2020 · /r/MensRights

I would expect no less from a bunch of communists.

How to NOT argue with feminists.

-4 upvotes · 11 February 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

.

The Consequences of Pornography

-4 upvotes · 13 December 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Society “wants to believe” porn is harmless, casual sex is empowering, marriage and moral standards are oppressive, that the highest aim is epicurean hedonism.

Irrelevant. TRP is not reactionary. Just because "society" is for something doesn't mean it's harmful. Evidence is required.

I have heard countless stories about men and women who cannot have healthy sex if they watch too much porn, including but not limited to inability to orgasm

That's not how TRP works. We set up our how-to-pick-up-women discussions around a model like this:

- Reason about women based on what we've seen.
- Come up with a guess about what appeals to women.
- Come up with something we might try based on this.
- Go out and try it.
- If it works, tell someone else.
- They go out and try it.
- If it works, they tell someone else.

Sound familiar? It's the scientific method. We don't just sit around reasoning and collecting stories. We try stuff.

Why does it matter that many other women still can't orgasm despite not having a porn addiction? That doesn't negate at all her claim that porn made her life worse and that she is grateful for escaping her addiction.

You didn't read carefully:

Yep. I can't even orgasm with a man, and I suspect it's partly due to me watching porn everyday since the age of 12.

That's not "I cured my inability to orgasm by quitting porn". That's "I am unable to orgasm from sex, and I watched porn, I've come up with a story that the two are connected".

In my experience, inhibited female orgasm has never been porn-related. In fact, the causality has often run the other way... women turn to porn because they are sexually frustrated.

What do I mean by "in my experience"? Well, I mean that I have cured an inability to orgasm in quite a few women. Here's what I observed:

- Inability to orgasm is more common in sexually inexperienced women than sexually experienced women.
- The most common co-occurrence is an undiscovered fetish... usually BDSM-style submissiveness. In these cases, changing sex to incorporate that fetish invariably works.
- Anxiety is almost universally a problem. Reducing the anxiety helps a great deal.
- Worrying about not reaching orgasm, and trying to reach orgasm with a partner, instead of just enjoying the act, contributes greatly to that anxiety.
- A male partner who can "get inside her head" is the absolute best thing a woman can get to help her with this problem.

Shutting down sex while vetting

-4 upvotes · 31 July 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

If you can reject his sexual advances, you're not that into him.

Move on and look for a man who makes you go weak at the knees.

Should you ever admit you're a virgin?

-4 upvotes · 5 December 2015 · /r/askTRP

Yeah, the law is a set of general rules. As such, it will always be imperfect.

In this case, it would punish someone who did not deserve to be punished. She made an impulsive choice, indeed a reckless one, but she certainly didn't harm me. Was my idea in the first place.

That's why I was very careful to keep it quiet. I didn't want her to be punished for giving me what I wanted and making me feel good. And, more to the point, I didn't want what we were doing to stop.

I know this is strange to you. You've been taught that X is good and Y is bad. But life is one big grey area. There's never going to be a set of rules that frees us from the responsibility to make judgment calls.

Should you ever admit you're a virgin?

-4 upvotes · 5 December 2015 · /r/askTRP

I've seen advice in the default subs where women say a lot of them are attracted to the idea of being a man's first.

- Never listen to what women say. Watch what they do.
- Never tell a woman something just because it's true. Tell her things because they will benefit you in some way.

The first woman I had sex with knew damn well it was my first time. That probably had something to do with the fact that I was nine years old.

But, in general, women prefer experienced men.

If you don't sleep, you might as well not lift.

-4 upvotes · 1 November 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

None of this is applicable if you're on hormones/HGH/etc.

Yes, it is. It's the same except with heavier weights.

This was just featured on iFunny, with 147,000 likes

-4 upvotes · 2 July 2015 · /r/MensRights

This is a false equivalence. Steroids, used properly, are not inherently damaging to health, and can be quite the reverse.

Is redpill behavior judged differently when a woman does it?

-4 upvotes · 17 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Is wearing a dress judged differently when a man does it?

A woman aping alpha male behaviour is a caricature.

Western idiot is blinded by her hypergamy/western ideals and pays the price.

-4 upvotes · 23 September 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

You do see the issue here, right?

"Stop saying Alabama is full of violent rednecks, or I'll curbstomp your Yankee ass."

I live in San Francisco, and, you know what? We're not all gay. But if I said to another dude, "Stop saying we're gay, or I'll rape you." ... well, that wouldn't exactly help matters, would it?

VICE's Kitty Pryde insists Danny Brown was raped when a fan began performing oral sex on him on stage without consent

-4 upvotes · 2 May 2013 · /r/MensRights

No.

Rape requires mens rea, a consciousness of guilt. Even if he didn't want to (and I think he did), he would have to have given some visible sign that he didn't want to, so that she would know that (and he didn't).

Is this hopelessly trashy on her part? Yes. Sure blow him in his dressing room, but on stage? No class at all. Is this actually backhandedly beta on his part? Yes. Shoulda said bitch, I'm doin' a show now. That's more important than your ass. See you backstage afterwards.

But rape? No.

Look out! It's a Nice Guy! DESTROY HIM!

-4 upvotes · 29 November 2012 · /r/MensRights

While the hostility she's pointing out here is ludicrous, it is indeed true that Nice Guys(tm) are not actually nice.

Not because they want something. Not because they won't settle for friendship instead. That is perfectly acceptable.

Not because they feel entitled to something, because they don't. They are working hard for it, not just expecting it.

But because they are not honest about what they want. They are almost, but not quite as bad as the women who take advantage of them.

However, the hostility women feel for Nice Guys(tm) has nothing to do with their dishonesty or their "entitlement"... it's because they are unattractive.

Don't Be a Dick: The False Virtues of the Classic Alpha Male

-4 upvotes · 3 July 2012 · /r/seduction

I didn't want to be that guy that brings politics into every subreddit.

But my concern is that Obama, while he is charismatic and influential in his own life, is a beta male appeaser in the ways he sets up his policies toward women. Go read his Father's Day speech, for example.

To /r/feminism: here's what's wrong with reddit

-4 upvotes · 29 June 2012 · /r/MensRights

Your logical fallacy is: Tu Quoque

Why do you think the seduction community has gotten such a bad reputation recently?

-4 upvotes · 17 May 2012 · /r/seduction

jibes from feminist writers, the mainstream press, and even xkcd.

There's your answer right there.

Feminists, feminists, and more feminists. And they don't like men having power over sex. The reason the seduction community is getting more flak is not because it's doing anything differently, but because it is gaining popularity.

First they ignore you, then laugh at you and hate you, then they fight you, then you win.

"Guys never feel like having a conversation until they are in one"

-4 upvotes · 7 April 2012 · /r/seduction

Nothing like absorbing misandrist attitudes to motivate you... not!

How about this: Guys like to talk about stuff that interests them, when and how they feel like it. Just like women.

Be genuine, have conversations you like. Enjoy what you're doing. And don't tell yourself that maleness is somehow a defect.

TIL: Southern Poverty Law Center thinks R/mensrights is a burgeoning hate group.

-4 upvotes · 9 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

No, the MRM's biggest obstacle is the misandry outside it. What misogyny exists within it is just an excuse for these people. When they can't find some, they find something they can construe as some. When they can't do that, they'll find some other excuse.

Hey seddit, I am an AFC single mom magnet. Anyone else gone through the same?

-4 upvotes · 29 February 2012 · /r/seduction

Yes, they are. But my point is that they're not being settled for, but sought out.

Single mothers will often reject more attractive alphas, because they know all they can hope to get from them is sex.

As a general rule, single mothers are undateable under any circumstances. Don't even sex them.

Lost my job, still have to pay child support even though my ex is getting a $15k boob-job, makes 60k a year and still lives at home and I'm a full-time student.

-4 upvotes · 26 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Copy pasta for posterity:

Just bullshit. I lost my job because I had to choose between school and work. Work changed my schedule to conflict with school, I chose school. So, while I'm in school, trying to better myself for my daughters and to show them what a real person looks like, I gotta deal with this shit. I did the math since I started paying child support, it comes out to about the cost of the boob-job. Sure is nice to know that my money is going to a good cause.

Fuck this system, it's bullshit. My advice, be smart, don't have kids, no matter what, get a damn vasectomy and don't tell her, that way if she does get pregnant, you'll know she cheated and can bounce out of the relationship. We were married, thought we would be together for ever, but no and now I'm an indentured servant till they are 18 and if I don't pay, even if I have a good reason, it doesn't matter, I still gotta pay even when she uses the money for this shit. Just pissed guys, had to vent. I gotta go work out before I slam my head against the wall.

EDIT: It was a part-time job, half of my income came from that and the other half from student loans. Either one I chose, I'm financially fucked. I choose school because in the long run, it will pay off better once I get that damn degree.

RP mentions the "epidemic of suicide" among veterans: "When I see these young men coming back my heart weeps for them."

-4 upvotes · 9 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

Are you seriously trying to condemn Ron Paul for memorizing the US Constitution?

Would this be the same Ron Paul who thinks the US Constitution is "replete with references to God"?

Nice job of memorization, there.

So I got in this argument about aether or not the father should be consulted when a women wants to have an abortion.....

-4 upvotes · 19 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

The "choice" to have an abortion isn't a choice. It's two choices.

The first is the choice of whether or not to carry a child to term.

The second is the choice of whether or not to be a parent.

I don't think any of us have a problem with women making the first choice for themselves. We have a problem with women making the second choice for us. But we live in a culture where a woman is allowed to legally kill a child, but a man cannot legally even disown one.

r/TransphobiaProject fights with r/feminisms. r/Mensrights emerges as the villain.

-4 upvotes · 12 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

There is no lie involved when a trans girl presents as a girl.

That's your sociopolitical opinion. Others have a different view.

Who are you to say that a trans girl's gender is invalid?

Who are you to tell other people how to define gender?

There are people out there who don't agree that a trans girl is a girl. And it's certainly their business to decide who they want to have sex with.

If we insist that sex be consensual (and even those of us who are MRAs and don't like rape hysteria do in fact insist such a thing), then that consent must be informed consent.

Hiding critical facts because you know that revealing them will change things is manipulative lying. Engaging in manipulative lying to a sexual partner betrays a lack of empathy characteristic of a sociopath.

Hence, lying, manipulative sociopath.

Female teacher charged in "affair" with 15-year-old; Not rape or molestation, but an affair.

-4 upvotes · 7 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

He's 15. He can't consent. A teacher has a lot of power over a student that can be exploited to threaten the child into doing what the teacher wants.

Hold on. Swap the genders and that sounds like feminist rhetoric.

Someone who's 15 "can't consent"? How would 15 year olds ever have sex, then? Is it all rape? Who came along and decided what consent is, and that someone can want something urgently, but be too young to "really mean it"?

Someone who has power not just can, but must be, exploiting anyone who doesn't? Sounds like feminism again.

Consent and exploitation are situational. The men's rights issue here is that the same judgment be applied to these situations whether the 15 year old (or the 35 year old) is male or female, not that women be treated in the same draconian fashion that men are.

How not to be fat.

-5 upvotes · 12 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

There aren't really any good meds for insulin resistance that I am aware of. Rapamycin maaaaaaaaaaaaaybe, but the jury is still way out on that one.

The standard ones (metformin, etc) kinda suck.

I am "fat" in my mind. 163cm and a US2 / UK6 aka XS. I eat everything I want and don't exercise much. I oscillate from feeling extremely guilty about my lifestyle and indifferent and the former is where my ED lies. I used to be a size smaller and move up and down between a US 0 and US 2.

That doesn't sound terribly "fat" to me, but you may have metabolic syndrome, which you have probably heard already if your physician is giving you drugs for insulin resistance.

There are really only two things that we know are good for increasing insulin sensitivity: fasting, and increased muscle mass.

I've been advocating fasting above, for fat people, but I'm not so sure it's a good idea in your case. That's because you are telling me you are "fat" when you're 5'3 and wear a size 2. Maybe I'm not getting the whole picture here, but it seems possible that you are anorexic. If so, telling you to fast would be a terrible idea.

Do you know what your bodyfat percentage is? It shouldn't be below 15%, and if it's around 20%, that's probably ideal. If your percentages look like that, and you still feel "fat", then you're probably chasing goals that aren't healthy for you.

If, on the other hand, you're at 25% or 30%, some fat loss wouldn't do you any harm.

What is the Red Pill consensus on friendships/hiring lesbians.

-5 upvotes · 12 October 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Why would you hire any woman, let alone a lesbian?

It carries additional risks with no additional rewards. Unless being appealing to men is part of the job (waitress, model, whore, sales), then hire a man instead (but never articulate this reasoning aloud to anyone).

It doesn't matter if there are good ones out there. Who wants to take risks looking for them? If you have to draw randomly from a bucket, then draw from the one with the best odds of a quality pick.

To marry or not to marry? An ancient perspective

-5 upvotes · 13 July 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

I am a classicist by training, PhD the whole nine yards.

Too bad you didn't do something useful with your life.

While it seems easy to dismiss teachings from antiquity as irrelevant for our modern age

What seems easy is sounding erudite by repeating the obscure thoughts of ancient people, instead of having some of your own.

I think it is far better

... because that is good for me personally...

to consider these ideas that have survived for thousands of years

...because people like me have studied them, and yet somehow persuaded the rest of the human race to keep feeding us.

below I include a few lines from Hesiod's Theogony

Yawn.

In one sentence, what has been your biggest takeaway from being exposed to the red pill?

-5 upvotes · 10 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Ah, you again.

I must admit you were specially frustrating. I wanted to give you helpful advice, but the realities I had to tell you about, you saw as unpleasant, and interpreted me (and others) telling you about them as mean.

I honestly don't know if the red pill can be made palatable to more sensitive people. When someone's had too much sugar, everything that isn't sweetened is going to taste bad to them. But you can't eat sugar forever, because it makes you sick. And fat.

It's really easy, when we get bad news, to try to blame the messenger. It helps avoid having to deal with the unpleasantness... we can just dismiss the source as mean, and therefore not worth listening to.

But do we really want to be isolated from anyone who might ever bring us bad news?

At what point do you pay for the girl? (meal, coffee, etc)

-5 upvotes · 6 December 2012 · /r/seduction

Never.

Unless there's an agreement to take turns.

Look out! It's a Nice Guy! DESTROY HIM!

-5 upvotes · 30 November 2012 · /r/MensRights

I can say that despite being a straight male

That's why you say that.

If you were a woman, or understood how they feel attraction, you'd know that what they find attractive in men is mostly behaviour, and being too "nice", too forthcoming, is extremely unattractive to them.

It bespeaks a lack of confidence and assertiveness that they simply cannot abide in a man.

Do you think the old phrase "a man should never hit a woman" has any truth?

-5 upvotes · 7 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

However, the vibe I get from reddit sometimes

Hello, Mr. Concern Troll. Tell SRS we said hi.

Then please die in a fire. Preferably one of your own making.

Here's an example of how and why many people believe that rape is everywhere... because their definition of rape includes every sexual misadventure.

-5 upvotes · 26 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

"Holy shit" is not an compelling argument. It's not an argument at all.

Anyone can be aghast at anything. But rape isn't "sex when you don't want to", it's "sex when you don't consent".

And if you can't tell the difference between desire and consent, then you're not ready to have this conversation.

That Guy You Slept With

-5 upvotes · 10 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

Somehow this whole article comes off as a beta male who's annoyed at Johnson-rides because he hasn't been giving any.

I'd agree with this a lot more if there were less "don't have sex so much" and more "take responsibility for what you choose to do with your bits".

Cyanide & Happiness takes on sexism against men

-6 upvotes · 11 September 2013 · /r/MensRights

It's how most relationships work. Stereotypes exist for a reason.

That's why cartoons like this being posted to /r/MensRights puzzles me. We pretty much all agree that feminism is a failed philosophy. So why imitate it? Why double down on seeking to wipe out the differences between the sexes when it's obvious we can't?

Obviously men should do the couch-moving. Any suggestion that lifting whatever heavy things need to be lifted is not a task for the men... well, that's simply absurd.

Now, men are not a free couch-moving service any more than women are a free dick-sucking service, and any woman who tells me I should move her couch for her just because it's my job as a man, is indeed going to get sarcastically told that she should suck my dick for me just because it's her job as a woman.

But that doesn't change the fact that it's men who do the couch-moving and women who do the dick-sucking, and trying to condemn that as wrong is just silly.

I'm ok with you being a slut

-6 upvotes · 6 May 2013 · /r/MensRights

I am not attracted to promiscuous men.

I don't like to personally call you a liar because I don't know that you are.

But I feel obligated to point out that I, a promiscuous man, have had many, many women tell me this, who later turned out to be absolutely wrong about that.

There is a difference between thinking about the abstract idea of promiscuous men, and asking oneself whether such a man is attractive, and being confronted with an actual, concrete man with wit and charm, whom all the women in the room desire, and he's focusing on you.

Men like me may not be very safe to have sex with (although more from an emotional standpoint than a hygienic one the way you imply), but the majority of women seem to find us tremendously exciting.

Any realistic discussion of sexual politics is going to have to take this into account.

/b/ on feminism [Ex-post from /r/4chan]

-6 upvotes · 28 November 2012 · /r/MensRights

We disapprove of concern trolling.

I am not interesting in watering down our principles to gain the respect of people who are just going to call us rape supporters anyway.

Here's an example of how and why many people believe that rape is everywhere... because their definition of rape includes every sexual misadventure.

-6 upvotes · 26 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

Noooo, rape is when she had sex, and didn't consent to.

Important distinction. I go to meetings at work. I don't want to. I hate meetings. They're boring and unnecessary. But I'm not being forced to. I consent to go to them. I don't like it, but I consent.

The real problem here is that the people who are most vocal in public discourse about defining rape have no interest in discerning the differences between things like desire, intent, consent, decision, coercion, free will, responsibility, consequences, and so forth.

They just lump it into one big cloud, slice that cloud with an arbitrary boundary, into "wanna", and "don't wanna", and call it a day.

But the issue here is consent, and only consent. Not feelings. Not first or second thoughts. Not how much alcohol someone chose to drink, and how stupid they were as a result. Consent.

How do I get the creep out of me?

-6 upvotes · 18 July 2011 · /r/seduction

I wrote "unattractive", you read "physically unattractive". Go back and reread.

Let's play the non reactive game (version 1. Game 1)

-6 upvotes · 1 July 2011 · /r/seduction

Let's play the non reactive game

We already were. And you just lost.

Guys jerk off in front of me on public transport and cause of anxiety I don't know what to do.

-7 upvotes · 11 May 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

Whenever you have a problem, always find the part that's your fault. Even if 99% of it isn't. Because the part that's your fault is the part you can fix.

I live in NYC

There's the part that's your fault. You live in a bad place, full of bad people, all packed together at a density human beings are not evolved to tolerate.

The reason you are running into so many fucked up broken people who do fucked up broken people shit is that you have chosen to live near them.

There is no healthy way to live with an abusive spouse. There is no healthy way to live next to a toxic waste dump. There is no healthy way to swim in the sewer.

And there is no healthy way to live in New York City.

But Whiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiisper, maybe she has no choice! Maybe her career or lifestyle require her to live there!

That's a choice right there. There are other careers. There are other lifestyles. No one HAS to live like an insect in a concrete hive, surrounded by the worst humanity has to offer.

There is no advice I can give you that will allow you to stand in a fire and not burn. There is no advice I can give you that will allow you to drink poison and not be sick.

STFU when he does something he knows I hate? Help pls

-7 upvotes · 26 April 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

"Should" is just a fancy way of saying "I want".

Should you ever admit you're a virgin?

-7 upvotes · 5 December 2015 · /r/askTRP

Look, I appreciate that you're trying to oppose a double standard here, okay, but don't think that reading two sentences means you suddenly know all about me, or what happened.

Fact is, I was a precocious kid. I had urges. I saw something I wanted, and I planned and schemed for months to make something happen, and finally I succeeded.

Cisgender? What's going here?

-7 upvotes · 20 February 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I don't know whether I am a potato or not, since you haven't told me what a potato is.

Only what it isn't.

Why are women so negative about the "picking up women" school of thought?

-7 upvotes · 2 October 2012 · /r/seduction

Negs are the worst thing ever to happen to the seduction community. Let's be honest, some aspects of seduction are in grey areas, but not all.

Wrong. Nope. Sorry. Not even close.

If the worst example of bad behaviour in the PUA community you can come up with is the neg, then we have no collective bad behaviour... because the neg doesn't even rise to the level of rudeness.

Every man who objects to negs as a practice is white knightting whether he knows it or not. (Yes, this means you.) Why? Because you can be damn sure that he isn't out there lecturing all women everywhere about how they need to cut out all that bitch shielding and shit testing. No. He's only being overprotective of women.

Well, women are adult enough to handle a little criticism, and if they aren't, then that's something wrong with them, not with the criticism. Women who can't handle negs need to grow up, put on their big-girl panties, and learn to deal with adult life.

[Reminder] Being an aspiring PuA/Seducer does not mean you take value from others

-7 upvotes · 27 February 2012 · /r/seduction

To often have I noticed on /r/seduction

Too often in the 11 days you've been here?

objectification of women

over-compensating male ego

Stop white-knighting.

You are the one with the funny attitudes about women. You defend them as a class because you infantilize them as a class... you don't see them as adult individuals, capable of responding to, or ignoring, criticism or insults... as individuals.

Women neither want nor need your help, sir knight. Nor are they facing any threat that would require anyone's help.

Lurk more, post less.

100 Dating Tips For Men From A PUA

-7 upvotes · 26 February 2012 · /r/seduction

1. Feminists are our friends. Without the sexual liberation of women there can be no sexual liberation of men.

Bwwhaahahaahahahaahahahaahh downvote.

You just told me that you don't understand the real dynamics of the sexual marketplace at all, you've just learned some of the buttons to push, more or less by rote.

Do you find that insecure men have a problem with "confident" women?

-8 upvotes · 9 April 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

I mean a truly confident/secure woman

As soon as I meet one, I'll let you know.

STFU when he does something he knows I hate? Help pls

-9 upvotes · 25 April 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

So what you've done is decided, in your mind, that he should do certain things with the dishes in order to prove he cares for you.

And now you are sitting back, waiting to see if he will pass your invisible test by jumping through the proper hoops.

This is called a covert contract.

Your problem isn't the damn dishes at all. It's about feeling valued. But you have brought your Captain your solution instead of your problem.

If your problem is anxiety about being valued, then you don't get to decide alone how that problem will be solved, with him simply being responsible for carrying out your solution... because that IS giving him orders.

And that's why he's not doing it. Because men don't like being nagged, and they are not going to reward you for trying to boss them around. If you give him an order instead of asking for help with your problem, then you have just fucked yourself, because now he can't comply, or he is telling you it's okay to push him around.

That's not how you get what you want from men. That's how you get into stubbornness contests with the sex that is designed for conflict.

Boyfriend left me :(

-9 upvotes · 2 March 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

Wow.

You really don't have any idea what kind of damage you can do with your mouth, do you?

This is not about him "leading you on", or whether or not he wuvs you. This is about how you kicked him when he was down, probably not for the first time, and he doesn't trust you anymore.

Apparently to Vice news talking about men's rights is comparable to white supremacy and the Nazi's

-10 upvotes · 1 December 2017 · /r/MensRights

Yes, surely if you throw anyone more radical under a bus, and wind up as the most radical people remaining, you will be given a pat on the head and a cookie by the feminists, and not treated like radicals yourselves at all!

Maybe its not just because they were men after all. In order to replicate the results of the infamous 10 hour walk through New York, an Australian Newspaper sent a 20 year old model in short shorts through Sydney. She received no "harassment" of any kind. Not one.

-10 upvotes · 4 November 2014 · /r/MensRights

you'd have to be blind, or a liberal

Please stop repeating yourself.

Tears

-11 upvotes · 28 May 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

In addition to my normal expectations, when she has to travel without me (usually on business), she is to write an email to me every night describing the events of her day, to always carry a gun when she is outside (when she's with me, she doesn't always have to because I am carrying, so if she's going to wear something that doesn't really permit a holster, etc), and to keep me informed of any changes in her itinerary.

These are just my rules, yours may obviously be different. The important thing is to have some rules.

Here's an example of how and why many people believe that rape is everywhere... because their definition of rape includes every sexual misadventure.

-11 upvotes · 26 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

In this case, it seems the girl was pursued because she was drunk

The only thing we know is that she was pursued while she was drunk.

even though she said she did not want to have sex because she was drunk, he still pressured her until she complied

Pressured is a weasel word in this context. What does pressured mean? Asked repeatedly? Touched in an arousing fashion which worked? Touched in an arousing fashion which didn't work? Physically held down? Threatened? What?

"Rape and/or sexual assault is forced, manipulated, or coerced sexual contact by a stranger, friend or acquaintance."

Please cite the source for this quote. I don't think I agree with it. It certainly doesn't define manipulated or coerced, and it needs to.

I know that yes, sometimes women make bad decisions when drunk and try to blame it on the man afterwards. This is horrible.

And that's what we're dealing with here. She comes out and says she did it. What else is there to discuss? She thinks the fact that she felt pressured means that she was coerced. She's wrong about that.

But the same, you have to admit that men do look for drunk women that will be more easily convinced to have sex with them

Yeah, drunk people are less inhibited. This is why people get bother getting drunk in the first place.

The "good guy" thing to do is not try to sleep with a girl if she is wasted. If you like her, get her number and try again when sober.

Ummm, sorry, but... listen to yourself. You just told young people not to get drunk and screw. Does that sound realistic to you?

STFU when he does something he knows I hate? Help pls

-12 upvotes · 25 April 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

I've asked my bf SEVERAL times in the past to empty his plate/Tupperware from lunch before placing it in the sink for me to wash.

So, he isn't being obedient, and this upsets you.

Controversial Claim. Still true if you replace "racist" with "misogynist".

-12 upvotes · 25 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

The idea, at least with some, isn't to reward failure but to protect people from being so completely undone by it that they end up homeless, suicidal, starving, exploited, or the victim of social desperation. Neither is the idea to punish the successful. Instead, it is to make sure the rewards for success are commensurate with the actual contribution to society of that success.

Oh, we understand the idea.

And no one wants to see people starve. But unfortunately, when you take resources from the most successful to give to the least, then what you are doing is making the most efficient economic processes less efficient, in order to incentivize the least efficient ones.

Essentially, you are pouring sand into your engine instead of oil.

Wealth hoarding has gotten out of control. Success is most often purchased with wealth hoarded by one's forebears than it is earned.

Isn't it funny how all the wealthy people think the poor are lazy shiftless drug addicts, and the poor think the wealthy are spoiled lazy selfish corrupt thieves?

It's almost as if self-interest was getting in the way of clear thinking.

Nobody needs an island. Nobody needs a castle. Nobody needs to own six houses and twelve cars.

No one needs a house or a car, either. No one needs a computer. No one needs reddit. Economies are driven by wants, not needs.

Excessive wealth also damages the holder of that wealth by causing them to be surrounded by a social bubble that prevents them from having an honest positive relationship with the world and those whom they share it with.

This sounds like the sort of sentiment that can only survive in a political echo chamber where everyone agrees with it. What does it mean to have a relationship with a giant ball of rock hurtling through space?

Not only that, but nobody, nobody meets success without the participation of others.

Which is why we cannot solve poverty by writing checks.

This principle is always used to take money from the successful, then promptly forgotten when we decide how to spend that money. Wealth redistributors don't seem to display any interest in community building, because that is complicated, hard to sell with a slogan, and not as profitable as redistributing more wealth (while keeping just a small percentage...)

By putting a concerted effort into fostering a stable society, the successful can assure themselves that those participants are able to continue to participate.

Circular reasoning. This is only true if you assume wealth redistribution fosters a stable society. It doesn't. Building communities and other mechanisms of trust fosters a stable society.

Police Department Ends Fitness Tests After Female Cops Fail and Sue for Gender Discrimination

-13 upvotes · 6 January 2019 · /r/MensRights

And, coincidence of coincidences, those are the three things people keep saying about you folks.

I wonder if there is a lesson here?

Genuine women's rights issues?

-13 upvotes · 11 March 2014 · /r/MensRights

You seem to be lost. This is a forum of the discussion of men's rights and the protection thereof.

Here's an example of how and why many people believe that rape is everywhere... because their definition of rape includes every sexual misadventure.

-13 upvotes · 25 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

The idea that I might be summoning the downvote swarm did give me pause, but the principles involved here are so much more important than comment karma that I felt I could not refrain.

Here we have a young woman who has been taught that if she had sex, and didn't want to, it's rape.

She doesn't understand the difference between what you want, and what you consent to.

The men's rights problem here is that there are millions of confused young women out there with this same misunderstanding. That some of them have drunken sexual misadventures. And that some of those then go to the police.

Young men her age are pretty much defenseless against this sort of thing.

We, r/mr, cannot simply stay in our little enclave and let the rest of the world be misled and confused like this, because to do that is allow men to be hurt unjustly.

Dating app first date - offered to pick me up from home

-14 upvotes · 13 March 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

While you handled this properly, this comment:

I guess men don't think about violence or safety like women have to so he might not have thought it could make me uncomfortable.

Was thoughtless.

Women do not think about safety more because they have to. Men are far more likely, across the board, to be targeted for violence. Men are simply socialized to believe that risks to them are more acceptable.

What do you bring to the bedroom?

-16 upvotes · 26 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Me: Feminists are into vibrators.

You: Only feminists have vibrators!!?????!!

Ooookay then...

My fiancee on utilizing massacres for political agendas OR "Why I want to marry this woman"

-17 upvotes · 6 December 2012 · /r/MensRights

Well written, but marriage?

Modern marriage is male indentured servitude. A slave with a kind master is still a slave.

Dear MensRights

-17 upvotes · 17 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

Dear Mensrights,

... always seems to be followed by either:

[I am a concern troll]

or

[something incredibly, ludicrously unjust and ridiculous happened to me because I have XY chromosomes, and either no one believes me, or no one gives a crap]

I wish everyone knew this already...

-20 upvotes · 28 October 2015 · /r/MensRights

Women are the same as men.

It's amazing what dumb things people will say with a straight face.

I used to enjoy reading the movie reviews on Badass Digest until I saw that I was "prebanned."

-22 upvotes · 14 January 2014 · /r/MensRights

Most self proclaimed Black Magicians cannot fight, fuck or even buy their way out of a wet paper bag

FTFY

Ignore the Peanut Gallery

-40 upvotes · 15 November 2017 · /r/TheRedPill

Read again, this time more carefully.

What do you bring to the bedroom?

-65 upvotes · 25 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

All the muscles in the world don't generate orgasms.

Wrong.

The primary center of female sexual arousal is the brain.

Physical skills are nice, but they pale into insignificance compared with cultivating the right mindset. With a man she respects and adores, a woman can come from a stiff breeze. With a man she's indifferent to, just-right physical stimulation is required.

This is why feminists are so into vibrators. They don't respect men, and can't get excited about one. So they have difficulty reaching orgasm, and need to fill the gap with over-the-top physical stimulation.

This principle works for men, too. A beautiful young girl with feminine mannerisms and an air of innocence need only be moist and lie still to make a man come... hard. A sarcastic, wrinkly 40 year old divorcee needs to be able to suck the chrome off a truck hitch to get the same result.

Young men of Reddit, feel the need to get married? Read what these men have to go through after the divorce.

-163 upvotes · 11 March 2014 · /r/MensRights

Male survival in 21st century America:

1. Do not get married.

2. Do not have children.
3. Get a vasectomy.
4. Do not tell your sexual partners you have had a vasectomy.
5. Do not cohabit with any woman you are in a relationship with.
6. Do not ever be alone with a child for any reason.
7. Do not date or have sex with any woman who has a child.
8. Do not provide regular financial support to any woman.
9. Do not attempt to protect or help female strangers. If you see someone beating up a woman, walk away. Do not attempt to help her. Do not call the police.
10. Do not speak to or touch a child you do not know. If you see a child drowning, walk away. If you see a child being kidnapped, walk away. Do not call the police.
11. Do not speak to the police for any reason ever.
12. Carry a cell phone or other device capable of audio and video recording at all times.

Young red pill philosophers and young men in general, should be wary of older red pill philosophers

score hidden · 11 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Young men should be wary of everyone.

Including you.

Families aren't automatically better if husbands and wives stay together. Red pill philosophers who believe wives should always 'work it out' with their husbands are wrong.

score hidden · 11 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

PPD is always so diligent in refuting shit no one ever said.

The Gender Empathy Gap is real

score hidden · 11 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yeah, doesn't he know that all these groups are sacrosanct against criticism unless they happen to not vote Democrat?

Online dating apps are pay to win and are riddled with micro transactions

score hidden · 9 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Wrong.

OLD is pay-to-lose.

The only OLD site/app that was ever good for both itself and its customers was Grindr. Why? Because the incentive of readers and publishers was perfectly aligned.

Grindr wanted gay men to keep clicking, because that was how they got paid. Gay men wanted to keep clicking, because that was how they got laid (by a new dude every week).

But any heterosexual OLD site doesn't work that way. Women don't want endless hookup sex, they want a relationship. This means that female customers, if made happy, stop being customers. Therefore the publishers of the site, and the female customers, have conflicting goals.

Therefore, the publishers must lure women with the promise of a loving relationship (or they will have no women to offer to male customers, who generate the majority of their revenue), but they must avoid delivering on that promise as much as possible (or they will have no women to offer to male customers, who generate the majority of their revenue).

Women are easy to fool, but no one can be fooled for eternity.

Why do guys need sex to feel validated?

score hidden · 20 November 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Why are men different from women? That's very puzzling and inconvenient for us!"

Dating advice post: "Is it weird to travel an hour just to walk around looking for girls to talk to?" - do you consider this a normal thing to do?

score hidden · 4 November 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you don't do something unusual, you won't get any unusual results.

What does 'Hypergamy' mean to you?

score hidden · 2 September 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

<https://www.trp.red/p/whisper/848>

Reexamining the Primordial Gender Bargain

score hidden · 19 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

By rewarding male labor with a disproportionate amount of resources compared to the effort

This is the labour theory of value repackaged. It was wrong in the 19th century, and it's wrong now.

Female submission. What is it? How is it different from an equal partnership? Can you provide real-world examples of it? Do you want it?

score hidden · 16 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

But my question is, how is that different than a healthy partnership?

It is a healthy partnership.

Why does submission of one partner need to be involved if they both love and respect one another

Because humans are hardwired that way.

and decisions are made together?

That is a recipe for arguments and conflict.

Relationships are supposed to be a give and take,

Supposed by whom?

I believe that submission of one partner makes the relationship unequal and ignores the strengths of the submissive and weaknesses of the dominant partner.

I agree that you believe that.

The Best Advice From Red Pill Isn't Red Pill Specific

score hidden · 16 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

.

Is women being submissive a taboo now? And if so, why?

score hidden · 31 July 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Last 3 years online it seems so many women refer to themselves this way which every fiber in my body sees as degrading.

How is it any business of yours how they choose to refer to themselves?

Is women being submissive a taboo now? And if so, why?

score hidden · 31 July 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

My girls wear locking collars, and no one says a damn thing except "I love your necklace!" (or "I love your collar!" if they spot it for what it is).

Men: what is your perfect waifu like?

score hidden · 26 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Tsk. Kinkshaming.

Why do you think younger women (gen Z) tend to like more feminine men, meanwhile older women tend to like more masculine men?

score hidden · 26 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You haven't yet established that younger women do, in fact, like more feminine men.

Asian men and black women are the least desirable dating demographics in America.

score hidden · 6 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you want to be strictly accurate, say "least desired". People are desirable, or not, on an individual level... talking about desirability in terms of demographics gets a little unclear.

"men don't take good pictures of themselves, men don't dress fashionably, men don't work on their personality" is BS. Truth is, female taste rules the dating market.

score hidden · 5 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"but but but men don't get matches and women do... this means women have something men don't!"

A vagina.

Simple Questions

score hidden · 2 February 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

I guess I'm trying to explain to her a range of acceptability and let her then define it with her new husband to be.

Sounds like you want her to give up control to you instead.

Simple Questions

score hidden · 2 February 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

No.

Sex is necessary, but not sufficient, for men to pair bond.

British journalist Toby Young on how American women objectify men: "I always found the experience of being on a date in New York extremely uncomfortable ... No man is held to possess any intrinsic value - we're all just the sum of our assets."

score hidden · 20 November 2012 · /r/MensRights

All of this is true from a certain angle, but so much understanding of American female mating behaviour is left out.

If MRAs want to truly understand what is wrong with sex in America, they need to shed their completely unjustified stereotype of the pickup community as a "bunch of neurotic pussy-worshipping retards", and start reading /r/seduction.

You don't have to have a series of one-night stands. You don't have to go spend all your evenings in noisy clubs full of beer-swilling community college losers. You don't even have to have sex with or pick up anyone.

Just read the real information about what attracts women, and why. Amongst the crap and douchebags trying to sell you seminars is a treasure trove of psychological realpolitik that no one else, not even psychological and neuroscience researchers behind the closed doors of academia, has the courage to discuss out loud.